(32) how many export licence applications, by country, were approved in 1993 for the export of goods defined as PL 5014 in group 1 of part III of schedule 1 of S.I. 1992 No. 3092. [27486]

Mr. Ian Taylor: The hon. Gentleman will appreciate that his questions involve a very large quantity of statistical information. I shall provide the information which he has asked for, to the extent that it is available on my Department's databases. However, the task involved in gathering and collating the data is a considerable one. I shall therefore send the information, in tabular form, to the hon. Gentleman. I shall also arrange to have a copy placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Byers: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer of 24 May, Official Report, column 676, if he will state the number of cases in which end-use certificates, end-use statements or international import certificates were not insisted upon for military list goods; if he will identify the companies concerned; and if he will make a statement. [27701]

Mr. Ian Taylor [holding answer 9 June 1995]: A full answer to the hon. Member's question could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. However, some work has been done on this issue in my Department on a sample basis. I refer the hon. Member to my answer given today to the hon. Member for Newcastle upon Tyne, Central (Mr. Cousins) for further details of the sample survey commissioned last month by my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade into the supporting documentation supplied with export licence applications for military list goods during the period 1986–90.

Mr. Byers: To ask the President of the Board of Trade on how may occasions between 1985 and 1990 his Department received representations from right hon. or hon. Members in support of applications for export licences in respect of military list goods for export to Iran and Iraq. [27550]

Mr. Ian Taylor [holding answer 9 June 1995]: It would be possible to determine on how many occasions between 1985 and 1990 my Department received representations from right hon. or hon. Members in support of applications for export licences in respect of military list goods for export to Iran and Iraq only by combing a very large number of files, and each individual export licence over the period. This exercise could be undertaken only at seriously disproportionate cost.

Mr. Byers: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer of 24 May, Official Report, column 676, how many applications for export licences in respect of military list goods to Iran and Iraq between 1985 to 1990 were specifically drawn to the attention of Ministers; and how many of those approved by Ministers did not provide end-use certificates, end-use statements or international import certificates. [27702]

Mr. Ian Taylor [holding answer 9 June 1995]: It would be possible to determine how many applications for export licences, in respect of military list goods to Iran and Iraq between 1985 and 1990, were specifically drawn to the attention of Ministers only by combing a very large number of files, and each individual export licence over the period. This exercise could be undertaken only at seriously disproportionate cost and time.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many military list export licences applications were the subject of his recent internal inquiries into the possible absence of full documentation; and if that sample was focused on particular countries or types of product. [29166]

Mr. Ian Taylor: The full results are set out of the sample survey commissioned last month by the President of the Board of Trade into the supporting documentation supplied with export licences.

The survey was set up as follows. A randomly selected sample was taken of 10 per cent. of all military list export licence applications for the following destinations: Pakistan, Singapore, Hong Kong, Portugal, Thailand and Cyprus. There was no focus on particular types of product. The figure of 74 per cent. quoted in the President's statement was an average of the figures for 1986 to 1989.

Percentage of applications with no supporting documents	86	80	80	50	81

The results are also set out of a similar survey commissioned last month by the President of the Board of Trade for all BMARC export licence applications between 1986 and 1989. The figure of 36 per cent. quoted in the President's statement is an average of the figures for BMARC for 1986 to 1989.

Mr. Miller: to ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his oral statement of 13 June, Official Report, columns 595–606, if he will list those cases amongst the 74 per cent. of the applications to which he referred which have subsequently been discovered to have an end use in a nation with which his Government have an arms embargo. [29102]

Mr. Ian Taylor: I refer the hon. Member to my answer given today to the hon. Member for Newcastle upon Tyne, Central (Mr. Cousins) for further details of the sample survey commissioned last month by my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade into the supporting documentation supplied with export licence applications for military list goods during the period 1986–90.

All licence application forms contain a question requiring a statement of end use and the ultimate consignee.

The purpose of my officials in examining this relatively small random sample of 254 export licences was to take a quick check on the state of export licence administration in the DTI over the period 1986–90. They were not asked to investigate the final destination of the goods covered by the licences. This would not have been part of their duties. The investigation of alleged breaches of export controls is a matter for Customs and Excise in its role as an independent prosecuting authority of the Crown.

There are boxes on the export licences application forms which ask the applicant to state both the end use and the end user of the goods in question. My Department has no evidence to suggest that the goods relating to any of the licences sampled ended up anywhere other than as stated on the application form. It would be entirely wrong to assume from the figure of 74 per cent. given in my right hon. Friend's oral statement on 13 June that a large proportion of exporters misled my Department.

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Byers: To ask the President of the Board of Trade which Minister, former Minister or civil servants in his Department have sought independent legal advice in assisting their response to draft extracts from Sir Richard Scott's report; in each case from whom the advice has been sought; and what limit has been placed on the cost of such advice to public funds. [28384]

Mr. Heseltine [holding answer 13 June 1995]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 14 June 1995, Official Report, column 530.

Departmental Contracts

Mr. Harvey: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what criteria for determining increased effectiveness apart from the issue of benchmarking costs, will be applied in awarding contracts for work currently carried out by civil servants in his Department. [29191]

Mr. Heseltine: The criteria vary depending on the particular exercise but commonly include the quality of service offered, the bidder's understanding of the Department's needs, their ability to bring new innovative approaches to the delivery of the services, the continuity of service offered on taking over the work, their commitment to developing a co-operative partnership with the DTI, and the overall value for money offered.

Insolvency Service

Mr. Harvey: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the projected cost of the Insolvency Service's local office ledger accounting computer system. [29245]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The set-up cost of the LOLA—local office ledger accounting system—is estimated to be £1,543,000.

Mr. Harvey: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what measures he proposes taking to ensure creditors' meetings take place in areas affected by particular insolvencies in the event of official receivers' offices being closed as a result of contracting out. [29189]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The venue of a creditors meeting will still be governed by rules 4.60 and 6.86 of the Insolvency Rules 1986, which states:

"the person summoning the meeting is to have regard for the convenience of persons (other than the chairman) invited to attend".

There is no obligation to hold meetings at official receivers' offices; and they may be held at any convenient venue considered appropriate.

Mr. Harvey: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps he plans to take to conserve the training investment in the specialist accountancy staff in the organisation in the event of the work of the Insolvency Service being contracted out. [29192]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: In the event of any contracting out of official receiver's functions, the residual work of the Insolvency Service would require the continued employment of the bulk of its specialist staff.

Mr. Harvey: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, following the implementation of current proposals to contract out the work of the Insolvency Service, which offices he proposes to close. [29190]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: No decisions have yet been taken in relation to the size and location of the Insolvency Service. It is not expected that such decisions will be made until conclusions on contracting out have been reached.

Mr. Harvey: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans he has to raise the standards of conduct for private insolvency practitioners to (a) the current performance level and (b) the current targets set for official receivers' staff as condition for proceeding further with contracting out proposals for the Insolvency Service. [29186]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The requirement scoping document recently issued to potential bidders set out levels of experience and competencies of staff that will be required. Any provider, who may or may not be an insolvency practitioner, must satisfy these requirements. In addition, the performance of contractors would be closely monitored to ensure that standards were being consistently maintained to an equal or better level than the standards of expertise and performance currently achieved by the Insolvency Service.

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many (a) bankruptcy orders and (b) winding up orders were dealt with by the Sheffield official receiver's office during each of the last five years. [28797]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The total numbers of bankruptcy orders and winding up orders dealt with by the official receiver's Sheffield office in each of the last five years were as follows:

Financial year	Bankruptcy	Winding up
1991–92	570	110
1992–93	640	120
1994–95	488	98

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, what plans the Insolvency Service has to administer those cases not finalised by 31 March 1996 following contractorisation of the official receiver. [28799]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: Official are exploring arrangements which would enable existing cases at 1 April 1996 to be transferred to contractors to complete their administration.

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if staff of the official receiver's office transferred to the private sector will have their salaries enhanced to compensate for the absence of non-contributory pensions for the purpose of the Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) Regulations 1981. [28827]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: Although TUPE does not cover the transfer of occupational pension rights, a new employer will be required to provide broadly comparable pension arrangements. These arrangements would be considered by the Department as part of the preparations for any transfer. The Government Actuary will provide an independent analysis of comparability and will need to approve the new arrangements as offering broadly comparable benefits. The Government Actuary will assess the arrangements as a whole to ascertain their comparability to the principal civil service pension scheme and these arrangements may include compensation, for example, for employee contributions or different levels of benefit.

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many permanent staff were employed by the Insolvency Service in the Sheffield office on 31 March for each year since 1990. [28795]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: Numbers of permanent staff employed at the official receiver Sheffield office as at 1 April in each of the last five years were as follows:

Year	Number of permanent staff
1 April 1990	24
1 April 1991	23.5
1 April 1992	22.5
1 April 1993	23.5
1 April 1994	21.5
1 April 1995	20

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many members of the Insolvency Service are solely engaged on work surrounding the contracting out proposals; and what is the cost of their work. [28803]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: There are currently five members of the Insolvency Service solely engaged in work concerning the proposed contracting out of the functions of the official receiver. Other members of staff spend varying proportions of their time dealing with the issues associated with this work.

It is estimated that the cost to the Insolvency Service of the options exercise will be approximately £1.35 million in the 1995–96 financial year.

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the effects the contracting out of the administrative functions of the official receiver will have on the Sheffield office. [28798]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: Any decisions and any effects of contracting out in relation to the Sheffield office of the official receiver will be known only once decisions are reached regarding the whole of the Insolvency Service.

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many directors were disqualified from managing a limited company under section 6 of the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 in the courts covered by the official receiver's office, Sheffield during the past eight years. [28794]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The numbers of disqualification orders made under section 6 of the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 in the Sheffield, Doncaster, Chesterfield and Barnsley courts covered by the official receiver Sheffield office in each of the last eight years were as follows:

Financial year	Number of orders made
1 April 1987—31 March 1988	0
1 April 1988—31 March 1989	3
1 April 1989—31 March 1990	1
1 April 1990—31 March 1991	6
1 April 1991—31 March 1992	2
1 April 1992—31 March 1993	3
1 April 1993—31 March 1994	0
1 April 1994—31 March 1995	1

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many members of the Sheffield office will be surplus of requirement following contractorisation of the functions of the functions of the official receiver. [28826]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: Any decisions in relation to the staff in the official receiver's office in Sheffield will be made in the light of decisions taken on contracting out.

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many firms or companies resident in Sheffield have expressed an interest in bidding for some of the functions of the official receiver. [28800]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: No firm responding to the advertisements calling for expressions of interest in the contracting out of functions of the official receiver listed a Sheffield address.

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans his Department has for providing information to staff regarding their future employment options following contractorisation of the functions of the official receiver. [28824]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: A communications strategy is currently in place within the Insolvency Service with the aim of keeping the staff as up to date with the status of contracting out as possible. The intention is to provide information on the options available to staff as it becomes known.

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many casual and short-term contract staff were engaged at the official receiver's office in Sheffield in each of the past four years. [28796]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The number of casual and short-term contract staff employed at the official receiver Sheffield office as at 1 April in each of the last four years was as follows:

Year	Casual staff	Staff on loan from other Government Departments
1 April 1992	3	0
1 April 1993	1	0
1 April 1994	2	2
1 April 1995	0	2

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what additional resources the Insolvency Service has been given to enable the contracting out process to be completed. [28804]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: Approximately an additional £1.3 million has been allocated to cover the Insolvency Service's costs for the contracting out exercise.

Departmental Grants

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the amounts received by each organisation which receives a grant from his Department for each of the last five years. [28967]

Mr. Heseltine: The information sought could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Patent Office

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on his policy in respect of potential (a) conflicts of interest and (b) breaches of confidentiality in respect of the contractorising of functions of the Patent Office. [28684]

Mr. Ian Taylor: The Patent Office is looking at the potential for contractorisation where that is compatible with its statutory role and good value for money. Issues such as possible conflicts of interest and risks to confidentiality are considered when areas which might in principle be handled by the private sector are assessed and, if appropriate, will be addressed when detailed specifications are drawn up.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if all areas within the Patent Office apart from the core functions will be considered for contractorisation; and if he will make a statement. [28688]

Mr. Ian Taylor: As my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade stated in his announcement of 14 December 1994, Official Report, columns 657–58 about the Patent Office review, the Patent Office will be encouraged to contract out activities wherever this is compatible with its statutory role and good value for money.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many representations he has received during the last six months on the question of the contractorisation of the Patent Office; of those, how many were (a) in favour and (b) against the proposals; and if he will make a statement. [28682]

Mr. Ian Taylor: Since my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade announced the outcome of the Patent Office review on 14 December, Official Report, columns 657-58, he has received 11 letters specifically referring to the contractorisation of Patent Office functions. Of these, three asked for information about the process of contractorisation, and eight covered correspondence from the Patent Office trade unions expressing their concerns.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, how many members of staff are currently employed in the registration of trademark section of the Patent Office; what was the figure for 1991; and if he will make a statement. [28686]

Mr. Ian Taylor: A total of 237 Patent Office members of staff are currently engaged in the administration of trademarks. The equivalent figure in June 1991 was 308.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many members of staff were employed in the core functions of the Patent Office in 1990; and if he will make a statement. [28681]

Mr. Ian Taylor: In June 1990 the Patent Office employed 1,134 staff. The number of staff in branches which award intellectual property rights under statutory powers was 851.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many members of staff are currently employed in the core function activities of the Patent Office. [28685]

Mr. Ian Taylor: In June 1995 the Patent Office employs 954 staff. The number of staff in branches which award intellectual property rights under statutory powers is 673.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what factors precluded the staff at the Patent Office from eligibility to form an in-house bid; and if he will make a statement. [28689]

Mr. Ian Taylor: Since bids for contracted-out services will be assessed against benchmarks for the forecast cost and quality of service from in-house provision, staff already have the opportunity to prove that they can match or beat the private sector if the services remain in-house. Additionally, staff may choose to enter a bid on the same basis as the private sector, with the corollary that they will cease to be civil servants if their bids is successful.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many members of staff are employed in the patents and deigns section of the Patent Office; what was the figure for 1992; and if he will make a statement. [28687]

Mr. Ian Taylor: A total of 436 Patent Office members of staff are currently engaged in the administration of patents and designs. The equivalent figure in June 1992 was 474.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the private consultants engaged in respect of the Patent Office; what are their precise terms of reference and their agreed remuneration for carrying out those functions; and if he will make a statement. [28683]

Mr. Ian Taylor: Three firms of private sector consultants are currently engaged by the Patent Office.

Apex Planning and Design is advising the office on accommodation issues, and in particular on means to accommodate within the principal building—Concept house—staff currently housed at two smaller locations.

Marketing Improvements plc has been retained to explore market potential for Patent Office services, focusing on demand for non-statutory serves such as commercial searches and technical advice, and means of realising it. Coopers and Lybrand has been retained to advise on the feasibility of contracting out the Patent Office's front office in London, which receives, logs and forwards incoming mail, and the terms on which such contractorisation might take place. In neither case have specifications to tender for the work involved yet been drawn up.

Levels of remuneration associated with these individual consultancy contracts are commercial in confidence.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many letters were received by the Patent Office during 1994; how may of these were replied to within seven days; and if he will make a statement. [28699]

Mr. Ian Taylor: The Patent Office does not hold central records of individual letters received except in the case of letters from Members of Parliament to the chief executive, and letters of complaint under its chartermark procedures. The target for response in both of these cases is 10 working days. In 1994 six letters from Members of Parliament were received and five were answered within the deadline. Fourteen letters of complaint were received and all were answered within the deadline.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. McMaster: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what percentage of parliamentary questions, which would have been answered directly by him or his Ministers prior to the establishment of executive agencies, are now referred to the chief executive of such an agency. [28500]

Mr. Heseltine: Ministers are accountable to Parliament for all matters concerning their agencies. Written parliamentary questions concerning matters which have been delegated to the chief executive of an executive agency in its framework document, normally receive a reply from the Minister to the effect that he or she has asked the chief executive to reply direct to the Member by letter. The chief executive's letter is published in Hansard after the Minister's reply.

Mr. McMaster: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many written parliamentary questions were tabled for answer by his Department in each of the past five years; how many of these were not answered because the information (a) could be obtained only at disproportionate cost, (b) was not held centrally and (c) was not normally disclosed; how many of these could now be answered now due to computerisation, more effective and efficient operational systems or more open government; and if he will list each question along with the name and constituency of the right hon. or hon. Member who originally tabled it. [28517]

Mr. Heseltine: The information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Chernobyl Nuclear Plant

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what information Her Majesty's Government possess on the current safety of the Chernobyl nuclear plant; and if he will make a statement. [28603]

Mr. Page: The safety of the Chernobyl nuclear plant is the responsibility of the relevant Ukrainian authorities. Only they would be able to provide detailed information on the current safety situation at the plant.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) how much contaminated debris is estimated to be present inside the concrete sarcophagus built around the remains of the Chernobyl nuclear reactor number 4; [28604]

(2) what is his latest estimate of the time necessary to clean up the Chernobyl nuclear plant. [28605]

Mr. Page: A recent interim report from an on-going EU funded study estimated that 500,000 cu m of short-lived radioactive waste and 40,000 cu m of long-lived high level waste, including over 200 tonnes of the reactor's original fuel, lie inside the sarcophagus built over the destroyed unit 4 at Chernobyl.

While no precise estimate of the time necessary to clean up Chernobyl has been made, the same report indicated that it could take up to 100 years to complete the segregation, treatment, conditioning, storage and ultimate disposal of all the radioactive arisings from the remains of unit 4. Copies of the executive summary of this report—"Stabilisation of the existing shelter and the containment of both the existing shelter and the damaged remains of reactor 4 at the Chernobyl nuclear power plant"—have been placed in the Library of the House.

Post Office

Mr. Wareing: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what progress has been made with the Post Office performance review and if he will make a statement. [28705]

Mr. Heseltine [holding answer 15 June 1995]: Work started on the performance review on 22 May and is on schedule for completion by 31 August 1995.

Nuclear Industry Privatisation

Mr. Wilson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what restrictions he intends to impose on any foreign Government, corporation or individual purchasing shares in a privatised nuclear industry. [28665]

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 15 June 1995]: The full details of the sale have yet to be finalised. It is, however, the Government's intention to hold special shares in the holding company and in its two subsidiary companies, Scottish Nuclear and the successor to Nuclear Electric.

Land Mines

Mr. Hanson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what considerations led to the exclusion of Smart mines from the Government's recent mine export ban. [28229]

Mr. David Davis: I have been asked to reply.

Our moratorium bans the export of non-self-destructing and non-detectable anti-personnel mines, which are the most dangerous to civilians. It also prohibits the export of any anti-personnel mines to countries which have not ratified the UN weaponry convention, thereby ensuring that even self-destructing mines are acquired only by responsible countries.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Civil Servants

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Attorney-General, pursuant to his answer of 2 May, Official Report, column 142, if he will provide comparable details on civil service early retirement packages on grounds of inefficiency. [29293]

The Attorney-General: Inefficiency is a ground for dismissal. An immediate lump sum payment of up to two years' salary may be made where a Department judges payment of compensation to be appropriate. Where compensation is agreed and the person dismissed is over age 55, this may be forgone in favour of immediate payment of the accrued superannuation benefits, which would otherwise be preserved for payment at retiring age. There have been 15 departures on inefficiency grounds in the past five financial years in the Departments for which I am responsible. Of these, there were four cases when no compensation payment was made. The remaining 11 cases are shown in the table:

Year	Compensation payment £
	18,384
	19,798
	31,634
1993–94	7,492
	9,608
	11,044
1994–95	3,037

Mr. Roger Levitt

Mr. Donald Anderson: To ask the Attorney-General if he has anything to add to his answer to the hon. Member for Hendon, South (Mr. Marshall) of 9 December 1993, Official Report, columns 332–33, concerning the conduct of the case against Mr. Roger Levitt. [27886]

The Attorney-General: The Serious Fraud Office and prosecuting counsel have been asked to re-examine the events that led up to Mr. Levitt's plea in the light of recent media reports and questions from hon. Members.

Various counsel-to-counsel discussions about possible pleas, of the sort indicated to the hon. Member for Hendon, South in my answer on 17 December 1993, Official Report, column 1046, took place before 22 November. Such informal discussions are not unusual and would normally be confidential. They were not fully noted and there is no agreed record of what took place. I am, however, informed by prosecuting counsel that the discussions were initiated by counsel for only one of the defendants—not Mr. Levitt—and, following a later approach by counsel for another defendant, not Mr. Levitt, were necessarily expanded by counsel for the Crown to cover the position of all the defendants by 2 November 1993.

The discussions consequential on these initial approaches from the defence included a discussion which is believed to have taken place between leading counsel for the Crown and for Mr. Levitt around 5 November and a discussion between junior counsel for the Crown and leading counsel for Mr. Levitt on 9 November 1993 stating what the Crown's attitude was likely to be if Mr. Levitt tendered particular pleas. Prosecuting counsel continues, however, to reject the notion that it at any stage "suggested" that Mr. Levitt plead guilty to only some of the charges.

The Serious Fraud Office was aware of the discussions that were taking place. The Director of the Serious Fraud Office and prosecuting counsel have now considered together a copy letter from the solicitor for Mr. Levitt to his client dated 5 November 1993, which was handed to the director in the course of his appearance before the Treasury and Civil Service Select Committee on 12 June 1995. They have recalled that the director and case controller had a meeting with prosecuting counsel on 5 November 1993. The joint recollection of all present is that the director was then informed of possible pleas which leading counsel for the Crown advised should, in the event that they were tendered, be accepted. The director and prosecuting counsel inform me that, although the director was minded to accept such pleas, he did not give instructions that the pleas should be accepted if tendered and would have needed to consider the position further in that event. He expected discussions on a counsel-to-counsel basis to continue. The director is writing to the Select Committee about this and to offer to give further evidence if requested.

The plea ultimately accepted from Mr. Levitt was in the judgment of prosecuting counsel and the Serious Fraud Office significantly different from those under consideration on 5 and 9 November in that it did not include Mr. Levitt's admitting knowledge of, and participation in, any of the false valuations sent to private investors in TLG Ltd.

Prosecuting counsel and the Serious Fraud Office have again assured me that the Crown did not know the sentence which the judge was minded to impose for the relevant offence at the time it committed itself to accepting this plea on 22 November, prior to the visit to the judge, and did not know whether or not Mr. Levitt intended to proceed with the plea if the judge indicated an intention to impose a custodial sentence. As was made clear by the director in his evidence to the Select Committee, it would not in any event have been open to the Crown to resile from its acceptance of the plea because the judge indicated an intention to impose a non-custodial sentence.

NHS Administration Costs

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what were the administration costs incurred by (a) NHS purchasers and (b) NHS providers in Wales in each year since 1990–91, in cash prices and real terms. [27776]

Mr. Redwood: The information is as follows:

Environmentally Sensitive Areas

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was (a) the total budget spent and (b) the total administrative budget spent for the environmentally sensitive area grants. [28305]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: (a) Total grants paid under the environmentally sensitive area schemes in 1994–95 was £1,533,000; (b) precise administrative costs are not available, because staff combine work on this area and others schemes. However, the costs of relevant administrative work alone will have amounted to around £276,000. In addition, professional ADAS staff provided scientific and technical advice at a cost of around £1,965,000. Most staff time was devoted to developing detailed rules and regulations for the new scheme, in preparing scheme literature, and in providing farmers with assistance in drawing up whole farm plans and preparing their management agreements.

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (a) what percentage of the total land area of Wales was designated as environmentally sensitive; (b) what financial provision his Department allocated to environmentally sensitive areas in the years 1993–94, 1994–95 and 1995–96; (c) what percentage of the total land area of Wales will be designated as environmentally sensitive; and (d) what financial provision his Department will allocate to environmentally sensitive areas in each of the years 1996–97 and 1997–98. [29327]

(a) 25 per cent.

(b) Total payments for years:

1993–94: £5.8 million

1994–95: £6.9 million

1995–96: £7.0 million

(c) 25 per cent. There are no plans at present to designate further areas of Wales as environmentally sensitive.

(d) 1996–97: £6.9 million

1997–98: £6.9 million

These are planned figures which may be subject to change.

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the (a) total annual budget (b) annual budget for administration and (c) number of administrative staff for the environmentally sensitive area grants. [28301]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The total programme budget for 1995–96 is £6,971,000. Precise administrative staff figures and costs cannot be given, because staff combine work on this area and other schemes. However, relevant administrative work alone is likely to account for approximately 18 staff years at a cost of around £264,000. In addition, professional ADAS staff are expected to provide scientific and technical advice at a cost of around £1,798,000. Most staff time in 1995–96 will be devoted to advising farmers on the key habitats to be included in their agreements; in drawing up maps of their farms showing the relevant features; and in negotiating and preparing their written management agreements.

Housing

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many Welsh households are on local authority and housing association waiting lists. [28444]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The information requested is not available centrally.

European Council of Ministers

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he now has to attend the Council of Ministers; on what occasions in the past he has planned to do so; and if he will make a statement. [28698]

Mr. Redwood: I shall be attending the next Transport Council meeting on 19 June for one day and previously, as a Department of Trade and Industry Minister, I have attended some 22 other Council meetings.

School Meals

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the percentage and number of children receiving (a) free school meals and (b) parentally paid for school meals for the last 10 years. [28443]

Mr. Richards: The information requested is shown in the following table:

	Percentage of pupils receiving [1]		Number of pupils receiving [2]
	Free meals	Paid meals	Free meals	Paid meals
1984–85	22.8	36.3	97,437	155,132

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the net expenditure on school catering services (a) in total and (b) in respect of free school meals for each year since 1987 broken down by county. [28822]

Mr. Richards: The available information is given in the following tables. Separate information on the costs of free school meals is not held centrally.

Countryside Council For Wales

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make available the results of the financial management policy review of the Countryside Council for Wales initiated in 1994, and if he will make a statement. [28477]

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 15 June 1995]: The financial management policy review of the Countryside Council for Wales was overtaken by the review of the council's functions which I announced in my response to the question by my right hon. Friend the Member for Conwy (Sir W. Roberts) on 3 November 1994, columns 1331–32. The action plan resulting from that review has been placed in the Library of the House.

Charter Week

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what was the total cost to public funds to Charter Week in Wales in 1995; [28637]

(2) how many civil servants are engaged in preparations for Charter Week; what are their grades; and in which sections of his Department they are working; [29237]

(3) what was the total cost of Charter Week in Wales. [29229]

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 15 June 1995]: A number of public service events have been timed to coincide with the fourth anniversary of the charter programme, including the publication of NHS performance tables. In Wales there will be no significant staff or cost implications, apart from the work on NHS performance tables which would have taken place anyway.

Correspondence

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received regarding the length of time his office takes to reply to letters, what difference there is in the time taken to respond to letters written in the Welsh language, and if he will make a statement. [28479]

Mr. Redwood: From time to time my Department receives representations about delays in answering letters. The Welsh Office target for replying to letters to Ministers is 12 working days. The target for replying to all other correspondence is 15 working days. These targets apply to letters in Welsh and in English.

Welsh Assembly

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his oral answer to the hon. Member for Ogmore (Mr. Powell) of 12 June, column 483 if he will list (a) the calculations and (b) the assumptions he has made in arriving at his estimated cost of the Labour party's proposed directly elected Welsh Assembly. [28879]

Mr. Redwood: I refer the hon. Member to the information I put out in my press notice on Friday 16 June.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his oral answer to the hon. Member for Ogmore (Mr. Powell) of 12 June, Official Report, column 483, what information he has sought from the Labour party Wales concerning the detail of its proposed Welsh Assembly. [28878]

Mr. Redwood: I have seen a copy of the Labour party proposals for a Welsh Assembly, and have often asked the hon. Member to clarify matters.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his oral answer to the hon. Member for Ogmore (Mr. Powell) of 12 June, Official Report, column 483, if he will make a statement in the work carried out by his departmental officials on the likely cost of the Labour party's proposals for a directly elected Welsh Assembly. [28880]

Mr. Redwood: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on Thursday 15 June, column 660.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his oral answer to the hon. Member for Ogmore (Mr. Powell) of 12 June, Official Report, column 483, if he will list those organisations in Wales he has consulted on the desirability of creating a directly elected Welsh Assembly. [28877]

Mr. Redwood: It is not Government policy to create an assembly.

Earnings

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the average wage for (a) full-time manual males, (b) full-time non-manual males, (c) full-time manual females and (d) full-time non-manual females in (i) Wales and (ii) each county in Wales for the last two years for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [28720]

Mr. Redwood: Average gross weekly earnings in each of the requested categories and for each county of Wales are published in part E of the "New Earnings Survey", published annually by the Employment Department, copies of which are available in the Library of the House.

Council of Europe Chapter

Mr. Roy Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 17 May, Official Report, column 269, if he will list the Government Departments with an interest in the Council of Europe charter for regional or minority languages which are involved in the consideration of its implications; and if he will make a statement. [28871]

Mr. Redwood: Apart from the Welsh Office, the Departments which have an interest in the charter are the Northern Ireland Office, the Scottish Office, the Home Office and the Foreign and Commonwealth Office.

Cardiff Bay

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement about the consultation with the members of the Cardiff bay coalition about proposals to acquire suitable land for the creation of wetlands in the Severn estuary to compensate for the loss of the Cardiff bay site of special scientific interest; and if all members of the coalition were consulted. [29254]

Mr. Redwood: This is an operational matter for the corporation and I have asked the chief executive to reply.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what progress has been made on the monitoring exercise of United Kingdom populations of the dunlin and redshank and their use of estuarine mud flat habitat as part of the compensatory measures agreed with the European Commission in respect of the Cardiff bay barrage project. [29232]

Mr. Redwood: The United Kingdom population of dunlin and redshank are constantly monitored under programmes coordinated by the wetland bird surveys which are endorsed by the Government. Good progress is being made by the Institute of Terrestrial Ecology on its long-term study on wading birds and their use of estuarine mud flats.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much is remaining of the money allocated for the creation of wetland habitat in the Severn to compensate for the loss of the Cardiff bay SSSI; and if he will report progress on the acquisition of suitable coastal land and mud flats for this purpose. [29233]

Mr. Redwood: About £350,000 has been incurred on expenditure related to the bird compensation/mitigation measures for the loss of the Cardiff bay habitat out of the £5.7 million provision. On progress I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 22 May 1995, column 461.

Welsh Development Agency

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 12 June, Official Report, col. 414, if his Department received the application for authorisation from the Welsh Development Agency for the redundancy costs to be approved separately from the other elements of the package agreed by his Department on 27 March 1990. [29250]

Mr. Redwood: Separate agreement to elements of the transfer cost was not sought.

Education Expenditure

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what proportion of identifiable Government expenditure on education in Wales, including mandatory loans and awards to students, is devoted to (a) primary education, (b) secondary education, (c) further education and (d) higher education; and if he will make a statement. [29024]

Mr. Richards: Identifiable Government expenditure on education in Wales in 1993–94, the most recent year for which complete data are available was £1,688 million, of which £165 million was expenditure by Department for Education on mandatory student awards for further and higher education. I will write to the hon. Member with further details of the breakdown of Welsh Office expenditure between sectors, and place a copy of the letter in the Library of the House.

NHS Performance Tables

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the arrangements for informing the media of (a) the publication of the 1995 NHS performance tables and (b) ancillary events during Charter Week. [29230]

Mr. Redwood: The media have been given the opportunity to receive advance embargoed copies of the performance tables on 30 June. A press release will also be issued by my Department. It will be for local service providers to publicise any events held during Charter Week.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has made to the chief executives of health authorities and trusts requesting the provision of good news stories about patients charter achievements in connection with the publication of the 1995 performance tables during Charter Week. [29236]

Mr. Redwood: Chief executives of health authorities and trusts have been asked to announce to the press and public what action they are taking to improve performance where this is needed and to take this opportunity to set out their successes, where this is merited. I have not asked them to spend extra money on publicity or advertising.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his current estimate of the total cost to public funds of the NHS 1995 performance tables publication and the media exercise connected with it during Charter Week. [29228]

Mr. Redwood: The total Welsh Office budget for the 1995 NHS comparative performance tables is £45,000.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his current estimate of the number of doctors and nurses to be involved in the press launches for the publication of the NHS patients charter 1995 performance tables during Charter Week; and how much time they will be required to spend (a) in total and (b) away from their regular medical duties. [29231]

Mr. Redwood: The degree to which health professionals are involved in publicising some of their achievements, as illustrated by patients charter comparative performance tables, is an issue for each NHS trust.

Dr. Audrey Giles

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) pursuant to his answer of 18 May, Official Report, columns 374–75, what was the grade of the civil servant who signed the acknowledgement of receipt of the recorded delivery package of documents sent by Dr. Audrey Giles on 10 March 1992 to his Department for the purposes of the appeal hearing subsequent to her forensic examination of those documents; what record his Department still holds of acknowledgement of the receipt of the package sent by the forensic scientist; and if he will make a statement; [29252]

(2) if he will list the documents contained in the recorded delivery package sent to his Department by Dr. Audrey Giles on 10 March subsequent to her forensic examination of them; and on what date they were received in his Department. [29251]

Mr. Redwood: I am advised that no such package was received by my Department on or around this date.

Higher Education

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the proportion of young people from Wales entering HE in (a) 1993–94 and (b) 1994–95; and if he will make a statement. [29012]

Mr. Richards: Information for Wales for 1993–94 and 1994–95 is not yet available. The most recent data show that in 1992–93 an estimated 26 per cent. of young persons from Wales entered higher education.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many students were studying at a Welsh higher education institution in (a) 1993–94 and (b) 1994–95; and if he will make a statement. [29100]

Mr. Richards: Information on the number of students studying at Welsh higher education institutions in 1993–94 and 1994–95 is shown in the following table.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what proportion of Welsh higher education departments received a research rating of (a) three or above and (b) five during the recent research assessment exercise; and if he will make a statement. [29027]

Mr. Richards: Sixty-three per cent. of Welsh higher education departments assessed during the 1992 research assessment exercise received a research rating of three or above; 4 per cent. of the departments received the top rating of five. The Higher Education Funding Council for Wales has as one of its objectives to "double the units of assessment graded four and five in the research assessment exercise conducted every four years".

The HEFCW has been allocated an additional £2 million in support of this objective in each public expenditure survey round since 1992. The next research assessment exercise is to be undertaken in 1996.

Civil Servants

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 2 May, Official Report, column 139, if he will provide comparable details of civil service early retirement packages on grounds of inefficiency. [29294]

Mr. Redwood: Inefficiency is a ground for dismissal. An immediate lump sum payment of up to two years' salary may be made where a Department judges payment of compensation to be appropriate. Where compensation is agreed and the person dismissed is over age 55, this may be forgone in favour of immediate payment of the accrued superannuation benefits which would otherwise be preserved for payment at retiring ages. Three people have left the Welsh Office on inefficiency grounds during the last five years. Details are as follows:

Welsh Office Buildings

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the total running cost of Gwydyr house in the last year for which figures are available. [29554]

Mr. Redwood: The cost for 1994–95 was £334,780.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many meetings he hosted in the last year in (a) Gwydyr house and (b) Cathays park and what are the associated costs of these meetings. [29553]

Mr. Redwood: I have hosted a wide range of meetings throughout the year including delegations from Members of Parliament, local authorities and representatives from industry and other groups. A precise breakdown of the figures is not available. The cost of these meetings is small. My office provides tea or coffee or occasionally cold drinks to all visitors.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Fisheries Council

Mr. Harris: To ask the Minister for Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the European Fisheries Council meeting of 15 June. [29594]

Mr. Jack: I represented the United Kingdom at the meeting of the Fisheries Council in Luxembourg on 15 June with my hon. Friend the Under-Secretary of State for Scotland the hon. Member for Dumfries (Sir H. Monro).

The Council agreed unanimously ceilings on fishing effort in western waters as required by the agreement reached in December on the integration of Spain and Portugal into the common fisheries policy. The figures agreed reflect actual recent fishing effort and will enable UK fishermen to continue their normal patterns and levels of fishing activity without new restriction, provided effort does not increase. Limitations on the disposition of the Spanish fleet in the Irish box were also introduced with the result a maximum of eight vessels are allowed in the northern part and a maximum of 32 in the south.

The Commission presented to the Council its proposals for monitoring and inspection arrangements in western waters. These measures are important because they will provide the basis for enforcing effort controls. I confirmed to the Council that these proposals must be both practicable and realistic in terms of their application. The Council agreed to consider them urgently so that they can be adopted before the end of this year and come into operation along with the effort controls from 1 January 1996.

Most member states indicated they could agree to a presidency compromise concerning a proposal for funds from the existing financial instrument for fisheries guidance to be used to support national early retirement schemes for fishermen and for compensation payments to crews of decommissioned vessels. The Commission's original proposals relating to bad weather payments and additional support for market price fluctuation were excluded. The United Kingdom continued to argue that such measures should be covered by national social polices and were not appropriate use of FIFG funds.

There was a discussion of drift net fishing and, once again, no conclusions were reached on the Commission's proposal, dating from last year, to phase out the use of drift nets. I emphasised the importance of drift net fishing to British fishermen. I also set out the arrangements, which we have in hand to ensure compliance with the rules in this summer's tuna fishery in the north-east Atlantic, and to discourage any possible disruption of fishing. The Council noted with satisfaction the measures being implemented by member states and the deployment of a vessel carrying Commission inspectors.

The Council discussed progress in the United Nations conference on straddling and highly migratory fish stocks. This conference is looking at ways of improving co-operation between states in the management of international fisheries. I stressed the importance of achieving a binding convention which will lead to more effective conservation of fish stocks in international waters and should reduce the risk of disputes. The Council agreed that the Community should continue to play a constructive role in the negotiations and decided that further work should be done in defining its position before the next session of the Conference.

The Council confirmed its commitment to the full implementation of the April agreement reached between the Community and Canada on fishing in the north-west Atlantic, including the important new provisions to secure effective enforcement. It agreed unanimously to adopt a regulation fixing the 1995 Community quota for Greenland halibut at 5,013 tonnes for the period from 16 April onwards.

The Council unanimously agreed a presidency compromise setting quotas for imports of fish into the Community at reduced rates of import duty for the remainder of 1995. The quotas on cod and haddock were set lower than proposed by the Commission, reflecting concern about weak market prices.

I drew the Council's attention to a Commission proposal to be considered by the Agriculture Council which would introduce harmonisation of inspection charges for fish. I said that, in the absence of distortion of the market, this is an unnecessary measure which could increase costs. I pressed my colleagues to look at the proposal critically, involving fisheries experts to the full.

I also took the opportunity of this meeting of the Council to invite Fisheries Ministers to consider a proposal made by the Government's panel on sustainable development that there should be an intergovernmental panel on the oceans. The panel would be set the task of examining the science, assessing the human impact and putting in place a framework for the responsible management of the world's oceans. It would cover fish stocks, other marine resources and measures to cope with pollution. The Government are currently studying this proposal and wish to take into account the views of other member states before reaching conclusions.

Environmentally Sensitive Areas

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what percentage of the total land area of England was designated as environmentally sensitive; what financial provision his Department allocated to environmentally sensitive areas in the years 1993–94, 1994–95 and 1995–96; what percentage of the total land area of England will be designated as environmentally sensitive; and what financial provisions his Department will allocate to environmentally sensitive areas in each of the years 1996–97 and 1997–98. [29326]

Mr. Jack: I have been asked to reply.

The 22 currently designated English environmentally sensitive areas (ESAs) cover 1,149,217 hectares. This is 8.8 per cent. of the total land area of England, excluding inland waters, and includes approximately 10 per cent. of agricultural land in England. Provision for payments to farmers was £30 million in 1993–94, £31 million in 1994–95 and is £43 million per annum for 1995–96 to 1997–98. There are no plans at present to increase the area designated.

Soya Milk

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the levels of oestrogen in soya milk. [29457]

Mr. Jack: MAFF has commissioned two projects and a further project is under discussion. All these projects include measurement of plant oestrogens in soya milk, but no results from them are available for evaluation at present.

Spitzbergen (Spanish Fishing Rights)

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how long Spain has been fishing off Sptizbergen; and what considerations underlie the different allocations for Spain and the United Kingdom. [29207]

Mr. Jack: Spain, like the United Kingdom, is a signatory to the Treaty of Paris 1920, which determined the status of Spitzbergen and Bear Island—Svalbard—and has been fishing at Svalbard since before her accession to the European Community in 1986. The relative stability keys for cod at Svalbard were laid down in 1987 and reflects historic track records in the fishery.

Crown Immunity

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list all areas within (a) his Department, (b) agencies under his Department's control and (c) organisations for which he has ministerial responsibility to which Crown immunity applies; what consideration he has given to removing this; and if he will make a statement. [28655]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 15 June 1995]: The Government's policy on Crown immunity as set out in CM 1599—"The Citizen's Charter—Raising the Standard" is that Crown immunity is being progressively reduced, as legislative opportunities arise. In the meantime, the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, its agencies and the non-departmental public bodies for which it has responsibility, behave as though bound by regulations.

Chernobyl

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many farms in England are still affected by restriction notices imposed due to contamination following the Chernobyl nuclear accident; what land area these farms constitute; and what percentage of available farmland in England this represents. [28600]

Mrs. Browning: When restrictions were first introduced, they covered about 197,000 hectares which affected over 1,670 holdings. Restrictions now apply to 66 farms occupying a land area of around 14,568 hectares, which represents about 0.1 per cent. of available farmland in England. An intensive survey is taking place this summer to establish the scope for further derestrictions.

Agricultural and Food Research Council

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many commissions his Department entered into with the Agricultural and Food Research Council for each year since 1979; how many such commissions he expects to make this year; and what is the value of those commissions in (a) cash and (b) constant prices. [28598]

Mr. Waldegrave: My Department issued a single commission each year for its research and development requirements from the institutes of the Agricultural and Food Research Council. Details of the amounts spent in cash and constant prices are set out in the table:

£ million

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many written parliamentary questions were tabled for answer by his Department in each of the past five years; how many of these were not answered because the information (a) could be obtained only at disproportionate cost, (b) was not held centrally and (c) was not normally disclosed; how many of these could now be answered due to computerisation, more effective and efficient operational systems or more open government; and if he will list each question along with the name and constituency of the right hon. or hon. Member who originally tabled it. [28504]

Mr. Jack: The information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Tobacco Industry

Mr. Byers: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what level of financial support has been given to the Italian and Greek tobacco industry over the last five years from the European Community, and what is the forecast of funding for each of the next three years. [28156]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 13 June 1995]: Details of expenditure on the tobacco regime by the EU, broken down by member state, are contained in annex 2 of the annual financial reports of the European agricultural guidance and guarantee fund—EAGGF—guarantee section, copies of which have been deposited in the Library of the House. The latest report available relates to 1993. Figures for 1994, taken from the draft annual financial report are set out in the table.

Greece: 426.06 mecu (£326.48[1])

Italy: 394.53 mecu (£302.32[1])

The CAP budget is drawn up only a year in advance and is set in relation to forecast expenditure throughout the Community and not on the basis of allocations to individual member states. The figures for 1995 and 1996 are as follows:

1995: EU 15 1,132 mecu (£914 million[2])

1996: EU 15 1,087 mecu (£909 million[1])

Since 1992, the Commission has been conducting a detailed investigation into EC tobacco expenditure in member states. Disallowance—costs not being met from the EC budget—has been applied to Greece and Italy to the value of 16 mecu—£12 million—and 8 mecu—£6 million—in respect of the 1990 budget, and 35 mecu—£28 million—and 22 mecu—£17 million—respectively, with regard to 1991, the last year where the accounts have been cleared. Concerns about tobacco expenditure have, of course, been covered in European Court of Auditors special report 8/93. Earlier this year, the Commission undertook to submit a report on the operation of the new regime agreed in 1992, together with an account of irregularities and fraud committed, and of measures already taken or to be taken in the clearance of accounts procedures.

Goosanders

Sir Cranley Onslow: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will place in the Library a copy of the conditions attached to a licence to shoot goosanders, as an aid to scaring, as issued by his Department, together with a specimen of the sample daily return issued by the Agricultural Development Advisory Service. [27440]

Mrs. Browning: I have arranged to be placed in the Library of the House information as to the conditions that might be attached to a licence to shoot goosanders under section 16 of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981. No licences to shoot goosanders were issued in 1994–95 by MAFF.

An example of the daily return issued by ADAS has also been placed in the Library of the House.

Structural Fund

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what discussions he has had with his ministerial counterpart in Northern Ireland about the grant allocations from the European Community structural funds for infrastructure and fish diversification projects; and if he will make a statement. [27150]

Mr. Jack: Northern Ireland is a designated objective 1 area for EC structural purposes. A breakdown of the 15.12 mecu—£12.72 million at 15 May green rate prices—allocation for infrastructure measures and other fisheries measures is set out in the Northern Ireland single programming document 1994–99, a copy of which is available in the Library. The Northern Ireland expenditure on these measures is also set out in the UK fisheries sectoral plan 1994–99 required under EC regulation No.3699/93, which I am arranging to be placed in the Library. These documents were the subject of normal inter-departmental consultation and reflect an agreed view.

Northern Ireland plans on PESCA initiative for fish diversification projects were subject to similar consultation and are contained within the UK integrated operation programme 1994–99 which has been submitted to the European Commission for approval. Copies have been placed in the Library of the House.

Quotas

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he will undertake a review of the quota situation for first-time applicants who wish to participate in the dairy and sheep sectors of the industry, and if he will make a statement. [27149]

Mr. Jack: The quota schemes in the sheep and dairy sectors are based on EC legislation and the Government's ability to review operational aspects of those schemes is constrained by the requirements of the legislation. There are no plans to review the quota provisions for first-time applicants for sheep annual premium, who are able to apply to the national reserves of quota under one of three categories: newcomers to farming under 40; newcomers to farming over 40; other first-time applicants for premium. Nor do the Government have any plans to make special provision for new entrants under the milk quota system. We have, however, indicated that we would be prepared to consider any plans that the NFU and others may have for assisting new entrants to the dairy industry.

Disposal at Sea

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what responsibilities his Department has for monitoring sites where military chemicals and surplus explosives have been disposed at sea. [26699]

Mr. Jack: The Ministry has a major monitoring programme with a network of locations at which samples of biota, sediments and the water column are taken. Measurements are made of a wide range of substances and biological responses to assess the impact on the marine environment of human activities, on land and at sea. The results of this monitoring are published annually.

Pest, Disease and Weed Control

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, what assessment Her Majesty's Government have made of the costs of (a) bio-control, (b) mechanical weeding and (c) use of pesticides for the needs of agriculture in the United Kingdom. [26329]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 13 June 1995]: The needs of agriculture are addressed in the research and development programmes of the agriculture departments, which include examination of various methods of pest, disease and weed control. The results are widely published and help guide agricultural and environmental policy and practice. I will write to the hon. Member shortly with details of work on integrated crop management.

Multi-annual Guidance Programmes

Dr. Godman: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the maritime member states of the European Union which have met their obligations under the terms of the multi-annual guidance programmes in the past five years; which such nations have failed to match the criteria specified in the programmes; and if he will make a statement. [26193]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 7 June 1995]: At their inception, multi-annual guidance programmes involved member states setting objectives in agreement with the Commission in order to help re-establish the balance between resources and their exploitation. These objectives were subsequently made mandatory as a result of Council decision 94/15/EC, which set a deadline of 31 December for compliance

The Commission report to the Council and to the European Parliament on the progress of MAGPs for the fishing fleet at the end of 1993, a copy of which is in the Library of each House, showed that Belgium, Denmark, Germany, Greece, Spain and Portugal had achieved their interim targets at that date. France had done so for tonnage, but not for vessel power. Documents had been submitted showing that the Italian targets had been met, but the Commission was unable to verify this prior to publication. Ireland, the Netherlands and the United Kingdom had not met their interim targets.

Compliance with interim targets is not mandatory. A further report, detailing the position at the end of 1994, is expected to be published soon.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Disabled People

12. Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to assist disabled people. [27611]

Mr. Hague: Substantial help is given to disabled people through the social security system. Expenditure on disability living allowance, attendance allowance and disability working allowance for 1993–94 was more than £4.5 billion and estimated expenditure for 1994–95 is more than £5 billion. In excess of £530 million was spent on benefits for those caring for disabled people in 1994–95.

23. Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what recent discussions he has had with people with disabilities on the level of benefits. [27623]

Mr. Hague: No such discussions have taken place recently. Benefit levels are kept under review and we are confident that current policies are targeting available resources where they are most needed.

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what new measures the Government are taking to help disabled people; and if he will make a statement. [27971]

Mr. Hague: The Government's Disability Discrimination Bill, currently being considered in another place, will do much to end discrimination against disabled people. The Bill will give disabled people new rights of non-discrimination in employment and access to goods and services as well as creating a National Disability Council to advise the Government on the elimination of discrimination. The Government have extended their proposals to protect people who have had a disability but since recovered; to set access standards for taxis; and to place extra duties on schools and colleges to have regard to their arrangements for disabled pupils and students. We also propose a power in the Bill to set accessibility standards for land-based public transport vehicles.

Funded Pension Schemes

16. Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what other EU countries have funded pension schemes. [27616]

Mr. Lilley: All other EU countries have some funded pension provision. The UK has more assets invested in pension funds than the rest of Europe put together. Many EU countries are taking steps to develop further their funded pension provision.

Child Support Agency

19. Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what representations he has received from right hon. and hon. Members on (a) the future of the Child Support Agency and (b) the efficiency of its present administration. [27619]

Mr. Burt: I have received a large number of representations from hon. Members over time on all matters relating to the CSA, although in recent months there has been a reduction in the numbers of such representations.

On the future of the agency, I can assure the hon. Member that the agency is here to stay. We shall, of course, continue to monitor and evaluate the effects of the Child Support Act 1991 and continue to listen.

Means-tested Benefits

21. Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people are presently in receipt of means-tested benefits; and what was the comparable figure 10 years ago. [27621]

Mr. Roger Evans: The latest available information indicates that an estimated 8.53 million people were in receipt of an income-related benefit in May 1993, after taking into account those receiving more than one benefit. The earliest directly comparable data is for May 1989, which indicates that an estimated 6.65 million people were in receipt of an income-related benefit.

Bronchitis and Emphysema

22. Mr. Clapham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to prescribe chronic bronchitis and emphysema in respect of industries other than the coal industry. [27622]

Mr. Hague: We have no such plans. The Secretary of State is advised on the prescription of diseases under the industrial injuries scheme by the independent Industrial Injuries Advisory Council. The council has recommended prescription of chronic bronchitis and emphysema only in respect of underground coal mining.

Social Security Card

25. Mrs. Angela Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a further statement on his plans to introduce a social security card for the payment of benefits. [27625]

Mr. Arbuthnot: It was announced last year that a new system would be developed to automate the payment of benefits at post offices. Order books and girocheques will be phased out and replaced by a benefit payment card which will allow access to payment information held electronically. This will reduce costs for taxpayers, be more secure for customers and support the future of the post office network.

This important project is being taken forward under the private finance initiative. In December 1994, five companies or consortia were invited to develop their proposals and all five have now submitted detailed plans. These are being evaluated by a team of experts from both Post Office Counter Ltd. and the DSS to determine which of the suppliers will be invited to take part in the next stage of the development; detailed demonstrations and contractual negotiations.

Post Office Payment of Pensions

27. Mr. David Martin: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on the means by which pensioners will be able to choose to have their benefits paid through the Post Office. [27627]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Pensioners will continue to be able to choose to have their benefits paid directly into their bank or building society accounts by automated credit transfer or to collect it at the post office.

Plans are well advanced to automate the system for paying benefit at post offices. This will mean the phasing out of orderbooks and giros, and replacing them with a benefit payment card. It is envisaged that the pensioner will hand his card to the post office clerk who will use it to access information about benefit entitlement which will be held electronically on a database. The customer will sign a receipt at the counter to confirm receipt of the cash.

Benefit Fraud

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the most recent estimate he has made of the cost of fraud by benefit claimants. [27608]

Mr. Lilley: I refer the hon. Member to the oral answer that I gave earlier today to the hon. Member for Aylesbury (Mr. Lidington).

Mortgage Arrears

Ms Jane Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he next intends to meet the Council of Mortgage lenders to discuss the current level of arrears. [27620]

Mr. Roger Evans: We have regular meetings with the council in order to discuss issues of mutual interest.

Performance Measurement

Mrs. Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what performance indicators and performance targets there are for measuring the performance of his Department in (a) answering letters from members of the public and (b) answering telephone calls from members of the public; how performance is monitored; and what are the latest figures for performance measured against the target set; [26227]

(2) what policy and procedures exist for dealing with complaints against his Department by members of the public; when his Department last updated its policy; what time limit and target for dealing with such complaints his Department has; and what follow-up procedure exists where complaints are not satisfied with his Department's response to a complaint. [26211]

Mr. Hague: DSS headquarters aims to answer all correspondence within 20 working days of receipt. For the period 1 January 1995 to 31 May 1995, a total of 12,317 replies to letters from members of the public were sent, of which 83 per cent. were answered within this target. The public inquiry line handles telephone calls from members of the public. It aims to provide good quality answers to customers' inquiries rather than process a set quantity of telephone calls. Quality performance is continually monitored by electronically tracking the number of calls dealt with and by a supervisor routinely listening in to a number of calls. Staff also receive continuous training on information available in addition to regular specific assessment of their individual performance.

The responsibility for day-to-day operations, including the handling of letters, telephone calls and complaints from members of the public, rests with the chief executive of each agency. Each of them will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Paul Winstanley to Ms Margaret Hodge, dated 19 June 1995:

I have been asked by the Department's Parliamentary Branch to provide you with further information about the Resettlement Agency's handling of telephone calls and letters from members of the public.

Before answering the specific questions that you raise I should explain that in terms of this Agency members of the public are the residents of our resettlement units.

On arrival at resettlement units residents are advised that if they are not satisfied with the service or feel that they have been treated unfairly they should tell a member of the management team who will investigate and report back to them the same day.

If they are still unhappy, the are invited to contact the Chief Executive who undertakes to acknowledge any letter and reply within ten working days. Telephone complaints to the Chief Executive care answered either on the same day or the next.

All residents receive a pamphlet on arrival that explains the procedures. The message is reinforced by Standards of Service posters and posters that deal exclusively with the complaints procedure. These are situated prominently in all units.

The achievement is monitored through records kept at Headquarters on behalf of the Chief Executive. In 1994/95 100% of letters and telephone calls were answered within the prescribed time limits.

The last independent Customer Care Survey (1944) found that 84% of residents were satisfied with the complaints procedure.

Where a customer is not satisfied with the outcome of a complaint dealt with by the Chief Executive they may ask their Member of Parliament to submit the complaint to the Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration for investigation and review.

The Resettlement Agency complaint procedure was last reviewed in June 1994.

If I can be of any further assistance do not hesitate to contact me.

Letter from Faith Boardman to Ms Margaret Hodge, dated 19 June 1995:

As Chief Executive of the Contributions Agency, I have responsibility for answering questions about operational matters relating to the Agency and the National Insurance scheme. I have been asked to reply to your questions concerning performance indicators, targets for answering letters and telephone calls, and the Agency's policy and procedures for dealing with complaints. In view of the nature of the questions I have combined the responses.

The Contributions Agency Charter standard for written enquiries is to despatch either a full reply, or an informative response to 95% of customer enquiries within 10 working days of receipt.

Performance in answering written enquiries is measured using information from the Agency's management information systems which is subsequently independently validated using sampling techniques. In 1994/95 the target was met in 90.8% of cases.

In the case of telephone enquiries, we aim to answer these immediately where we can. Where this is not possible we will advise why and inform the customer when a full reply can be expected. Our target is to provide an overall level of customer service considered to be satisfactory by at least 90% of our customers. We measure this by an annual customer satisfaction survey and this showed that in 1994 a satisfaction rate of 83% was achieved.

With regard to your second question, in April 1995 the Contributions Agency updated its policy and procedures for dealing with complaints from members of the public.

Our system is publicised in a new complaints leaflet for customers entitled "Unhappy with Our Service?" The leaflet is displayed in all Social Security and Contributions Agency offices and I enclose a copy for your information.

Customers can use any method (letter, telephone, fax) to make a complaint and it can be made to anyone in Contributions Agency who will immediately pass it on to the person dealing with that area of work. All expressions of dissatisfaction are recorded and dealt with immediately where practical. An interim response is issued to the customer if the query cannot be resolved quickly. If it relates solely to another Government Department it is acknowledged and passed to the appropriate area. Managers are encouraged to review cases locally to identify trends/problems and to record any changes or improvements made.

Agency staff in Contributions Agency aim to deal with customer complaints within 5 working days. They will provide information on the next stage in the complaints procedure if the complainant is not satisfied. Those customers who are still dissatisfied may complain directly to me and I will normally reply within 10 working days.

From 1 June 1995, customers who have had their cases investigated by myself but feel that it has not been satisfactorily resolved can have it investigated by an Independent Adjudicator.

Where the customer is still not satisfied with the outcome, they may ask their Member of Parliament to submit the complaint to the Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration for investigation and review.

There is a separate route of complaint to the Office for the Determination of Contribution Questions (ODCQ) in the case of disagreements with a Secretary of State decision or a ruling on a contribution question.

I hope that you will find this information useful. If I can be of any further assistance please let me know.

Letter from K. C. Caldwell to Ms Margaret Hodge, dated 19 June 1995:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions about:

> performance indicators and targets for measuring performance in answering letters and telephone calls from members of the public and > what policy and procedures exist for dealing with complaints from members of the public; when this policy was last updated; what time limit there is for dealing with complaints and what follow-up procedure exists where complainants are not satisfied with the given response.

The Information Technology Services Agency provides computer systems and support to all DSS Agencies, DSS Headquarters, Employment Services and the Northern Ireland Social Security Agency, to enable them to provide services to their direct customers. Contracts, in the form of Service Agreements, are in place to cover the supply of these services to our internal customers and to enable them, in turn, to meet their performance targets.

If a member of the public had an enquiry or complaint this would be addressed to the branch of the Department that handles their business. For example, the Benefits Agency, Contributions Agency, Employment Service, would have lead responsibility and, if the topic involved information technology, we would be asked to provide comment and support. We would do this within timescales and targets that are set by the branch taking the lead for the Department.

This Agency participates in Open Government and has one point of contact for this, ITSA Public Relations.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Letter from Ann Chant to Ms Margaret Hodge, dated 19 June 1995:

I am replying to your recent Parliamentary Questions to the Secretary of State for Social Security about the Child Support Agency's procedures and performance in dealing with correspondence and telephone calls.

The Agency's Charter includes standards to be achieved in responding to letters and telephone calls from clients.

Performance on telephone calls is measured by the British Telecom call handling service, and we aim to respond to 80 per cent. of telephone calls to the National Enquiry Line (NEL) or Child Support Agency Centres (CSAC) within 20 seconds. NEL is a dedicated service which provides advice and information on more straightforward enquiries. More detailed and case specific enquiries are generally referred to the CSACs. During the year ending 31 March 1995, over 90 per cent. of telephone calls to NEL and 66 per cent. to CSACs were answered within 20 seconds.

We aim to reply to clients' written enquiries within 10 days and performance is monitored centrally within the Agency. During the year ending 31 March 1995 the Agency replied to 34 per cent. of written enquiries within 10 days.

We aim to acknowledge clients' complaints within 2 days and to send a full response within 10 days. Complaints procedures were reviewed in January 1994. Customer Services Managers record correspondence received from clients or their representatives indicating dissatisfaction with the Agency's service or procedures. If the complainant is not satisfied with the response, they may write to the CSAC Manager, or, in field offices to the Divisional Manager. If, following their response, the complainant is still not satisfied, our Charter invites them to write to me at the Child Support Agency, Room 2420, Millbank Tower, 21–24 Millbank, London SW1 4QU.

Clients may, of course, also request their Member of Parliament to submit their complaint to the Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration for investigation and review.

I hope this is helpful.

Letter from Ian Magee to Ms Margaret Hodge, dated 19 June 1995:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions about what performance indicators and targets there are for measuring the performance of his Department in answering letters and telephone calls and what policy and procedures exist for dealing with complaints by members of the public. I will explain the performance and target indicators and the policy and procedures that exist for the Benefits Agency (BA).

As stated in the BA Customer Charter, we aim to reply to correspondence within 10 working days. The BA carries out an annual National Customer Survey which includes a question about the length of time customers have had to wait for a reply to their letters. The 1994 National Customer Survey showed, on average, that customers waited 12 days compared to 13 days in 1993. The BA is continuing to look at ways of improving the service provided in order to fully meet our Charter commitment.

All BA offices have their own standard for how quickly they answer telephone calls. As BA customers increasingly prefer to conduct their business by telephone, traffic volumes have risen. The capacity of many office switchboards has not been adequate to keep pace with the increase and a programme is under way to replace or upgrade all switchboards to provide easier and faster access. The programme is scheduled for completion during the year beginning April 1997 when National guidelines will be set.

Telephone performance is currently monitored by Area Directors' staff who telephone every office in their area 20 times a quarter. The aim is to measure response times and quality of greeting; in addition one of these calls asks a question and measures staff knowledge. Results show that the average response time is 8 rings for an office to answer the telephone and three rings for an extension within the office to respond.

The complaints system is also explained in the BA's Customer Charter as well as the Tell Us About It leaflets. I enclose a copy of both leaflets for your information and they have also been placed in the Library. They are available in eleven languages including Urdu, Punjabi, Turkish, Chinese and Welsh.

The BA's complaints policy was revised in 1991 with the appointment of Customer Service Managers.

If a customer is dissatisfied with the level of service they receive from the BA they can complain to the appropriate Customer Service Manager. The Customer Service Manager's name and telephone number is displayed in the public caller area of each BA office. The customer will receive a response within 7 days.

If the customer remains dissatisfied, they can write to the District Office Manager whose name will be provided by the office on request.

You may also be interested to know that the BA is currently reviewing its complaints procedures and we expect to have completed this by July 1995.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Ms Margaret Hodge, dated 19 June 1995:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions about our performance targets for answering telephone calls and letters, and our complaints procedure.

Over the past two years we have made many improvements in the service we can give to war pensioners. The launch of the War Pensions Agency in April 1994 included the publication of our first Charter Standard Statement, which defines service targets and standards including a complaints procedure if we fail to deliver the service we promise. Our published targets are:

> Telephone calls to War pensions Helpline answered within 30 seconds. If we cannot answer the question straight away, we will call back at a time convenient to the pensioner.
> letters from the public acknowledged within 5 working days followed by a full response by letter or telephone within 10 working days.

The War Pensions Agency telephone Helpline provides the main point of contact for the whole of the Agency and is the number quoted on all correspondence and publicity material. It includes a new automatic call distribution system which amongst other things provides statistics for monitoring and target purposes.

Six months after Helpline was set up, we started a rolling programme of customer perception surveys. In December 1994, these showed that 93% of those asked said the service they received was either very good or good. In 1994/5 calls were answered with an average wait time of only 6.9 seconds and 95% of calls were answered within 30 seconds.

As part of our continued drive to improve standards of service, the use of customer satisfaction surveys are reflected in our business plans. We are currently awaiting results of the 1995 survey, including the area of correspondence, which will be carefully examined and improvement initiatives coordinated by the Total Quality Management team.

In 1994/95, 1,781 replies were sent by our operational sections in respect of letters addressed to Ministers or myself within 95 per cent. being sent within the 10 day target. The complaints system we now have in place, including a database of information, will enable us to monitor our targets for acknowledgement and replies in other areas of correspondence.

Turning to our complaints system, pensioners with concerns can telephone the War Pensions Helpline on 01253 858858, the Helpline staff will be only too pleased to answer the query.

Our Charter Standard Statement states that if things go wrong, any written complaint will be acknowledged within 5 working days, and a full reply sent within 10 working days. If we think it will take longer than this, we will write or telephone the person concerned to explain why and let them know when to expect a full reply to their complaint.

If a person is dissatisfied with the way the complaint has been dealt with, they can contact our Customer Service Manager. If, however, they are still not satisfied they can get in touch with me. Details of how to do this are contained within the Charter Standard Statement. In addition to this, a person can also ask their MP to refer their case to the Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration for investigation and review.

In addition to the formal complaints procedure, pensioners can discuss any concerns with the many ex-service organisations and we fully investigate any matters referred to us as a result. People can also, if they wish, discuss their cases with their local War Pensions Committee (WPC). These are independent of the Agency and are made up of members who are disabled ex-service persons, some of whom work for voluntary associations. Again, any recommendations mady by the WPCs are fully considered. Information on how to contact ex-service organisations or the WPCs is contained in leaflets available from the Agency and our national network of War Pensioner's Welfare Service offices.

I hope you have found this information useful.

Invalidity Benefit

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many invalidity benefit awards have been (a) reviewed, (b) disallowed following review and (c) reinstated on appeal in each of the last 12 months in the Doncaster and Mexborough area of the Benefits Agency. [28262]

Mr. Hague: This is a matter for Mr. Ian Magee, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member with such information as is available.

Letter from Ian Magee to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 15 June 1995:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about Invalidity Benefit (IVB) awards in Doncaster and Mexborough in each of the last 12 months. As you may know, Incapacity Benefit (IB) replaced IVB on 13 April 1995.

The Benefits Agency's (BA) Doncaster District has offices on two sites at Castle House and St Peters House. Unfortunately, statistics of IVB decisions reviewed, and IVB decisions disallowed on review at Doncaster District are not available for the period June 1994 to September 1994 because they have been destroyed.

Mexborough BO is part of the BA'S Rother and Dearne District which comprises offices at Rotherham, Goldthorpe, Mexborough and Rotherham North. Reviews of IVB/IB cases for customers of Mexborough BO are dealt with at that office.

The available information is provided in the table at Appendix 1.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Industrial Injuries Disablement Benefit

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many individuals applied for benefit in respect of chronic bronchitis or emphysema by Benefits Agency area directorate for the year 1994–95; how many of those claims have been successful; how many of the claims were refused on the basis of (a) insufficient lung function loss; (b) insufficient length of service and (c) non-diagnosis of class 1 pneumoconiosis; and what were the percentages of those whose claims were refused by each directorate. [28261]

Mr.Hague: The administration of industrial injuries disablement benefit is a matter for Mr. Ian Magee, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member with such information as is available.

Letter from Ian Magee to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 15 June 1995:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about claims made for chronic bronchitis and emphysema in each Benefits Agency (BA) area directorate in 1994–95.

Information about the number of claims, their success rate and the number disallowed for various reasons is not available in the exact format requested. This is because figures for the number of claims made in the 6 months since the end of the initial 12 month take-on period, September 1993–October 1994, have been collected separately and in a slightly different format. This is because during the take-on period some claim details were collected by the BA's Disability Benefit Centres for ease of reference.

The available information is shown at Appendices A, B and C. Appendix A outlines the numbers of claims made, those successful and the numbers and percentage refused on the basis of insufficient length of service ie 20 year rule. This information was collated at Area Directorate (AD) level and covers the period from September 1993–October 1994. Appendix B outlines the numbers and percentages of claims disallowed as a result of insufficient lung function loss and non-diagnosis of Class 1 pneumoconiosis. This information was collated by the Disability Benefit Centres.

Since October 1994, information on the number of customers who did not meet the criteria for lung function loss and category 1 pneumoconiosis has been collated by the AD's. Appendix C details information about the number of claims made, those successful and the claims disallowed as a result of the three categories. This information covers the 6 month period October 1994 to March 1995, the end of the 94/95 statistical year.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Income Support

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the outcome of the audit of the administration of income support discretionary severe hardship payments to persons aged 16 and 17 years and what changes in policy or practice have resulted. [28303]

Mr. Roger Evans: The administration of income support is a matter for Mr. Ian Magee, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ian Magee to Mr. Keith Bradley, dated 15 June 1995:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking about the outcome of the audit of the administration of Income Support discretionary severe hardship payments to persons aged 16 and 17 years.

Prior to 3 May 1994, all decisions on claims for Income Support from 16/17 year olds, under the severe hardship provision, were made by the Severe Hardship Claims Unit (SHCU) in Glasgow. These decisions, with the exception of likely nil and complex decisions, were devolved during April 1994 to the District Offices. I have attached, at Annex A, a list of the cases that are now referred to SHCU.

During May 1994, the Benefits Agency Internal Audit carried out a review of the procedures for dealing with claims for Income Support from 16/17 year olds under the severe hardship provision. Their report was produced in July 1994. Annex B outlines the main findings.

As a result of the report the Benefits Agency has introduced one procedural change involving the introduction of a register of officers who are authorised by the Secretary of State to make decisions under the severe hardship provisions. We have also reminded staff of previously issued advice on best practices to follow in administrating claims from 16/17 year olds.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

ANNEX A

Cases to be referred to SHCU for decision

1. Likely nil decisions
2. Likely revocations
3. Where a care order is currently in force
4. Partner cases
5. If payment is not appropriate from the date of claim
6. If backdating because of good cause is appropriate
7. If severe hardship payments have been made for 16 weeks continuously
8. All cases if an authorised officer is unavailable
9. If a young person has not registered for Youth Training after a short term direction has expired

ANNEX B

Findings of the Benefit Agency Internal Audit Report on Income Support for 16/17 year olds

1. Development of decision making in the pilot exercise was extremely successful and there is no reason to doubt effective national devolution.
2. From the sample of cases examined, the average time from receipt of claim to interview was 2.74 days. This delay was compounded by the number of claims which were not identified on receipt.
3. Audit established a payment accuracy rate of 93.17 per cent. from the cases examined which was in line with Agency targets despite the devolution of some of the decision making from the Severe Hardship Claims Unit (SHCU).
4. Development of decision making has produced an administrative saving for the Agency.

Lone Parents

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what research he has undertaken into the halving of the population of single parents who work rather than draw income support; and if he will make a statement. [27220]

Mr. Burt: Research commissioned by this Department on changes in lone parenthood between 1989 to 1993, due to be published shortly, suggests that the proportion of lone parents in work is now increasing steadily and that the increase is directly associated with the 1992 change in the qualifying hours condition in family credit. Benefit statistics show that in 1988 there was one lone parent on family credit for every 10 on income support; by 1994, this ratio had improved to around one for every four.

The Department commissions extensive research on lone parenthood and the barriers to working for all those on income support. A large part of the reduction in the proportion of lone mothers in employment since the 1970s is accounted for by an increase in the proportion of lone mothers with a child below school age. The introduction of assistance with child care costs in family credit housing benefit and council tax benefit in October 1994 should help to address changes caused by changes in the composition of lone parenthood.

The table shows that the proportion of lone mothers in work fell from 47 per cent. in 1977 to 1979 to 41 per cent. in 1991 to 1993—general household survey data. These figures include those working part time within the rules of income support and supplementary benefit. However, the number of lone parents in work is now actually increasing—from around 375,000 in 1980 to around 500,000 in 1992.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to assist families in the private rented sector whose levels of housing benefit have been restricted. [28307]

Mr. Roger Evans: As a part of the October changes to housing benefit, we have proposed that local authorities should have discretion to pay more than the restricted rent in cases where they believe failure to do so would cause exceptional hardship. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State is considering the report of the Social Security Advisory Committee, together with representations received from the local authority associations.

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what representations he has received from landlords about the impact of the proposed housing benefit changes on the availability of private rented accommodation to people on housing benefit; and if he will make a statement. [28304]

Mr. Roger Evans: The Department has received a number of representations from landlords. These have expressed concerns about a number of aspects of the proposals. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State is considering the report of the Social Security Advisory Committee, together with representations received as a result of consultation with the local authority associations.

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will reconsider his plans to tighten restrictions in housing benefit rent levels. [29084]

Mr. Roger Evans: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State is currently considering the report of the Social Security Advisory Committee on the proposed changes. He is also considering views expressed by the local authority associations.

Family Credit

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of the number of children who live in a family which is in receipt of (a) income support and (b) family credit. [28807]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is set out in the table:

Benefit	Number of children[1]
Income Support	[2]3,185,000
Family Credit	[3]1,180,000

[1] Figures include dependent children up to the age of 18.

Refugees and Asylum Seekers

Mr. Riddick: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many (a) refugees and (b) of those seeking refugee status are in receipt of one or more social security benefits; and what is the cost of (a) and (b). [28882]

Mr. Roger Evans: In May 1994, there was 42,140 asylum seekers in receipt of income support. The estimated annual cost of providing income support and housing benefit is £210 million. Information about asylum seekers receiving other social security benefits is not collected. Information is not available in respect of refugees who are not separately identified within the social security scheme.

Motability

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) if he will institute an independent review of the necessity and size of the contingency reserve held in respect of car leasing facilitated by Motability; and if he will make a statement; [28715]

(2) what is the current level of the contingency reserve held in respect of car leasing facilitated by Motability; and if he will make a statement; [28716]

(3) what assessment he has made of the arrangements for the financing of car leasing for disabled people via Motability; and if he will make a statement; [28717]

(4) what assessment he has made of the relationship between Motability and Motability Finance Ltd. in connection with the provision of mobility services for disabled people to whom mobility allowance is paid. [28718]

Mr. Hague: The level of the contingency reserves held by Motability Finance Ltd. are a matter for discussion between MFL and Motability, an independent charity. When Motability and MFL reviewed the level needed early last year they agreed that £25 million, including tax credit, should be transferred by way of gift aid into Motability charitable funds. MFL states that the current level of the combined contingency reserves for car leasing and hire purchase schemes is £37.1 million. The level required is currently being considered as part of an annual review of financial arrangements by Motability and MFL. The Department and Motability have recently finalised a financial memorandum, the aim of which is to ensure that Motability can continue to build on its success in providing some 5,000,000 vehicles to disabled people at good value for money.

National Insurance

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the number of employees for whom employers' national insurance contributions are paid in the ranges of weekly earnings from (a) below £58, (b) £58 to £104.99, (c) £105 to £149.99, (d) £150 to £204.99, (e) £205 to £440 and (f) above £440. [29010]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The information in respect of the 1995–96 year is in the table:

£ per week	less than 58	58 to 104.99	105 to 149.99	150 to 204.99	205 to 439.99	Above 440
Number in millions	3.1	1.8	1.7	2.6	8.9	3.3

Source: Government Actuary's Department

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the total revenue yield from employers' national insurance contributions for 1994–95. [29009]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The total yield is estimated at £23.4 billion.

Source: Government Actuary's Department.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the revenue which would be raised by charging employers national insurance contributions at 20 per cent. for weekly incomes in excess of £1,500. [29011]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The additional revenue is estimated at £650 million in a full year.

Source: Government Actuary's Department.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security in what circumstances his Department or the Contributions Agency is informing people in receipt of invalidity or incapacity benefit that they have insufficient national insurance credits or contributions to entitle them to the retirement pension; for what reasons; and if he will make a statement. [29015]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Fifteen months after the end of each contribution year, the Department's national insurance recording system examines more than 59 million records to identify those accounts where it appears that insufficient contributions have been recorded to make the year a qualifying one for retirement pension purposes. When this happens, a computer-produced letter is issued to the contributor.

The purpose of this letter is to keep contributors informed of their national insurance contribution record position and, in particular, to advise them of the deficiency. If they feel that their record should reflect more contributions that those recorded, it invites them to let the Contributions Agency know so that it can investigate the matter. Alternatively, it gives contributors the opportunity to pay sufficient voluntary contributions for the year to count towards their retirement pension.

Additionally, the Benefits Agency provides a retirement pension forecast service to all customers on request provided that the customer is not within six months of state retirement age.

Funeral Expenses

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he intends to reply to a letter from Mr. Derek Case, president of the Birmingham Funeral Directors' Guild, on his proposals for the capping of funeral expenses for social security claimants. [29450]

Mr. Roger Evans: A reply was sent today.

SCOTLAND

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the outturn public expenditure on housing in Scotland for each year since 1979-80, expressed as (a) a gross figure, including capital receipts, (b) net of capital receipts and (c) gross capital investment only, combining local authority non-housing revenue account, local authority HRA, Scottish Homes/Housing Corporation development programme, Scottish Homes/Scottish Special housing association own stock and new towns; and what is the planned public expenditure on housing in Scotland for each year between 1995-96 to 1997-98 expressed in the same way. [27930]

Lord James Douglas Hamilton: The available information is set out in the table.

Primary School, Grangemouth

Mr. Connarty: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what health and safety constraints apply to any application from Central regional council or its successor to build a school to replace Zetland primary school in Dalgrain park in Grangemouth. [27669]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Any new school building work is subject to planning permission requirements; the provisions of building regulations; regulations relating to the general requirements and standards for school premises; and to general health and safety legislation.

Compulsory Competitive Tendering

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what were the percentages of contracts, both by number and by value, won by in-house direct service organisations in Scotland since 1988, in the areas of (a) building cleaning, (b) refuse collection, (c) other cleaning, (d) vehicle maintenance, (e) catering, educational and welfare, (f) catering other, (g) grounds maintenance and (h) sports and leisure; and what where the average percentages for each category for Scotland as a whole. [28122]

Mr. Kynoch: My Department does not collect this information. However, the CCT information service survey report No. 10 December 1994 published by the Local Government Management Board provides information in this area. This report shows the following in relation to current contracts:

Per cent.

Activity		Number of contracts won-in-house	Value of contracts won-in-house
Building cleaning	Client authority's DSO	87.9	97.9
	Other authority's DSO	0.9	—

Per cent.

Activity		Number of contracts won-in-house	Value of contracts won-in-house
Refuse collection		88.7	[1]100
Other cleaning[2]		100	100
Vehicle maintenance	Client authority's DSO	86.3	97.4
	Other authority's DSO	2.7	0.5
Catering (education and welfare)		91.1	[3]97.4
Other catering[4]		29.7	[5]71.7
Ground maintenance	Client authority's DSO	77.5	94.3
	Other authority's DSO	9.1	2.6
Sports and leisure management		98.0	99.4

Notes:
[1] The contracts won by private contractors were won by individuals and have an average value of £2,186 pa. As such, DSOs have won effectively 100 per cent. of work by value.
[2] In 23 contacts other cleaning has been packaged in by authorities with refuse collection.
[3] This figure does not take account of one contract held by the private sector, for which the value is unknown.
[4] In a number of cases other catering may be packaged in with catering (education and welfare).
[5] Many of the contracts held by the private sector are held by individuals and are of relatively low value.
A copy of the LGMB report is available in the library.

Civil Servant Secondment

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland which senior Scottish Office official is currently on secondment with the British Linen Bank Group; what position that official has within the Scottish Office; and what is the purpose of the secondment. [27931]

Mr. Lang: Dr. W. Moyes began a two years' secondment with the British Linen Bank in October 1994. He is a grade 5 officer and prior to his secondment was head of the purchasing strategy division in the NHS management executive. This move is part of a civil service-wide initiative to encourage interchange between Government, commerce and industry; its purpose is to develop staff by widening their skills and experience, and to promote greater understanding between these sectors.

Food Safety

Mrs. Liddell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many cases before Scottish courts have been dismissed by reason of a successful due diligence defence in relation to the Food Safety Act 1990. [28291]

Sir Hector Monro: This information is not held centrally.

Mrs. Liddell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what United Kingdom industry guides to good hygiene practice will be approved prior to the introduction of the New Food Safety (General Food Hygiene) Regulations to assist enforcement authorities in the application of the legislation. [28283]

Sir Hector Monro: In line with the EC food hygiene directive, UK Government Departments have encouraged the food industry to set up working groups to draft voluntary guides for different sectors of the industry in collaboration with enforcement and consumer interests. To date, 10 sectors of the UK food industry have indicated their willingness to prepare such guides. It is not possible to forecast how many guides will have been recognised by the time the regulations are expected to come into force. One guide—on catering—has already been subject to full consultation and is likely to be submitted for recognition shortly.

Mrs. Liddell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when legislation in Scotland will be brought into line with that in England and Wales in respect of the temperature control requirements for food. [28287]

Sir Hector Monro: There are no plans to align the present Scottish legislation on food temperature controls with that in England and Wales. It may, however, be necessary to amend the Scottish provisions when the European Community harmonises legislation in this area.

Mrs. Liddell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to introduce legislation, in accordance with the requirements of the Food Safety Act 1990, in relation to the licensing by enforcement authorities of premises for the purpose of a food business. [28289]

Sir Hector Monro: There are no plans to amend the current legislation made under the Food Safety Act 1990 relating to the licensing of food premises.

Mrs. Liddell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many emergency prohibition notices and prohibition orders have been imposed in Scotland in respect of premises in terms of the Food Safety Act 1990 since the Act came into force. [28285]

Sir Hector Monro: The number of emergency prohibition notices or orders and prohibition orders that have been imposed in Scotland since the Food Safety Act 1990 came into force are as follows:

Year	Emergency prohibition notices or orders	Prohibition orders

Information prior to 1991 is not held centrally and figures for 1994 are not yet available.

Mrs. Liddell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the proposed date for the introduction of the new Food Safety (General Food Hygiene) Regulations in Scotland. [28288]

Sir Hector Monro: We aim to introduce these regulations within the next few weeks.

Mrs. Liddell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many persons in Scotland have been prohibited from managing a food business in terms of the Food Safety Act 1990 since the Act came into force. [28286]

Sir Hector Monro: This information is not held centrally.

Food Labelling

Mrs. Liddell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many cases have been successfully prosecuted in Scotland since 1990 with regard to offences in relation to the food labelling legislation; and what has been the average fine in such cases. [28284]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information requested is not separately identifiable within the Scottish Office Home and Health Department's classification of crimes and offences.

Mrs. Liddell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make it his policy to introduce legislation which will make it an offence to sell food after the best-before date relating to it. [28290]

Sir Hector Monro: Best-before dates do not relate to the safety of food but indicate how long the quality of the food can reasonably be expected to be retained. My right hon. Friend does not believe that there is any need to change the existing provisions prohibiting the sale of food which is not of the nature, substance or quality demanded by the purchaser or where the use-by date has expired.

Hospices

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he, or any of his Ministers last visited a hospice in Scotland. [28554]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton My right hon. and noble Friend the Minister of State visited the Prince and Princess of Wales hospice in Glasgow on 18 February 1994. I am due to visit St. Columba's hospice in Edinburgh next month.

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the names and locations of hospices in Scotland; which of them have been required to pay for prescriptions for terminally ill patients since the introduction of the new funding arrangements; what are the reasons for this; what plans he has to review these arrangements; and if he will make a statement. [28532]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The adult voluntary hospices in Scotland, and their locations, are as follows:

Health board area	Hospice
Argyll and Clyde	Accord, Paisley Ardgowan, Greenock St. Vincent's Johnstone
Ayrshire and Arran	Ayrshire, Ayr
Forth Valley	Strathcarron, Denny
Greater Glasgow	Hunter's Hill Marie Curie Centre, Glasgow Prince and Princess of Wales, Glasgow St. Margaret's Clydebank
Highland	Highland, Inverness
Lanarkshire	St. Andrew's, Airdrie
Lothian	Fairmile Marie Curie Centre, Edinburgh St. Columba's, Edinburgh
Western Isles	Bethesda, Stornoway

From 1995–96, each health board's general allocation contains funding for purchasing specialist palliative care of the type provided by the voluntary hospices, including an element in respect of the cost of medication. Information is not held centrally on the arrangements for the provision of pharmaceutical services which have been entered into by health boards and hospices under the new arrangements.

Public Expenditure

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland which elements of public expenditure are excluded from his calculation of identifiable public expenditure per head in Scotland. [28553]

Mr. Lang: Chapter 7 of the statistical supplement to the "Financial Statement and Budget Report", which gives figures for identifiable public expenditure per head by country, illustrates those elements of general Government expenditure which cannot be separated between individual countries. A breakdown of the 1993–94 total is as follows:

Defence	22.9
Overseas Services	3.5
Current transfers abroad (excluding above)	1.8
Nationalised Industries EFLs	4.4
Law, order and protective services	1.0
Other unidentifiable expenditure	11.2

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many written parliamentary questions were tabled for answer by his Department in each of the past five years; how many of these were not answered because the information (a) could be obtained only at disproportionate cost, (b) was not held centrally and (c) was not normally disclosed; how many of these could be answered now due to computerisation, more effective and efficient operational systems or more open government; and if he will list each question along with the name and constituency of the right hon. or hon. Member who originally tabled it. [28508]

Mr. Lang: The information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what percentage of parliamentary questions which would have been answered directly by him or his Ministers prior to the establishment of executive agencies, are now referred to the chief executive of such an agency. [28489]

Mr. Lang: Ministers are accountable to Parliament for all matters concerning their agencies. Written parliamentary questions concerning matters which have been delegated to the chief executive of an executive agency in its framework document normally receive a reply from the Minister to the effect that he or she has asked the chief executive to reply direct to the Member by letter. The chief executive's letter is published in Hansard, following the Minister's reply.

Local Government Allowances

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to review the (a) allowances, (b) special responsibility payments, (c) travelling allowances, (d) subsistence rates and (e) other allowances payable to elected members of (i) regional, (ii) district and (iii) unitary authorities; how any changes will extend to civic heads, deputy civic heads, majority leaders, deputy majority leaders, majority group officers, committee chairpersons, committee vice-chairpersons, minority leaders and those with special responsibility in minority parties; and if he will make a statement. [28525]

Mr. Kynoch: The annual uprating of allowances for members of existing regional and district councils has been carried out and implemented by the Local Authorities etc (Allowances) (Scotland) Amendment Regulations 1995. Allowances for members of the new unitary authorities are set down in the Local Authorities etc (Allowances) (Scotland) Regulations 1995.

Local authorities already have discretion to determine the amounts paid to chairmen and vice-chairmen. This principle is retained for conveners and depute conveners of the new councils. The new councils will also have discretion to determine the level of special responsibility allowance. The obligation upon authorities to pay special responsibility allowance to at least one member of a minority group is retained. Guidance on suggested levels of special responsibility has been issued by the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities.

Travel and subsistence allowances have been revised and, where possible, aligned with the rates available for officials. The revised rates came into effect from 1 April 1994.

Planning Appeals

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what provision exists for objectors to a planning application to appeal against planning approval if it is granted; and if he will make a statement. [28578]

Mr. Kynoch: No provision exists in planning legislation for objectors to a planning application to appeal against a planning consent.

Comments on such third party appeals were received in some of the responses to the review of the planning system in Scotland and these are under consideration.

Unitary Authorities

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on how the role of the new unitary authorities is likely to differ from their predecessor authorities in seeking and obtaining funds from the European regional development fund and European social fund; how the additionality rules will apply; and if he will make a statement. [28566]

Mr. Kynoch: The role of the new unitary authorities will not differ from that of their predecessor authorities in seeking and obtaining funds from the European regional development fund and European social fund. The same additionality rules will apply.

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, if he will list in rank order the population of each unitary authority in Scotland. [28568]

Mr. Kynoch: The information requested is as follows:

	Population
City of Glasgow	623,850
City of Edinburgh	441,620

EU Committee of the Regions

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the (a) name, (b) nominating organisation and (c) attendance record of each full and substitute member of the European Committee of the Regions; and if he will make a statement. [28572]

Mr. Lang: The name of each Scottish member and alternate of the Committee of the Regions is given in the table. In accordance with article 198a of the Maastricht treaty, members are nominated by member states and appointed by the Council for a period of four years. Members were elected representatives from both tiers of Scottish local government.

Member	Alternate
Charles Gray	Keith Geddes
Rosemary McKenna	Jean McFadden
Brain Meek	Marcus Humphrey
Duncan McPherson	Peter Peacock
Daniel Coffey	Clive Sneddon

Details of members' attendance at meetings is not notified to the Scottish Office and is a matter best taken up with the Committee of the Regions secretariat at the following address: Committee of the Regions, Rue Ravenstein 2, 1000 Brussels, telephone Brussels 00 32 2 546 2211.

Tourism

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions he has had with the Scottish tourist board on the potential for joint promotions with the Northern Ireland tourist board; and if he will make a statement. [28552]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. Friend has had no such discussions.

Magistrates

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the political balance of magistrates in each Scottish district; and if he will make a statement. [28573]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The office of magistrate was removed in Scotland by the District Courts (Scotland) Act 1975. Magistrates in office in 1975 became justices of the peace and that is the office which predominately administers the lay justice system in Scotland.

JPs are appointed by the Secretary of State for Scotland on the basis of nominations by local authorities for ex officio appointment of elected members or on the recommendation of local advisory committees. JPs are not paid and are not compelled to declare their political views. The primary consideration in the appointment of a JP is the individual's personal suitability for the office.

The District Courts (Scotland) Act 1975 also provides for the appointment of stipendiary magistrates. There are nine stipendiary magistrates in Scotland operating in Glasgow district court. Their political views are not known.

The table shows the political affiliations, declared at the time of their appointment, of all justices of the peace in Scotland by each commission area.

Rent Assessment Panel

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the arrangements in Scotland corresponding to the English system of rent assessment panels; what salary and allowances are payable; who serves on such a body in Scotland; what are the expected time commitment of such appointees, including presidents, vice-presidents, chairmen, professional members and lay members; and if he will make a statement. [28577]

Lord James Douglas Hamilton: The rent assessment panel for Scotland was established under the Rent Act 1965 which is now consolidated in the Rent (Scotland) Act 1984. The purpose of the panel is to provide chairpeople and other members for rent assessment committees. The duties of a rent assessment committee are set out in:

(i) Section 48(1) of the Rent (Scotland) Act 1984;

(ii) Sections 25 and 34 of the Housing (Scotland) Act 1988;

(iii) Statutory Instrument 1980 No. 1665 (S.129) The Rent Assessment Committee (Scotland) Regulations 1980

(iv) Statutory Instrument 1989 No. 81 (S.12) The Rent Assessment Committee (Assured Tenancies) Scotland Regulations 1989.

The 62 members of the rent assessment panel are appointed by my right hon. Friend and are solicitors, surveyors and lay people. The members are:

The president and vice-president are part-time appointments. The president is expected to spend one and a half days a week on duties relating to his position as president. The vice president is expected to spend one day a week on hers. Both are also required to serve on a set number of rent assessment committees a year. Other panel members are normally asked to serve on rent assessment committees on average once every three weeks. This does, however, vary from area to area.

Details about panel members' remuneration are published in the annual Cabinet Office publication "Public Bodies".

These arrangements are broadly similar to those affecting English rent assessment panels.

Witness Costs

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many cases under summary procedure in the most recent (a) three and (b) five years for which figures are available have involved (i) a witness, (ii) the travelling costs of a witness and (iii) the accommodation costs of a witness being paid to come from waters furth of the British Isles to attend a court hearing, and if he will make a statement. [28633]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information requested by the hon. Member is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

School Meals

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the net expenditure on school catering services (a) in total and (b) in respect of free school meals in each year since 1987, broken down by county. [28821]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Net expenditures on the school meals service by each education authority in Scotland from financial year 1987–88 to financial year 1993–94—the latest year for which actual expenditure figures are available—are given in the table. Separate information on expenditure on free school meals is not held centrally.

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, what nutritional quality standards there are for school meals; and when was the last change in these standards. [28811]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Specific nutritional standards for school meals are not prescribed in Scotland. The Government's policy is that education authorities should be responsible for the school meals service which they administer, including nutritional aspects.

Schools (Confectionery Sales)

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland under what authority the selling of confectionery in schools may be prohibited; and which schools have prohibited its sale. [28829]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The sale, or prohibition of sale, of confectionery in schools is entirely a matter for each education authority. The information on the policies of individual authorities is not held centrally.

Scottish Court Service

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment techniques he has employed to evaluate the benefits and operational efficiency of the Scottish Court Service as an executive agency; what are the specific responsibilities and duties of this agency; whom he appointed as the chief executive of this agency; and if he will make a statement. [28631]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Scottish Court Service was established as an executive agency on 3 April 1995. The key performance targets for the agency were set out by my right hon. Friend in his reply to the hon. Member for Aberdeen, South (Mr. Robertson) on 31 March 1995, Official Report, columns 804-5. The responsibilities and duties of the agency are set out in the framework document, which is available in the Library. The chief executive of the agency is Michael Ewart, who was appointed following open competition for the post.

Glasgow Regeneration Alliance

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will list the members of the board of the Glasgow Regeneration Alliance; and which organisation each member represents. [29276]

(2) what parliamentary representation there is on, and input to, the board of the Glasgow Regeneration Alliance; and if he will make a statement. [29277]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: While the Scottish Office has recently accepted an invitation to attend, as observers, the executive officers group of the Glasgow Regeneration Alliance, the composition and workings of the various groups of the alliance are matters for its four member organisations; Strathclyde regional council, Glasgow district council, Glasgow development agency and Scottish Homes.

Mature Students

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many continuing students, commencing a degree course, or postgraduate teacher training course, in Scotland in the autumn of 1995, will be eligible for the mature students allowance. [29194]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information requested is not available at this time. The Student Awards Agency for Scotland, which is responsible for offering assistance to Scottish domiciled students undertaking full-time courses of higher education of the kind referred to, is still receiving student award applications for session 1995–96.

The mature students allowance is a supplementary, age-related, means-tested, allowance administered as an integral part of the student allowances scheme. In session 1995–96, it will be available to those students who commenced a continuous programme of assisted full-time study before session 1995–96, and who meet all the other criteria of the scheme, provided they are continuing with their current course or proceeding direct to another eligible course in session 1995–96 without a gap. The allowance will not be available to new students who commence a programme of full-time study in session 1995–96.

The responsibility for the provision of student support for those students domiciled in England and Wales and Northern Ireland who may be attending institutions in Scotland rests with my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education and my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, respectively.

RMAS Salmaster (Fatality)

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects the fatal accident inquiry into the death of a crew member of the RMAS Salmaster to be held; and where it will take place. [27917]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The procurator fiscal at Lochmaddy is inquiring into the death of Philip John McPate who died on board RMAS Salmaster off the coast of South Uist on 16 May 1995. A decision on whether to hold a fatal accident inquiry and, if so, on the place at which any inquiry would be held, will be taken by Crown counsel, to whom the procurator fiscal will report when he has completed his inquiries.

Sexual Deviancy Testing

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what proposals he has to introduce the penile plesythmograph as a means of testing sexual deviancy in prisoners who have been convicted of serious sexual offences; and if he will make a statement. [27918]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The subject of the question relates to matters undertaken by the Scottish Prison Service. I have asked its chief executive, Mr. E. W. Frizzell, to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from E. W. Frizzell to Dr. Norman A. Godman, dated 19 June 1995:

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton has asked me to reply to your question about any proposals to introduce the penile plesythmograph as a means of testing sexual deviancy in prisoners who have been convicted of serious sexual offences.

There are no proposals to introduce such tests in Scotland. The sex offender treatment programme in Peterhead Prison encourages prisoners to address their offending behaviour and to recognise the consequences of their actions for their victims. Emphasis is placed on recognising the cycle of offending and on developing relapse prevention strategies to reduce the number of victims in the future.

Accident and Emergency Departments

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the accident and emergency departments in Scotland. [28164]

Chief Social Work Officers

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list those persons appointed to the position of chief social work officer by the 29 new unitary authorities under the terms of the Local Government etc. (Scotland) Act 1994 with their salaries and present occupational positions and employers; and if he will make a statement. [28092]

Lord James Douglas- Hamilton: Of the 32 new unitary authorities only one has officially confirmed the appointment of a chief social work officer. Angus council has appointed Mr. William B. Robertson. Mr. Robertson is currently deputy director of social work with Tayside regional council. His salary will be £59,571. Details of the outstanding appointments will be reported to the Secretary of State in due course.

Disabled People

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what action he has recently taken to ensure access for disabled citizens to (a) cinemas (b) theatres and (c) sport grounds; and if he will make a statement. [28093]

Sir Hector Monro: The Scottish Arts Council and the Scottish Sports Council are already committed to helping to remove physical barriers and increase access for disabled people. Furthermore, in issuing directions to the Scottish Arts Council and Scottish Sports Council under the National Lotteries etc. Act 1993, my right hon. and learned Friend made it clear that they should seek to ensure suitable access for those with physical or other disabilities to assets or facilities acquired through lottery funding. The provisions in the Disability Discrimination

Bill would require service providers, including those who operate cultural and entertainment facilities and sports stadiums, to remove physical barriers, where reasonable, in order to improve access for disabled people to their service.

Ambulance Service

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he has made on the frequency of 999 emergency ambulance calls in the past seven years in (a) Strathclyde and (b) Scotland as a whole; and if he will make a statement. [28096]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Regular monitoring of the performance of the Scottish Ambulance Service NHS trust by officials in the Home and Health Department includes an assessment of levels of demand. This information is also available to health boards as purchasers of the accident and emergency ambulance service. Figures for the last seven years are as follows:

	Strathclyde[1]		Scotland
Year	Number of calls	Variance (per cent.)	Number of calls	Variance (per cent.)
1988–89	79,876	—	156,813	—
1989–90[2]	82,633	+3.5	167,981	+7.1
1990–91[2]	83,503	+1.1	163,704	–2.5
1991–92	99,909	+19.6	190,608	-16.4
1992–93	105,410	+5.5	203,415	+6.7
1993–94	107,212	+1.7	209,146	+2.8
1994–95	111,101	+3.6	216,562	+3.6

Notes:

[1] Information is not held in this form. These figures cover Ayrshire and Arran, Argyll and Clyde, Greater Glasgow and Lanarkshire Health Boards.

[2] The Industrial dispute had an unquantifiable effect on the volume and accuracy of records in these years.

Noisy Neighbours

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what proposals he has to deal with the problem of noise nuisance by neighbours; if he intends to introduce legislation on the issue; and if he will make a statement. [28094]

Sir Hector Monro: The Environment Bill will extend to Scotland part III of the Environmental Protection Act 1990, which covers all forms of statutory nuisance, including neighbour noise.

The conclusions and recommendations of a UK interdepartmental working party on the effectiveness of current neighbour noise controls were issued for consultation in March. They include a proposal for a new night-time noise offence. We will consider the comments received before deciding if further legislation for Scotland would be appropriate.

Homeless Mentally Ill

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he has made about the number of mentally ill citizens who are currently homeless in (a) Strathclyde and (b) Scotland as a whole; and if he will make a statement. [28095]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: This information is not held centrally.

In 1993 the Chief Medical Officer wrote to health boards asking them to assess the health needs of homeless people within their resident populations and to develop strategies to meet the identified need. Their progress in doing so will be monitored through the annual NHS accountability review process.

Homelessness is also a national priority issue for housing authorities and for Scottish Homes. An aim of the Chief Medical Officer's initiative was to establish inter-agency arrangements to ensure homeless people who have health problems, including mental health problems, are referred for help to appropriate health agencies. However, homeless mentally ill people cannot be compelled to accept assistance unless their condition justifies compulsory detention under the Mental Health (Scotland) Act 1984.

Compulsory Competitive Tendering Scheme

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what information he holds centrally in respect of contracts for health and hospital services awarded by health boards and NHS trusts under the compulsory competitive tendering scheme; and if he will make a statement. [28097]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Newcastle upon Tyne, East (Mr. Brown) on 29 March 1995, Official Report, column 581 which stated that the information requested had been placed in the Libraries of the House.

Since that date information has been received on the award of a catering service contract by the Dundee Teaching Hospitals NHS trust. The details of that contract are as follows:

Service type	Contractor	Number of contracts	Start date	Previous cost (£000)	Tender value (£000)
Catering	In-house	1	1 August 1995	1,337	1,324

Hospital Beds

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many dedicated private wards have opened in NHS hospital trusts in each of the past three years. [28098]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: There are no dedicated private wards in any NHS trust hospital in Scotland. A number of trusts have beds which may be made available for use by private patients provided that they are not required for NHS patients.

Health Service Pay Negotiations

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many officials of (a) Shetland health board and (b) Orkney health board have received formal training in conducting wage negotiations with representations of nursing staff; and if he will make a statement. [29020]

Mr. Lang: Two senior officials from Shetland health board and one from Orkney health board attended a seminar on local pay bargaining in May. These seminars were part of a programme offered to all health boards in Scotland.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when his Department issued guidance to the Orkney and Shetland health boards in respect of the local negotiation with nursing staff and other professions allied to medicine concerning 1995–96 wages and salaries. [29019]

Mr. Lang: No such guidance has issued.

My Department is in regular contact with all health boards on a range of issues including local pay bargaining.

Civil Service Retirements

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer of 9 May, Official Report, column 396, if he will provide comparable details on civil service early retirement packages on grounds of inefficiency. [29282]

Mr. Lang: Inefficiency is a ground for dismissal. An immediate lump sum payment of up to two years' salary may be made where a Department judges payment of compensation to be appropriate. Where compensation is agreed and the person dismissed is over age 55, this may be forgone in favour of immediate payment of the accrued superannuation benefits which would otherwise be preserved for payment at retiring age. There have been seven departures from the Scottish Office on inefficiency grounds in the past five financial years. Details are as follows:

2 in 1991–92
2 in 1992–93
2 in 1993–94
0 in 1994–95

Of the seven, compensation was agreed for only one officer and paid as a lump sum compensation payment approximately equivalent to two years' salary.

Drug-related Deaths

Mr. Gallie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, what arrangements have been made to improve the collection of information about drug-related deaths in Scotland; and if he will make a statement. [29765]

Mr. Lang: The General Register Officer for Scotland, in consultation with forensic pathologists, the Crown Office and my Department, introduced new arrangements in 1994 for checking and classifying such deaths. The improved procedures are described in a publication issued today by the General Register Office for Scotland. The publication also gives information about drug-related deaths in 1994, collected under the new system, and, for comparative purposes, provides available data for 1992 and 1993. A copy has been placed in the Library.

The new arrangements have significantly improved the collection and reliability of information on drug-related deaths in Scotland. The figures tragically illustrate the dangers of misusing drugs and underline the importance of the concerted action now being taken to tackle drug misuse on the basis of the report of the drugs task force, led by my noble and learned Friend the Minister of State. The improved data now available will help inform the development of policy and services within the framework of the task force report.

ENVIRONMENT

Territorial Waters

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he plans to take to protect (a) the North sea and (b) all United Kingdom waters, out to the 200-mile limit of territorial waters. [28116]

Mr. Atkins: Under international law, territorial waters, and their accompanying jurisdiction, only extend to a maximum of 12 nautical miles from the baseline—that is, the coast or in certain circumstances a line drawn between two headlands. More limited jurisdictions can be claimed in a region up to 200 nautical miles from those baselines. With the other North sea states, the Government set out their intention in the 1992 Paris declaration of extending jurisdiction in this way in respect of shipping. The Government therefore will make regulations under the Merchant Shipping (Salvage and Pollution) Act 1994 to extend our coastal state jurisdiction over pollution from shipping. In exercising these jurisdictions, the Government comply with the United Kingdom's obligations under the comprehensive system for the protection of the marine environment of the north-east Atlantic contained in the Oslo, Paris and OSPAR conventions and applies the policies agreed in the North sea conferences, both to the North sea and other UK waters.

Council Estates

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what further plans he has for greater private sector involvement in the management and ownership of council estates; and if he will make a statement. [28885]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: We wish more local authorities, especially in urban areas, to consider the benefits which they and their tenants can obtain from transferring the ownership of council housing to new landlords; and we wish a wider range of bodies to be involved in receiving such transfers. We hope to announce soon our proposals for bringing this about. We have put in place the legislative framework extending our compulsory competitive tendering to housing management. The first contracts are due to be in operation from April 1996. I am pleased to say that local authorities are making good progress with their preparations.

Nuclear Safety

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will provide a list of all reports carried out by his Department's pollution inspectorate, or its consultants, which include reference to Nirex's research and safety analyses. [28583]

Mr. Atkins: I have asked the chief inspector to prepare a list of the reports and to make it available on request. A copy of the list will be placed in the House Library.

Atmospheric Pollution

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will provide the most recent figures on levels of ozone and nitrogen dioxide in Britain and each other country in the European Union. [28584]

Mr. Atkins: The most recent figures on levels of ozone and nitrogen dioxide are available as part of the Department of the Environment's air quality bulletin service. Information from the national automatic monitoring sites is used to provide air quality bulletins to the public, giving daily information on these and other air pollutants in both urban and rural areas across the United Kingdom via a freephone helpline, Ceefax, Teletext and a variety of other news media. The bulletin includes information on levels of pollutants together with a forecast and health advice on what to do should levels become high. The Ceefax and Teletext bulletin services have recently been upgraded and now provide hourly updates on nitrogen dioxide, ozone, sulphur dioxide and benzene and 1,3—butadiene. In addition, information from the Department's non-automatic and automatic monitoring sites is published regularly.

Information on levels of pollutants in other European countries is not held centrally.

Local Authority Area Committees

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if the rules on political balance set out in his reply to the hon. Member for Thurrock (Mr. MacKinlay) on 21 July 1994, Official Report, column 464, apply to area committees established exclusively to discharge the authority's functions or to advise the authority in respect of the area and where all voting members are from wards wholly or partly within the area and either the area does not exceed two fifths of the authority's whole area or the population of the area does not exceed two fifths of the authority's total population. [28881]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: The political balance rules would not apply in this case.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many local authorities have established area committees exclusively to discharge the authority functions. [28823]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: We do not hold information about which authorities have chosen to organise themselves in this way.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what restrictions there are on the functions which a local authority may devolve to area committees which it may set up to discharge council functions. [28818]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: The area committee will be subject to the general limitations imposed by Local Government Act 1972 on all authorities arranging for discharge of their functions, in particular by section 101 of that Act. The committee's authority will also be restricted in terms of area.

Homelessness

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of States for the Environment what is the total number of families in temporary bed and breakfast accommodation paid for by public funds; and what is his Department's budget for this. [28809]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: At 31 March 1995, 4,480 households were accommodated in bed-and-breakfast hotels by English local authorities in connection with their duties under the homelessness legislation. Provision for local authority expenditure on such matters is included within the all other services standard spending assessment, and is not separately identified.

Local Authority Devolution

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what consideration he has given to allowing district and borough councils greater flexibility in devolving functions to parish and town councils. [28817]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: Section 101 of the Local Government Act 1972 already gives principal authorities considerable scope to delegate functions to any other local authority, including parish councils.

Sainsbury Superstore Application, Stoke Mandeville

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to receive his inspector's report on the application by J. Sainsbury plc to build a superstore at Lower road, Stoke Mandeville; and if he will make a statement. [28627]

Sir Paul Beresford: The inspector's report was received on 3 April. The Secretary of State refused planning permission for the proposals on 14 June.

Energy Saving Campaign

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, what is the estimated amount of energy saved, to date, as a result of his Department's "Wasting Energy Costs the Earth" campaign. [28619]

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the estimated amount of energy saved, to date, as a result of his Department's "Wasting Energy Costs the Earth" campaign. [29161]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: The "Wasting Energy Costs the Earth" campaign, launched in October last year, aims to raise public awareness and encourages action to save energy in the home, as part of the United Kingdom's climate change programme. A full assessment of the campaign's effectiveness will be made when it is completed.

EU Funding, Merseyside

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the names together with the previous and present jobs of the monitoring committee and technical committees appointed to assist with the objective 1 funding of Merseyside; and if he will make a statement. [28703]

Sir Paul Beresford [holding answer 15 June 1995]: Following is a list of the members both of the monitoring committee and of the two technical panels for, respectively, industrial development and the people of Merseyside, together with present positions. Details of the members' previous positions are not readily available.

The membership reflects a wide-ranging partnership of public and private sector organisations on Merseyside.

Crown Immunity

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list all areas within (a) his Department, (b) agencies under his Department's control and (c) organisations for which he has ministerial responsibility to which Crown immunity applies; what consideration he has given to removing this; and if he will make a statement. [28649]

Sir Paul Beresford [holding answer 15 June 1995]: An Act of Parliament is presumed not to bind the Crown unless the contrary intention is clearly stated, or there is a necessary implication that the Crown is to be bound. Ministers and civil servants will not necessarily share the Crown's immunity from criminal prosecution.

The Government's policy on Crown immunity as set out in Cm 1599—"The Citizen's Charter—Raising the Standard" is that Crown immunity is being progressively reduced, as legislative opportunities arise. In the meantime, Crown bodies are expected to behave as though they were bound by regulations.

In accordance with this policy, we have announced our intention to introduce legislation to place on a statutory footing the requirement for the Crown to observe town and country planning controls.

Construction Industry

Mr. McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish a regional breakdown of the number of public housing and housing association construction orders in the first quarter of 1995, together with a regional breakdown for the corresponding figures for 1994. [29197]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: The information is published in table 4 of the information bulletin No. 224, "Orders for New Construction: March 1995", a copy of which is in the Library.

Mr. McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish a regional breakdown of the figures for output and employment in the construction industry in the first quarter of 1995, in the Department of Environment information bulletin 276, together with a regional breakdown for the corresponding figures for 1994. [29196]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: Provisional contractor's output figures for 1994 are published by region in table 2.5 of the quarterly "Housing and Construction Statistics: Part 2: December quarter 1994", a copy of which is in the Library. Corresponding figures for the first quarter of 1995 will be published in the next issue. Regional figures for output by direct labour organisation and for total employment in the construction industry are not available.

MINIS Return

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary for the Environment when he plans to publish his Department's annual MINIS return. [29154]

Sir Paul Beresford: It is planned that the MINIS returns for my Department will be published during July.

Planning Policy Review

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State or the Environment what representations he has received regarding his review of planning policy; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Paul Beresford: I have received a number of representations about PPG6, to which I assume that the hon. Member is referring. A consultation draft of the revised planning policy guidance will be issued before the summer recess.

Lower Severn Estuary

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his current estimate of the completion date of the classification of the lower Severn estuary special protection area pursuant to article 4 of directive 79/409/EEC. [29234]

Mr. Atkins: I hope to be able to make an announcement shortly.

Unitary Authorities

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if it is his policy that chief executive posts in unitary authorities established under the Local Government Act 1992 should be filled by open competition. [29097]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: Under the Local Government Changes for England (Staff) Regulations 1995, appointments to chief officer posts in unitary authorities established under the Local Government Act 1992 must be made by open competition.

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) when he last met the chairman of the Local Government Commission; [29098]

(2) whether he will call for a report from the Local Government Staff Commission on the steps being taken by shadow unitary authorities to appoint their chief executives. [29099]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: Following my last meeting with the staff commission on 23 may 1995, I am satisfied that there is no need at present for fuller investigation of the appointment of chief executives by shadow unitary authorities.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of the impact of his Department's new draft guidance to the Local Government Commission, on the application of the South Hams district council for unitary status; and if he will make a statement. [29021]

Mr. Curry: There is none. The guidance will apply to the reviews of those districts which are selected for review, but it does not have any bearing on the selection process.

Civil Service Retirement

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer of 2 May, Official Report, column 126, if he will provide comparable details on civil service early retirement packages on grounds of inefficiency. [29295]

Sir Paul Beresford: Inefficiency is a ground for dismissal. An immediate lump sum payment of up to two years' salary may be made where a Department judges payment of compensation to be appropriate. Where compensation is agreed and the person dismissed is over age 55, this may be forgone in favour of immediate payment of the accrued superannuation benefits which would otherwise be preserved for payment at retiring age. There have been six departures on inefficiency grounds in the past five financial years. Details are as follows:

Lump sum compensation payment

Year	£
1990–91	None
1991–92	None
1992–93	17,468
1993–94	None
1994–95	33,354

National Park Authorities

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will place in the Library copies of the representations he has received about the composition of new national park authorities. [29101]

Mr. Atkins: Yes, provided that the respondents have no objections.

Water Companies (Windfall Profits)

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his policy on the conclusion of the Director of Water Services on who should decide whether windfall profits should be distributed in the form of rebates to customers. [29353]

Mr. Atkins: This is a matter for the Director General of Water Services, who has published his views.

EU Urban Initiative

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has selected the areas to be included in the urban community initiative of the European structural funds.

Mr. Curry: Further to my right hon. Friend's answer of 29 March to the hon. Member for Hertfordshire, North (Mr. Heald), Official Report, columns 645–46, announcing the six non-objective 1 areas in England to participate in the urban community initiative, I have now selected the three areas from Merseyside—Liverpool Central, North Huyton—Knowsley—and Netherton—Sefton—which will be considered by the European Commission for funding the Urban initiative.

Originally, five areas put themselves forward, but the Commission requirements meant that only three could be included on the final list, which I chose after consultations with the local authorities and careful consideration of all the evidence.

The urban community initiative will bring an additional 80 million ecus—approximately £64 million—of European funding to Britain of which £13.5 million will go to the three Merseyside areas. The money will be used for new urban regeneration projects carried out by local partnerships, which will complement existing programmes such as the single regeneration budget and the structural funds objectives 1 and 2.

My announcement today means the programme of nine British non-objective 1 areas, three Merseyside objective 1 areas and the objective 1 area in Northern Ireland is now complete, and the first projects should start this summer.

Council House Sales

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he plans to implement measures to assist leaseholders of former council flats who are facing difficulties with high service charges and resale. [29857]

Mr. Curry: Recent research has shown that while nine out of 10 people who bought their flats under the right to buy were satisfied with their purchase, a small proportion was in particular difficulties with service charges, and an even smaller proportion has had difficulty in reselling because prospective buyers could not obtain a mortgage.

Following public consultation, I am introducing three measures to assist local authority leaseholders:

first, a wide-ranging good practice guide, to help councils improve their management of service charges in flats which they have sold. This will help to avoid leaseholders being presented with unexpectedly or unreasonably high bills; second, a more flexible form of mortgage indemnity agreement, which councils can use to guarantee commercial mortgages, including lending on ex-council flats. Mortgage indemnities can enhance councils' housing policies and encourage lending in areas where a resale market is not yet fully established; third, an exchange sale scheme, to help leaseholders who need to move from flats bought under the right to buy but cannot resell on the open market because of mortgageability problems. The scheme will help the authority to buy back the flat at the right-to-buy price, and to sell the leaseholder another property at a discount of up to 40 per cent.

These measures, the first two of which are available now, will help local authorities to assist those leaseholders who face particular difficulty. The third measure requires regulations which I have laid before Parliament today. Subject to its views, the exchange sale scheme will come into effect on 10 July.

We are issuing advice to local authorities today on these measures and how to use them to boost the local housing market in general, and help owners of former council flats in particular.

North Sea Conference

Sir Kenneth Carlisle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what were the main achievements of the recent North sea conference.

Mr. Gummer: The fourth international conference for the protection of the North sea was held in Esbjerg, Denmark on 8 to 9 June 1995. Ministers and senior officials from Belgium, France, Germany, Luxembourg, the Netherlands, Norway, Sweden, Switzerland and the United Kingdom, together with the members of the European Commission responsible for the environment, took part, under the chairmanship of the Danish Environment and Energy Minister, Mr. Svend Auken. I represented the United Kingdom.

Since so much progress has been made since the third North sea conference, in 1990, in converting policy commitments into binding international agreements and European legislation, the nature of the conference was different from its predecessors. It was more a question of reviewing progress and fine-tuning than of breaking new ground.

The progress report for the conference showed how difficult it is to compare what is happening in the different states because of different methods of measuring or estimating the basic data. We therefore agreed to put emphasis in future on getting transparent, reliable and comparable reports on what is actually happening, making the fullest possible use of work in other international bodies.

The most important problem facing the North sea that was identified by the recent quality status report was the impact of over-fishing. We achieved a commitment to the development and strict enforcement of a system of controls for fish stocks of all kinds, including the industrial fisheries, to keep exploitation rates within safe biological limits. Measures will now be brought forward in the appropriate forums to implement this commitment. We also agreed that North sea Fisheries and Environment Ministers will meet before the end of 1996 to review the progress of these measures.

We also agreed to ask the Oslo and Paris Commission for the Protection of North East Atlantic to assess what measures are needed to improve the protection of wildlife in the areas beyond territorial waters—territorial waters being already covered by the EC birds and habitats directives—and to work out how best to harmonise such measures by the different North sea states.

Since the 1990 North sea conference, the European Community has adopted measures which provide a comprehensive framework for controlling hazardous substance. At Esbjerg, we agreed on various actions within that framework to give priority to certain specific problems connected with hazardous substances. We also discussed the setting of a target for the cessation of all inputs of hazardous substances to the North sea within one generation—that is, 25 years. It made clear that the United Kingdom shares the ideal of such aims but does not consider them currently practicable.

We confirmed support for the adoption and implementation by OSPAR of a strategy to combat and prevent eutrophication of the sea. Some North sea states wanted to see the whole of the North sea treated as a sensitive area for the purposes of the EC urban waste water treatment directive and its catchment as a vulnerable zone for the purposes of the EC nitrates directive, which would imply additional investment in sewage treatment to remove nutrients, and additional restrictions on agriculture. France and the United Kingdom took the view that the implementation of the Directives as they stand will address the problems that exist and that the suggested blanket approach would waste resources by installing plant and imposing restrictions that would have no practical effect on eutrophication problems.

We reached agreement on how to proceed on the creation of a special area in the North sea under the Marpol convention to control discharges of oil from shipping; on completing the work on tightening the Marpol annex on air pollution from shipping to the problems of sulphur oxides in the North sea.

To reduce the impact of the offshore oil and gas industry, we agreed to ask OSPAR to revise its guidance on the management of produced water, to limit the use of oil-based muds to cases where this is necessary for geological or safety reasons and to get OSPAR to adopt a harmonised mandatory control system for the use and discharge of chemicals offshore. Some North sea states expressed their concern about the decision to permit the disposal of the Brent Spar at sea. I explained the reasons why we considered this the best practicable environmental option and reminded them that we were following the procedure agreed by all North sea states in 1992. France, Norway and the United Kingdom recorded their reasons for rejecting a commitment to dispose of all disused offshore installations on land; the other North sea states, which who do not have to consider the disposal of deep-sea installations, recorded their commitments to land disposal of all offshore installations.

We confirmed our commitment to the safety fundamentals for the management of radioactive waste adopted by the International Atomic Energy Agency in March and agreed to support the IAEA work to seek agreement for a global convention on this subject.

Finally, we agreed that Norway should host the fifth North sea conference in 2000 to 2002, but that this should be much more closely integrated with OSPAR ministerial meetings.

Local Government Ombudsman

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has for reviewing the local government ombudsman service; and if he will make a statement. [29855]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: We have today appointed Sir Geoffrey Chipperfield to carry out a fundamental review of the Commission for Local Administration in England. The review, which is part of a programme of reviews of bodies sponsored by the Department, will be conducted in two stages. During the first stage, Sir Geoffrey will consider fundamental questions about the necessity for the Commission and the functions it undertakes. Depending on the results of that stage, Sir Geoffrey will then look in more detail at the commission's internal organisation and procedures. Sir Geoffrey will report his findings to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State and to the commission; he has been asked to do this for stage one by the end of November 1995.

To assist Sir Geoffrey, we are establishing an advisory group on which we are inviting representatives of the local authority associations and citizens advice bureaux to serve; departmental officials and the chairman and secretary of the commission will also serve on the group. In addition, Sir Geoffrey will be seeking comments from a wide range of interested parties, and would welcome written representations from anyone who has views on the Commission and its work.

The local government ombudsman service was established in 1974 to provide independent and impartial investigation of complaints by members of the public who felt that they had suffered injustice because their local council had done something wrong. After 20 years, it is now timely to review the ombudsman's role and the effectiveness of the service provided.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Sick Leave

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list for every police force in England and Wales for each year since 1989 (a) the total number of sickness days taken due to injury on duty and (b) the average number of days lost per police officer due to injury on duty. [28165]

Mr. Maclean: Information on the number of injuries sustained on duty is not held centrally. However, information has been kept since 1990 on days' sick leave taken due to assault and is shown in the table.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he intends to send asylum seekers under 18 years of age, or who claim to be under 18, to Campsfield house detention centre when Group 4 sets up its tactical support unit at the centre; [29663]

(2) if he will take into account the advice of an independent medical expert in helping to determine the age of an asylum seeker who claims to be under 18 years old when detention is being considered. [29673]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: The availability of staff trained in control and restraint techniques is required to meet extreme operational demands. This facility will not affect the fundamental regime at Campsfield house, which will remain suitable for the detention of young people and those claiming to be under the age of 18.

Asylum applicants who are, or claim to be, under 18 are detained only in the most exceptional circumstances where this appears appropriate in the light of all relevant considerations. In assessing the person's age, medical evidence may be taken into account and if that were available from an independent medical expert that would be considered. However, I see no justification for formal arrangements to seek such independent evidence in all cases where the detainee claims to be under 18.

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many children are currently held in detention in connection with asylum applications; what are their nationalities; how many have been held for more than two months; and if he will list the detention establishments where they are being held. [29885]

Mr. Baker: As at 16 June 1995, there was one recognised minor who had claimed asylum in the United Kingdom being held in detention. This Algerian national, who is 17 years of age, was an illegal entrant and has been held at Campsfield house for less than two months.

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if unaccompanied children seeking asylum will be excluded from the short procedure pilot scheme; and if he will make a statement. [29672]

Mr. Baker: Asylum applications made by or on behalf of unaccompanied children under the age of 18 are not included in the short procedure pilot.

Special Security Unit (Whitemoor Prison)

Sir Ivan Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the special security unit at Whitemoor prison will reopen. [30059]

Mr. Howard: The special security unit at Whitemoor prison reopened yesterday. Comprehensive changes have been made to the unit since it closed following the escape attempt last September. These changes are in line with the recommendations in Sir John Woodcock's report. They include: major construction work to upgrade physical security measures; mandatory operating standards which lay down procedures for staff; carefully selected with trained staff, and a reorganised management structure with clear lines of responsibility.

I have also decided to introduce a policy of closed visits for all exceptional risk prisoners in the light of the Prison Service's assessment of their security requirements. By removing all physical contact between prisoner and visitor, the opportunity for the passing of weapons or other illicit items should be eliminated. As a result, all exceptional risk prisoners in the Whitemoor special security unit and the category A unit at Belmarsh prison will be subject to closed visits arrangements. The policy will be applied at the Full Sutton special security unit when it reopens following the construction work necessary to implement the Woodcock recommendations.

Immigration

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his current policy on allowing switching after entry into the minister of religion category by people who are admitted to the United Kingdom, under the immigration rules, in another capacity. [30060]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: The immigration rules require that a person entering the United Kingdom as a minister of religion must obtain an entry clearance for that purpose in advance. The purpose of the entry clearance requirement is to ensure that the bona fides of the applicant as a minister of religion can be fully assessed, in the country where he lives and works, in advance of his coming to the United Kingdom. An application to remain as a minister of religion in the United Kingdom by a person who has not entered in that capacity is therefore to be refused. We would be prepared, exceptionally, to waive this requirement only where a bona fide minister of religion had been granted a visa or leave to enter as a visitor specifically to attend an interview for a job as a minister in the United Kingdom and was offered the job; or where a bona fide minister of religion, who had been granted a visa or leave to enter as a visitor specifically for a preaching tour of the United Kingdom, was asked to fill a vacant post as a minister in this country, the job offer appeared to be genuinely unexpected at the time the applicant entered the United Kingdom and there were good community relations reasons for allowing him to stay.

Community Service

Mrs. Peacock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many convicted offenders failed to complete their community service orders, and were not taken back to court, in west Yorkshire in each year since 1985. [27706]

Mr. Nicholas Baker [holding answer 13 June 1995]: Complete information about whether offenders who fail to comply with their orders are taken back to court is not collected centrally. The available information is given in the table.

Animal Welfare

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many designated establishments have ethics committees, operated by the Home Office inspectorate, for animal care and use under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986; and if he will list them. [28677]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: None.

The Animals (Scientific Procedures) inspectorate does not operate any ethics or animal care and uses committees in establishments designated under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986. They may attend meetings of animal care and use committees set up by designated establishments as invited observers when asked to do so.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what percentage of parliamentary questions, which would have been answered directly by him or his Ministers prior to the establishment of executive agencies, are now referred to the chief executive of such an agency. [28502]

Mr. John M. Taylor: Ministers are accountable to Parliament for all matters concerning their agencies. Written parliamentary questions concerning matters which have been delegated to the chief executive of an executive agency in its Framework document normally receive a reply from the Minister to the effect that he or she has asked the chief executive to reply direct to the Member by letter. The chief executive's letter is published in Hansard below the Minister's reply.

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many written parliamentary questions were tabled for answer by his Department in each of the past five years; how many of these were not answered because the information (a) could be obtained only at disproportionate cost (b) was not held centrally and (c) was not normally disclosed; how many of these could now be answered due to non-computerisation, more effective and efficient operational systems or more open government; and if he will list each question along with the name and constituency of the right hon. or hon. Member who originally tabled it. [28521]

Mr. Taylor: The information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Asylum Appeals

Mr. Terry Davis: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many appeals against the refusal of entry clearance were outstanding on 31 May or at the most recent date for which this information is available; how many appeals against the refusal of asylum were outstanding on this date; what action is being taken to reduce the numbers of outstanding appeals; and whether any priority is given to appeals against the refusal of asylum. [29793]

Mr. John M. Taylor: The number of outstanding appeals against refusal of entry clearance is not recorded as a separate figure. However, at 31 May 1995, approximately 9,369 non-asylum appeals were outstanding. The number of asylum appeals outstanding was 4,885. There are plans to recruit additional adjudicators and staff, and to expand existing court room accommodation, to enable more cases to be heard in future. In the short term, more flexible listing arrangements and an increase in the length of the sitting day will help to increase the disposal rate. The immigration appellate authorities are also able to offer parties in London a hearing at a provincial centre where waiting times are shorter.

The immigration appellate authorities endeavour to determine asylum appeals where the Secretary of State has certified the claim to be without foundation within seven days of their receipt, and all other asylum appeals within 42 days, in accordance with the Asylum Appeals (Procedure) Rules 1993.

ENVIRONMENT

Negative Equity

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for the environment, pursuant to his answer of 23 February, Official Report, column 268, if he will update the table on the number of households in negative equity. [27532]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: Estimates of negative equity are sensitive to the house price index and other assumptions used. Based on Department of the Environment house price data, an estimate of the number of households affected by negative equity in the first quarter of 1995 and the value of negative equity by region is as follows:

Region	Number of households (thousands)	Value (millions)
South East	374	1,910
Greater London	100	371
South West	97	309
East Anglia	71	309
East Midlands	33	71
West Midlands	7	6
Wales	11	13
Yorks and Humberside	70	153
North West	41	29
North	28	40
Scotland	53	80
Northern Ireland	1	1
UK	886	3,292

This table is intended to provide only a broad indication of the level of negative equity. Certain assumptions used in compiling the table may have overstated the number. My Department is reviewing with the Bank of England the reliability of those assumptions.

Sewage Treatment

Mr. Congdon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what percentage of coastal discharge of sewage are given (a) no treatment, (b) preliminary and (c) secondary treatment; [28675]

(2) what steps are being taken to achieve those provisions of the urban waste water treatment directive requiring all towns, whether or not with a population greater than 10,000 to apply secondary treatment before discharge. [28676]

Mr. Atkins: Some 96 per cent. of the UK population is connected to a sewerage system. Eighty per cent. of sewage is treated and 90 per cent. of this receives secondary treatment or better. The proportions, already high in comparison with those in many continental countries, will rise as a result of investment over the next few years in particular the implementation of the urban waste water treatment directive. More detailed information on the proportion of the UK's population receiving different levels of sewage treatment and the programmes for implementing the directive are contained in the report produced by the UK under article 17 of the directive, a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

Temporary Accommodation

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the percentage and total number of families in temporary bed-and-breakfast accommodation who have kitchen facilities. [28808]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: The information requested is not centrally available.

Paper Pulp

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what guidelines his Department has published for the disposal of paper pulp; [29271]

(2) what discussions he has had with ADAS with regard to the disposal of paper pulp by spreading on land; [29272]

(3) what representations he has received regarding problems caused by the disposal of paper pulp at Thieveley Pike, Cliviger, Burnley; [29273]

(4) if he will call for an inquiry into environmental damage at Thieveley Pike, Cliviger, Burnley caused by the spreading of paper pulp; and if he will make a statement. [29274]

Sir Paul Beresford: Responsibility for the enforcement of waste management controls rests with waste regulation authorities such as Lancashire county council. It is an offence under section 33(1)(a) or (b) of the Environmental Protection Act 1990 to deposit, recover or dispose of controlled waste without a waste management licence or contrary to the conditions of a licence exemption. It is also an offence under section 33(1)(c) of the 1990 Act to carry out these activities in a manner likely to cause pollution of the environment or harm to human health.

We have provided exemptions from licensing in schedule 3 to the Waste Management Licensing Regulations 1994. Subject to certain conditions, paragraph 7 of schedule 3 exempts the spreading of de-inked paper sludge on land used for agriculture. The exemption applies only where the actively results in benefit to agriculture or ecological improvement and the waste regulation authority for the area are provided with information about the spreading.

We have provided guidance on this exemption in DOE circular 11/94 paragraph 5.66–5.86. I understand that Lancashire county council, as waste regulation authority for the area, is aware of the incident referred to by the hon. Member and has taken appropriate action. The Department has received no representation about the incident.

The Ministry of Agriculture Fisheries and Food has published codes of good agricultural practice for the protection of water in 1991 and for soil in 1993. The Department is also considering with MAFF the provision of technical guidance on the spreading of waste on land. In this context, officials have held discussions with ADAS and other consultants.

National Superdome, Odsal

Mr. Sutcliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what action will be taken in respect of safety issues such as fire risks, chemical fire or spillage at the proposed new national superdome at Odsal; [29005]

(2) what action will be taken in respect of fire and other anticipated safety hazards in the development of the national superdome. [29006]

Sir Paul Beresford: Should planning consent be granted for the superdome, these issues will be matters for the developers, the contractors the stadium operators and the appropriate safety authorities.

Mr. Sutcliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what proposals are being considered to minimise risks to the public from chemical works and associated industrial development in the area of the proposed national superdome. [29004]

Sir Paul Beresford: A planning application for the superdome in Bradford has been referred to the Secretary of State as a departure from the development plan and is being assessed to decide whether it should be called in for public inquiry. The relevance of risk from other development is a matter for consideration in the normal procedures of local planning authorities and, where necessary, consultation with the appropriate safety authorities.

Conservation Areas

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when a national list of sites will be sent to the European Commission under the habitats directive. [29856]

Mr. Gummer: Following extensive local and national public consultation launched on 31 March, a first list of 136 candidate special areas of conservation was sent today to the European Commission.

This list covers only sites on land and those that are already sites of special scientific interest. Consultation on possible marine sites will continue until 22 June.

I will announce the submission of a further tranche of sites to the Commission as soon as points raised in the consultation exercise have been fully considered and resolved.

A number of organisations have suggested additions to the list. These suggestions will be fully considered in accordance with the approach to site selection applied to the current list of possible sites and outlined in section 3 of "A list of possible Special Areas of Conservation in the UK" which was published on 31 March and placed in the Libraries. If the nature conservation agencies, through the Joint Nature Conservation Committee, advise that any of these additions qualify as possible SACs they will be published for consultation in due course. As indicated in my written reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Eastbourne (Mr. Waterson) on 31 March at column 834, there will also be consultation on those sites proposed for certain habitats types and species where it is necessary first to complete further SSSI notifications or on which additional scientific information is being sought.

The list of sites which has been sent to the Commission is as follows:

Opencasting

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what action his Department is taking to minimise detrimental environmental effects from (a) opencast mining and (b) quarrying. [29646]

Sir Paul Beresford: Tight, improved guidelines which upgrade environmental requirements on opencast mining were published last July. Similar guidelines for quarrying were published in April 1994. These guidelines would apply to any new permissions for either opencast mining or quarrying.

Social Housing

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his estimate of the likely need for social housing in Britain up to 2001. [28108]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: My Department estimates that the additional demand for new social lettings over the current public expenditure survey period lies within the range of 60,000 and 100,000 units per year.

Building Regulations

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what is the current timetable for recommendations to changes in part M of building regulations to be considered by the Building Regulations Advisory Committee; [29665]

(2) what is the current timetable for bringing into force parts M5 and M6 of building regulations. [29666]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: Officials in my Department are analysing all the many responses received to the consultation paper on part M of the building regulations issued earlier this year. I expect the Building Regulations Advisory Committee to consider this analysis in the autumn, after which its recommendations will be considered by Ministers. No decisions have been taken as to when any changes to part M should come into effect.

National Parks

Mr. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment under what circumstances he will call in a proposal for major development in a national park. [29877]

Sir Paul Beresford: Both within and beyond national parks, planning applications are, in general, called in for decision by my right hon. Friend only if planning issues of more than local importance are involved. He is very selective about calling in applications to determine himself. Such cases may include, for example, those which, in my right hon. friend's opinion, could have wide effects beyond their immediate locality, which give rise to substantial regional or national controversy, which may conflict with national policy on important matters and those where the interests of foreign Governments may be involved.

Mr. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, if he will outline Government policy on major development proposals in national parks. [29879]

Sir Paul Beresford: Special considerations apply to major development proposals in national parks. Such development should not take place in national parks, the Broads and the New Forest heritage area save in exceptional circumstances.

Mr. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment for what reasons it was decided not to call in the planning application for further minerals extraction at Swinden quarry in the Yorkshire dales national park. [29875]

Sir Paul Beresford: The Secretary of State is selective about calling in applications for his determination and will, in general, take this step only if planning issues of more than local importance are involved. Each case must be considered on its individual merits. The decision not to call in the application to extend Swinden quarry, given the site's location in a national park, was taken only after the most careful scrutiny. The Secretary of State decided on the basis of the information before him that the application did not raise issues of more than local importance.

Mr. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if the application for development at Swinden quarry was in accordance with the structure plan; and if it was subject to an officer recommendation of refusal. [28878]

Sir Paul Beresford: The Yorkshire dales national park authority considered the application to be contrary to the provisions of the north Yorkshire county structure plan. It was subject to an officer recommendation of refusal.

Mr. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many letters he has received requesting him to call in the application for further mineral extraction at Swinden quarry. [29876]

Sir Paul Beresford: The Secretary of State has received 55 letters asking him to call in the application for further mineral extraction at Swinden quarry. In addition a petition was received.

Thames Tunnel

Mr. Dowd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will give approval to London Underground Ltd. to go ahead with shotcreting the Thames Brunel tunnel to allow tunnel repair and associated works to go ahead. [29874]

Sir Paul Beresford: An application by London Underground Ltd. for listed building consent to carry out works to the Thames tunnel has been notified to the Secretary of State for the Environment in order that he may consider whether he should determine it.

Very careful consideration is currently being given to whether the application should be called in. In these circumstances, it would not be appropriate to comment further on the matter.

Standard Spending Assessment

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of the answer of 21 February given by the Secretary of State for Education, Official Report, columns 183–84, in relation to his statement in the debate on council budget capping on 15 June about comparative figures for Devon and Somerset local education authorities' central administrative costs; and if he will make a statement on whether the figures are correct. [29926]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: Our decisions on capping were based on the figures put to us by the authorities themselves as a part of their representations, rather than the 1992–93 figures listed in the answer of 21 February. In the view of Somerset county council the difference between the Somerset and the Devon figures in the answer may reflect differences in definitions or accounting practices between the authorities.

Local Government Commission

Mr. Patrick Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment who will serve on the Local Government Commission for England. [30058]

Mr. Curry: Sir David Cooksey will be chairman. We have asked four of the existing commissioners to remain on the commission and they have agreed to do so. They are: Professor Malcolm Grant, Ken Ennals, Robert Scruton and David Thomas.

In addition, four new commissioners will be appointed with effect from 1 July 1995. They are: Peter Brokenshire, chairman of Redbridge and Waltham Forest family health services; Professor Michael Clarke, professor and head of the School of Public Policy, university of Birmingham; Helena Shovelton, chairman of the National Association of the Citizens Advice Bureaux; and Norman Warner, managing director of Warner Consultancy and Training Services Ltd.

Ministerial Meeting, Sofia

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he is taking to assist with the preparations for the pan-European conference of Environment Ministers to be held in Sofia in October. [30237]

Mr. Gummer: With the Austrian Minister of the Environment, I co-hosted and chaired a meeting of a number of Environment Ministers from western and eastern Europe at Lancaster house on 12 and 13 June to discuss key issues for the forthcoming Sofia conference and to guide the officials engaged in the detailed preparations. There was a consensus that the conference should focus on further implementation of the environmental action programme for Europe under which countries of central and eastern Europe are being assisted to tackle their most serious environmental problems, and that to this end enhancing environmental investment, encouraging the private and business sectors to become fully involved and protecting biodiversity were key areas for attention. My colleagues agreed that the Sofia conference should produce a number of concrete projects to demonstrate how new ideas could be realised, including the development of pilot projects for joint implementation under the climate change convention and the sulphur protocol.

In addition we have co-sponsored with our Austrian colleagues a study of impediments to environmental investment from the perspective of central and eastern European countries and we are assisting the Bulgarians directly with the conference preparations through the provision of a high-level adviser.

TREASURY

Barlow Clowes

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how much Her Majesty's Government have paid to Barlow Clowes victims; [27272]

(2) if he will publish the statement read out in court in the recent Barlow Clowes case; and if he will set out the full terms of the settlement; [27274]

(3) what sums each of the relevant parties have agreed to pay to HM Treasury following the recent out-of-court settlement in connection with Barlow Clowes; [27270]

(4) for what reasons Her Majesty's Treasury agreed to settle out of court in the Barlow Clowes case; and on whose authority the decision was taken; [27273]

(5) what was the total cost to public funds of the action to obtain payment in the matter of Barlow Clowes recently settled out of court. [27271]

Mr. Nelson: The Government's publicly stated aim is to pursue vigorously any claims showing prospect of reducing the cost to the public purse of the ex-gratia payments scheme. This has paid some £150 million to investors who suffered loss as a result of the collapse of the Barlow Clowes group of companies in May 1988.

Consequently, the Government initiated litigation against a number of parties previously involved with Barlow Clowes companies. This litigation included proceedings against a group of professional advisers, comprising Midland bank plc, Rensburg and Co., Simpson Curtis, Singer and Friedlander Ltd., Singer and Friedlander (Isle of Man) Ltd., Sinjul Nominees Ltd., Spicer and Pegler, Spicer and Pegler (Gibraltar) and Touche Ross and Co.

The decision to settle the litigation by acceptance of a substantial sum in respect of claims made in those proceedings, including interest and costs, was taken after receiving firm legal advice from leading counsel and solicitors, which also confirmed the commercial good sense of such a course.

The settlement was signed and announced to the High Court on 24 May 1995. That statement made it clear the parties do not intend to make any further public statement, except as may be required of the Government by Parliament or of any defendant by its obligations to the stock exchange, concerning the settlement of these proceedings. I have arranged for a copy of the statement to the court to be placed in the Library.

It is generally the Government's policy not to comment on the detail of legal proceedings or settlements relating to the Barlow Clowes litigation, so as not to influence the attitude and outcome of continuing actions. The Government continue to pursue vigorously any claims in relation to the Barlow Clowes companies which show any prospect of cost-effective recovery in order to reduce the cost to the taxpayer of the ex-gratia payments schemes.

European Single Currency

Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the report of the study group on the role of public finance in European integration chaired by Sir Donald MacDougall, published in 1977; and what are his conclusions on its findings on the effect on the size of the European Community budget, in the event of the creation of a single currency. [27671]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The MacDougall report was an early attempt to assess the role of the public finances in European integration. Its analysis reflected the thinking of the 1970s. The Government do not endorse its conclusions or its recommendation that the EC budget should grow to some five to seven per cent. of EC GDP to be compatible with monetary union. There is no provision in the Maastricht treaty for any such expansion of the EC budget and the Government remain committed to the firm ceilings on EC spending agreed at Edinburgh.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many written parliamentary questions were tabled for answer by his Department in each of the past five years; how many of these were not answered because the information (a) could be obtained only at disproportionate cost, (b) was not held centrally and (c) was not normally disclosed; how many of these could now be answered due to computerisation, more effective and efficient operational systems or more open government; and if he will list each question along with the name and constituency of the right hon. or hon. Member who originally tabled it. [28519]

Mr. Nelson: The information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what percentage of parliamentary questions, which would have been answered directly by him or his Ministers prior to the establishment of executive agencies, are now referred to the chief executive of such an agency. [28501]

Mr. Nelson: The chief executives of the four agencies responsible to the Chancellor of the Exchequer have delegated authority to reply to parliamentary questions on day-to-day operational matters within their responsibilities. Since October 1992, five questions to the Chancellor have been referred to chief executives for reply under these arrangements.

Works of Art

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his reply of 9 June, Official Report, column 340, how many owners of chattels had been granted conditional exemption from inheritance tax as capital transfer tax in each year since 1987. [28851]

Sir George Young: The numbers of owners are as follows:

1988: 51
1989: 44
1990: 41
1991: 69
1992: 73
1994: 63

These figures are for owners of chattels which are currently conditionally exempt, and can be viewed by appointment.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his reply of 9 June, Official Report, column 340, if he will place in the Library a copy of the register of conditionally exempt works of art. [28853]

Sir George Young: The register of conditionally exempt works of art, which now has over 14,000 entries, was computerised in 1993. As the hon. Member may be aware, there are established guidelines on the acceptance of electronic data by the House of Commons Library. The feasibility of making the register available through the Library will be explored and I will write to the hon. Member in due course.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his reply of 9 June, Official Report, column 340, how many owners of chattels which have been granted conditional exemption from inheritance tax as capital transfer tax have allowed access in the latest 12 month period for which figures are available to members of the public wishing to view conditionally exempt works of art. [28849]

Sir George Young: Records are not kept centrally of how many members of the public have exercised their rights to require owners of chattels conditionally exempt from inheritance tax or capital transfer tax to allow viewing of these works of art.

VAT

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much extra revenue would be raised from the extension of VAT to new building. [28884]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The Treasury publication, "Tax Ready Reckoner and Tax Reliefs", shows that applying the standard rate of VAT to new dwellings is estimated to raise £1,950 million in a full year in 1994–95. This figure makes no allowance for behavioural changes.

Mrs. Peacock: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many businesses registered and deregistered for value added tax in (a) Batley and Spen and (b) west Yorkshire each year since 1983. [27710]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answer 13 June 1995]: Customs does not have information concerning the number of businesses registered and deregistered in the Batley and Spen constituency. The local VAT office at Halifax covers, in addition to Halifax, the towns of Batley, Huddersfield, Wakefield, Morley, Todmorden and part of Bradford. The local VAT offices at Bradford, Doncaster, Halifax and Leeds cover the west Yorkshire area. They are able to provide only the number of registrations and deregistrations for VAT at the Halifax office and in west Yorkshire since 1985. These are in the following schedule.

Traders who are in business and trading below the registrations threshold may choose to register for VAT, if they wish. This gives them the advantage of being able to reclaim VAT paid on goods and expenses in connection with their business. Above the threshold level registration is obligatory.

The effect of the substantial increase in the registration threshold in both 1991 and 1993 provides an explanation for the net decrease in the number of registered businesses since 1991.

1985	2,228	2,257	7,905	7,958
1986	2,254	2,329	8,299	8,862
1987	2,256	1,856	8,469	7,427
1988	2,634	2,110	10,274	7,946

[1]To end March.

Incapacity Benefit

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if a person who is in receipt of incapacity benefit will be treated for tax purposes in exactly the same way as a person in receipt of retirement pension. [28979]

Sir George Young: Both incapacity benefit and state retirement pension are taxable, except for incapacity benefit payable in the first 28 weeks of incapacity, and additional payments of both incapacity benefit and retirement pension payable to claimants with children. For most claimants, arrangements for collecting tax are broadly similar in both cases.

Gilts and Bonds

Mr. Butcher: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the Inland Revenue will make available a provisional compliance cost assessment on the proposals set out in the consultation paper on the taxation of gilts and bonds. [29242]

Sir George Young: My foreword to the Inland Revenue's consultation document makes clear that we are aiming for a major simplification of the current rules. This offers the prospect of substantial long-run compliance cost savings as well as wider efficiency gains. But the precise effects will depend on the details, a number of which have been expressly left open as matters for consultation.

If we decide to proceed with these proposals, the Inland Revenue will make available the compliance cost assessment once the details have been sufficiently settled and the responses given in consultation have been fully evaluated.

Northern Electric

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he has voted his shares either directly or by proxy in recent shareholder votes in Northern Electric; whether he supported the call for an emergency annual meeting; and what public statement he has made on whether Northern Electric is to accept the offer of Trafalgar House plc. [29774]

Sir George Young: At no shareholder meeting have Treasury shares been voted. The Treasury was prepared to vote its shares in March in favour of the full cash alternative in reference to a combination of cash and Trafalgar House shares. Not to have so voted our shares would have meant acceptance by default of the latter option and would have involved, unacceptably, the Treasury taking a new stake in a private sector company. In the event, the Trafalgar House bid was withdrawn. The Government's usual policy is not to vote our shareholdings to intervene in the commercial activities of a privatised company but, in the circumstances of last March, we took account of the fact that Northern Electric had recommended acceptance of the Trafalgar House bid. Treasury Ministers have made no public statements on this matter.

Fundamental Expenditure Review

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer which Minister in his Department is responsible for the fundamental expenditure review process; and how many such reviews have been approved so far by that Minister. [29740]

Mr. Aitken: Secretaries of State in Departments have been conducting the reviews in co-operation with me. The Departments listed have produced final reports already, but the reviews were intended to look at long term spending patterns and follow-up work and implementation are continuing in most cases.

Investor Compensation Scheme

Mr. Darling: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he proposes to meet the Securities Investment Board or the Personal Investment Authority to discuss the operation of the investor compensation scheme; and if he will make a statement; [29730]

(2) what information he has on the solvency of the investors compensation scheme set up under the Financial Services Act 1986; and if he will make a statement. [29729]

Mr. Nelson: I meet senior figures from the Securities and Investments Board, the Personal Investment Authority and the investors compensation scheme to discuss matters of policy and interest from time to time. I recently met the chairman and chief executive of the ICS.

Correspondence

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the hon. Member for Walsall, North will receive a reply to his letter of 6 April referred from the Department of Social Security regarding a constituent, reference 0595/38. [29669]

Sir George Young: A reply was sent on 19 June.

Pensions

Mr. Denham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what measures he proposes to take to ensure that holders of appropriate personal pensions can rely on these policies to provide benefits at least as generous as those provided by SERPS. [27602]

Mr. Nelson [holding answer 19 June 1995]: It would be inappropriate for the Government to guarantee the investment performance of a personal pension. However, the financial services regulators have rules designed to ensure that financial advisers are trained, competent and able to recommend only products which are suitable for the individual investor and whose risks are properly explained.

Civil Servants

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 4 May, Official Report, column 264, if he will provide comparable details on civil service early retirement packages on grounds of inefficiency. [29284]

Mr. Nelson [holding answer 19 June 1995]: Inefficiency is a ground for dismissal. An immediate lump-sum payment of up to two years' salary may be made where a department judges payment of compensation to be appropriate. Where compensation is agreed and the person dismissed is over 55, this may be forgone in favour of immediate payment of the accrued superannuation benefits which would otherwise be preserved for payment at retiring age. There have been 15 departures from the Treasury on inefficiency grounds in the past five financial years, 11 of which were during probation. No compensation was paid in any of these cases.

Electricity Privatisation

Mr. Darling: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will set out the terms of reference of the Treasury inquiry into the circumstances surrounding the sale of PowerGen and National Power stock in March; if he will name the official who is conducting this inquiry; if the completed inquiry report will be published in full; and if he will make a statement. [28841]

Sir George Young [holding answer 15 June 1995]: The stock exchange has suggested further examination into the circumstances surrounding the Genco2 share sale, including the dissemination of information between various parts of the public sector and between the public sector and the market. Sir Terence Burns has asked Mr. John Beastall, a senior Treasury official and former Treasury officer of accounts, to take this work forward and draft the Treasury response. He has been asked to examine in detail the events surrounding the share sale and the role of all the parties involved and any lessons to be learned for future share issues by public authorities. Once the work has been completed, the Permanent Secretary, Sir Terence Burns, will respond to the stock exchange and the response will be published.

PRIME MINISTER

Engagements

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Tuesday 20 June 1995. [27975]

Sir Peter Tapsell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Tuesday 20 June. [27976]

The Prime Minister: This morning I had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House I shall be having further meetings later today.

President Clinton

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Prime Minister what contact he has had with President Clinton on plans for a visit to the United Kingdom. [27979]

The Prime Minister: I would welcome a further visit to the United Kingdom by President Clinton. We are discussing possible dates.

Nuclear Tests

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Prime Minister what steps he has taken to persuade the French Government not to resume nuclear testing and to oppose any proposals taken by them to do so. [29739]

The Prime Minister: We are in regular contact with the French Government, who are aware of our views.

BMARC

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Prime Minister if the intelligence sources referred to in the oral statement on BMARC by the President of the Board of Trade of 13 June, Official Report, columns 595–606, and dated at July and September 1988 used material from within the Astra group of companies. [29722]

The Prime Minister: It is not the Government's policy to comment on the sources of information contained in intelligence material.

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 12 June to the hon. Member for Leeds, Central, (Mr. Fatchett) Official Report, column 373, if he will list the external lawyers who have been used to provide advice for witnesses to the Scott inquiry; and if external lawyers have been used at the request of witnesses of Departments or of the Treasury solicitors. [29764]

The Prime Minister: The Government will have no objection to publishing the names of external lawyers who have been used to provide advice for witnesses to the Scott inquiry at public expense after Sir Richard Scott's final report has been published and provision of such advice has been concluded. External advice is provided at public expense either where the witness concerned requests it and the departmental legal adviser considers this reasonable or where, after consultation with his departmental legal adviser of the Treasury Solicitor, it is agreed that such advice should be sought.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 24 February, to the hon. Member for Newcastle upon Tyne, Central, (Mr. Cousins) Official Report, column 353, if further evidence has been taken in private by Lord Justice Scott. [29155]

The Prime Minister: Sir Richard Scott continues to obtain evidence, both oral and written, as the need arises. I am advised by the inquiry that the last evidence taken at a private hearing was on 4 May 1995.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Prime Minister if the Cabinet Office has received any information on allegations that British companies had circumvented export control regulations or guidelines covering Iraq or Iran, which have not yet been passed on to Lord Justice Scott. [29151]

The Prime Minister: All information received by the Cabinet Office and identified as required by Sir Richard Scott's inquiry has been passed to the inquiry.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Prime Minister if he has instituted any change in the system of distribution of intelligence reports to Ministers and their appropriate officials as a result of the problems outlined by Baroness Thatcher in her evidence to the Scott inquiry. [29150]

The Prime Minister: A number of improvements have been made, of which details have been given to the Scott inquiry.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 12 June given to the hon. Member for Leeds, Central (Mr. Fatchett), Official Report, column 373, how many requests for legal assistance for witnesses to the Scott inquiry have been turned down as unreasonable; and if he will break down the costs to public funds between the costs in respect of (a) external lawyers and (b) the Treasury solicitors. [29763]

The Prime Minister: Witnesses to the Scott inquiry who wish to seek legal assistance at public expense must first seek the approval of their departmental legal adviser or the Treasury Solicitor's Department. Where necessary, the nature, scope, source and terms of such legal advice are discussed with the individual concerned. I am not aware of any case in which there was a disagreement over the provision of legal advice following such discussions. The information on legal costs is given in my answer to the hon. Member for Leeds, Central (Mr. Fatchett) today.

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Bradford, West (Mr. Madden), Official Report, column 374, on leaks from the provisional draft report of Lord Justice Scott, who conducted the inquiry; what were the responses of those who were interviewed; and if he will publish the conclusions for the inquiry. [29519]

The Prime Minister: I have nothing further to add to my reply to the hon. Member for Bradford, West (Mr. Madden) on 12 June, Official Report, column 374.

Security Vetting

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 24 April, Official Report, column 344, if contractors who carry out basic checks are now obliged to require their employees and potential employees to disclose to them any information concerning any criminal record, including those which are spent and if he will make a statement. [29770]

The Prime Minister: Contractors are obliged only to carry out basic checks on employees or potential employees who will have access to Government assets. As part of a basic check, employees and potential employees are not required to disclose spent convictions. Contractors have a duty to request from their employees and potential employees, a completed criminal record declaration form. However, employees and potential employees do not have to return the form to their employer; if they prefer, they can pass it directly to the contracting Department or agency.

In my answer of 24 April, I also referred to exceptional cases where, in the interests of national security, and with the agreement of the Cabinet Office, Office of Public Service and Science, extra inquiries are necessary in addition to those carried out for a basic check. Where these include a check against the national collection of criminal records, individuals are required to declare spent convictions, as permitted under the Rehabilitation of Offenders Act 1974 (Exceptions) Order 1975, and the rehabilitation of Offenders Act (Northern Ireland) Order 1978 (Exceptions) Order 1979. This information is available only to the contracting Department or agency and is not accessible by the contractor.

Intergovernmental Conference

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 12 June, Official Report, column 374, which treaty gives authority to the common fisheries policy, and which is subject to amendment at the 1996 inter-governmental conference; and if he will make it his policy to seek withdrawal from the common fisheries policy. [28923]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 19 June]: Fisheries are part of the common agricultural policy governed by articles 38–47 of the EC treaty which will be reviewed as part of the 1996 intergovernmental conference. The detailed rules of the common fisheries policy are set out in the Council regulation 3760/92 which comes up for formal review in 2002. We have no plans for UK withdrawal from the common fisheries policy, but we are continuing to work for improvements in the appropriate fora.

Overseas Visits (Royal Family)

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Prime Minister when the royal household sought the advice of Her Majesty's Government on the appropriateness of a member of the royal family attending the Island games, Gibraltar, to be held in July. [28674]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 19 June]: Official visits overseas by members of the royal family are made on the advice of the Government. The Princess Royal had hoped to attend the Island games in Gibraltar in July but, in the event, she was unable to do so.

TRANSPORT

Motorway Noise

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps his Department takes to monitor noise levels faced by residential properties located near to motorways. [28166]

Mr. Watts: This is an operational matter for the Highways Agency. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. David Chidgey, dated 20 June 1995:

As you know, the Minister for Railways and Roads, Mr. John Watts MP, has asked me to write to you in reply to your recent Parliamentary Question concerning the question of monitoring of noise levels faced by residential properties located near to motorways. No routine monitoring of noise levels adjacent to trunk roads or motorways is undertaken, there being no requirement on the Highways Agency to do so.

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the sections of the British motorway network where noise levels exceed 68 db(A) at the facade of adjacent residential properties of which an increase of at least 1 db(A) is attributable to traffic on the new or improved motorway. [28167]

Mr. Watts: This is an operational matter for the Highways Agency. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. David Chidgey, dated 20 June 1995:

As you know, the Minister for Railways and Roads, Mr. John Watts MP, has asked me to write to you in reply to your recent Parliamentary Question requesting a list of the sections of the British motorway network where noise levels exceed 68 db(A) at the facade of residential properties of which an increase of at least 1 db(A) is attributable to traffic on the new or improved motorway.

The Highways Agency is only responsible for motorways in England. I cannot therefore comment on motorways in the other parts of the United Kingdom.

The Noise Insulation Regulations require an offer of insulation or grant to owners of residential properties which qualify in accordance with the criteria you have quoted within six months of a new or improved road being open to traffic, but statistics of such offers are not collected centrally.

Driving Test

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the latest situation in the Government's planning for a theory test as part of the driving test; and what assistance and information is available for driving instructors to enable them to prepare for the change. [29361]

Mr. Norris: I refer the hon. Member to a reply I gave on 23 May, Official Report, columns 567–68.

Driving instructors are being kept abreast of significant developments as they happen. The Driving Standards Agency, which will have overall responsibility for this new test, plans to publish, in early spring, a handbook for candidates and their instructors about the new driving theory test which will include the official bank of questions.

Air Accidents Investigation Branch

Mr. Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what arrangements have been made for continued pathology support to the AAIB in the event of an alteration to the RAF Institute; and if he will make a statement. [29888]

Mr. Norris: The RAF Institute of Pathology and Tropical Medicine is to be disbanded, but the department of pathology is to be retained and co-located with the school of aviation medicine. They intend to continue to support the air accidents investigation branch in its accident investigation for the foreseeable future.

Mr. Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport on how many occasions in the last five years the RAF Institute of Pathology and Tropical Medicine has assisted the AAIB in its investigations; and if he will list these occasions on a year-by-year basis. [29887]

Mr. Norris: The RAF Institute of Pathology and Tropical Medicine has assisted the air accidents investigation branch on 103 occasions since 1 January 1990. The lists are as follows:

Privatisation

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list those parts of his Department or departmental agencies which were privatised without an in-house bid; if he will indicate the expertise which was absent in his Department or departmental agencies which prevented an in-house bid taking place; which future parts of his Department or departmental agencies he intends to privatise; and which of them do not have the necessary in-house expertise to mount an in-house bid. [29431]

Mr. Norris: No part of the Department has been privatised without an in-house bid. The following services have been contracted out without an in-house bid, as part of the competing for quality programme:

Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency

Internal audit services

Waste collection

Vehicle Inspectorate

Workshop

Building and estate management

IT Strategy

Roller brake testing

Library services

Weighbridge maintenance

Coastguard Agency

Property management

Central Transport Group

File storage

Procurement of office machines

Reprographics

Computer bureau services

Stationery supplies

Books and periodicals

Vehicle Certification Agency

Microfilm, data storage and retrieval

Providing information on expertise not available to the Department in relation to individual bids would involve disproportionate cost. Contracting out without an in-house bid can occur, for example, where the Department judges that the private sector is clearly better equipped to deliver a specific service, has a better understanding of market needs or has a capacity to invest in new technology. Where an activity is relatively small and peripheral to a Department's functions, a strategic decision to contract out can also be taken.

For the future, my right hon. Friend intends to privatise the Transport Research Laboratory and has announced his readiness to consider, among other sale options, an in-house bid from management and staff to take over the laboratory as a non-profit distributing company. The Department proposes to contract out the following services without an in-house bid, as part of the competing for quality programme:

Central Transport Group

Library services

Inquiry services

Publication services

New Headquarters:

- building management and maintenance
- telecoms
- catering
- security
- post and messengers

Central services (IT communications network)

DOT publications

Highways Agency

Road surface and strength testing unit

Topographical and architectural model making unit

Management of land and property acquired for roads programme

Administrative arrangements for public inquiries into road schemes

Cones hotline

Coastguard Agency

Accommodation support services

Training facility

Marine Safety Agency

Survey and certification

Equipment approvals and seafarers sight testing

Fishing vessel safety equipment inspections

Cycle Lanes

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many miles of cycle lane have been provided in each of the last five years. [29645]

Mr. Norris: This information is not available centrally, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Driving Licences

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many times per year the information contained in a driving licence can be changed; and how many prosecutions have been undertaken over the last three years of individuals who have failed to provide an up to date address. [29767]

Mr. Norris: There is no limit to the number of times per year the information contained in a driving licence can be changed.

Information on the number of prosecutions against drivers who have not notified the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency of a change of address is not available.

Brent Spar

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what information was received by the Coastguard Agency in respect of the arrangements for the towing of the Brent Spar. [29246]

Mr. Norris: This is an operational matter for the Coastguard Agency. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from C. J. Harris to Ms Joan Walley, dated 20 June 1995:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question as the question deals with an operational matter, for which I have responsibility as Chief Executive.

On 6 June 1995 the Regional Controller of HM Coastguard's North and East Scotland Region met with the installation operators, Shell, and Grampian Police to discuss the towage of the Brent Spar. At this meeting he explained that HM Coastguard's responsibility was to monitor the sea safety of all concerned in the operation, and to coordinate any search and rescue action that might be required.

Aberdeen Coastguard received a fax from the towage contractors on 6 June in accordance with the normal procedures for moving offshore installations, giving notice that the tow was due to proceed on 8 June. A second fax was received on 12 June giving notification that the tow had commenced.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Public Gallery Queue

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Chairman of the Administration Committee what plans he has to provide shelter for the queue for the public gallery; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Martin [holding answer 19 June 1995]: Space currently exists in St. Stephen's Hall to provide shelter for some 80 visitors awaiting entry to the Public Gallery of the House. There are no plans to augment this at present.

EDUCATION

Tuition Fees

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what is the total costs per Oxford and Cambridge colleges of the tuition fees top-up. [29360]

Mr. Boswell: The Department estimates that total public funding payable through the mandatory awards system in the current academic year for undergraduate college fees at Oxford and Cambridge colleges to be approximately £56,000,000. The Higher Education Funding Council for England takes account of the Oxbridge colleges' fee income in determining the level of grant payable to the universities of Oxford and Cambridge and abates those universities' grants accordingly.

Charter Week

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what are the main events she is proposing for Charter Week; what is the total cost to public funds; and how many (a) civil servants and (b) other public officials will be playing a part. [29881]

Mr. Forth: Public service events planned by the Department for Education to coincide with the fourth anniversary of the citizens charter are likely to include the announcement of the content of the 1995 school and college performance tables and a briefing paper on value added for schools and colleges. There will be no additional cost or staff resources as a result of these events. The officials concerned will be working on them as part of their normal duties.

Ofsted

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what was the cost of establishing Ofsted. [18608]

Mr. Boswell [pursuant to his reply, 5 April, column. 1195]: The establishment of Ofsted was contained within the existing departmental running costs, and was not separately identified. The £8.225 million transferred to Ofsted by DFE in 1992–93 was used to establish a new vote for Ofsted from which running costs later in the year were covered. None of the set-up costs fell to this vote.

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what are the total running costs of all non-departmental public bodies sponsored by her Department, including the National Council for Vocational Qualifications and OFsted for each year since 1987. [17248]

Mr. Boswell [pursuant to his reply, 18 April 1995 columns. 50–52]: The net running costs of OFsted in 1992–93 were £13.917 million and not £22.145 million.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

Micro-enterprise Development

Mr. O'Hara: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he will be announcing his decision on the request for support by the Grameen Trust; and if he will make a statement. [29671]

Mr. Baldry: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Hampstead and Highgate (Ms Jackson) on 23 May at column 511.

Aid and Trade Provision

Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the additional projects to be funded, and the sums allocated, by the 31 million returned to the aid budget for 1995–96 from (a) the Pergau dam project and (b) three other aid and trade provision projects. [29342]

Mr. Baldry: The reimbursed funds were fully integrated into ODA's planning and were thus not reallocated on an individual basis. Details of a breakdown of the aid budget planning allocations for 1995–96 can be found in table 30, page 61 of the ODA's departmental report.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was the estimated rate of return on the Cigading/Serpong railway ATP project in Indonesia at the time of appraisal; what is the actual post-completion rate of return; on what date the project was approved by the sub-committee for aid and trade; and on what date the project was approved by the Minister for Overseas Development. [28297]

Mr. Baldry: A rate of return for the Cigading/Serpong railway project was not calculated at the time of appraisal. The developmental justification for the project was based on the use of rail as the least cost mode to transport coal from Cigading port to cement works at Cibinong. It is not possible to provide a post-completion rate of return because the line is still under construction. The project was approved by the sub-committee for aid and trade, and by the then Minister for Overseas Development, in November 1986.

Family Planning

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will place in the Library copies of his Department's reports on the monitoring of the work of the UNFPA and IPPF. [28952]

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 19 June 1995]: The Overseas Development Administration's recent case studies in certain countries on the work of the United Nations Population Fund and the International Planned Parenthood Federation were carried out using material and documents provided on the basis that the information and findings would be treated in confidence.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what written information was supplied to his Department prior to, at and following the last meetings of the UNFPA's governing body and the IPPF's annual donor's meeting. [28953]

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 19 June 1995]: In respect of the United Nations population fund papers were supplied on the following: financial matters; policy and strategy; country programmes; and responses to the United Nations General Assembly resolutions on United Nations systems reform.

In respect of the International Planned Parenthood Federation the principal document provided was the annual report supplement, copies of which have already been placed in the Libraries of the House.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports he has received on the Chinese Family Planning Association's response to the Chinese Government's eugenics law. [28960]

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 19 June 1995]: We understand that the China Family Planning Association has made no public statements on the new maternal and child health law.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports he has received on the number of Chinese officials convicted of abusing their powers in implementing the Chinese programme of population control. [28961]

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 19 June 1995]: We understand that no such records are available.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what matters have been discussed at meetings between officials from the British embassy in Peking and representatives of UNFPA in China. [28955]

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 19 June 1995]: Officials from the British embassy in Peking have periodic contact with representatives of the United Nations population fund to discuss UNFPA's work in China as well as a range of issues relating to China's population policy and its implementation.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what sum of money has been provided by the UNFPA to population control projects in China over the last 10 years; [28957]

(2) what sums of money have been provided to (a) the Chinese Family Planning Association and (b) other Chinese population control initiatives by the IPPF over the last 10 years. [28956]

Mr. Baldry [holding answers 19 June 1995]: Neither the United Nations population fund nor the International Planned Parenthood Federation provides funds for population control projects. The IPPF has provided US$ 7.776 million to the China Family Planning Association since 1986 and the UNFPA has allocated US$ 152.451 million since 1979, for its programmes in China.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what sums of money were donated by the UNFPA and IPPF from their core budgets to countries worldwide for the last year for which figures are available; and if he will list the recipient countries together with the amounts received from each organisation. [28959]

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 19 June 1995:]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 30 November 1994, column 713.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list those occasions in the last 10 years when aid has been tied to implementation of family planning programmes by donor countries. [28954]

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 19 June 1995]: We are not aware of any donor countries which have tied aid to the implementation of family planning programmes during the last 10 years.

Abortion

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the recent World Health Organisation's study into the numbers of women worldwide who die after abortion distinguished between unsafe abortions and illegal abortions. [28958]

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 19 June 1995]: The World Health Organisation study does not distinguish between unsafe abortions and illegal abortions.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

French Nuclear Tests

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to his French counterpart regarding the resumption of nuclear weapons tests by the French Government. [29462]

Mr. David Davis: We are in regular contact with the French Government, who are aware of our views.

Rwanda

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make statement about the new mandate of the United Nations Mission in Rwanda force in Rwanda. [29505]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Under United Nations Security Council resolution 997, the revised mandate of UNAMIR now includes assisting the Government of Rwanda in facilitating the voluntary and safe return of refugees and supporting its efforts to promote a climate of confidence and trust through the performance of monitoring tasks throughout the country. We hope that this revision will facilitate UNAMIR's efforts to promote national reconciliation in Rwanda.

Births on Vessels

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many ships masters have reported a birth aboard their vessels to a consular office during the last 10 years. [29592]

Mr. Baldry: Ships masters are not required to report or register births on board their vessels to consular officers. They report births, and deaths, to the Marine Superintendent at the Registrar General of Shipping and Seamen, Cardiff.

Chinese State Orphanages

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what measures he intends to take to promote proper care for abandoned children in Chinese state orphanages; and if he will make a statement; [29783]

(2) what information he has received as to physical restraint of children in Chinese state orphanages; and if he will make a statement; [29781]

(3) what representations his Department has made in the last two years to the Chinese authorities regarding allegations of the existence of dying rooms in Chinese state orphanages; [29792]

(4) what representations his Department has made to the Chinese Government regarding their treatment of orphans and abandoned children; [29791]

(5) what reports he has received alleging absence of care in Chinese state orphanages; [29776]

(6) what reports he received as to who cares for abandoned babies in Chinese state orphanages; and if he will make a statement. [29780]

Mr. Goodlad: We continue to be deeply concerned about reports of abuses of children in certain Chinese state orphanages.

We have received varying reports about standards of care in Chinese orphanages. The Chinese Government provide social health care workers to look after abandoned babies. We believe that the ratio of staff to children, and the quality of staff, vary around the country. We believe that conditions in the orphanages also vary, but some include the use of physical restraint of children.

We take every suitable opportunity, both bilaterally and in conjunction with our European Union partners, to express to the Chinese authorities our concerns about reports of human rights abuses in China. My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary, for example, discussed human rights in China with the Chinese Foreign Minister in New York on 18 April.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what statements have been issued by the Chinese Government on their missions to Great Britain regarding the standards of care in Chinese state orphanages and the existence of dying rooms. [29777]

Mr. Goodlad: I refer the hon. Member to the fact sheet on China's orphanages issued by the Chinese embassy in London on 13 June 1995, a copy of which will be placed in the Library.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if representatives of Her Majesty's Government will raise the issue of the condition of abandoned children in Chinese state orphanages at the United Nations conference on women in Beijing. [29778]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: No. We are deeply concerned about reports of ill treatment and neglect of children in Chinese orphanages, but the UN conference on women has not been called to address specific issues of this kind in individual countries.

Intergovernmental Conference

Mr. Robin Cook: to ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans his Department has to publish a White Paper outlining Her Majesty's Government's objectives and priorities for the 1996 intergovernmental conference of the European Union. [29670]

Mr. David Davis: We have no plans to publish a White Paper on priorities for the IGC. We shall continue to keep the House informed of our approach as it develops.

Zaire

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement about (a) the security situation in Zaire relating to disputes between the Rwandan refugees and local

Zaireans and (b) the likelihood of armed incursions by Hutu refugees into Rwanda. [29504]

Mr. Baldry: The initiative of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees to deploy Zairean forces and international liaison staff in the camps in eastern Zaire has significantly reduced tensions and incidents involving refugees and the local population.

We are obviously concerned by the possibility of armed incursions into Rwanda. We therefore welcome the agreement of the government of Zaire to allow UN observers in eastern Zaire, to monitor the embargo imposed by the Security Council on supplies of arms intended for use within Rwanda.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Attorney-General how many written parliamentary questions were tabled for answer by his Department in each of the past five years; how many of these were not answered because the information (a) could be obtained only at disproportionate cost, (b) was not held centrally and (c) was not normally disclosed; how many of these could now be answered due to computerisation, more effective and efficient operational systems or more open government; and if he will list each question along with the name and constituency of the right hon. or hon. Member who originally tabled it. [28503]

The Solicitor-General: The information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. McMaster: To ask Mr. Attorney General what percentage of parliamentary questions, which would have been answered directly by him or his Ministers prior to the establishment of executive agencies, are now referred to the chief executive of such an agency. [28484]

The Solicitor General: Ministers are accountable to Parliament for all matters concerning their agencies. Written parliamentary questions concerning matters which have been delegated to the chief executive of an executive agency in its framework document, normally receive a reply from the Minister to the effect that he or she has asked the chief executive to reply direct to the Member by letter. The chief executive's letter is published in Hansard below the Minister's reply.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Chernobyl

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many farms are still affected by restriction notices imposed due to radioactive contamination following the Chernobyl nuclear accident in 1986; what land area these farms constitute; and what percentage of available farmland in Northern Ireland this represents. [28601]

Mr. Ancram: In Northern Ireland 55 farms comprising 5,728 hectares and representing 0.54 per cent. of the area available for farmland, are still under restriction.

Confectionery Sales (Schools)

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland under what authority the selling of confectionery in schools may be prohibited; and which schools have prohibited its sale. [28828]

Mr. Ancram: There are no specific statutory provisions relating to this issue and it is a matter for boards of governors of schools at a local level. All grant-aided schools are, however, required by law to have schemes of management and it is from these that the authority of the principal and board of governors for the day-to-day management of the school is derived.

I am not aware of any schools in Northern Ireland where the selling of confectionery has been prohibited.

School Meals

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what nutritional quality standards there are for school meals; and when was the last change in these standards. [28813]

Mr. Ancram: The current arrangements, as approved by the Department of Education, require that menus be planned within the following nutritional guidelines:

	School type
	Nursery	Primary	Senior pupils in special schools
Total Protein	27g	27g	27g
Animal protein	16.5g	16.5g	18.5g
Fat	32g	32g	32g
Calories	500–550	650–700	880

Nutritional standards are not prescribed in post-primary schools. The last change in these standards was in 1981.

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, what was the net expenditure on school catering services (a) in total; and (b) for free school meals for each year since 1987 broken down by county. [28801]

Mr. Ancram: The information is as follows:

Higher Education

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people from Northern Ireland were studying at a higher education institution in the United Kingdom in (a) 1993–94 and (b) 1994–95; and if he will make a statement. [29033]

Mr. Ancram: The information is as follows:

1994–95: 46,307 (Provisional)

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the average A-level point score of students embarking on first degrees at Northern Irish higher education institutions in (a) 1991–92, (b) 1992–93 and (c) 1993–94; and if he will make a statement. [29036]

Mr. Ancram: The information for Northern Ireland universities is as follows:

Information for teaching training colleges in Northern Ireland is available only for 1993–94 when the average A-level point score was 18.0.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what proportion of Northern Ireland higher education departments received a research rating of (a) three or above and (b) five during the recent research assessment exercise; and if he will make a statement. [29037]

Mr. Ancram: In the 1992 UK-wide research assessment exercise, 71 per cent. and 3 per cent. of the units of assessments in higher education institutions in Northern Ireland received ratings of (a) three or above and (b) five respectively.

Student Loans

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the average mandatory awards and loan expenditure on each student from Northern Ireland in 1994–95; what proportion of the figure went on (a) student loans, (b) fee expenditure and (c) maintenance expenditure; what were the corresponding figures for those studying at the universities of (i) Oxford and (ii) Cambridge; and if he will make a statement. [29038]

Mr. Ancram: The information is not available in the form requested. However, the average fee expenditure for the 1994–95 academic year is estimated at £1,244 and that for ordinary and supplementary maintenance at £1,456 and £171 respectively.

Final figures are not available for the average student loan in the current academic year. The latest year for which an actual figure is available is 1993–94 when the average student loan for Northern Ireland was £690.

Figures for those studying at the universities of Oxford and Cambridge are not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Domestic Gas

Mr. Brandreth : To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he has reached any further conclusions about the choice of area for the second phase of the transition to a competitive domestic gas market. [29067]

Mr. Eggar: I announced on 9 March that the first phase of competition in supplying domestic households, which will start in April 1996, will comprise 500,000 gas consumers in Cornwall, Devon and Somerset. My decision regarding the second phase will mean that in 1997:

the area for the first phase will be extended to cover a total of 1 million gas consumers in the south west; and competition will be introduced in a second area, also comprising 1 million gas consumers in the south east.

This will mean that from 1997 a total of around 2 million households will potentially be able to choose which company supplies their gas.

The second phase of the transition will extend competition to about 1½ million domestic gas consumers in East Sussex, West Sussex, Kent, Dorset and Avon to add to the 500,000 gas consumers in Cornwall, Devon and Somerset from April 1996, who are covered by the first phase.

The south-east received the second most support, after the south-west, in response to our recent consultation document on the choice of initial areas for the extension of competition to the domestic gas market. The chosen areas fulfil the criteria set out by the consultation document. They are clearly defined:

> both areas may be relatively disadvantaged by the transportation related charges—although the first supplier to declare its intention to enter the market in the south-west is still projecting average savings of 10 per cent. on BG's tariffs;
> two separate areas of this size will provide a thorough test of the technical and administrative systems in the second phase, ahead of the introduction of national competition in 1998;
> the areas have a mix of rural and urban areas and cross-section of types of customers.

The consultation demonstrated the widespread support for competition in gas supply with responses from all parts of the country requesting that they be included in the area where domestic consumers first benefit from competition in the gas market.

Coal Mining

Mr. Berry: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what action his Department took following receipt of a letter from the chief executive of Bristol city council dated 17 September 1993 regarding official coal mining searches prepared by British Coal; and if he will make a statement. [29596]

Mr. Page: The letter referred to was passed to British Coal on 11 October 1993 as a matter falling within their responsibilities. I understand that the Corporation wrote to Mr. Robinson on 28 October 1993.

Astra Holdings plc

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when the decision to prosecute all but one of the former directors of Astra was taken, if he was consulted over the decision to prosecute; and what factors led to the decision not to prosecute the remaining director. [29482]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The decision to bring disqualification proceedings against certain of the former Astra directors was taken in May 1994 by my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade after considering the advice of officials, Treasury Solicitors and counsel. This decision was taken after consideration of the conduct of those concerns as set out in the report of independent inspectors appointed under the Companies Act 1985 to investigate the affairs of Astra Holdings plc and published on 17 June 1993.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade from which hon. Members he has received correspondence or representations about the investigations into the conduct of, and ultimate prosecution of some of the former directors of Astra. [29721]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: I list those hon. Members who have tabled questions before the House concerning the appointment of and subsequent report of the inspectors appointed to investigate and report on the affairs of Astra Holdings plc.

Jim Cousins; Doug Hoyle; Allan Rogers; Austin Mitchell; Michael Meacher; Gerald Bermingham; Lord Clinton Davis has tabled a question before the House of Lords.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make available to Her Majesty's Customs and Excise the records of Astra and BMARC that were acquired in the course of his Department's inquiries into the affairs of Astra. [29485]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: Information obtained by use of the Secretary of State's compulsory powers is confidential and disclosure is subject to legal restrictions. No request has been made yet by HM Customs and Excise for information obtained by the inspectors appointed to investigate and report on the affairs of Astra Holdings plc, but I can assure the hon. Member that in discharging the Department's responsibilities I am conscious of and will take into account the strong public interest in ensuring that the proposed investigation by HM Customs and Excise is comprehensive and effective.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will suspend or withdraw his prosecutions of former directors of Astra until the HM Customs and Excise inquiry into Astra and its subsidiaries is complete. [29483]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The proceedings initiated by my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade are for the disqualification as company director of certain former directors of Astra, not their prosecution, and are based on the report of independent inspectors appointed to investigate and report on the affairs of Astra Holdings plc. The inspectors' investigation and subsequent report did not concern itself with the subject matter of the HM Customs and Excise enquiry. On that basis I see no reason to suspend the disqualification proceedings. It is of course open to any of the respondents to seek an adjournment of the disqualification proceeding if they think there are sufficient grounds.

Insolvency Service

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans he has to ensure that the cost of the private sector operations of the Insolvency Service will not rise disproportionately. [27799]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The contracting-out exercise will explore possible charging mechanisms for contracting out although it is likely that an inclusive single charge for the work to be undertaken on each case will prove most appropriate. Under any such arrangements the cost of any work done by contractors would vary in proportion to the number of cases which needed to be dealt with.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what changes have occurred to the plans for the contracting out of services for the Insolvency Service as a result of experience of private sector insolvency services in Scotland. [27800]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: None. Any contracting-out of official receivers' functions in England and Wales will be on the basis of value for money.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many official receivers' offices will be closed as a result of the contracting out of services of the Insolvency Service. [27801]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: No decisions have yet been taken in relation to the residual size and location of the Insolvency Service should contacting out go ahead. It is not expected that a decision will be able to be made until conclusions on contracting out have been reached.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what are the implications of contractors referring to the Official Receiver only cases where a criminal offence is suspected for directors and people declared bankrupt in respect of cautions under section 67 and 78 of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984. [27802]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: It is anticipated that contractors would report to the official receiver in all cases so that they could decide whether any further investigation was required. Official receivers may require a bankrupt or company director to attend for interview on more than one occasion and any further interviews conducted by the official receiver once the case has been reported on by a contractor will be conducted on the same basis as at present so that the provisions of sections 67 and 78 of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 will not apply.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what are the implications of a requirement on the official receiver to issue cautions under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 for the provisions of the Insolvency Acts in respect of the requirement on directors and people declared bankrupt to answer questions. [27803]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: Counsel's advice obtained by my officials is that the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 does not currently apply to the official receiver's investigative work and that in the current state of the law contracting out would not alter the position.

Mrs Helen Jackson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if staff of the official receiver's office transferred to the private sector will retain the terms and conditions of their original employment for the duration of their contracts. [28825]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: If, in the event of contracting out proceeding, staff were to transfer to the private sector under the terms of the Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) Regulations 1981, their existing terms and conditions would be retained. If TUPE were deemed not to apply, any staff who wished to transfer to successful bidders would, in the normal way, be responsible for agreeing the terms and conditions on which they were prepared to be employed.

Inward Investment

Mr. Lewis: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the top 25 foreign companies by investment in the United Kingdom since 1979. [29869]

Mr. Eggar: Information on investment since 1979 can be provided only at disproportionate cost. The 1995 edition of "The Times 1000" gives details of the thousand United Kingdom companies with the highest turnover in 1994. Among these, the foreign owned companies with the highest levels of capital employed were as follows:

The "Shell" Transport and Trading Company PLC
Unilever PLC
Esso UK PLC
Rank Xerox Ltd.
Ford Motor Company Ltd.
Amerada Hess Ltd.
Stockholm & Edinburgh Investments Ltd.

Mobile Telephones

Mr. Nicholls: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what initiatives he is considering to tackle the problem of mobile telephone fraud. [29664]

Mr. Ian Taylor: I have decided to set up a study group of senior representatives from the industry, the Federation of Communication Services, officials from the DTI and Home Office and representatives from the law enforcement agencies as necessary, to consider how the Government can underpin the continuing work of the industry in fighting the escalating problem of mobile phone crime. The group will report back to me in September and will examine the technological aspects of the problem, how these are changing as the industry develops and in particular the increased use of scanners in the cloning of mobile phones and the theft of airtime.

The Government intend to ensure that these problems are tackled on all available fronts. The study group will draw together the useful work that has already been done by the industry to pursue technological solutions and to improve industry control systems, and will consider in particular if there are any further steps which the Government can take in support of the industry.

Mr. Martyn Gregory

Mr. Redmond: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what action his Department is taking in respect of the libel action being brought against his Department by Martyn Gregory; and if he will make a statement. [27418]

Mr. Ian Taylor: I confirm that a writ has been received from Mr. Gregory's solicitors. As the matter is now subject to legal proceedings in the High Court I do not consider it appropriate to comment further.

Detergents

Mr. Wigley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will ask the Monopolies and Mergers Commission to carry out an investigation of the UK detergent market. [29487]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: This is a matter for the Director General of Fair Trading, who, under the competition legislation, is responsible for keeping markets under review, and has independent powers to make a reference to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission.

BMARC

Mr. Wilson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer on 28 April, Official Report, column 725, when he now intends to write to the hon. Member concerning BMARC and arms exports. [29031]

Mr. Ian Taylor: My right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade made a statement to the House on 13 June 1995, Official Report, column 606.

I wrote to the hon. Member that day to inform him that the statement would embrace replies to his questions.

Internal Market Council

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what matters were discussed and what decisions taken at the EU Ministerial Council on the Internal Market on 6 June; and what matters were voted upon. [26737]

Mr. Ian Taylor [holding answer 7 June 1995]: I attended the Internal Market Council in Luxembourg on 6 June.

The Council agreed a satisfactory resolution on the effective application of Community law and penalties for breach of Community law provisions in the internal market field; a common position on the decision on notification of derogations from free movement of goods; and political agreement on the directive on legal protection of databases. There was no agreement on a common position on the novel foods and novel food ingredients regulation, as Germany, Sweden, Austria, Denmark and Greece voted against.

The Council discussed the Commission's White Paper on the preparation of the associated countries of central and eastern Europe for integration into the EU's internal market. It also held a joint meeting with internal market Ministers from those countries. There was also a debate on improving the work and operation of the single market. This followed Commissioner Monti's outline of the Commission's forthcoming 1994 annual report on the single market.

I presented a new study by the DTI, reporting on a survey of 250 businesses and 100 trade associations.

The Council discussed the work of the Molitor group, set up to examine the impact of European Community and national legislation on employment and competitiveness; Customs 2000 action programme; and the draft convention on insolvency proceedings.

The next meeting of the Council is provisionally scheduled for Monday 9 October 1995.

Copyright (Educational Material)

Mr. Eastham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the total cost per year to primary, secondary and further education establishments in fees for the photocopying of copyright educational material. [29447]

Mr. Ian Taylor [holding answer 19 June 1995]: The Department of Trade and Industry does not have this information. However, I am informed by the Copyright Licensing Agency, the collecting society which administers the photocopying rights of nearly all owners of copyright in books, journals and periodicals, that licence fees received for financial year 1994–95 from local education authority schools was £2.2 million. Licence fees from grant-maintained and independent schools amounted to £934,000, and fees from further education establishments amounted to £2.5 million.

Temazepam

Mr. McMaster: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what monitoring his Department undertakes of the overseas export of temazepam; if his Department checks the licences of those who export the drug; what measures are in place to ensure that export licences of buyers in the medical/drug industry are legitimate; if his Department monitors the drug shipment after it has been purchased and until it reaches the foreign destination; and if he will make a statement. [29248]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I have been asked to reply.

There are no statutory controls on the export of temazepam, but companies have been warned to be on their guard for suspicious orders. Records from exporters are examined annually with information of amounts and destinations being passed to the International Narcotics Control Board. The details of any suspicious transactions are passed to the INCB and the authorities in the receiving country. Manufacturers and wholesalers require an operating authority. They are carefully vetted and inspected.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what percentage of parliamentary questions, which would have been answered directly to him or his Ministers prior to the establishment of executive agencies, are now referred to the chief executive of such an agency. [28492]

Mr. Dorrell: Ministers are accountable to Parliament for all matters concerning their agencies. Written parliamentary questions concerning matters which have been delegated to the chief executive of an executive agency in its framework document normally receive a reply from a Minister to the effect that he or she has asked the chief executive to reply direct to the Member by letter. The chief executive's letter is published in Hansard below the Minister's reply.

Radio Stations

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will take into account the audience reach of radio stations when assessing the most efficient use of spectrum for policy purposes. [29737]

Mr. Dorrell: Government policy aims to ensure that frequencies are used so as to enhance the range of listener choice. Under section 123 of the Broadcasting Act 1990, the Radio Authority is obliged to ensure that the frequencies assigned to the authority are used as efficiently as is reasonably practicable.

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will relax the restrictions on the concentration of radio ownership in major urban areas. [29738]

Mr. Dorrell: I announced on 23 May that the Government would be enacting immediate secondary legislation to liberalise the existing rules on radio ownership. One effect of these changes is to remove the current limit on the holdings of radio licences in areas where the number of persons over the age of 15 resident in the area for which the service is provided exceeds 1 million, but does not exceed 4.5 million. The Government intend to enact primary legislation at the earliest available opportunity which will remove the numerical limits on the number of licences that can be held, and regulate ownership by means of the existing points system. Regional, and local plurality will be safeguarded by the overlapping areas provisions, which prevent a licensee from holding more than one licence in each waveband in areas where services overlap. However, the changes will allow companies to expand significantly within local radio across the nation.

Privatisation

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will list those parts of his Department or departmental agencies which were privatised without an in-house bid; if he will indicate the expertise which was absent in his Department or departmental agencies which prevented an in-house bid taking place; which future parts of his Department or departmental agencies he intends to privatise; and which of them do not have the necessary in-house expertise to mount an in-house bid. [29432]

Mr. Dorrell: Since it was formed in April 1992, my Department and its agencies have contracted out the activities listed below. As a newly formed Department central services had been supplied by former parent Departments and thus there were no existing staff to mount an in-house bid. In order to concentrate on its core policy tasks it was decided to contract out these activities. Activities contracted out in the past and planned for the future, are as follows:

Year	Let by	Activity	Name of successful bid	Won by in-house bid

National Lottery

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will make a statement on the distribution of lottery money in (a) Sandwell, (b) Dudley, (c) Wolverhampton and (d) Wallsall. [29494]

Mr. Dorrell: There have been two awards to date to projects based in Dudley. The Sports Council has awarded £71,350 to Halesowen Athletic and Cycling Club and £17,118 to West Midlands Amateur Gymnastics.

There have not yet been any awards from lottery proceeds to projects in Sandwell, Wolverhampton, or Walsall.

Library Services

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage, pursuant to his answer of 16 May, Official Report, columns 150-1, from whom he envisages local authorities buying library services; and from whom diverse sources of finance would come. [29459]

Mr. Dorrell: My announcement reflected my concern that library authorities should clarify and specify the service they want to achieve for their customers, while accepting they need not necessarily provide that service themselves. This is consistent with the Government's overall approach to local authority provision. My consultation on the Aslib report makes it clear that I welcome views on how these ideas might be developed constructively. Similarly, the Aslib report contains several specific proposals for diversification of the sources of funding for public libraries, and I have sought views on those proposals and requested other practical ideas.

Mr. Hanson: to ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage, pursuant to his answer of 16 May, Official Report, columns 150-1, what is his Department's definition of the range of core library services. [29460]

Mr. Dorrell: As I made clear in my announcement, one outcome that I am seeking from the public library review, and in particular from the current wide-ranging consultation exercise on the Aslib report, is guidance for local authorities on a clearer definition of the range of core services which libraries should provide. I would expect any definition to draw on the core purposes and functions identified in the Aslib report and to be consistent with the Public Libraries and Museums Act 1964.

Works of Art

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage, pursuant to the answer by the Chancellor of the Exchequer of 9 June, Official Report, column 340, about works of art exempt from inheritance tax, how many chattels are available for viewing (a) at private dwelling houses, (b) at banks or other secure places or (c) at other private institutions. [28850]

Sir George Young: I have been asked to reply.

Owners of works of art which are conditionally exempt from inheritance tax or capital transfer tax may satisfy the public access requirement by undertaking to arrange viewing by appointment and to lend the items on request to a public collection. Objects subject to such an undertaking are publicised by means of an entry in the computerised register of conditionally exempt works of art. The viewing arrangements, including the venue, are for agreement between the owner and the prospective viewer, and they must be reasonable for both parties. There is no requirement that owners must allow viewing in any particular location, although in practice this may often be the place where the items are normally kept.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Abandoned Offshore Installations

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what research, prior to the signing of the UN law of the sea convention, his Department conducted into the effect on the fishing industry of the abandoning of offshore oil and gas installations. [28987]

Mr. Jack: The Department has maintained for many years an active research and monitoring programme into the effects on fishing and the marine environment of contaminants and wastes of all sorts including oil and oil-related products.

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps his Department is undertaking to record the positions of abandoned oil installations and oil related debris; what assessment his Department has made of the hazard to fishing vessels; and what consideration has been given to arranging for compensation for fishermen for (a) loss of or damage to their vessels or (b) loss of access to fishing grounds as a result of such abandonment. [28984]

Mr. Jack: It is a requirement of the International Maritime Organisation guidelines and standards for the removal of offshore installations and structures that precise locations of any abandoned offshore installation should be notified to the hydrographic service for inclusion on nautical charts. It is Government policy to consider each abandonment proposal on a case-by-case basis. This will allow assessment of any hazards and include consultation with fishermen's organisations where appropriate. No special compensation arrangements have been made. Liability for any loss or damage consequent upon abandonment would remain with the companies concerned.

Food Imports

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the volume of imports for (a) 1993 and (b) 1994 of paté de foie gras, tinned, preserved, fresh, chilled or frozen made from (i) duck livers and (ii) goose livers. [28930]

Mr. Jack: Official trade statistics for the volume of imports of paté de foie gras are not separately available. However, the totals of all prepared or preserved goose or duck liver imported into the United Kingdom from all sources were 116 tonnes in 1993 and 87 tonnes in 1994.

Grants

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the amounts received by each organisation which receives a grant from his Department for each of the last five years. [28968]

Mr. Jack: Listed are the amounts of grant in aid received by organisations from my Department

Committee Membership

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the membership of the veterinary products committee for each year since 1972, giving details of declared interests in each case. [29732]

Mrs. Browning: The information requested is contained in the published annual reports of the Medicines Commission and other committees established under section 4 of the Medicines Act 1968. Copies are available in the Library of the House.

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, if he will list the membership of the pesticides advisory committee for each year since 1972, giving details of declared interests in each case. [29731]

Mrs. Browning: Details of the year-end membership of the Advisory Committee on Pesticides for the years 1984 to 1994 are contained in the committee's annual reports for those years and are reproduced as follows. Details for previous years could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

The chairman is required to have no industry interests. Since 1991, declarations of interests have been required of other members and their involvement in discussions to which these interests are relevant has been restricted. Prior to 1991 members were not appointed to the committee if they had interests in the pesticides industry.

Dietary Supplements

Mr. Hain: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the proposals by the European Commission to issue another consultative document on the issue of dietary supplements; and if he will make it his policy to oppose the development of any further directives limiting access to vitamin, mineral and other dietary supplements. [28872]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 19 June 1995]: The EC issued a discussion paper in December 1991. Since then the Commission has reviewed the situation but has issued no further documents. If the Commission does issue a consultative document we shall ensure that all interested parties have a chance to comment. UK policy in this area is to seek to achieve a balance between ensuring public health and maintaining the availability of safe, correctly labelled, products.

Mr. Hain: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he is taking to defend the access of United Kingdom consumers to vitamin, mineral and other dietary supplements of their choice. [28873]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 19 June 1995]: There are no proposals to change the current regime of foodstuffs legislation under which such products are sold. If necessary the UK would continue to defend the access of consumers to vitamin, mineral and other dietary supplements.

Selenium

Mr. Hain: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what are relative levels of selenium content in North American wheat and European wheat; how levels of consumption of each of those wheats has changed in England and Wales over the last 25 years; and what effect such a change has had on dietary selenium levels. [28874]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 19 June 1995]: The selenium content of wheat varies according to its source. North American wheats contain an average 0.42µg/g[1] and European wheat 0.025µg/g[2] to 0.14µg/g[3]. The levels of usage of North American wheat and European wheat over the last 25 years are set out in the table.

Trade Data

000 tonnes

Imports
Total	4,921	1,629	1,146
of which

3rd Countries	4,038	244	247
Canada	1,533	227	225

The effect of the above change has been a fall in selenium intake from bread. However recent measurements[2,3] of selenium in a wide range of non-cereal foods suggests that many foods, especially meat and eggs, have a higher selenium level than those measured and reported by MAFF in 1978[1]. The estimated mean daily intake of selenium reported in 1978, based on 1974 intake, was 60µg/person/day. As I explained in my answer of 16 May 1995, Official Report, column 201, the estimations of average intake based on results from two independent analyses of the Ministry's 1991 total diet study and a separate research project in 1994 are either 30-40 µg/day or 50–60µg/day, depending on the method of analysis and estimation of intake used. A newly published study carried out at Kings college London on the selenium content of foods has estimated the average intake as 62.2µg/g[3].

Mr. Hain: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what plans he has to undertake a survey of selenium consumption in the population; [28875]

(2) in how many regions the average selenium intake is above the lower reference value; and in how many of those regions the average selenium intake level is above the higher reference value. [28876]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 19 June 1995]: There are two main ways in which MAFF determines intakes of minerals such as selenium by the population. The first is through surveys of food purchase or consumption which include the national food survey, a continuous survey of all foods brought into the household, and the national diet and nutrition survey programme of individuals. The second is a total diet study which involves the analysis of complete diets. However, as I stated in my reply of 16 May 1995, Official Report, column 201 there is some uncertainty at present over the analytical results and it is not therefore possible to provide reliable intake figures for selenium by region. We have a programme of work under way to try to resolve this issue.

SCOTLAND

Enterprise Zones

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list for each enterprise zone (a) the total office and other floor space built or proposed to be built, (b) the percentage occupancy of the space available and (c) the average stay of occupation. [28235]

Mr. Kynoch: In the case of Inverclyde enterprise zone, the office and industrial floorspace provided amounts to 922,780 sq ft, of which 831,882 sq ft is occupied, with a further 14,492 sq ft under offer. Information on the average period of occupation on zone properties is not available, although the majority of companies which have occupied zone properties remain in occupation.

In the case of Lanarkshire enterprise zone, the office and industrial floorspace provided amounts to 400,000 sq ft, with a further 582,000 sq ft proposed: 156,000 sq ft of floorspace is already occupied. Information on the average period of occupation of zone properties is not available but no company has vacated zone property following occupation.

M8

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to improve the signposting of the M8 motorway to include signage for Paisley, Johnstone and Elderslie from at least the stretch of motorway from Glasgow city centre, and if he will make a statement. [28538]

Lord James Douglas Hamilton: The Secretary of State is responsible for the M8 motorway west of junction 26 at Hillington. The existing signing on this stretch of the road is considered to identify the principal destinations within the constraints of space and safety. There are therefore no proposals to amend the existing signing. The urban section of the M8 motorway east of Hillington through Glasgow to Baillieston is currently the responsibility of the local roads authority, Strathclyde regional council.

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what proposals he has to provide adequate lighting along the entire stretch of motorway from Glasgow to Edinburgh; and if he will make a statement. [28529]

Lord James Douglas Hamilton: The responsibility for the M8 motorway and A8 all-purpose dual carriageway between junction 8 Baillieston and junction 2 Newbridge rests with the Secretary of State. The urban section of the M8 motorway from Baillieston through Glasgow is currently the responsibility of the local roads authority, Strathclyde regional council. The new M8 extension from Claylands to Edinburgh city bypass opens later this year and the new interchanges and associated slip roads at either end of the extension will be lit. Lighting will also be provided on the new motorway planned between junction 8 Baillieston and junction 6 Newhouse. There are no other plans to provide additional lighting on the sections of road for which the Secretary of State is responsible.

Appointments

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what appointments he will be required or able to make within the next 12 months; if he will list each relevant body and the name, age, place of residence and existing or previous employment of the current incumbent; what is the rate of remuneration and expected time commitment; and if he will make a statement. [28555]

Mr. Lang: The only information which is held centrally on appointments is that relating to those public bodies listed in the Cabinet Office publication "Public Bodies 1994", a copy of which is available in the Library of the House. As the information on appointments reaching the end of their term in the year from 15 June 1995 is extensive, I have arranged for it to be placed in the Library of the House. The name, age, place of residence and existing or previous employment of the current incumbents of these appointments is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. I shall in due course be making appointments to the new water authorities and customers council, the Scottish Environment Protection Agency and the Scottish Children's Reporter Administration.

Planning Appeals

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what ratio or other measurement of public open space to housing density in urban areas he uses in determining appeals against the refusal of planning consent; how this is expected to apply to the development of the recreational space at (a) Spateston road and (b) Miller street, both in Johnstone; and if he will make a statement. [28576]

Mr. Kynoch: In determining an appeal a reporter has regard to any relevant policy of the development plan, and to any further matters which are drawn to his attention. This would include ratios of public open space to housing density, if those matters are covered in submissions.

This would apply to any appeals relating to the sites referred to, but no such appeals have been received to date.

Windyhill Farm

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects to reach his final decision on the proposal by Scottish Aggregates to develop a quarry at Windyhill farm, Elderslie. [28530]

Mr. Kynoch: The reporter will shortly submit her report with recommendations to my right hon. Friend for his consideration. The decision on this proposal is expected within two to three months from the receipt of the report.

Scottish Folk Music

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met representatives of (a) the Scottish Arts Council, (b) designers of curricula and (c) providers of education to discuss their role in raising the awareness of the role and importance of Scottish folk music in cultural development within schools and colleges; and if he will make a statement. [28579]

Sir Hector Monro: My right hon. Friend and I meet senior representatives of the Scottish Arts Council from time to time to discuss a range of issues. Traditional music projects have benefited from substantial increases in funding by the council over recent years. The council also played an important advocacy role in the recent decision by the Royal Scottish Academy of Music and Drama to introduce in autumn 1995 a degree course in traditional music.

My hon. Friend the Minister with responsibilities for education in Scotland, opened a forum on Scottish resources sponsored by the Scottish consultative council on the curriculum on 24 February 1995. An aim of the forum was to ensure that the framework of teaching and learning for all Scottish schools identified opportunities for Scottish culture, including music and dance, to flourish.

European Regional Development Fund

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much money has been received by (a) Strathclyde regional council and (b) Renfrew district council from the European regional development fund and European social fund since their inception; and if he will make a statement. [28567]

Mr. Kynoch: The information relates to payments made under the respective funds:

European Regional Development Fund (since January 1989)

Strathclyde Regional Council £131,299,306

Renfrew District Council £3,436,167

European Social Fund (since January 1990)

Strathclyde Regional Council £64,690,986

Renfrew District Council has not received any ESF awards.

Information on ERDF payments pre-1989, and ESF payments pre-1990, are not readily available centrally as this period predates the introduction of programmes under the 1989 reform of the structural funds and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. The information may be available from the local authorities.

Allowances

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the existing rates of allowances and payments to elected members of Scottish regional, district and unitary authorities; if he will include in the table details of what the (a) attendance allowance, (b) special responsibility payments, (c) travelling allowances and (d) subsistence rates would be at today's prices had they kept pace with inflation since 1974 and had the method of payment remained the same since that time; and if he will make a statement. [28524]

Mr. Kynoch: The information requested is complex and will take time to compile. I will, however, write to the hon. Member as soon as possible and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library.

Food Poisoning

Dr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many cases of food poisoning have been reported in Scotland this year. [28616]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: During the period 1 January to 9 June 1995 1,522 cases of food poisoning were reported in Scotland.

Dr. Strang : To ask the secretary of State for Scotland what was the total number of reported cases of salmonellosis in Scotland in each year since 1979; and what is the latest available figure for this year. [28617]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The total numbers of cases of salmonellosis reported by laboratories to the Scottish Centre for Infection and Environmental Health are as follows. These figures do not necessarily reflect the total incidence of the infection in the community, since doctors do not routinely send specimens from every case for laboratory confirmation.

Pleading Diets

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many cases under summary procedure in the most recent (a) three and (b) five years for which figures are available have involved the pleading diet being brought within 21 days; and if he will make a statement. [28634]

Lord James Douglas Hamilton: The subject of the question relates to matters undertaken by the Scottish Court Service. I have asked its chief executive, Michael Ewart, to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Michael Ewart to Mr. Gordon McMaster, dated 20 June 1995:

Lord James Douglas Hamilton has asked me to reply to your question regarding the timing of pleading diets under summary procedure.

Almost all summary criminal prosecutions in the Sheriff Courts are called at pleading diets which fall within 21 days of the date on which the papers are lodged with the Sheriff Clerk.

Chernobyl

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many farms are still affected by restriction notices imposed due to radioactive contamination following the Chernobyl nuclear accident in 1986; what land area these farms constitute; and what percentage of available farmland in Scotland this represents.

Sir Hector Monro: Currently, 41 holdings in Scotland remain affected by post-Chernobyl controls on the movement and slaughter of sheep. These holdings cover around 43,000 hectares which represents 0.7 per cent. of farm land in Scotland.

Victim Support Groups

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to increase funding to victim support groups; and if he will make a statement. [29275]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I am pleased to be able to advise that the funding support given by the Scottish Office to victim support (Scotland) increased from £890,000 in 1994–95 to £985,000 for 1995–96, an increase of 9.64 per cent.; £700,430 of this grant is set aside for distribution by the independent funding panel to provide local co-ordinator posts. Victim Support (Scotland) will put its financial proposals forward later this year in respect of 1996–97, and this will be carefully considered along with the proposals put forward by other voluntary organisations.

NHS Costs

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what were the administrative costs incurred by (a) NHS purchasers and (b) NHS providers in each region in each year since 1990–91. [29095]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: In Scotland the equivalent to regional health authorities are health boards. The information shown in the table has been given for each board area and has been taken from the annual accounts for each health board and NHS trust.

The figures in the table represent the total administrative costs for purchasers and providers, comprising administrative salaries and wages, supplies and services, office expenses and agency services. The format of the accounts for 1990–91 does not allow for a split between the purchaser and provider functions. Figures for 1994–95 are not yet available.

The administration figures for providers include senior nurses and clinicians who have transferred to the general/senior managers' pay scales, particularly in latter years. These changes, together with accounting policy changes and transfer of provider functions to NHS trusts since 1992–93, mean that the annual figures are not comparable.

Contaminated Blood Products

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his most recent estimate of the number of people in (a) Inverclyde, (b) Strathclyde and (c) Scotland infected with hepatitis C from contaminated blood products; and how many of these people are haemophiliacs.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: A "lookback" exercise is currently under way to seek to identify, counsel and treat patients who may have been exposed to the hepatitis C virus via blood or blood products. It is estimated that around 650 people throughout Scotland may have been infected in this way, 350 of whom are likely to be haemophiliacs. A breakdown for Inverclyde and Strathclyde is not available.

Ear, Nose and Throat Units

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what guidelines he has issued about the maximum distance any patient should be from an ear, nose and throat unit; and if he will make a statement. [28324]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: No such guidelines have been issued.

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list all the ear, nose and throat units in (a) Renfrewshire and (b) Strathclyde. [28325]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Hospitals in Strathclyde and Renfrewshire with ear, nose and throat units[1] at 31 December 1994 are as listed:

Renfrewshire

Royal Alexandra Hospital, Paisley

Strathclyde[2]

Crosshouse Hospital, Kilmarnock

Inverclyde Royal Hospital, Greenock

Law Hospital, Carluke

Monklands District General Hospital, Airdrie

Royal Alexandra Hospital, Paisley

Royal Hospital for Sick Children, Glasgow

Stobhill Hospital, Glasgow

Stonehouse Hospital, Stonehouse

Victoria Infirmary, Glasgow

Western Infirmary, Glasgow

Notes:

[1] Hospitals with two or more staffed ear, nose and throat beds on average in the quarter.

[2] Comprises Argyll and Clyde, Ayrshire and Arran, Greater Glasgow, Lanarkshire health board areas.

Student Loans

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the forecast for expenditure on mandatory awards and loans given to students from Scotland during the current year; and if he will make a statement. [29039]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The planned expenditure in the 1995–96 financial year on awards and loans in respect of students domiciled in Scotland is £291 million and £95 million respectively.

Higher Education

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the proportion of young people from Scotland entering higher education in (a) 1993–94 and (b) 1994–95; and if he will make a statement. [29030]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The age participation index of young people aged under 21 from Scotland entering higher education in the UK for the latest two years available is as follows:

1992–93: 35.1 per cent.

1993–94: 38.3 per cent.

Source: Statistical Bulletin 'Scottish Higher Education Statistics 1993–94.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the proportion of students obtaining (a) first class and (b) upper second class degrees at Scottish higher education institutions in (i) 1991–92 and (ii) 1992–93, and if he will make a statement. [29034]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The available information is for students obtaining first class and second class degrees at Scottish higher education institutions and is shown in the table:

Percentage of students obtaining first and second class degrees at Scottish higher education institutions

	Total (= 100 per cent.)	1st Honours per cent.	2nd Honours per cent.	[1]Others per cent.
1992–93	16,663	7.3	54.8	37.8

Note:

Figures in the above table may not total 100 per cent. due to rounding.

[1] 3rd Honours and unclassified degrees.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many students were studying at a Scottish Higher Education Institution in (a) 1993–94 and (b) 1994–95; and if he will make a statement. [29104]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information requested is set out in the table:

Number of students studying higher education courses at Scottish Higher education institutions:

	Full-time	Part-time
1993–94	112,167	20,306
1994–95[1]	116,472	20,523

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the average A-level point score of students embarking on first degrees at Scottish higher education institutions in (a) 1991–92, (b) 1992–93 and (c) 1993–94; and if he will make a statement. [29026]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 19 June 1995]: The information requested is not readily available. Most students embarking on first degrees at Scottish higher education institutions possess Scottish certificate of education higher grades rather than A-levels.

Ayrshire and Arran Community Health Trust

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what expenditure has been incurred by the Ayrshire and Arran community health trust in its campaign to have the proposed south east Ayrshire community hospital sited in Cumnock; under what powers they have incurred such expenditure; and if he will make a statement. [29668]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The current review of community services in south-east Ayrshire is being carried out by Ayrshire and Arran health board to ensure that the best quality services are readily available for patients. The Ayrshire and Arran community healthcare trust has incurred £3,996 towards the preparation of a business case for a new community hospital at Cumnock. Under paragraph 16, schedule 7A to the National Health Service (Scotland) Act 1978, an NHS trust has the power to take any action which appears to it to be necessary or expedient for the purpose of, or in connection with, the discharge of its functions.

House Repossessions

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the number of house repossessions which occurred in (a) Inverclyde, (b) Strathclyde and (c) Scotland as a whole in each of the past 10 years. [28162]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 19 June 1995]: We do not hold this information centrally. However, figures supplied by the Council of Mortgage Lenders suggest that, in 1994, 1,791 properties were taken into possession by mortgage lenders in Scotland. This represents 0.22 per cent. of the total number of properties with mortgages outstanding. The comparable figures for 1993, were 2,330 and 0.29 per cent. respectively. The rate in Scotland remains less than half of that for the rest of the United Kingdom as a whole.

Teachers' Parental Leave

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will bring the entitlement for teachers' parental leave into line with the EU directive on parental leave. [29492]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 19 June 1995]: Matters concerning the terms and conditions of service for teachers are for the Scottish joint negotiating committee to determine and not for my right hon. Friend.

Regional Selective Assistance

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the number of grants of regional selective assistance made to Scottish companies and the number of companies involved for each financial year since 1979–80. [25346]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 23 May 1995]: The available information relates to offers accepted by companies with projects in Scotland. For earlier years, this is published in the Industrial Development Act 1982 annual report, copies of which are available in the Library. In 1994–95, 248 offers were accepted by companies with projects in Scotland.

HEALTH

Dentistry

13. Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what initiatives are being pursued to increase the number of students entering dentistry; and if she will make a statement. [27724]

Mr. Malone: There are currently 3,908 dental students in the United Kingdom.

There are no reasons to believe that, in England, there will be too few dentists. The Nuffield report, published in September 1993, recommended that greater use should be made of dental auxiliaries in general practice as part of a dentist-led team. That could have an impact on the level of dental manpower required and, therefore, on the level of student intake needed. The Department will review the position regarding student intake in the light of decisions taken about the Nuffield recommendations.

Residential Institutions (Abuse)

14. Mr. Wicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action she is taking to tackle the problem of physical and sexual abuse of people with severe learning difficulties in residential institutions. [27725]

Mr. Bowis: We have in place a programme of guidance and inspection and have funded projects to support good practice in such residential care to lessen the likelihood of abuse, to identify it and to take appropriate action if it does occur.

National Health Service Trusts

15. Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent representations she has received regarding federation of services between NHS Trusts. [27726]

Mr. Malone: We have received no representations other than three letters from the hon. Member.

Incomes and Health

16. Ms Coffey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment has been made by her Department as to the relationship between incomes and health; and if she will make a statement. [27727]

Mr. Sackville: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Nuneaton (Mr. Olner) on 16 May at column 161.

Hepatitis C

17. Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent representations she has received concerning compensation for those affected with the hepatitis C virus; and if she will make a statement. [27728]

Mr. Sackville: Representations this year about payments include five parliamentary questions, a short debate in another place and four early-day motions. In addition, Ministers have received 214 letters.

Capital Projects

18. Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many capital projects (a) have gone ahead since 1990–91 and (b) are currently under way or planned in the south Thames region. [27729]

Mr. Sackville: Records of schemes with a total cost of less than £2.5 million are not collected centrally. Fifty six capital schemes each at an approved total cost exceeding £2.5 million have gone ahead since 1990 in South Thames region, nine of which are still under way. A further six schemes are approved to proceed to construction.

Details are not available about schemes at an early planning stage.

Sir Michael Neubert: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many capital projects have (a) gone ahead since 1990–91 and (b) are currently under way or planned in the North Thames region. [28357]

Mr. Sackville: Records of schemes with a total cost of less than £2.5 million are not collected centrally. Forty seven capital building schemes each at an approved total cost exceeding £2.5 million have gone ahead since 1990 in North Thames region, eight of which are still under way. A further scheme has been approved to proceed to construction.

Details are not available about schemes which are at an early planning stage.

Care Services

19. Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the level of demand since April 1993 for care services; and if she will make a statement. [27730]

Mr. Bowis: Centrally available information, which largely covers provision of services rather than demand, is published in a range of statistical publications and is brought together in "Health and Personal Social Services Statistics for England", copies of which are available in the Library.

Mixed-sex Wards

20. Mr. Brandreth: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations she has received regarding mixed-sex wards in NHS trust hospitals; and if she will make a statement. [27731]

Mr. Sackville: We have received about 100 representations in recent months. Under the patients charter, patients have the right before entering hospital for a planned treatment to know whether that treatment is to be provided in a mixed-sex ward, so that their preferences can be made known and, if possible, catered for. In addition, all patients can now expect single-sex washing and toilet facilities. How much further national health service trusts can go in meeting individual patient preferences is a matter for local determination in the light of local circumstances.

Access to Information

21. Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will limit fees chargeable under the guidance to NHS trusts allowing access to information; and if she will make a statement. [27732]

Mr. Sackville: The guidance to national health service authorities and trusts on the implementation of the code of practice on openness in the NHS makes it clear that, in the vast majority of cases, information will be provided free of charge. In exceptional circumstances, for example where dealing with a request would require significant diversion of resources, a reasonable charge may be made.

Asthma-related Prescriptions

22. Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what has been the increase in the expenditure on asthma-related prescriptions in Berkshire since 1988. [27733]

Mr. Malone: The net ingredient cost of national health service prescriptions for medicines and appliances used in the treatment of asthma and related conditions in Berkshire family health services authority was £5.6 million in 1993 and £5.9 million in 1994. The net ingredient cost is the basic price of a drug before discounts and the addition of dispensing costs or fees. Retrieval of data from earlier years could be made only at a disproportionate cost.

Blood Stocks

23. Mrs. Jane Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what are the current levels of blood stocks. [27734]

Mr. Sackville: Blood stocks held on 16 June 1995 were 16,707 units. The National Blood Authority, which is responsible for our blood services, collects sufficient blood from our volunteer donors to meet the needs of hospitals.

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the estimated daily requirement of red blood cell units for each of the eight NHS regions in England and Wales; and what was the total number available in each region for each of the last 30 days. [29524]

Mr. Sackville: The National Blood Service aims to meet, each day, from stock, the national demand from hospitals for blood. Figures are not collected on the basis of national health service regions.

The last complete period for which figures are available from the National Blood Authority, for issues and stock, is April 1995. During that period, nationally, the average number of units of red cells issued daily was 8,500. During the same period the average daily national stock was 17,000.

Hospital Waiting Times

24. Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made in reducing hospital waiting times. [27735]

Mr. Malone: Excellent progress has been made in reducing waiting times. Since 1987, when the waiting time initiative was first introduced, the national health service has almost completely eliminated waits of more than 18 months for in-patient or day case treatment, and the number of patients waiting more than a year for such treatment has fallen from around 210,000 to less than 32,000 today. The average time a patient has to wait has been cut from more than nine months to less than five months. In addition, we have recently introduced for the first time a standard for first out-patient appointments as part of the patients charter. All patients should be seen within 26 weeks of being referred by their general practitioner; nine out of 10 should be seen within 13 weeks.

City and East London FHSA

25. Mr. Timms: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action she is taking to deal with the financial irregularities highlighted by the district auditor's management letter of November 1994 to the City and East London family health services authority. [27736]

Mr. Malone: North Thames regional health authority has commissioned a report from independent auditors. Implementation of the report's recommendations is being monitored by the national health service executive regional office.

Capital Projects

26. Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many capital projects (a) have gone ahead since 1990–91 and (b) are currently under way or planned in the Northern and Yorkshire region. [27737]

Mr. Sackville: Records of schemes with a total cost of less than £2.5 million are not collected centrally. Fifty-five capital schemes, each at an approved total cost exceeding £2.5 million, have gone ahead since 1990 in Northern and Yorkshire region, 18 of which are still underway. A further eight schemes are approved to proceed to construction.

Details about schemes that are at an early planning stage are not available centrally.

Contracting Out

27. Mr. David Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what has been the total saving of contracting out services to date. [27738]

Mr. Sackville: Cumulative total savings since 1983 as a result of market testing National Health Service services is now estimated to be in excess of £1 billion. The improved value for money achieved has released additional resources for spending on direct patient care services.

Detailed information on savings of £7.7 million arising from the Department of Health's market testing programme to 30 September 1994 was published on 9 January 1995 in the "Market Testing Bulletin Special Report", copies of which are available in the Library.

Care in the Community

28. Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on care in the community in Essex. [27739]

Mr. Bowis: Essex county council is responsible for assessing the needs of its local population and deciding on the appropriate services to provide. Between 1990–91 and 1995–96 the council's total resources for community care rose by 95 per cent. in real terms—well above the national average. It is for the council to spend these resources efficiently and effectively.

Measles

29. Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is her estimate of how many children were immunised against measles in the recent campaign. [27740]

Mr. Sackville: The latest figure for the number of children in England immunised during the measles/rubella campaign is 6,585,661.

General Practitioner Fundholding

Mr. Mike O' Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much general practitioner fundholder practice budgets per patient have changed as a percentage and in real terms in each of the last two years ; and if she will make a statement on differences between provider price rises and fundholding price rises and their impact on patients. [25207]

Mr. Malone: Between 1993–94 and 1994–95, the most recent years for which national information is available, the hospital and community health services element of fundholder budgets increased by an average of 5 per cent. per patient—3 per cent. per patient in real terms.

Relevant information on provider prices is not available centrally. Fundholders' budgets represent their patients' fair share of local resources. It is for fundholding general practitioners, like health authority purchasers, to contract with hospitals to achieve the best balance of care for their patients.

Nurses

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many nurses were (a) qualified and (b) in training in (i) 1979 and (ii) the last year for which figures are available; what estimate she has made of the number of qualified nurses needed by the National Health Service in 2000; and what plans she has to meet this requirement. [28234]

Mr. Sackville: The figures for the number of nurses who were qualified and in training in 1979 are not available centrally.

For the number of qualified nurses in 1994, I refer the hon. Member to the United Kingdom Central Council for Nursing and Midwifery, which provides the information requested.

The number of nurses in training during the last year for which figures are available is shown in the 1993–94 annual report of the English National Board for Nursing and Midwifery, copies of which are available in the Library.

Estimates for the number of qualified nurses needed by the national health service in 2000 will be calculated from 1996–97 onwards. Action to ensure that the NHS has the number of qualified staff required, including those required to train, is primarily a responsibility for local employers.

Drug Misuse

Dr. Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make it her policy to impose greater controls on the use of illegal drugs in psychiatric hospitals. [29270]

Mr. Bowis: Drug misuse is serious wherever it takes place and psychiatric hospitals are as susceptible to these problems as other parts of the community. Providers of psychiatric services should develop agreed local policies to tackle on-site drug misuse.

Health Expenditure

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will specify the categories and amounts of expenditure on health, other than on spending on the national health service, contained within the estimates for health expenditures in (a) 1995–96 and (b) 1996–97, as set out in table 6A.3 of the "Financial Statement and Budget Report 1995–96." [28965]

Mr. Sackville: The information is shown in the table. The figures in table 6A.3 of the "Financial Statement and Budget Report" are for spending by the Department of Health and the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys combined, as the notes to the table make clear.

	1995–96	1996–97
National Health Service	31,971	32,937
Personal Social Services	43	42
Civil Defence	3	3
Central government grants to local authorities	760	114
Credit approvals	144	137
Total Department of Health	32,921	33,234
Office of Population Censuses and Surveys	36	38
Total DH and OPCS	32,957	33,271

Notes:

These details were published in the Departmental Report (Cm 2812) in March 1995.

Funding plans in the Financial Statement and Budget Report are by convention rounded to the nearest £10 million.

The apparent decrease in central government grants to local authorities between 1995–96 and 1996–97 is because resources for local authorities' new community care responsibilities for 1996–97 are currently held in the Department of the Environment's local government programme.

Section 64 Grants

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the amounts received by organisations which receive a grant from her Department for each of the last five years. [28969]

Mr. Bowis: The Department makes a large number of grants to voluntary organisations. The main channel is the section 64 general scheme. For details of grants given in 1990–91, 1991–92, 1992–93 and 1994–95 I refer the hon. Member to the replies given to my hon. Friend the Member for Hendon, South (Mr. Marshall) by my right hon. Friend the Member for Loughborough (Mr. Dorrell) on 21 May 1991) at column 435-39; the reply given to the hon. Member for Paisley, South (Mr. McMaster) by my hon. Friend for Bolton, West (Mr. Sackville) on 18 January 1993 at column 96; the reply I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Dover (Mr. Shaw) on 21 June 1993 at column 34-39; and the reply I gave the hon. Member for Barking (Mrs. Hodge) on 5 April 1995 at column 1212. Details of grants given during 1993–94 will be placed in the Library.

Leukaemia

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what Government-funded research is being undertaken into leukaemia and other bone marrow related diseases. [29087]

Mr. Malone: The main agency through which the Government support biomedical and clinical research is the Medical Research Council (MRC), which receives its grant-in-aid from the office of my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster. In 1993–94, the latest year for which figures are available, the MRC spent a total of £5,084,000 on research directly related to leukaemia. In addition, a further £796,000 was spent on a number of research projects of relevance to bone marrow disease and transplantation.

The Childhood Cancer Research Group—CCRG—funded by the Department at the University of Oxford, is responsible for the national registry of childhood tumours and carries out a programme of epidemiological studies of childhood cancer and leukaemia, together with follow-up studies of children treated for these diseases. The Department funds the CCRG by some £350,000 per year.

Pollution

Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what reports she has commissioned or evaluated on asthma development and air quality with particular reference to pollution from road traffic. [29090]

Mr. Sackville: The independent expert Committee on the Medical Effects of Air Pollutants (COMEAP) advises Government on the health effects of air pollution. At the request of the Department of Health, COMEAP established an expert sub-group to undertake a major review of asthma and air pollution. This group will report later in 1995.

Medical Cost Inflation

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is her estimate of the rate of medical cost inflation in each of the year since 1993–94; and what it is in the current year. [28966]

Mr. Sackville: There is no separate measure of medical cost inflation. The retrospective measure of current inflation in the hospital and community health services in 1993–94 is provisionally estimated at 3.4 per cent. Estimates for later years are not yet available.

St. Helier Hospital, Wimbledon

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many official complaints the health service authorities have received about practices or procedures in the St. Helier hospital, Wimbledon, in each year since 1990. [29867]

Mr. Malone: This information is not available centrally. The hon. Member may wish to contact Sir Jeremy Elwes, chairman of St. Helier national health service trust, for details.

Medical Workforce Standing Advisory Committee

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary for Health when she expects the Medical Workforce Standing Advisory Committee to make its second report; and what plans she has for providing funding for NHS spending associated with teaching and research in 1996–97. [30160]

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I am pleased to announce that the Medical Workforce Standing Advisory Committee has completed its second report. It is published today and copies will be placed in the Library.

Over the past two years, MWSAC has examined a wide range of issues that affect the medical profession. I am grateful to Sir Colin Campbell, the chairman, and the members of the committee for their continued work on forecasting long-term medical work force requirements. The Government accept the committee's main recommendation of a gradual increase in the United Kingdom target medical school intake from 4,470 to 4,970 by 2000. We will discuss its implementation with interested parties.

For 1995–96, as an interim measure, I increased by £40 million the service increment for teaching and research (SIFTR), which I announced on 22 November 1994 at column 489. SIFTR funds national health service spending in association with teaching and research so that these costs are not borne out of allocations for patient care. For 1996–97 I intend to transfer a further £40 million into the levies which will replace SIFTR.

From 1996–97, funding for NHS spending associated with teaching will be separated from that associated with research. The research element will form part of the single research and development budget described in the plan for implementing the recommendations of the NHS research and development task force published on 11 April 1995. Proposals for the teaching element—the service increment for teaching—were published for consultation on 23 May at column 518. I shall announce details of the way the £40 million increase for 1996–97 is to be allocated after the end of the consultation period.

London Ambulance Service

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many times the London ambulance service was called out in the past year; what is the current average response time of the London ambulance service; what are the comparable figures for the recent past; and if she will make a statement. [27977]

Mr. Sackville: Figures for 1993–94 and previous years are contained in the annual publication "Patient Transport Services, Summary information from form KA34", copies of which are available in the Library. My hon. Friend may wish to contact Mr. Martin Gorham, chief executive of the London ambulance service, for specific information.

Chronic Fatigue Syndrome

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the differences between the variety of conditions grouped under the acronym CFS. [27978]

Mr. Sackville: The Department recognises the use of the term chronic fatigue syndrome—CFS—for an as yet incompletely understood condition characterised by severe fatigue along with a range of other symptoms and signs. A number of definitions, disease descriptions or diagnostic criteria have been proposed for CFS but there is no general consensus amongst the professions and/or among patient groups as to which should be used. The report of the national task force on CFS. PVFS (post viral fatigue syndrome)/ME (myalgic encephalomyelitis) has considered matters concerning CFS, including the matter of nomenclature. With a view to securing progress and promoting the development of a professional consensus, the Chief Medical Officer has invited the Conference of Medical Colleges to consider the report. The views of the Conference of Medical Colleges will be of much assistance to the Department in helping to determine the best way forward.

Waiting Lists

Mr. Bill Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the number of patient fatalities amongst those on the waiting list for heart surgery in the latest period for which figures are available. [27980]

Mr. Malone: I refer the hon. Member to the reply my right hon. Friend the Member for Peterborough (Dr. Mawhinney), then the Minister for Health, gave the hon. Member for Bristol. South (Ms Primarolo) on 19 May 1994 at c. 557.

Road Traffic Act 1988

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much income was received by trusts as a result of charges levied under the Road Traffic Act 1988 for each year since 1988. [28107]

Mr. Sackville: This information is not available centrally.

Mental Health (Patients in the Community) Bill

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which organisations concerned with the needs of people with mental illness or their families have made representations expressing (a) support for and (b) opposition to her Mental Health (Patients in the Community) Bill; and if she will make a statement. [29526]

Mr. Bowis: Consultations did not take place on the Bill as such but on the three proposals for inclusion in it. We consulted widely on these. It is not possible to categorise the responses in the way referred to in the question, but the numbers indicating support for the principles of each of the three proposals substantially exceeded those expressing opposition.

National Blood Service

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she expects the National Blood Authority to submit to her Department its final recommendations for the re-organisation of the National Blood Service; and when the final report will be published. [29523]

Mr. Sackville: The National Blood Authority will submit its revised recommendations shortly. A copy of the authority's report will be placed in the Library as soon as the recommendations have been considered and announced.

Consultant Contracts

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) full time and (b) maximum part-time consultant contracts were held by regions for each year since 1990. [29525]

Mr. Malone: The table shows numbers of consultants on full-time and maximum part-time consultants in each region.

Supervision Registers

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which health authorities had introduced supervision registers by 1 May. [29527]

Mr. Bowis: Supervision registers have been established in all health districts. The National Health Service Executive is continuing to monitor the position to ensure that the registers are operating effectively.

Hospital League Tables

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many regional newspaper editors she expects to attend her briefing on the hospital league tables at the Department of Health; and what financial provision has been made for the provision of hospitality at this meeting. [29520]

Mr. Sackville: The number will depend on the level of acceptances. Light refreshments will cost around £5 a head.

Prescriptions

Mr. Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answers of 15 June, Official Report, columns 623–24, on prescriptions, what is the difference between the figure of £909 million for 1993 and the figure for the total net ingredient costs of all 100 items in the list she regards as "Commercial; in Confidence;" and if she will make a statement. [29927]

Mr. Malone: The data supplied to Chester and Ellesmere Port community health council differed from information supplied in my answer of 15 June for two reasons:

The information supplied to the community health council was for drugs only and excluded dressings and appliances. The information supplied on 15 June was based on all prescription items.

There was also an error in the extraction of data supplied to the community health council which resulted in the exclusion of six drugs from the top 100 and, consequently, in the inclusion of six others with lower total net ingredient cost.

EMPLOYMENT

Labour Market Policy

Mr. Macshane: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list the federations of employers with whom he regularly meets to discuss labour market policy. [26643]

Miss Widdecombe: My right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State meets many organisations representing both employers and employees such as the Confederation of British Industry and Trade Union Congress, from time to time, and discusses a wide range of labour market issues with them.

Decency Threshold

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many and what percentage of the working population earns less than the threshold level of the lowest acceptable wage as assessed by the Committee of Independent Experts. [27656]

Mr. Oppenheim: The Council of Europe's so called decency threshold has not been accepted by any EU Government and was not accepted by the United Kingdom when it was introduced in 1977. The threshold for the UK was £221.50 per week in April 1994 and 32 per cent. of the full-time working population earn less than this.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many written parliamentary questions were tabled for answer by his Department in each of the past five years; and how many of these were not answered because the information (a) could be obtained only at disproportionate cost, (b) was not held centrally and (c) was not normally disclosed; how many of these could now be answered due to computerisation, more effective and efficient operational systems or more open government; and if he will list each question along with the name and constituency of the right hon. or hon. Member who originally tabled it. [28511]

Miss Widdecombe: The information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what percentage of parliamentary questions, which would have been answered directly by him or his Ministers prior to the establishment of executive agencies, are now referred to the chief executive of such an agency. [28491]

Miss Widdecombe: Ministers are accountable to Parliament for all matters concerning their agencies. Written parliamentary questions concerning matters which have been delegated to the chief executive of an executive agency in its framework document, normally receive a reply from the Minister to the effect that he or she has asked the chief executive to reply to the hon. Member by letter. The chief executive's letter is published in Hansard below the Minister's reply.

Health and Safety Executive

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment, what time was spent by the Health and Safety Executive's DSI grade on standard setting work in each of the national interest groups. [29210]

Mr. Oppenheim: The information requested can be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment when the industry advisory committees will be consulted about the recommendations of the Health and Safety Executive's management arrangements feasibility study as they affect (a) the area office network and (b) the national interest group structure. [29226]

Mr. Oppenheim: Industry advisory committees will not be specifically consulted about the recommendations of the Health and Safety Executive's field operations division management arrangements feasibility study.

However, relevant industry advisory committees will be consulted about any implications for them which may arise from a review of national interest groups now in progress.

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the percentage contact time spent by principal factory inspectors in (a) the London South area office and (b) the Nottingham area office of the Health and Safety Executive between 1 April 1994 and 1 April 1995. [29209]

Mr. Oppenheim: The contact time by principal factory inspectors as a percentage of their total available time between 1 April 1994 and 31 March 1995 averaged 15.1 per cent. in the north midlands (Nottingham) area, and in the London South area averaged 10.5 per cent.

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what changes to the Health and Safety Executive's efficiency or effectiveness have arisen from the recommendations of the management arrangements feasibility study. [29225]

Mr. Oppenheim: Recommendations of the management arrangements feasibility study remain the subject of consultation with Health and Safety Executive staff. No decisions have yet been made by HSE about their implementation.

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what information the Health and Safety Executive will maintain on the new FOCUS computer system on (a) the number of visits undertaken by inspectors and (b) the time spent on these visits; and what information of this type the Health and Safety Executive currently maintains on its existing computer system. [29219]

Mr. Oppenheim: FOCUS will record all visits by inspectors, and doctors and nurses, in the Health and Safety Executive's field operations division. It will record the time spent on each of these visits, and will provide an aggregate.

There are currently different recording systems for different disciplines within FOD. Whilst all enable aggregate time spent on planned activities to be assessed, only one isolates visit time.

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment, how many (a) doctors and (b) nurses were employed by EMAS in each of the Health and Safety Executive's area offices on (a) 1 April 1994 and (b) 1 April 1995. [29211]

Mr. Oppenheim: The following tables show the number of doctors and nurses of the employment medical advisory service working in each of the Health and Safety Executive's area offices on 1 April 1994 and 1 April 1995.

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list the categories of information made available for public scrutiny by the Health and Safety Executive under the open government provisions; and if he will list the location and format in which each category of information is available. [29081]

Mr. Oppenheim: Under the commitments in the code of practice on access to Government information and the requirements on the Environmental Information Regulations 1992, the Health and Safety Executive makes publicly available on request all health, safety and environmental information it holds, subject to the exempted categories of information in the code, the excepted categories of information in the regulations and any other statutory restrictions on the disclosure of information it holds.

Requests may be made to HSE's Sheffield information centre or to any HSE area office. Information will be provided in the format requiring the least use of public resources.

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many visits were made by the Health and Safety Executive's factory and agricultural inspectorates in the 12 months to 1 April. [29218]

Mr. Oppenheim: The Health and Safety Executive's field operations division factory, agricultural and quarries inspectorates carried out 136,889 planned inspection visits in 1994–95.

Travel-to-interview scheme

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) if he will list the general grounds for rejection of financial assistance from the travel-to-interview scheme; [29203]

(2) how many applications have been received, on a regional basis, for financial assistance from the travel-to-interview scheme since its inception; what is the total cost of the scheme; and what is the total budget allocation for the scheme; [29201]

(3) how many appeals have been held as a result of rejection of financial assistance from the travel-to-interview scheme; and how many times the rejection of financial assistance has been overturned on appeal; [29204]

(4) how many applications, on a regional basis, for financial assistance from the travel-to-interview scheme have been rejected since its inception. [29202]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for the subject of the questions has been delegated to the Employment Service Agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from M. E. G. Fogden to Mr. Ian McCartney, dated 20 June 1995:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your questions on the Travel to Interview Scheme (TIS).

The Travel to Interview Scheme helps unemployed people attend job interviews beyond normal daily travelling distance by meeting the costs of the journey, and where necessary the costs of an overnight stay. In accordance with the rules of the scheme, the general grounds for rejection of applications are as follows:

application was not made in advance;

applicant was not unemployed for four weeks or more;

interview was not beyond normal daily travelling distance;

applicant was not resident in the area for the past four weeks;

job was for less than 30 hours per week;

job was not expected to last for more than 12 months;

job was for self-employment;

the salary was above £25,000 limit;

interview was not in the United Kingdom;

no help can be given for second or subsequent interviews.

However, I should explain that we are presently testing changes to the rules in the North West region. The changes include the removal of the salary limit, help with second and subsequent interviews, help for some self-employed jobs, and a more relaxed interpretation of the 12 month rule.

The scheme was introduced in late 1986. The total cost of the scheme between April 1987–March 1995 has been £8.7m enabling attendance at over 395,000 interviews. The allocation of funds for 1995/96 amounts to £2.2m.

The normal process for appeals against rejected TIS applications operates on two levels. Initially, applicants can ask for their case to be reconsidered by the jobcentre manager. Where the jobcentre manager endorses the original decision and the applicant is still dissatisfied with the explanation, a final appeal can be made to the Employment Service Head Office.

I cannot give you the total number of appeals for Head Office consideration since the schemes's inception, as records are kept for 2 years only. The following figures cover the period from April 1993–March 1995:

appeals 34

number of rejections overturned on appeal 6

The number of appeals cleared at the local office level is not recorded.

The table below shows the number of applications made from April 1987–March 1995 and the number of applications rejected by region.

Regions	Applications made from April 1987–March 1995	Applications rejected from April 1987–March 1995
Northern	36,989	7,485
Yorkshire and Humberside	40,510	9,188
East Midlands and Eastern	40,540	10,620
London and South East	56,045	13,040
South West	37,328	9,437

Regions	Applications made from April 1987–March 1995	Applications rejected from April 1987–March 1995
Wales	27,081	7,843
West Midlands	29,311	7,429
North West	61,827	10,713
Scotland	54,245	13,117

I hope this is helpful.

Correspondence

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment when the hon. Member for Rugby and Kenilworth may expect a definitive reply to the matter raised in his letters of 23 March, 28 April and 2 June. [28942]

Miss Widdecombe: I will look into the circumstances of this case as a matter of urgency and will write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Offshore Installations

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the estimated number of operational safety cases for new offshore installations, or mobile installations entering United Kingdom waters for the first time, which will be submitted to the Health and Safety Executive in each of the next three years. [29077]

Mr. Oppenheim: The Health and Safety Executive estimates that a total of 15 to 20 cases for offshore installations and mobile installations entering UK waters for the first time will be submitted in each of the next three years.

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many (a) improvement notices and (b) prohibition notices have been issued by the offshore safety division of the Health and Safety Executive in each year since 1991. [29075]

Mr. Oppenheim: The figures are as follows:

Year	Improvement notices	Prohibition notices
1 April 1991 to 31 March 1992	0	2
1 April 1992 to 31 March 1993	19	5
1 April 1993 to 31 March 1994	22	3
1 April 1994 to 31 March 1995	34	5
1 April 1995 to 8 June 1995	3	0

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the expected number of well operations notifications per month which will be submitted to the offshore safety division of the Health and Safety Executive under the provisions of regulation 11 of the Offshore Installations (Safety Case) Regulations 1992; and what is the HSE's planned personnel allocation to the handling of these notifications. [29079]

Mr. Oppenheim: The Health and Safety Executive estimates that around 65 well notifications will be submitted per month.

Sixteen staff who are currently engaged on approving well consents will be employed in managing the notification scheme when this comes into effect. The offshore safety division is also able to draw on further specialist staff as required.

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment when the first revised safety case is due to be submitted to the Health and Safety Executive under the provisions of regulation 9(4) of the Offshore Installations (Safety Case) Regulations 1992; and how many such revised safety cases are expected to be submitted to the HSE in each of the subsequent three years. [29078]

Mr. Oppenheim: The first revised safety case due to be submitted under the provisions of regulation 9(4) of the Offshore Installations (Safety Case) Regulations 1992 is expected to be submitted in January 1997. from 1997 onwards the Health and Safety Executive estimates that 60 revised safety cases will be submitted in each of the next three years.

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many offshore installation safety cases have been submitted to the offshore safety division of the Health and Safety Executive to date; and how many of these have been formally accepted by the Health and Safety Executive. [29076]

Mr. Oppenheim: At 31 May 1995, a total of 260 safety cases for offshore installations had been submitted to the Health and Safety Executive, of which 17 were design safety cases which are not formally accepted by HSE. At the same date, 102 safety cases had been accepted by HSE.

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many exemptions have been granted to the time deadline requirements for safety case submission, as provided for in regulation 17(2) (a) of the Offshore Installations (Safety Case) Regulations 1992. [29080]

Mr. Oppenheim: No exemptions have been requested or granted to the time deadline requirements for safety case submission, as provided for in regulation 17(2) (a).

Foreign Companies

Mr. Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list the top 25 foreign companies in the United Kingdom by the total numbers of personnel employed. [29868]

Mr. Oppenheim: The Statistics of Trade Act 1947 prohibits the disclosure of information which could be identified as relating to an individual employer. In the circumstances, I cannot provide the information requested.

Ministerial Visit, Manchester

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment when he next intends to visit the Greater Manchester area to discuss matters relating to employment with local authority representatives. [29872]

Miss Widdecombe: My right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State, will next visit Stockport and Manchester on Wednesday 21 June 1995 when he shall discuss employment matters with people from a cross section of employment and training organisations. He has no specific plans to meet representatives from local authorities separately.

Training-for-Work

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what advice his Department gives to unemployed people in the Greater Manchester area who cannot find places on the training-for-work programmes. [29870]

Miss Widdecombe: There are a large number of training places for those seeking them, and for whom training is the best course of action, but training is not necessarily the priority need for all unemployed people. That is why all Employment Service offices offer a structured and coherent advisory service, which is aimed at helping people back into work as soon as possible. ES provides unemployed people with information and advice about the full range of jobs, training and other programme opportunities available to them. About 1.5 million opportunities are available through ES this year.

Sheep Dips

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment with what frequency, and with what sanctions, inspectors from the Health and Safety Executive monitor the adherence of sheep farmers to the advice contained in the HSE leaflet "Sheep Dipping", reference AS29 revised. [29735]

Mr. Oppenheim: The frequency of visits by Health and Safety Executive inspectors is prioritised on the basis of a number of factors: these include the risks to those at work or the public. Around 30,000 visits per year are made to agricultural premises, though not all of these will, of course, be sheep farms.

Where inspectors find poor conditions the available sanctions range from verbal or written advice to improvement and prohibition notices and, in extreme cases, prosecution.

Unemployment, Manchester

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what discussions he has had with other EU employment Ministers on measures to reduce unemployment in the Greater Manchester area. [29871]

Miss Widdecombe: My right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State and I regularly discuss employment matters with our fellow Employment Ministers at the Social Affairs Council. We consistently urge them to make job creation the first priority and not to pursue new restrictions and regulations which can only destroy jobs. Our aim is to improve employment prospects in all areas of Britain, including Greater Manchester.

Charter Week

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what are the main events he is proposing for Charter Week; what is the total cost to public funds; and how many (a) civil servants and (b) other public officials will be playing a part. [29884]

Miss Widdecombe: A number of events are planned to coincide with the fourth anniversary of the citizens charter, including:

local events organised by the Employment Service, for example, to promote services for long-term unemployed people and to launch client consultation groups on a pilot basis; publication of revised versions of the Health and Safety Executive's two key statements of service standards.

These activities were planned as part of normal departmental business, although in some instances the timing has been adjusted to coincide with Charter Week and the charter content has been made more explicit. There will be no additional cost or staff resources required as a result of holding the events in July. The officials concerned will be working on the events as part of their normal duties.

Working Abroad

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many United Kingdom citizens were working abroad in each of the last 10 years. [29280]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 19 June 1995]: The information requested is not available.

Redundancies

Mr. Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) on how many occasions in each of the last five years he has taken action against employers failing to notify his Department of impending redundancies under section 193 of the Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992; and what action was taken on each occasion; [29452]

(2) on how many occasions in each of the last five years he has learned of failures by employers to notify his Department of impending redundancies under section 193 of the Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992. [29451]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 19 June 1995]: Information on the number of allegations of an employer's failure to notify my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State in accordance with section 193 of the Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992 is not recorded, though appropriate inquiries are made in such cases. The number of instances in each of the last five years where the Department was notified, but where the notification did not fully meet the requirements of section 193 of the Act is as follows:

1992: 4,724

In each case an explanation was sought and the full requirements of the legislation brought to the employer's attention. The legislation provides that where it is not reasonably practical to comply with the full requirements, the employer should take all reasonable steps to comply as far as possible. Taking account of this, it has not so far been found appropriate to prosecute an employer.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Business Appointment Rules

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what steps are being taken to monitor conditions imposed under the business appointment rules; and if conditions are made known to those offering appointments to which conditions are applied. [29168]

Mr. Horam: Conditions are monitored through routine contact between former employing departments and new employers or their competitors. The Government are considering the recommendation of the Committee on Standards in Public Life that the operation, observance and objectives of the business appointment rules should be reviewed. Conditions are made known to new employers where appropriate.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will place a copy of the business appointment rules in the Library. [29163]

Mr. Horam: The business appointment rules form part of the civil service management code, a copy of which is already in the Library.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what is the membership of the Advisory Committee on Business Appointments, the number of meetings attended by each member during the year 1994–95 and the total cost of remuneration or compensation to the membership of the committee in 1994–95. [29165]

Mr. Horam: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Sunderland, South (Mr. Mullin) on 23 May 1995, Official Report column 535. The committee met twice during 1994–95; it handles the bulk of its work by correspondence. Committee members do not receive remuneration or compensation.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what plans he has to introduce the possibility of a ban on the acceptance of an appointment under the business appointment rules. [29169]

Mr. Horam: None.

Charter Week

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what are the main events he is proposing for Charter Week; what is the total cost to public funds; and how many (a) civil servants and (b) other public officials will be playing a part. [29880]

Mr. Horam: A number of public service events are planned to coincide with the fourth anniversary of the citizens charter, including:

the publication of NHS performance tables for England, Wales and Northern Ireland;

the launch of the charter standard statement for community services in Northern Ireland;

the publication of the revised Customs and Excise travellers charter;

a reception for users who have nominated organisations for the 1995 charter mark and representatives of the nominated organisations; and the publication of the a guide to consultation.

There will be no additional cost or staff resources required as a result of holding these events in July. The officials concerned will be working on the events as part of their normal duties.

Contracting Out

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list those parts of his Department or departmental agencies which were privatised without an in-house bid; if he will indicate the expertise which was absent in his Department or departmental agencies which prevented an in-house bid taking place; which future parts of his Department or departmental agencies he intends to privatise; and which of them do not have the necessary in-house expertise to mount an in-house bid. [29422]

Mr. Horam: Those parts of the work of the Cabinet Office, its agencies, HMSO and COI which have been contracted-out without an in-house bid are as follows:

Agency
Central OPSS	Consortium Reports
	Publishing and Print Procurement Service
CCTA	GTN (Long-Distance)
Chessington	UNISON (Phase 1)
CS College	Prospectus Distribution
RAS	Catering Services
	Cleaning Services
	IT Hardware Maintenance
	IT Software Support Services
HMSO	Print Order Processing System
	Software Development: Business Supplies
	Software Development: Finance
COI	Videotext Unit

The Cabinet Office, its agencies, HMSO and COI have contracted-out activities without inviting in-house bids where it has been judged that the private sector is clearly better equipped to deliver a specific service, has a better understanding of market needs, or the capacity to invest in new technology. Other decisions to contract-out services without inviting in-house bids have been taken where an activity is relatively small and peripheral to the Department's functions.

There are no current plans to contract-out any activities within the Cabinet Office, its agencies, HMSO and COI without inviting an in-house bid.

Mr. Richards: The nutritional quality of school meals is a matter for local education authorities or, in some cases, the governing bodies of schools.

Business Start-up Scheme

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list those areas in Wales where no business start-up schemes are available for the unemployed. [28612]

Mr. Richards: All training and enterprise councils in Wales operate the business start-up scheme.

Complaints

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what use is made of complaints referred to his Department concerning the conduct and or practice of doctors within national health service hospitals; [28971]

(2) if he monitors complaints made against medical practitioners who work in the national health service; [28970]

(3) what advice his Department gives to health authorities in how they deal with complaints made against medical practitioners. [28972]

Mr. Richards: Guidance on the handling of complaints is issued to health authorities and trusts and is revised in the light of experience. The most recent advice from the Department is WHC(93)75. It is the responsibility of health authorities and trusts to investigate complaints and take action on matters involving the conduct or practice of doctors employed by them.

The Department monitors the number of complaints received by health authorities and trusts and publishes the information.

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what proportion of the work force in (a) Swansea, (b) West Glamorgan and (c) Wales is employed on a temporary basis. [29512]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Information on the work force employed on a temporary basis in Swansea and West Glamorgan is not available centrally. The latest available information for Wales is based on the labour force survey conducted in winter 1994–95—three months ending February 1995—and relates to employees rather than the work force. It estimates that 9 per cent. of employees of working age in Wales had jobs that were not permanent in some way.

National Museum of Wales

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what proposals he has to enable the national museum to expand its collection of fine art. [29637]

Mr. Richards: The national museum of Wales receives an annual specimen purchase grant from the Department; the amount for 1995–96 is £1,140,000. Decisions on how the grant is spent are a matter entirely for the museum.

Higher Education

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many people from Wales were studying at higher education institutions in the United Kingdom in (a) 1993–94 and (b) 1994–95; and if he will make a statement. [29032]

Mr. Richards: In 1994–95, provisional data suggest that there were 48,228 full-time and sandwich Welsh domiciled higher education students in the United Kingdom. The data were collected by the Higher Education Statistics Agency.

In 1993–94, only data for Welsh domiciled students at institutions in England and Wales are readily available. This total was 44,303 and represents the great majority of Welsh domiciled students. In 1994–95, only 556 Welsh domiciled students were at institutions in Scotland or Northern Ireland.

Student Degrees

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the proportion of students obtaining (a) first class and (b) upper second class degrees at (i) the university of Wales and (ii) Welsh higher education institutions as a whole in (1) 1991–92 and (2) 1992–93; and if he will make a statement. [29035]

Mr. Richards: The information available on the proportion of first degree students obtaining first class or upper second class honours degrees at the constituent colleges of the university of Wales and at higher education institutions in Wales is shown in the table:

SOCIAL SECURITY

Departmental Performance

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what performance indicators and performance targets there are for measuring the performance of his Department in (a) answering letters from members of the public and (b) answering telephone calls from members of the public; how performance is monitored; and what are the latest figures for performance measured against the target set; [26227]

(2) what policy and procedures exist for dealing with complaints against his Department by members of the public; when his Department last updated its policy; what time limit and target for dealing with such complaints his Department has; and what follow-up procedure exists where complaints are not satisfied with his Department's response to a complaint. [26211]

Mr. Hague: DSS headquarters aims to answer all correspondence within 20 working days of receipt. For the period 1 January 1995 to 31 May 1995, 12,317 replies to letters from members of the public were sent of which 83 per cent. were answered within this target. The public inquiry line handles telephone calls from members of the public. It aims to provide good quality answers to customers' inquiries rather than process a set quantity of telephone calls. Quality performance is continually monitored by electronically tracking the number of calls dealt with and by a supervisor routinely listening in to a number of calls. Staff also receive continuous training on information available in addition to regular specific assessment of their individual performance.

The responsibility for day-to-day operations, including the handling of letters, telephone calls and complaints from members of the public, rests with the chief executive of each agency. Each of them will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Ms Margaret Hodge, dated 19 June 1995:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions about our performance targets for answering telephone calls and letters, and our complaints procedure.

Over the past two years we have made many improvements in the service we can give to war pensioners. The launch of the War Pensions Agency in April 1994 included the publication of our first Charter Standard Statement, which defines service targets and standards including a complaints procedure if we fail to deliver the service we promise. Our published targets are:

> Telephone calls to War pensions Helpline answered within 30 seconds. If we cannot answer the question straight away, we will call back at a time convenient to the pensioner.
> Letters from the public acknowledged within 5 working days followed by a full response by letter or telephone within 10 working days.

The War Pensions Agency telephone Helpline provides the main point of contact for the whole of the Agency and is the number quoted on all correspondence and publicity material. It includes a new automatic call distribution system which amongst other things provides statistics for monitoring and target purposes.

Six months after Helpline was set up, we started a rolling programme of customer perception surveys. In December 1994, these showed that 93% of those asked said the service they received was either very good or good. In 1994/5 calls were answered within an average wait time of only 6.9 seconds and 95% of calls were answered within 30 seconds.

As part of our continued drive to improve standards of service, the use of customer satisfaction surveys are reflected in our business plans. We are currently awaiting results of the 1995 survey, including the area of correspondence, which will be carefully examined and improvement initiatives coordinated by the Total Quality Management team.

In 1994/5, 1781 replies were sent by our operational sections in respect of letters addressed to Ministers or myself with 95 per cent being sent within the 10 day target. The complaints system we now have in place, including a database of information, will enable us to monitor our targets for acknowledgement and replies in other areas of correspondence.

Turning to our complaints system, pensioners with concerns can telephone the War Pensions Helpline on 01253 858858, the Helpline staff will be only too pleased to answer the query.

Our Charter Standard Statement states that if things go wrong, any written complaint will be acknowledged within 5 working days, and a full reply sent within 10 working days. If we think it will take longer than this, we will write or telephone the person concerned to explain why and let them know when to expect a full reply to their complaint.

If a person is dissatisfied with the way the complaint has been dealt with, they can contact our Customer Service Manager. If, however, they are still not satisfied they can get in touch with me. Details of how to do this are contained within the Charter Standard Statement. In addition to this, a person can also ask their MP to refer their case to the Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration for investigation and review.

In addition to the formal complaints procedure, pensioners can discuss any concerns with the many ex-service organisations and we fully investigate any matters referred to us as a result. People can also, if they wish, discuss their cases with their local War Pensions Committee (WPC). These are independent of the Agency and are made up of members who are disabled ex-service persons, some of whom work for voluntary associations. Again, any recommendations may by the WPCs are fully considered. Information on how to contact ex-service organisations or the WPCs is contained in leaflets available from the Agency and our national network of War Pensioner's Welfare Service offices.

I hope you have found this information useful.

Contributions Agency

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security in what circumstances the Contributions Agency is sending out a form asking people why they believe they are in receipt of benefit. [29014]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Operational matters relating to the Contributions Agency are the responsibility of Mrs. Faith Boardman, the chief executive. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Mrs. Faith Boardman to Ms Dawn Primarolo, dated 19 June 1995:

As Chief Executive of the Contributions Agency, I have responsibility for answering questions about operational matters relating to the Agency and the National Insurance Scheme. I have been asked to reply to your question concerning forms sent to people asking why they believe they are in receipt of benefit.

Whilst there are no formally laid down circumstances in which this question is asked of a customer, there are occasions where it may be necessary to do so. For example, when the Agency is investigating non-payment of National Insurance contributions by self-employed contributors it is possible that the contributor may allege that he or she was, or is, in receipt of benefit. This might affect both the amount of National Insurance contributions outstanding and the course of action that the Agency will take. It may prove necessary in these circumstances to contact the person concerned for more information about any benefit claims.

Alternatively a person may learn, possibly from a notification issued by the Agency, that insufficient contributions were paid in a particular year to make that year qualify for benefit purposes, and may query this. It is possible that the customer may be entitled to credits for periods in which benefits were paid that could make up the shortfall. In investigating some of these cases it may be necessary to contact customers to obtain details of benefit claims so that their National Insurance records can be put right.

These two examples do not cover every eventuality which could result in such enquiries being made. And we avoid making such enquiries when we have enough information to resolve the customers enquiry internally. I hope these examples indicate why it is sometimes important, and in individual customers' own interests, that the Agency sometimes asks questions about benefit claims.

I hope that you will find this information useful. If I can be of any further assistance please let me know.

Social Fund

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the current average length of time taken to decide an application for assistance from the social fund in the Doncaster and Mexborough area of the Benefits Agency; what is the national average figure; and what were the comparable figures for 12 months ago. [28260]

Mr. Roger Evans: The administration of the social fund is a matter for Mr. Ian Magee, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member with such information as is available.

Letter from Ian Magee to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 19 June 1995:

The Secretary of State of Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the current average clearance times for applications to the Social Fund (SF), both nationally and in Doncaster and Mexborough.

When the Benefits Agency was established in April 1991, a major restructuring programme resulted in existing offices being grouped together to form Districts. Mexborough Branch Office is one office within the District of Rother and Dearne. Information has, therefore, been supplied for the Doncaster and Rother and Dearne Districts as figures for Mexborough cannot be given separately.

Unfortunately it is not possible to provide the current average length of time taken to decide an application for assistance from the SF. We are, however, presently looking at whether an average processing time would be a helpful way forward.

At present, our performance is measured against a standard time for processing each type of claim. This is based on the time it takes to clear the more straightforward of cases. For instance, for SF Maternity payment claims, we aim to process 65% in the standard time of 5 days. To ensure proper emphasis is given to the remaining claims, a secondary measure is set which in the same example is 95% in 20 days. Our performance measure for SF Crisis payments is that we aim to process the claim on the day it is received. We aim to achieve this in 95% of cases.

Appendices A - C outline the clearance times for the period 1 April 1993 to 31 March 1994 and 1 April 1994 to 31 March 1995. Appendix A outlines the national figures, Appendix B the Doncaster District and Appendix C the Rother and Dearne District figures.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Myalgic Encephalomyelitis

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what guidance he has issued regarding the assessment of debilitation caused by myalgic encephalomyelitis in relation to incapacity for work benefit; and if he will make a statement. [28575]

Mr. Hague: The administration of Incapacity Benefit is a matter for Mr. Ian Magee, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ian Magee to Mr. Gordon McMaster, dated 19 June 1995:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the guidance that has been issued regarding the assessment of debilitation caused by myalgic encephalomyelitis in relation to incapacity for work benefit.

No guidance has been issued as the basis of the new test of incapacity for work is the effect of a customer's medical condition on their ability to work and not the medical condition itself.

The new test provides an assessment of the effect of the medical condition on the person's ability to carry out a range of work-related activities. All medical conditions are addressed and the Benefits Agency Medical Services doctors involved have been provided with detailed and comprehensive training in all physical, sensory and mental conditions.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

War Pensions

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what information he has about the expected timetable for clearing the arrears of applications submitted for an allowance for lowered standard of occupation. [29013]

Mr. Arbuthnot: This is a matter for Mr. Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the War Pensions Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Robert Maclennan, dated 19 June 1995:

I am writing in reply to the Parliamentary Question that you raised concerning the clearance of arrears of applications for the Allowance for Lowered Standard of Occupation (ALSO).

Some 982 cases were stockpiled pending legal advice on how legislation should be applied. Following that advice, we were obliged to change the way in which we dealt with certain claims for ALSO.

We again began to process applications, under the new criteria, at the beginning of May and, as of this morning, 692 applications had been cleared. We expect to clear all but a small number of the remainder by the end of this month.

The only cases remaining will be those where we have not yet fully established how the criteria should be applied but we expect to resolve the outstanding questions very shortly and for those cases not to be be delayed much longer.

Income Support

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what research his Department has commissioned on the adequacy of income support rates for providing a balanced diet for pregnant women. [28806]

Mr. Roger Evans: No amounts are separately identified within income support for particular household budgetary items such as food.

Whatever the research, there has to be a subjective assessment of what is an appropriate level of benefits. This is especially true of diets where individual preferences vary substantially.

Income Support

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what assessment he has made of the effects on the special medical and dietary needs of the poorest sections of society of the changes in allowances implemented in the Social Security Act 1986, from April 1988, in Wales. [29153]

Mr. Hague: None. The 1988 reform of income-related benefits replaced a multiplicity of additions for special needs with a more rational and fairer structure of allowances and premiums for the most vulnerable and needy groups.

Vibration White Finger

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people have (a) claimed and (b) been awarded disablement benefit for vibration white finger PD A11, in consequence of exposure to vibration in the coal-mining industry. [28944]

Mr. Hague: Information is not readily available in the form requested and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. The available information is in the table.

Child Support Agency

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what research his Department has commissioned to assess the impact of the activities of the Child Support Agency in respect of encouraging lone parents into work; and when he expects to be able to publish the results. [29522]

Mr. Burt: The Department has commissioned a continuing research programme with the Policy Studies Institute to look at the circumstances of lone parents. Two reports have been published:

"Families, Work and Benefits", Marsh and McKay. PSI Publishing 1993.

"Lone parents and Work", McKay and Marsh. DSS Research Report No. 25.

A further study of lone parents is planned for 1995–96.

In addition, the Department has commissioned research by the Centre for Research in Social Policy at Loughborough university to investigate the incentives and disincentives to leaving income support. This will include information about lone parents and a report is expected to be published in the DSS series within the year.

The CSA aims to secure regular payment of maintenance, this will give lone parents a secure financial base from which they can make a decision about moving into employment.

Social Security Expenditure

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 13 June, Official Report, columns 293–94, if he will detail further the changes in his forecasting techniques which have lead to a further £1.7 billion saving in social security expenditure up to the year 2000–01. [29736]

Mr. Hague: The £1.7 billion saving in social security benefit expenditure in 2000–01 attributed to forecasting changes was due partly to the use of more up-to-date information in the later forecasts and partly to the use of improved forecasting techniques.

The improvements to forecasting techniques include the introduction of new models for forecasting housing benefit and the earnings-related component of retirement pension as well as improvements to the forecasting models for several other benefits including income support.

Appeals

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many appeals to the disability appeals tribunal have been waiting more than the average clearance time; what is the average; and what is the longest time an appeal to a disability appeal tribunal has been outstanding. [29873]

Mr. Hague: I have been informed by the president of the independent tribunal service that approximately 10,000 appeals have been waiting more than the average clearance time of 23 weeks and that the longest time an appeal has been outstanding is six years.

DEFENCE

Arms Exports

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) when his Department was informed that British arms were being exported to Iran via Singapore; and if he will make a statement; [29463]

(2) when his Department received notice of allegations that BMARC was exporting arms via Singapore to Iran. [29474]

Mr. Freeman: In 1991 my Department was made aware of allegations to this effect as a result of evidence given to Trade and Industry Select Committee.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the types of military equipment exported to Iran via Singapore by the British firm BMARC. [29464]

Mr. Freeman: As stated by my right hon. Friend, the President of the Board of Trade, on 13 June 1995 at columns 595–606, there may be grounds for believing that the final destination of GAM B01 naval guns, spares and associated ammunition exported by BMARC could have been Iran. This type of equipment is fitted in many surface ships of the Royal Navy and other naval forces including the Singaporean navy.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what representations were made to his Department during the period of the Iran–Iraq arms embargo to permit British arms to be sold to Singapore. [29466]

Mr. Freeman: The Ministry of Defence receives frequent inquiries from British companies who are interested in exporting defence equipment to Singapore or other countries. We do not keep records of all such inquiries.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the total value of arms exports sold to Singapore since 1980. [29467]

Mr. Freeman: It has been the policy of successive Governments not to reveal the value of defence exports to individual countries. However, the value of exports by geographic region is contained in table 1.11 of UK defence statistics.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what reports his Department has received that British arms exports are currently being sold to Iran through Singapore. [29468]

Mr. Freeman: It is not normally the practice of my Department to comment on intelligence reports. The possibility of British arms exports to Iran through Singapore, or other countries, is kept under regular review interdepartmentally and appropriate action taken.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the normal procedure undertaken by his Department following requests from the Department of Trade and Industry for information on British arms export licences; and if he will make a statement. [29469]

Mr. Freeman: The Department of Trade and Industry normally circulates export licence applications, to the FCO and MOD. Unless the exports concerned have already been the subject of MOD scrutiny they are normally circulated within MOD for the appropriate operational, security and intelligence assessments. A MOD view is then co-ordinated and sent back to the DTI.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what procedures his Department adopts to prevent British arms from being sold to Iran; and if he will list the changes to these procedures in the last 10 years. [29471]

Mr. Freeman: All export licence applications are looked at on a case-by-case basis, taking into account all the available evidence and our national and international policy commitments.

In the case of Iran, since December 1984, this has been undertaken by a Ministry of Defence working group and an interdepartmental committee, which includes representatives from FCO and DTI.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will make a statement on the duties of the Minister of State for Defence Procurement in the export procedures of British arms; [29472]

(2) what role the right hon. member for Thanet, South, (Mr. Aitken) had in respect of the export of arms to Singapore while acting as Minister for Defence Procurement. [29473]

Mr. Freeman: The Minister of State for Defence Procurement has responsibility within MOD for, inter alia, promoting defence exports within Government policy. He also has ministerial responsibility in relation to the advice on exports his Department gives to the Department for Trade and Industry, as licensing authority.

Sea Dart

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects the contract for the Sea Dart airframe refurbishment contract to be placed. [28887]

Mr. Freeman: A response to the single-source invitation to tender is currently the subject of detailed evaluation. Contract award will be dependent on the negotiation of an acceptable price which can be demonstrated as offering value for money.

RAF Redundancy Programme

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement about the RAF redundancy programme. [29449]

Mr. Freeman: A total of some 8,600 Royal Air Force redundancies are planned in two phases over 1995–96 and 1996–97. Those leaving in 1995–96 will be volunteers. Work is continuing on the composition of the second phase in 1996–97, which will be made up of volunteers and some compulsory redundancies. It is hoped that as many places as possible will be taken by volunteers.

Ballistic Missiles

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent discussions he has had with other members of NATO about ballistic missile defence. [28920]

Mr. Freeman: The NATO summit in January 1994 commissioned work to develop a NATO policy to address the risks posed by the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction and their means of delivery. Since then there have been regular meetings both bilaterally and multilaterally with allies in a number of fora to review all aspects of this problem, including ballistic missile defence. The most recent discussions were at the last defence planning committee in Brussels on 8 June.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is her Majesty's Government's policy towards the procurement of a ballistic missile defence system for the United Kingdom. [28922]

Mr. Freeman: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave on 12 June 1995, Official Report, column 364.

Multifunction Electronically Scanned Adaptive Radar

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement about the Mesar system and its application for ballistic missile defence. [28921]

Mr. Freeman: The multifunction electronically scanned adaptive radar is being developed with a number of air defence applications in mind, including most surface-to-air missile systems. It is also the key element of a technology demonstrator programme which, as I announced to the House on 18 October 1994, Official Report, column 239, could have an application for ballistic missile defence. This programme will take some two and half years to complete, including tests, and aims to develop technologies where the UK is an acknowledged world leader.

Eurofighter 2000

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his current estimate of the likely cost of each aircraft in the Eurofighter 2000 project. [29160]

Mr. Freeman: The current estimated unit production cost of the Eurofighter 2000 aircraft for the UK is £37.3 million at today's prices.

Service Personnel

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) service personnel, (b) retired officer grades and (c) other non-industrial civil servants were employed in each of the service areas dealing with quarterly or estates functions in each year since 1979. [28791]

Mr. Soames: Personnel data are not held for this particular function, and the information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Institute of Pathology and Tropical Medicine

Mr. Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many people are currently employed at the RAF Institute of Pathology and Tropical Medicine. [29886]

Mr. Soames: As at 16 June 1995, 16 civilian and 74 service personnel were employed there.

Charter Week

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the main events he is proposing for Charter Week; what is the total cost to public funds; and how many (a) civil servants and (b) other public officials will be playing a part. [29883]

Mr. Soames: A number of Ministry of Defence events are planned to coincide with the fourth anniversary of the citizens charter, including:

1 July: RAF Quedgley, Gloucester—Open Day

8–9 July: Wirral Show, Wallasey—Defence Policy Exhibition (DPE)

11–13 July: Great Yorkshire Show, Harrogate—DPE

16 July: RAF Sealand, Chester—Open Day

18–20 July: East of England Show, Peterborough—DPE

19–29 July: Royal Tournament, Earls Court

22–23 July: International Air Tattoo—DPE

These events were scheduled to take place as part of MOD's normal arrangements for keeping the public informed about defence policy and on what taxpayers' money is spent. No additional costs or staff resources will be required.

Gulf War Syndrome

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many ex-service personnel have been examined to date by his Department's medical personnel, or on behalf of his Department, concerning Gulf war syndrome. [28625]

Mr. Soames: To date a total of 270 individuals have been medically examined as part of my Department's Gulf war medical assessment programme, 190 of whom were former members of the armed forces at the time of their assessment.

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on Gulf war syndrome. [28623]

Mr. Soames: We continue to investigate the allegations of a Gulf war syndrome with scientific rigour, principally through a medical assessment programme. To date 270 veterans have been examined as part of the programme and any remaining veterans concerned about their health are encouraged to come forward for assessment by a service consultant. Preliminary findings of the assessment programme, published in the British Medical Journal on 22 April 1995, show that there is no evidence from these clinical examinations that United Kingdom Gulf personnel are suffering from any syndrome or unexplained pattern of illness.

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what financial and other assistance is made for ex-military personnel suffering from Gulf war syndrome. [28626]

Mr. Soames: There is comprehensive assistance for all ex-service personnel. In addition, those ex-service personnel who are concerned about their health as a result of service in the Gulf conflict have repeatedly been urged to come forward for a medical examination by a service consultant under my Department's Gulf war medical assessment programme. Financial assistance is available to help with the travel and subsistence costs of attending the programme. Veterans coming forward for assessment are given a comprehensive medical examination and offered a diagnosis.

As the prime responsibility for the health of former service personnel rests with the national health service a medical report is forwarded to the individual's civilian general practitioner to assist with further treatment.

Claims for compensation will of course be met by Department if it is proven that a liability in common law exists in respect of the claimed illnesses but to date no detailed grounds for such claims have been submitted by solicitors representing Gulf veterans.

Personnel discharged on medical grounds for whatever reason my be eligible for benefits under the armed forces benefit scheme. In addition, all former service personnel can apply to the War Pensions Agency of the Department of Social Security for a war disablement award if they consider that they are suffering a disability as a direct result of their armed forces service, including service in the Gulf conflict. To date 153 such awards have been made to Gulf veterans, although none is in respect of the alleged Gulf war syndrome. Finally, all former personnel have access to the various welfare organisations and charities associated with the services.

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many cases of Gulf war syndrome have been reported since 1990. [28624]

Mr. Soames: The first cases of the alleged Gulf war syndrome among United Kingdom Gulf veterans were reported in 1993. Since then, 302 individuals have responded to requests from my Department for those who are concerned about their health as a result of service in Operation Granby to come forward to examination under the Department's Gulf war medical assessment programme. Around 240 of these are from a group of some 530 individuals on whose behalf notification has been received from solicitors that they intend to make a claim against my Department in respect of illnesses alleged to result from service in the Gulf. Our investigations have not established any medical or scientific evidence to support a connection between Gulf war service and the reported illnesses.

Low Flying

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library a copy of the final report by the RAF Police into the alleged low flying incident over Barnoldswick and Earby in January. [28814]

Mr. Soames: No. Service police reports are prepared for internal purposes and are considered confidential to the Ministry of Defence. However, the conclusions and summaries of the findings of RAF Police investigations into alleged breaches of low flying regulations are provided to those Members of Parliament or individuals who report the incidents to my Department.

In the case in question, the hon. Member was provided with this information during the Adjournment debate on low-flying military aircraft on 28 April, Official Report, column 1159 and in the letter of 7 June from my noble Friend, the Under-Secretary of State for Defence.

Annual Reports

Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many inspecting grade officers of his Department's police were awarded box 4 assessments for their overall performance in their annual staff reports during the period between 1990 and 1994; and how many of these officers then had his Department's inefficiency procedure initiated against them. [28632]

Mr. Soames: Four inspecting officers were awarded box 4 assessments for their overall performance between 1990 and 1994. Only one had inefficiency procedures initiated against him.

Atlas Equipment Company

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what contracts his Department has placed with the Atlas Equipment Company based in London for periods for which information is available since 1979. [28996]

Mr. Freeman: According to the Defence Accounts Agency database the Procurement Executive has had no contact with any company of this name in London as far back as our current records date, which is to 1990.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many written parliamentary questions were tabled for answer by his Department in each of the past five years; how many of these were not answered because the information (a) could be obtained only at disproportionate cost, (b) was not held centrally and (c) was not normally disclosed; how many of these could now be answered due to computerisation, more effective and efficient operational systems or more open government; and if he will list each question along with the name and constituency of the right hon. or hon. Member who originally tabled it. [28515]

Mr. Soames: The information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Royal British Legion

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what public funds are available to branches of the Royal British Legion who wish to mount events to commemorate VJ day; and if he will make a statement. [28526]

Mr. Soames: Public funds are being made available only for Government sponsored events which are scheduled to take place in London, Belfast, Cardiff and Edinburgh. They are not available for local, privately organised events.

BMARC

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many documents seized by his Department's police from the offices of BMARC in April 1990 have been withheld for (a) security and (b) other reasons. [29662]

Mr. Soames: All the documents taken by the Ministry of Defence Police which previously belonged to Astra/BMARC, and of which we are aware, have been sent to the liquidators.

Arms Sources (Iran-Iraq War)

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment has been made by his Department on the source of arms used by the Iranian Government during the Iran-Iraq war; and if he will make a statement. [29470]

Mr. Freeman: My Department broadly agrees with the assessment contained in the 1987 edition of the SIPRI Yearbook on World Armament and Disarmament, which shows that some 40 countries supplied arms to Iran during 1980–86.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Farming Subsidies

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many farm holdings receive subsidy payments, excluding environmental and hill livestock compensatory allowances, in excess of (a) £30,000, (b) £40,000 and (c) £50,000 per annum. [28354]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 13 June 1995]: Farm holdings can receive subsidy payments under one or several schemes. Those holdings in England receiving payments under the sheep annual premium, suckler cow premium, beef special premium and arable area payments schemes which either together or separately exceeded the totals stated for the 1994 scheme year are as follows:

(a) £30,000: 10,857

(b) £40,000: 7,219

(c) £50,000: 5,055

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much money would be saved if farm subsidy payments, excluding environmental and hill livestock compensatory allowances, were capped at a ceiling of (a) £30,000 per holding, (b) £40,000 per holding and (c) £50,000 per holding per annum. [28355]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 13 June 1995]: Farm holdings can receive subsidy payments under one or several schemes.

The total sums paid under the sheep annual premium, suckler cow premium, beef special premium and arable area payments schemes, in respect of the 1995 scheme year, would have been reduced by the following amounts if the respective ceilings per holding had been applied:

Ceiling applied per holding £	Reduction in total payments £ million
30,000	350.4
(b)
40,000	261.7
(c)
50,000	201.1

Brent Spar

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what measure HMS Alderney is taking in respect of (a) monitoring pollution and (b) monitoring the activities of Greenpeace; [29181]

(2) for what reasons HMS Alderney is following the Shell flotilla towing the Brent Spar; and what task it is undertaking. [29180]

Mr. Soames: I have been asked to reply.

The Royal Navy ship which has been deployed to the area of Brent Spar has been asked to monitor the general situation. It has been taking no measures beyond this specifically to monitor pollution or Greepeace activity.

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Minister for Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how may (a) sheriff officers and (b) police officers are present on HMS Alderney on its current voyage following the Shell flotilla towing the Brent Spar. [29182]

Mr. Soames: I have been asked to reply.

The answer is none.

Ms Janet Anderson: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what is the political profile of justices of the peace on all benches under his jurisdiction. [29481]

Mr. David Hunt: The political breakdown of justices of the peace for benches in the counties of Lancashire, Greater Manchester and Merseyside is as follows:

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many written parliamentary questions were tabled for answer by his Department in each of the past five years; how many of these were not answered because the information (a) could be obtained only at disproportionate cost, (b) was not held centrally and (c) was not normally disclosed; how many of these could now be answered now due to computerisation; more effective and efficient operational systems or more open government; and if he will list each question along with the name and constituency of the right hon. or hon. Member who originally tabled it. [28509]

Mr. David Hunt: The information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what percentage of parliamentary questions, which would have been answered directly by him or his Ministers prior to the establishment of executive agencies, are now referred to the chief executive of such an agency. [28499]

Mr. David Hunt: Ministers are accountable to Parliament for all matters concerning their agencies. Written parliamentary questions concerning matters which have been delegated to the chief executive of an executive agency in its framework document normally receive a reply from the Minister to the effect that he or she has asked the chief executive to reply direct to the Member by letter. The chief executive's letter is published in Hansard after the Minister's reply.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Legal Aid

Mr. Hutton: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, pursuant to his answer of 14 June, Official Report, column 519, what was the total amount of fraudulent legal aid claims made by solicitors in each of the last five years; how much was recovered in each year; and how many cases resulted in criminal prosecutions and conviction. [29707]

Mr. John M. Taylor: It is not possible to quantify the total amount of fraudulent legal aid claims made by solicitors in each of the last five years. This is because there may well be an element within the total amount of the claims under suspicion which may relate to work actually and reasonably done by the solicitor. In addition, it is very difficult to identify fraud separately from claims made outside the regulations either through abuse, misuse, ignorance or incompetence. The number of cases involving solicitors and/or their employees prosecuted in the past five years is shown in the table, together with the outcome of those proceedings:

Financial year	Cases	Number of solicitors/employees prosecuted	Outcome
1990–91	3	7	4 convictions 3 acquittals
1991–92	2	3	3 convictions
1992–93	2	2	1 conviction 1 acquittal
1993–94	4	4	3 convictions 1 acquittal
1994–95	1	1	1 jury failed to agree —acquitted at retrial

The amounts recovered either by order of the court or by the board's investigation section, in each of the last five years were as follows:

1991–92: £2,853
1992–93: £20,153
1993–94: £143,001
1994–95: £524,276

Judiciary

Mr. Allen: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will update the information given in his answer of 7 February 1994, Official Report, column 11, to the hon. Member for Nottingham, North regarding the composition of the judiciary. [28889]

Mr. John M. Taylor: The information relating to numbers of men, women, barristers and solicitors in post, correct as at 1 June 1995, is set out in table 1. The figures for black and Asian office holders are believed to be correct, but the formal recording of the ethnic background of applicants for judicial office began only on 1 October 1991, so such information may be incomplete. Aggregated information is not generally kept on the average ages of judges. The information supplied on 7 February 1994 was available as a result of a special exercise, which has not since been repeated, and no new information is readily available. Aggregated information is not generally kept about the educational background of judges, but the results of a recent special exercise in relation to the university background of the more senior levels of the judiciary, as at 26 May 1995, is set out in table 2.

ENVIRONMENT

National Rivers Authority

19. Dr. Goodson-Wickes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what consultations he has had over the future of the NRA within the proposed environment agency. [28045]

Mr. Gummer: The integrated environment agency has been welcomed in all parts of the House and by the environmental bodies. We are now consulting on the options for the geographical and managerial structure.

Empty Houses

21. Mr. Hendry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the latest information he has on the number of empty houses in England. [28047]

Mr. Gummer: Local authorities estimated in their 1994 housing investment programme returns that there are some 845,000 empty properties in England.

Right to Buy

22. Mr. Purchase: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what measures he proposes to assist council leaseholders of former council high-rise dwellings with service charges. [28048]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: My hon. Friend the Minister for Local Government, Housing and Urban Regeneration announced on Monday the introduction of a package of measures to help local authorities to assist leaseholders, including a good practice guide on service charges, a more flexible form of mortgage indemnity agreement and an exchange sale scheme.

35. Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many houses have been bought by their tenants under right-to-buy legislation; and if he will make a statement. [28065]

Mr. Curry: In England, almost 1.25 million homes have been sold under the right to buy up to the end of 1994. The figure for Great Britain as a whole is more than 1.6 million.

House Repossessions

24. Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many houses were repossessed in each year since 1990; and if he will make a statement. [28050]

Mr. Curry: Figures published by the Council of Mortgage Lenders show that the number of properties taken into possession in each year since 1990 is as follows:

1991: 75,540
1992: 68,540
1993: 58,540

These figures show that the number of properties taken into possession in 1994 was the lowest since 1990 and 35 per cent. lower than the peak in 1991.

27. Mr. Roy Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his latest estimate of the number of households likely to lose their home through repossession for mortgage arrears in the next 12 months. [28054]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: The Government do not make predictions about future levels of repossessions, but I am pleased to note from the latest figures published by the Council of Mortgage Lenders that the number of properties taken into possession in 1994 was the lowest since 1990 and 25 per cent. lower than the peak in 1991.

Social Housing

25. Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his estimate of the likely need for social housing in Britain up to 2001. [28052]

Mr. Curry: The analysis released by the Department last month to the Environment Select Committee suggests the additional demand for new social lettings lies within the range 60,000 to 100,000 units a year.

Planning Policy

26. Mr. Gunnell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received regarding his review of planning policy. [28053]

Sir Paul Beresford: I refer the hon. Member to my oral answer to the hon. Member for Delyn (Mr. Hanson) earlier today.

34. Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement about the implementation of planning policy guidance notes 6 and 13. [28064]

Sir Paul Beresford: PPG6 is currently being revised. I hope to issue it for consultation next month. A guide to better practice, to help implement PPG13, will be issued in the early autumn. Research is under way to monitor the implementation of PPG13.

Mr. Hoon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received regarding his review of planning policy. [28049]

Sir Paul Beresford: The only review that my right hon. Friend proposes is to revise PPG6, on which he has received a number of representations.

Water Metering

30. Ms Coffey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has had about compulsory water metering of the business premises by North West Water. [28057]

Sir Paul Beresford: None.

Regional Government

31. Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received about the need to introduce regional government in the east of England. [28058]

Mr. Gummer: I have received no representations on this issue.

Energy Conservation

32. Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the estimated amount of energy saved, to date, as a result of his Department's "Wasting Energy Costs the Earth" campaign. [28059]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: The "Wasting Energy Costs the Earth" campaign, launched in October last year, aims to raise public awareness and encourages action to save energy in the home, as part of the United Kingdom's climate change programme. A full assessment of the campaign's effectiveness will be made when it is completed.

Standard Spending Assessment, St. Helens

33. Mr. John Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will pay an official visit to St. Helens to discuss standard spending assessments. [28062]

Mr. Gummer: I have no plans to visit St Helens. If there are any proposals that St. Helens wishes to make as to how the standard spending assessment methodology could be improved, I suggest that these are passed to the Association of Metropolitan Authorities for discussion at the SSA sub-group.

Landfill

36. Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what are the implications for the United Kingdom of the recent changes made in the EU draft directive on landfill of waste by the European Parliament in report A-4 0082/95. [28066]

Mr. Atkins: There are no implications for the United Kingdom of the report to the European Parliament by the Committee on the Environment, Public Health and Consumer Protection. This recommended acceptance of the Council's proposal to amend the legal basis of the draft landfill directive from article 100A of the treaty of Rome to article 130S. The United Kingdom supported this change in Council. The European Parliament has now agreed to the change of legal base.

Private Rents

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the average rent paid by tenants of private landlords; and what the figure was in 1978–79 in actual and real terms. [28055]

Mr. Curry: The average weekly rent paid by tenants of private landlords in England is £60. The average weekly rent in 1978–79 was £6.30, equivalent to £17 a week at 1993–94 prices.

Air Quality

Mr. Dowd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to reduce levels of air pollution in London. [28056]

Mr. Atkins: The Government have put forward amendments to the Environment Bill to implement a new framework for air quality management, and will publish later this year their draft national strategy for improving air quality throughout the United Kingdom.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what proposals he has for revising the air quality banding system in order to make it readily understandable by the public. [29489]

Mr. Atkins: I shall shortly be publishing a consultation paper proposing revisions to the Department of the Environment's air quality bulletin service.

Rural Water and Sewerage Services

Mr. Stern: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will announce what action the Government intend to take on the recommendations in the review of rural water supply and sewerage in England and Wales following the consultation exercise on the review's findings last year. [30236]

Mr. Atkins: The Government accept the review's recommendations affecting existing development. In taking them forward, my right hon. Friend will be introducing today into the Environment Bill amendments to the Water Industry Act 1991. These will put a new requirement on sewerage undertakers to provide public sewers to be used for the drainage for domestic purposes of premises in any locality in its area where there are problems arising from the existing system, and mains connection is the most satisfactory and most effective solution.

In the event of any dispute, there will be a right to apply to the new Environment Agency to rule on whether there is a case for extending the mains sewerage network. The agency will also have the power to direct a statutory sewerage undertaker to extend the mains sewerage network in a locality by a due date. The costs will be spread across all the customers for the area of that undertaker. It is intended that these powers will relate only to existing properties and will not cover future development. The Government will issue guidance to sewerage undertakers and the agency on how to address these issues.

From the date the provisions come into force, section 151 of the Water Industry Act 1991, which makes provision for the current grant regime, will be repealed and the Government will no longer pay grant towards first-time mains water supply and sewerage, but provision will be made to allow for existing commitments to be met. The reason for this is that the Government consider that mains water connection has reached its natural limits, and that better provisions are required for first-time sewerage services.

The Government will be pursuing those recommendations arising from the review which relate to the issue of further guidance about the potential problems from new development served by non-mains sewerage, and how best to prevent those problems.

In addition, other recommendations arising from the review will also be pursued, including discussing with the Director General of Water Services the operation of inset appointments and encouraging the environment agency to continue the detailed mapping of groundwater vulnerability.

Privatisation

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list those parts of his Department or departmental agencies which were privatised without an in-house bid; if he will indicate the expertise which was absent in his Department or departmental agencies which prevented an in-house bid taking place; which future parts of his Department or departmental agencies he intends to privatise; and which of them do not have the necessary in-house expertise to mount an in-house bid. [29421]

Sir Paul Beresford: Since April 1992, the Department's agencies, Property Holdings and the Planning Inspectorate, strategically contracted out—that is, without an in-house bid—two areas of work:

Property Holdings: Professional Property Services

Planning Inspectorate: IT Project Management

All the central Department's activities under the "Competing for Quality" initiative so far have involved in-house bids.

No decisions have been taken on which additional areas of work may be suitable for contracting out without an in-house bid.

Contracting out without an in-house bid can occur for example when a Department judges that the private sector is clearly better equipped to deliver a specific service, has a better understanding of market needs or has capacity to invest in new technology. A strategic decision to contract out could also be taken where an activity has not previously been performed in-house or where an activity may be relatively small and peripheral to a Department's functions.

Community Charge Registers

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has on the number of times per year addresses were changed on the community charges registers held by London boroughs during the operation of the poll tax; and if he will make a statement. [29768]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: None. The maintenance of community charge registers was a matter for local authorities.

Sites of Special Scientific Interest

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many sits of special scientific interest have been (a) wholly and (b) partially affected by residential, industrial or other development in the past 10 years. [29643]

Mr. Atkins: The information is not available in the form requested. Between 1 April 1984 and 31 March 1991 statistical information on damage to SSSIs in Great Britain is set out in the annual reports of the former Nature Conservancy Council. Since 1 April 1991 similar detail for England is contained in English Nature's annual reports. Copies of annual reports are in the Library.

Local Government, Wiltshire

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will implement in full the recommendations for Wiltshire of the Local Government Commission, with particular reference to parish council status to the city of Salisbury. [28233]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: We expect to announce shortly our decisions on a number of the commission's recommendations concerning new parishes, including that for Salisbury.

As to the commission's other recommendations for Wiltshire, the draft Wiltshire (Borough of Thamesdown) (Structural Change) Order, which provides for change to the structure of local government in Thamesdown on 1 April 1997 and other associated matters, was laid before Parliament on 15 June 1995. Subject to approval of that order, my right hon. and learned Friend the Home Secretary intends in due course to lay before Parliament an order giving effect to the commission's recommendation for a combined fire authority. We intend to give effect to the commission's recommendations for ceremonial matters in a statutory instrument to be laid before Parliament later this year. Other recommendations are for the local authorities themselves to take forward.

Riding Schools (Rates)

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received from riding school proprietors about the rates they pay; what subsequent action he is proposing to take; and if he will make a statement. [28548]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: I have received four such representations since the beginning of last year. I have no plans for action in this area.

Natterjack Toads

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what new proposals he has to multiply and improve the habitats of natterjack toads. [29302]

Sir Paul Beresford: The natterjack toad has been the subject of a three-year English Nature species recovery programme, which is due to end in June 1995. English Nature will continue to participate, in co-operation with the Herpetological Conservation Trust, in conservation and repopulation measures identified in a consequential 10-year management plan.

Airport Noise Abatement Grants

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will list the airports outside London that have received European grants for noise abatement; [24980]

(2) how much by way of European grants was paid for noise abatement to each airport in respect of (a) London airports and (b) airports outside London. [24981]

Mr. Norris: I am answering these questions on behalf of my hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment.

We have no record of European grant being paid for noise abatement to any airport in the UK.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

National Lottery

Mr. Tredinnick: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how many representations he has received (a) for and (b) against the size of the jackpot in the national lottery. [29105]

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 20 June 1995]: I have received many representations about the size of the national lottery jackpots. It is not possible to determine the number for or against the size of the jackpot without incurring disproportionate cost.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Child Support Agency

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what are the figures for each month since the launch of the Child Support Agency of (a) the amount of child maintenance assessed by the Agency as payable and (b) the amount payable under arrangements carried over from before the launch of the agency; and how much of each amount was paid (i) directly to the parent with care and (ii) via the agency. [27947]

Mr. Burt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member shortly.

Letter from Miss Ann Chant to Ms Liz Lynne, dated 21 June 1995:

I am replying to your recent Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about maintenance assessed by the Child Support Agency.

Monthly information in the form you request is only available for maintenance arising from CSA assessments in cases where the parents are using the Agency collection service. This is set out in the attached table.

However, these figures do not show the whole picture, as they do not include maintenance paid direct between parents who do not use the Agency's collection service. Although this information is now being collected, figures are not available for 1993/94 or broken down on a monthly basis for 1994/95. We do however, estimate that between April 1994 and March 1995, around £111 million arising from CSA assessments was assessed as payable and actually paid in this way.

The total maintenance assessed and paid arising from CSA assessments for the 1994/95 year was therefore £615.77 million and £185.24 million respectively.

Comparable figures are not available for maintenance paid under pre-CSA arrangements, as in these cases it is only necessary for information to be collected on the amount of maintenance paid that offsets benefit spending.

I hope this is helpful.

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many absent parents are making child support payments by way of deduction of earnings orders. [29521]

Mr. Burt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Miss Ann Chant to Ms Liz Lynne, dated 21 June 1995:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about the number of absent parents who are making child support payments via Deduction from Earnings Orders (DEO).

Since launch to the end of March 1995, the Agency has issued over 34,000 DEOs Aggregated information is now available on the number of DEOs that have been honoured since 18 November 1994. Of the 15,600 DEOs issued from that date to the end of March 1995, payments have been received in relation to 5,800. Due to the processes involved in the implementation of a DEO, a number of the DEOs issued towards the end of 1994/95 would not have been implemented by employers before the end of March 1995.

I hope this is helpful.

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will give the amount recovered by claimants by way of arrears of supplementary benefit in the area covered by the Wrexham and North Wales Coast district benefits agency for each of the last 12 months for which figures are available. [29706]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the top 10 districts where expenditure on prescriptions are the highest for (a) asthma treatment and (b) other respiratory conditions. [29088]

Mr. Malone: The information is shown in the tables. They list those family health services authorities in which total expenditure is greatest, which could reflect the size of the family health services authorities, and do not show where the expenditure per head of population is greatest.

Temazepam

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what studies her Department has made of the possible negative effects of using temazepam without a prescription, with special reference to the injection of the drug; what assessment she has made of whether other benzodiazepines are more effective in the treatment of anxiety and sleeplessness than temazepam; what information and educational material is currently available to the general public concerning the ill effects of illegal use of temazepam; to what degree this information is available; and if she will make a statement. [29247]

Mr. Bowis: The Department has commissioned research on the impact of prescription drug leakage on the illicit drug market, including on the risk behaviours associated with injecting prescription drugs. It is due to be completed in late 1996.

It is for doctors treating patients for anxiety and sleeplessness to decide which benzodiazepine, if any, would be the most effective for individual patients. Doctors have access to information about the effects of benzodiazepine prescribing in the British National Formulary, copies of which are in the Library. The Department issues this to all doctors free of charge.

General information on the ill-effects of the misuse of benzodiazepines, including temazepam, is given in the leaflets "Drugs and Solvent Misuse—A Basic Briefing" and "Drugs and Solvents: Things You Should Know" which is targeted at young people. These are widely available and, together with similar leaflets produced for Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland, can be ordered free of charge through the national drugs helpline service, telephone 0800 77 66 00. Local health authorities and boards or other agencies may produce their own educational materials.

The Mental Health Foundation booklet "Guidelines for the Prevention and Treatment of Benzodiazepine Dependence", which contains information about the risks of benzodiazepines, drew attention to the potential for misuse of these drugs and for diversion of supplies to illicit markets. The booklet, copies of which are available in the Library, was circulated to all English family health services authorities in March 1994 under cover of a letter which gave Departmental endorsement to the guidelines and recommended their use by general practitioners wishing to help patients who may be dependent on benzodiazepines to shift gradually to non-prescribing interventions.

The Department is considering what further advice should be issued to FHSAs on the powers they have to examine controlled drug prescribing and to clinicians on the prescribing of benzodiazepine and related drugs.

Speech Therapists

Mr. Benton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will take action to unfreeze the posts for speech therapists required for special education needs in Bootle. [29321]

Mr. Malone: This is a matter for Sefton health authority. The hon. Member may wish to contact Mr. F. R. Ludlow, chairman of the health authority, for details.

Residential Care Charges

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement about the treatment of occupational pensions by local authorities when the recipient enters residential accommodation leaving a spouse remaining in the community. [30505]

Mr. Bowis: We have been looking carefully and sympathetically at this issue. While our guidance to social services departments makes it clear that they can exercise discretion when applying the charging rules to care home residents with occupational pensions, they are not at present required to disregard a portion of that occupational pension in order to provide for a spouse remaining at home. We have now decided in principle that the local authority charging regulations should be amended so as to disregard half the occupational pension when a husband or wife enters a residential care or nursing home in order to help their spouse remaining at home. The Department will be consulting with the interested parties, including the local authority associations, about the details of implementing this proposal. At the same time, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Social Security will be taking forward a similar proposal in respect of people who were in residential care or nursing homes on 31 March 1993 and who have preserved rights to the higher levels of income support.

Special Hospitals

Sir Malcolm Thornton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement about the future management of special hospitals. [30595]

Mr. Bowis: We have decided on a number of important changes in the organisation and funding of high security psychiatric services provided by the three special hospitals, Ashworth, Broadmoor and Rampton. Their purpose is to integrate special hospital services more closely with mainstream mental health services while fully maintaining the protection of the public, staff and patients themselves. They build on the substantial improvements in quality and effectiveness of services that have been achieved by the Special Hospitals Service Authority since it was set up in 1989.

The changes take account of the recommendations of the expert group, chaired by Dr. John Reed CB, on high security and related psychiatric provision whose report was published in July 1994. I announced then that we were asking officials to examine further the group's recommendations and advise on what changes, if any, should be made in the funding, management and deployment of the services. In doing this, they were to pay particular regard to Ministers' obligations to maintain the security and quality of the services and to achieve value for money. The decisions I am announcing today have been taken in the light of this further advice.

The key features of the new arrangements that we are introducing are:

- a national high security psychiatric services commissioning board within the NHS executive, which will be responsible for commissioning services provided by the special hospitals. It will advise and be accountable to Ministers through the chief executive of the national health service executive and include representation from NHS purchasers, the Welsh Office, Home Office, Prison Service and the present Special Hospitals Service Authority;
- the establishment of three new special health authorities which will be responsible for managing services provided by the special hospitals;
- the establishment of a co-ordinated structure of commissioning arrangements for secure psychiatric services from the special hospitals to those provided at local level.

Further details are contained in a paper entitled "High Security Psychiatric Services—Changes in Funding and Organisation" which is being published today, copies of which are available in the Library.

This will bring high-security services much more closely into line with the arrangements for other NHS services through:

separation of responsibility for commissioning and provision of high security services:

This will extend to the special hospitals the benefits which have been achieved in the NHS generally through the separation of the purchasing and providing functions. The hospitals will concentrate on improving the quality and effectiveness of service delivery. The new commissioning board will be responsible for assessing national needs for psychiatric care in conditions of high security and contracting for services to meet those needs; local management for the three special hospitals:

will give greater responsibility to the people who work in each hospital so that they are able to develop the organisation in ways that best meet the needs of their patients and respond quickly on day-to-day matters affecting patients and staff; better integration of high security services with other parts of the mental health services:

will help to reduce, both for patients and staff, the isolation of the special hospitals and the impediment this presents to improving the quality and effectiveness of their services. This includes the removal of financial and organisational barriers which have tended to impede the movement of patients through services in accordance with their clinical and security needs. It will also allow freer movement of staff between the hospitals and other NHS employment. It will support the reshaping of existing patterns of services in accordance with assessed patients needs;

direct involvement of local NHS health purchasers in commissioning high security services:

will ensure that the needs of patients requiring high security are better understood and strategies to meet their continuing care needs are built into local mental health service development plans. This will help secure the most effective use of available resources to provide high- quality services at the level of security required.

The new arrangements will take effect on 1 April 1996. At that point, the Special Hospitals Service Authority will cease to be responsible for the management of special hospital services and we intend to take the necessary steps to abolish it. I should like to take this opportunity of paying tribute to the chairman, Mrs. Anne-Marie Nelson, her predecessor Dr. David Edmond, the members of the authority, and all its staff for the invaluable work that they have done in the past six years in improving and modernising the services of the special hospitals.

The new arrangements will incorporate special provisions for funding, commissioning and regulation to maintain the degree of central oversight which is essential for high security services. The chief executive of the NHS executive is putting in hand the necessary preparatory work to enable the change to be implemented from April 1996.

I recognise that the period of change will be a challenging one for the staff of the authority and the hospitals. The authority is arranging for there to be full discussion with staff and patients about the implications of the changes for them. I have complete confidence in their commitment and dedication to ensure that the quality of the service they provide is fully maintained as the changes proceed.

Our task now is to consolidate the authority's past successes and develop a service for the future which can respond to the full range of patients' needs, meet the aspirations and potential of staff and work effectively with other secure psychiatric services, while continuing to ensure the protection the wider public rightly expects. I believe that the changes I have announced today create the framework we need for achieving this.

Appetite Suppressants

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proposals she has to reduce the availability of appetite suppressant drugs. [29305]

Mr. Sackville: Proposals are being considered to limit the availability of appetite suppressants by way of an order under section 62 of the Medicines Act 1968 to situations in which there exists a clear medical need for such products. The Medicines Control Agency is currently consulting those with an interest in this subject on the form that such an order might take.

Hip Replacements

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the average cost in real terms of hip prostheses to the national health service in each of the last 12 years. [29300]

Mr. Sackville: The information is not available centrally.

Multiple Births

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many sets of (a) twins, (b) triplets, (c) quadruplets, (d) quintuplets and (e) sextuplets were born in England in each year from 1990 to 1994; what was the total number of maternities in England in each year; how many multiple births were conceived as a result of (i) in vitro fertilisation, (ii) gamete intra-fallopian transfer and (iii) other forms of assisted conception; and if she will make a statement. [29529]

Mr. Sackville: The information on multiple and total maternities is shown in the table.

England

	1990	1991	1992	1993	1994
Twins	7,537	7,739	7,883	7,897	8,014
Triplets	190	201	192	225	249
Quadruplets	9	10	8	11	8
Quintuplets	—	1	1	—	—
Sextuplets	—	—	—	1	—
Septuplets	—	—	—	—	—
Total number of maternities with multiple births	7,736	7,951	8,084	8,134	8,271
All maternities	662,048	655,703	646,266	631,710	624,004

The table excludes those maternities to mothers resident outside England and Wales.

Figures relating to multiple births following assisted conception are contained in the Human Fertilisation and Embryology Authority annual report, copies of which are available in the Library.

Edgware General Hospital

Mr. Dykes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to visit Edgware general hospital in the near future; and if she will meet a deputation of local residents and medical staff during her visit. [29752]

Mr. Malone: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has no plans to visit Edgware hospital at present.

Mr. Dykes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if she will make it her policy to review the proposed closure in April 1997 of Edgware general hospital accident and emergency unit when her Department receives medical evidence of up-to-date local requirements; [29753]

(2) if she will list the replacement services for the local community to be undertaken by the relevant health authorities after the closure in April 1997 of the accident and emergency department of Edgware general hospital. [29751]

Mr. Malone: No. Barnet health authority has a duty to ensure that residents have a comprehensive health service meeting the full range of their needs effectively and safely. Edgware hospital's accident and emergency department will not close until alternative facilities are available and capable of providing an improved service to patients.

A new minor accident treatment service is being established on the Edgware site and will provide modern and effective services for local residents. Full-scale accident and emergency services will be provided at the redeveloped Barnet hospital, as well as at Northwick Park and the Royal Free. A primary care investment fund, amounting to £17 million, has been established to improve family doctor and community services in the area.

Compulsory Competitive Tendering

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what have been the annual costs of carrying out competitive tendering processes in the national health service since their introduction. [29705]

Mr. Sackville: This information is not available centrally.

General Practitioner Lists

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients (a) in each region and (b) in England were removed from general practitioners' lists in the latest available year; how many and what proportion of these were de-registered at the request of their GP; and how many patients in England were de-registered at the request of their GP in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [29700]

Mr. Malone: Information on the removal of patients is available only for 1992–93, and I refer the hon. Member to the answer that the Under-Secretary of State, my hon. Friend the Member for Battersea (Mr. Bowis), gave him on 20 July at columns 368–70.

Market Testing

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what has been the annual cost of carrying out market-testing processes in the national health service since their introduction. [29704]

Mr. Sackville: This information is not available centrally.

Gorton Medical Centre

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her reply of 16 May, Official Report, column 167, with regard to Gorton medical centre, if she will state the latest position both with regard to the judgment of the High Court and with regard to financial assistance to improve the premises of the centre. [29969]

Mr. Malone: We are still considering the implications of the judgment of the High Court.

Officials at Manchester family health services authority have recently received a copy of plans from the doctors at Gorton medical centre regarding the proposed work to improve their practice premises. The authority will now consider what financial assistance can be provided and the right hon. Member may wish to contact Professor Joan Higgins, chairman of Manchester FHSA, about future progress in this connection.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Treasury Counsel Fees

Mr. Byers: To ask the Attorney-General, pursuant to his answer of 22 May, Official Report, column 451, how much each Treasury counsel retained for civil work received in fees from public funds in 1994–95; of the Treasury counsel based at the central criminal court, how many received between (i) £250,000 to £300,000, (ii) £300,000 to £350,000, (iii) £350,000 to £400,000, (iv) £400,000 to £500,000, (v) in excess of £500,000 from the Crown Prosecution Service for financial year 1994–95. [29928]

The Attorney-General: The Treasury Solicitor's Department paid each of the two Treasury counsel retained for Government civil work between £200,000 and £250,000 in the financial year 1994–95. However, Treasury counsel will also have received fees from other Government Departments and agencies which have instructed them direct. The total fees paid to Treasury counsel from public funds could be calculated only at disproportionate cost.

On the information currently available, of the Treasury counsel based at the central criminal court the following numbers received payments from the Crown Prosecution Service during the financial year 1994–95 in the following bands:

	Number
(i) £250,000 to £300,000	3
(ii) £300,000 to £350,000	1
(iii) £350,000 to £400,000	0
(iv) £400,000 to £500,000	1
(v) in excess of £500,000	1

All figures are inclusive of value added tax.

TREASURY

Crown Immunity

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list all areas within (a) his Department, (b) agencies under his Department's control and (c) organisations for which he has ministerial responsibility to which Crown immunity applies; what consideration he has given to removing this; and if he will make a statement. [28657]

Mr. Kenneth Clarke [holding answer 15 June 1995]: The reference to the Crown immunity in the question is taken to refer to legislation that does not bind the Crown. Certain legislation is expressly applied to the Crown. In most legislation, however, particularly older legislation, there is no such express provision. In those circumstances, whether legislation applies to the Crown will depend upon the implications to be drawn from the drafting and context of the legislation.

Lloyd's

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what are his estimates of the (a) total tax assessed and (b) total tax refunded in respect of profits or losses made by the underwriting members of Lloyd's of London in each of the years since 1977–78. [28673]

Sir George Young [holding answer 15 June 1995]: The available information is shown in the table, and covers (a) the total tax charged on initial assessments, including estimated assessments, made during each tax year on underwriting profits and gains and (b) the total of income tax and capital gains tax repaid to Lloyd's underwriters by the underwriters unit of Inland Revenue in each tax year, including any repayment supplement attracted by the tax refunded.

BMARC

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if the findings of Her Majesty's Customs and Excise will be presented to the Chief Secretary to the Treasury following its investigation into breaches of export control by BMARC. [29352]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answer 19 June 1995]: No.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will set out the terms of the reference and subject matter of the HM Customs and Excise inquiry into BMARC. [29484]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Customs and Excise is an independent prosecuting authority of the Crown and conducts investigations to determine whether there is a basis for instituting criminal proceedings in relation to alleged breaches of, inter alia, statutory export and import controls.

In that capacity, it is for the commissioners to determine the subject matter and extent of any investigation and, in relation to the BMARC allegations, the Department is actively following up information received.

Parliamentary Questions

Ms Quin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he last reviewed the threshold figure for the definition of proportionate cost in relation to parliamentary questions. [29362]

Mr. Nelson: The disproportionate cost threshold for answering written parliamentary questions was last reviewed in February 1995. I concluded that costs had not increased sufficiently since the previous review to warrant raising the threshold. The threshold continues to be £450.

Public Sector

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what are his estimates of the (b) public sector's tangible assets, (b) public sector's net financial liabilities and (c) public sector's net worth for each year from 1970–71 to 1997–98 expressed in 1994 prices. [29890]

Mr Aitken: Table 12.12 in the Central Statistical Office Blue Book provides the information requested for 1984 up to 1993. Included within the table are the relevant CSO identifiers, providing the data as far back as is readily available, for each of (a), (b) and (c).

Forecasts of the public sector's tangible assets and thus net worth are not available. However, forecasts of the public sector's net financial liabilities, as measured by "net public sector debt" were published in table 4.3 of the "Financial Statement and Budget Report 1995–96", revised tables. Table 6A.1 of the FSBR contains the necessary deflators to convert the figures into real terms.

Budget

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if it is his policy to aim to run a balanced Budget over the cycle. [29898]

Mr. Aitken: The Government's fiscal objective is to bring the public sector borrowing requirement back towards balance over the medium term.

Spirits

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assumption about the price elasticity of demand for spirits was used by his Department in 1994 in consideration of altering the levels of domestic duty on spirits in the Budget. [29891]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The Chancellor takes into account a wide range of factors when determining possible tax changes. The revenue implications are estimated using a computer model produced by the Institute of Fiscal Studies. That model has a wide range of both own and cross price elasticities for various categories of consumption. The own price elasticity for spirits is –1.07.

Retail Prices Index

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what change has taken place in the retail prices index between March 1979 and March 1995. [26364]

Mr. Nelson: The information requested can be calculated from table 11 of the March 1995 edition of the "Business Monitor MM23 on Retail Prices Index", a copy of which is available in the House of Commons Library.

Information Technology Contracts

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer on 12 June, Official Report, column 395, regarding contracts with EDS in respect of Government data, what arrangements exist to ensure the smooth, continuous running of the relevant systems in the event of a change of contractor, the appointment of a subcontractor or an unforeseen event or policy decision taken by the contractor; and what back-up arrangements are in place to ensure the continuous running of these systems. [29766]

Sir George Young: EDS has outsourcing contracts with the Inland Revenue, the Department of Social Security and the Department of Transport.

There are provisions within the EDS contracts with those Government Departments, which cover the handover of work and resources at the end of the contract and which will ensure continuity of service. The provisions for handover apply equally to a transfer to another supplier or direct to the Department and they can be invoked even if the contract is terminated prematurely.

Generating Company Shares

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer to what extent he took into account section 164 of the Financial Services Act 1986 in determining whether or not to go ahead with the sale of National Power and PowerGen. [28816]

Sir George Young: Section 164 of the Financial Services Act 1986 has never been brought into force, but would in any case have applied only to unlisted securities. The shares of the generating companies were already listed.

Alcohol Duty

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what forward projections he has made for the income from alcohol duty for each of the next 10 years. [29436]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Forecasts cover the short to medium term; and the last published set was in the revised 1995–96 "Financial Statement and Budget Report". After 1995–96, figures presented combine income from excise duties on fuel, alcohol and tobacco. New estimates will be published by HM Treasury in the summer economic forecast at the end of June.

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to meet representatives of the Licensed Victuallers Association to discuss the Government's policy on the harmonisation of alcohol duties across the EC. [29434]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Meetings are held regularly with trade organisations and other representatives of that industry.

Manufactures (Exports)

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the effect of the Government's monetary and exchange rate policies since 1979 on the UK share of exports of manufactures by the main manufacturing countries. [29442]

Mr. Nelson: The UK's share of exports of manufactures by the main manufacturing countries depends on a variety of factors, including competitiveness and export profitability. It is not possible to isolate with any confidence the effects stemming from monetary and exchange rate policies. However, the Government's commitment to deliver permanently low inflation will provide a stable climate within which British manufacturing can compete successfully, in both world and domestic markets.

Alcohol Policy

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the EUROCARE report into alcohol policy across the European Union. [29433]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: I await a copy of that report, which will then receive attention.

Vehicle Excise Duty

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what studies his Department has carried out into the potential for using the reform of vehicle excise duty to encourage the sale and purchase of less-polluting vehicles. [29490]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The possibility of using vehicle excise duty to encourage the sale and purchase of less-polluting vehicles is kept under review. The policy of phased increases in fuel duty is, however, thought at present to be the most efficient way of curbing emissions from vehicles.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Immigration

Dr. Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many notices have been issued to carriers under the Immigration (Carriers' Liability) Act 1987 in each quarter since March 1991. [29701]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: The total number of notices issued in each quarter since March 1991 is as follows:

Quarter ending	Number of notices
31 March 1991	2,843
30 June 1991	2,759
30 September 1991	2,451
30 December 1991	2,031
31 March 1992	1,954
30 June 1992	1,605
30 September 1992	2,355
31 December 1992	2,197
31 March 1993	1,608
30 June 1993	1,663
30 September 1993	1,815
31 December 1993	1,819
31 March 1994	1,638
30 June 1994	1,605
30 September 1994	2,085
31 December 1994	2,011
31 March 1995	1,864

Dr. Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what has been the total amount of liability incurred by all carriers under the Immigration (Carriers' Liability) Act 1987; and how much has been paid. [29703]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: A total of £79.770 million had been incurred to 31 May 1995. Of that sum, £45.861 million has been paid and £10.47 million waived following representations by carriers.

Repatriation (Financial Assistance)

Mr. Churchill: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will take steps to extend to British citizens born overseas who wish to return to their countries of origin the programme of financial assistance for repatriation already available to non-British citizens in similar circumstances. [29929]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: Under section 29 of the Immigration Act 1971 the Government fund a small humanitarian programme that provides for limited assistance to be given to non-British citizens who wish to return to their countries of origin but who lack sufficient means to do so. British citizens born overseas who wish to return to their countries of origin to settle may, in certain circumstances, renounce their British citizenship, and become eligible to receive assistance from the programme.

Asylum

Dr. Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum applications were taken in; how many decision were made; what was the backlog of all work; what was the average cost per case; and what was the average output per staff day in each year since 1990. [29702]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: The information requested is given in the table.

Dr. Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make it his policy to ensure that all people who request asylum upon arriving on the Eurostar train at Waterloo station are returned immediately. [29628]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: All such asylum applications are referred to the asylum division. In accordance with paragraph 345 of the Immigration Rules, claims may be refused without substantive consideration where there is a safe third country to which the applicant may be sent.

Taxi Drivers

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will exempt taxi drivers from the Rehabilitation of Offenders Act 1974. [27954]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 13 June 1995]: We have no plans to do so.

Firearms Fees

Mr. Churchill: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what has been the increase in firearms fees in each of the past five years in both cash and percentage terms; what is the justification for such levels of increase; and if he will use his powers under section 55 of the Firearms Act 1968 to require chief officers of police forces to adopt models of best practice in the management of their firearms departments. [29741]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 20 June 1995]: The Government increased some of the fees that are payable under the firearms acts with effect from 1 January 1995. The cash and percentage increases are set out in the table. The previous change to those fees took effect on 1 June 1990.

The fee levels are designed to reflect the cost to the police service of operating the firearms licensing system. They take account of the best practice guidelines for administering the system, which the Home Office issued to chief officers in 1991 and of a subsequent costing exercise undertaken by independent consultants.

In calculating costs, we have assumed that police forces are already well on the way to operating best practice and will continue to make efficiency savings during the five-year period over which costs have been calculated. In the case of shotgun fees, the cost of additional checks made as a result of the Firearms (Amendment) Act 1988 is reflected for the first time. In particular, on first application, the police will normally make a home visit to make sure that the requirement for safekeeping at all times will be satisfied.

Without those increases, there would be a shortfall in income of some £8 million over the next five years to meet the police costs, a shortfall that would have to be met at the expense of some other police activity.

My right hon. and learned Friend does not propose to use section 55 of the Firearms Act 1968 to require chief officers of police to adopt the best practice guidelines.

Fire Service

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received concerning making motorists pay for rescue operations completed by the fire service. [29952]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: We have received no such representations.

Prisoners (HIV and AIDS)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisons have ceased to apply the policy of viral infectivity restrictions among prisoners with HIV or AIDS; if he will now rescind this policy; and if he will make a statement. [29718]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for that matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Retail Staff

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what guidance has been given by his Department to retail staff on reducing risk of assault by customers. [29199]

Mr. Maclean: The Retail Action Group, a sub-group of the National Board of Crime Prevention, is working to produce a series of crime prevention booklets for retailers: advice on the prevention of violence to retail staff is currently being prepared and will be published shortly. Booklets on the prevention of burglary and of robbery were launched in January, and advice on the prevention of customer theft, external fraud and staff dishonesty is also planned.

The Home Department was represented on the Health and Safety Executive committee which in March 1995 published guidance giving practical information on how employers can prevent violence to retail staff in the workplace. The Home Department was also represented on the steering committee of the "Theftstop Initiative", which recently launched a training video on the prevention of shop theft. As research indicates that almost half the incidents of violence to retail staff occur when staff intervene to prevent theft, it is essential that staff are trained in preventive action that will not put them at risk.

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the dangers posed to retail staff by the introduction of the national lottery as a result of the increased amounts of money changing hands; and what representations he has received on the subject. [29200]

Mr. Maclean: Prior to the launch of the lottery, Camelot, in consultation with the Home Office and the Association of Chief Police Officers, put together and distributed advice to retailers on health and safety issues, including robbery. Lottery-related crime, including crime affecting retailers, is being monitored. My right hon. and learned Friend has received representations on the subject of violence against retailers from 13 Members of Parliament since the lottery was launched.

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many retail staff were (a) killed, (b) seriously injured as a result of attacks from customers and (c) physically assaulted by customers in each of the last five years. [29198]

Mr. Maclean: The official information available centrally does not enable a distinction of victims by occupation to be made. However, information on violence against staff in the financial years 1992–93 and 1993–94 is contained in the British Retail Consortium publications "Retail Crime Costs: 1992–93 survey" and "Retail Crime Costs: 1993–94 survey", copies of which are held in the Library.

Scotland Yard

Mrs Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures he is putting in place to prevent further theft from Scotland Yard. [29069]

Mr. Maclean: Following the discovery in July 1994 of a serious fraud by a member of the Metropolitan police civilian staff, the receiver for the Metropolitan police district, with our agreement, appointed Mr. Wilfred Hyde, a former senior official in the Home Office, to undertake an independent review of financial procedures relating to confidentially funded police operations.

The review found no evidence of any further fraud or weaknesses parallel to those in the particular arrangements that led to the fraud. Mr. Hyde made a number of recommendations for improving the systems of financial control for confidentially funded operations, which have been accepted in full and are being implemented.

We stand ready to consider any recommendations that the Public Accounts Committee may make following its hearing on 14 June of this and related matters.

Life Sentence Prisoners

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to announce the outcome of his review of the sentences on Abdul Qayyum Raja and Mohammed Riaz. [29193]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Written representations have recently been received on behalf of both those mandatory life sentence prisoners. I expect to receive further representation shortly. Thereafter, the reconsideration of the period to be served for retribution and deterrence in each case—the tariff—will be completed as soon as possible.

Criminal Injuries Compensation Board

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the present waiting time for cases to be heard by the Criminal Injuries Compensation Board; and if he will make a statement. [28983]

Mr. Maclean: The board advises that information on the present waiting time for cases to be heard is not available. However, some information about the time taken to reach decisions on cases and the time taken to resolve hearings applications is given at paragraphs 3.12 and 4.14 of the board's 30th annual report, Cm 2849, copies of which are held in the Library.

PRIME MINISTER

Privatisation

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list those parts of his Department or departmental agencies which were privatised without an in-house bid taking place; which future parts of his Department or departmental agencies he intends to privatise; and which of them do not have the necessary in-house expertise to mount an in-house bid. [29413]

The Prime Minister: For this purpose, my Department is part of the Cabinet Office. I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary, Office of Public Service and Science on 20 June, Official Report, column 220.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list those parts of his Department or departmental agencies which were privatised without an in-house bid; if he will indicate the expertise which was absent in his Department or departmental agencies which prevented an in-house bid taking place; which future parts of his Department or departmental agencies he intends to privatise; and which of them do not have the necessary in-house expertise to mount an in-house bid. [29422]

Mr. Horam: Those parts of the work of the Cabinet Office—OPSS—its agencies, HMSO and COI which have been contracted-out without an in-house bid are as follows:

Central OPSS
Consortium Reports
Publishing and print Procurement Service
CCTA
GTN (Long-Distance)
Chessington
UNISON (Phase 1)
CS College
Prospectus Distribution
RAS
Catering Services
Cleaning Services
IT Hardware Maintenance
IT Software Support Services
HMSO
Print Order Processing System
Software Development: Business Supplies
Software Development: Finance
COI
Videotext Unit

The Cabinet Office, its agencies, HMSO and COI have contracted-out activities without inviting in-house bids where it has been judged that the private sector is clearly better equipped to deliver a specific service, has a better understanding of market needs, or the capacity to invest in new technology. Other decisions to contract-out services without inviting in-house bids have been taken where an activity is relatively small and peripheral to the Department's functions.

There are no current plans to contract-out any activities within the Cabinet Office, its agencies, HMSO and COI without inviting an in-house bid.

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Wallsend (Mr. Byers), 12 June, Official Report, column 373, if he will set out the reason for declining to give details of the dates of letters sent from his office to the Scott inquiry. [29158]

The Prime Minister: The Government do not propose to disclose details of confidential exchanges with the Scott inquiry.

Former Prisoners of War

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Prime Minister what plans he has to approach the Japanese Government to secure new compensation for British prisoners of war held by the Japanese. [29303]

The Prime Minister: We are precluded on legal grounds from raising the question of compensation formally with the Japanese Government. I have drawn their attention to the strong feelings which the situation of the former prisoners arouses in the UK. My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary most recently discussed the matter with his Japanese counterpart at the G7 summit in Halifax on 16 June.

Ministerial Speeches

Mr. Battle: To ask the Prime Minister what is his estimate of the total annual cost to public funds of publishing every Minister's speeches. [29866]

The Prime Minister: It is usual practice for ministerial speeches made on official occasions to be published and distributed to the press by the relevant departmental press office. The cost is not separately identified in the form requested and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

WALES

Privatisation

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list those parts of his Department or departmental agencies which were privatised without an in-house bid; if he will indicate the expertise that was absent in his Department or departmental agencies which prevented an in-house bid taking place; which future parts of his Department or departmental agencies he intends to privatise; and which of them do not have the necessary in-house expertise to mount an in-house bid. [29430]

Mr. Redwood: My Department has strategically contracted out architects and surveyors services, an activity identified as peripheral to its core functions but one which the private sector specialises in and is well equipped to deliver.

The Department and its agency, CADW, have not yet identified any other existing activities as appropriate for contracting out without an in-house bid.

Age Discrimination

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what progress has been made in the "Too Old, Who Says?" campaign in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [29511]

Mr. Richards: The campaign is being taken forward by the Employment Department. I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Eastbourne (Mr. Waterson) on 13 June 1995, Official Report, column 443, by my hon. Friend the Minister of State, Department of Employment. To compete successfully, employers in Wales must be ready to take full advantage of the skills, reliability, experience and commitment that older people have to offer. It is in employers' best interest to treat people on their merits, regardless of their age.

Pupil Numbers

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many (a) primary and (b) secondary school pupils there were in each local education authority in (a) 1990 and (b) 1994. [29323]

Mr. Richards: The information requested is shown in the following tables:

A-level Results

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the average A-level point score of students embarking on first degrees at Welsh higher education institutions in (a) 1990–91, (b) 1991–92, (c) 1992–93 and (d) 1993–94; and if he will make a statement. [29045]

Mr. Richards: Information is not readily available for the university of Wales or the Open university. Information on the average A-level point score of students on the first year of the first degree course at Welsh higher education institutions other than the university of Wales is shown in the following table:

First-year first degree students whose qualification on entry was "A" level at Welsh higher education institutions[1]

Small and Medium-Sized Businesses

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what is his Department's definition of a small business and a medium-sized business; [29574]

(2) in which sectors of the economy (a) small businesses and (b) medium-sized businesses are predominantly to be found. [29577]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: There is a wide range of definitions of small and medium-sized businesses used in practice, each valid in its own context. For example, the annual small firms merit award for research competition is aimed at businesses with up to 50 employees, whereas eligibility for the small firms loan guarantee scheme is determined by both turnover and employee numbers, the thresholds for which vary from sector to sector. Data on the number of VAT-based enterprises in Wales by industry and turnover sizeband are published in table 3E of Business Monitor PA1003 which is published annually by the Central Statistical Office. Copies are available in the Library of the House.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) how many people were employed by (a) small businesses and (b) medium-sized businesses in each of the last 10 years; and if he will break these figures down by gender; [29576]

(2) how many (a) small businesses and (b) medium-sized businesses were started up in each of the last 10 years; and if he will break these figures down by gender of the entrepreneur. [29575]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: There is no single official definition of a small or medium-sized business. However, data are available for Wales for 1984, 1987, 1989 and 1991 on the number of persons employed in census of employment data units, which roughly correspond to workplaces, broken down by size of employment. While comprehensive information on the number of business start-ups in Wales is not available, a good guide to trends in business start-ups is given by the number of new registrations for VAT. Data are available on the number of VAT registrations in Wales, for each year 1980 to 1993. The vast majority of VAT registrations are for small firms. All these data can be obtained from the NOMIS database through the Library of the House. Information by gender is not available.

Women in Business

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, what initiatives his Department has to assist and encourage women who want to start their own businesses; and how the success of any initiative is monitored and assessed. [29573]

Mr. Richards: The business start-up scheme, operated through the training and enterprise councils, is available to all unemployed people wishing to start their own business. The scheme is monitored by the Welsh Office on a quarterly basis.

In addition, all TECs have equal opportunities policies supported by specific projects where appropriate. They are monitored by the TECs and through the annual Welsh Office/TEC business planning process.

Multiple Births

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many sets of (a) twins, (b) triplets, (c) quadruplets, (d) quintuplets and (e) sextuplets were born in Wales in each year from 1990 to 1994; what was the total number of maternities in Wales in each year; and how many multiple births of each type in each year were conceived as a result of (i) in-vitro fertilisation, (ii) gamete intrafallopian transfer and (iii) other forms of assisted conception; and if he will make a statement. [29531]

Mr. Richards: The information requested on multiple and total maternities registered in England and Wales, for residents of Wales is as follows:

	1990	1991	1992	1993	1994
Twins	397	416	423	399	431
Triplets	11	6	8	8	11
Quadruplets	1	0	0	1	0
All maternities	38,624	37,824	37,237	36,375	35,122

Figures relating to multiple births following assisted conception are available only for the United Kingdom as a whole and are contained in the Human Fertilisation and Embryology Authority annual reports, copies of which are available in the Library of the House.

Indonesian Police

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 5 May, Official Report, column 337, if he will name the Indonesian police officer trained by his Department who is serving with the Brigade Mobile. [28907]

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 15 June 1995]: Mr. Medhy Chumaedi.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what scholarships, awards or other forms of training paid for by his Department have been received by Gorrys Mere of the Indonesian national police; and when, for how long and at what cost they were provided. [28905]

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 15 June 1995]: We have no record of having paid for any training for Lieutenant Colonel Gorrys Mere.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what formal training the British consultants working in the Indonesian national police under the police management training project have had in human rights law; and to what extent the advice and training provided by the consultants involves specific advice and training in human rights law. [28901]

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 15 June 1995]: The consultants have had no formal training in human rights law and they have not provided any specific advice under the project on it.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs under what scheme scholarship awards for Indonesian police officers are funded; what is the nature of the training provided by the scholarships; who provides the training; and to what extent the training involves formal instruction in human rights law. [28903]

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 15 June 1995]: Scholarship awards are funded under the technical co-operation programme and the Chevening scholarship scheme. The training provided includes courses on personnel management, business administration, training management, organisation development, leadership, training for trainers, and attachments to UK police forces. The training has been provided by British universities, RIPA International and Surrey and Gloucestershire constabulary. It does not include formal instruction in human rights law.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs under what scheme study tours for Indonesian police officers are funded; what is the nature of the study involved; and to what extent the study involves the formal instruction in human rights law. [28902]

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 15 June 1995]: Study tours for Indonesian police officers are funded from the technical co-operation programme. They develop the trainees' diagnostic skills to analyse management and organisation problems. The study tours do not include formal instruction in human rights law.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on what date the Government agreed to fund the police management training project in Indonesia; and on what date the project commenced. [28904]

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 15 June 1995]: We approved the national police management training project on 22 March 1990 and it began on 16 June 1990. Earlier support for the training of police tutors began in 1983.

Children's Centre, Sri Lanka

Mr. Mandelson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what British financial or other support is provided to the International Childcare Trust training and children's centre at Makandura Gonawila in Sri Lanka. [29243]

Mr. Baldry: Since 1993 we have provided £10,000 for the completion of an irrigation well and installation of an irrigation system, and £68,000 towards two shanty development programmes.

Mr. Mandelson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations have been made to the Government of Sri Lanka to prevent the eviction of the International Childcare Trust training and children's centre from its property at Makandura, Gonawila, Sri Lanka. [29244]

Mr. Baldry: The British high commissioner in Colombo wrote to the additional secretary of the district where Makandura is situated on 2 June 1995 expressing concern about the request to vacate the property. The matter has also been brought to the attention of the President of Sri Lanka and is now in the hands of the permanent secretary to the Ministry of Health, Highways and Social Services.

Population Control Projects

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will place in the Library copies of IPPF and UNFPA evaluation and review reports on their projects in China and Tibet sent to his Department. [28951]

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 19 June 1995]: The United Nations Population Fund and the International Planned Parenthood Federation undertake reviews and evaluations of their country programmes. These are internal documents which are not made publicly available.

Georgia

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what proposals he has to extend the use of the know-how fund in Georgia. [29301]

Mr. Baldry: The size of the know-how fund programme for Georgia has recently been doubled. The fund will continue to provide rapid and flexible assistance to the reform process in Georgia. We have also provided emergency humanitarian assistance—£500,000 in 1994–95. This support is very much welcomed by Georgia.

East Timor

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 6 June, Official Report, column 58, how many of the lighthouses, lightbeacons and lightbouys supplied under the navigational aids project with Indonesia are operating in East Timor or in its territorial waters. [29456]

Mr. Baldry: None of the equipment supplied under the navigational aids project is located in East Timor or its waters.

Research and Development

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the ODA spent on research and development in each year since 1987. [29863]

Mr. Baldry: Net ODA expenditure on research and development was as follows:

1987–88	32.5
1988–89	34.2
1989–90	36.2
1990–91	47.1
1991–92	56.0
1992–93	86.7
1993–94	116.0
1994–95 (estimated outturn)	91.8

Slovakia

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what new proposals he has to extend the work of the know-how fund in Slovakia. [29298]

Mr. Baldry: Know-how fund assistance in Slovakia will continue to focus on financial services and banking; management and educational training; small and medium enterprise development; good governance and public administration.

An important element of our strategy is to extend the work of the know-how fund beyond Bratislava to the regions. The first phase of a three-year multi-sectoral regional capacity building project will begin in July 1995 and terms of reference for a rural tourism initiative in the Gemer region of eastern Slovakia are being drawn up. We continue to support the development of economic regeneration strategies through the local authorities technical links scheme and through an on-going project aimed at local government reform. Know-how fund assistance will also begin to reflect Slovakia's wish to join the European Union.

EMPLOYMENT

Minimum Wage

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State of State for Employment, pursuant to his answer of 23 May to the hon. Member for Ealing, North (Mr. Greenway), Official Report, column 563, how many people in full-time employment in the United Kingdom earn less than the minimum hourly wage rates in (a) Portugal, (b) Greece and (c) Spain. [26980]

Mr. Oppenheim: Of a sample of 102,700 full-time employees in the 1994 new earnings survey, 53 in the sample said that they earned less than £1.30 per hour, Portugal; 184 earned less than £1.70 per hour, Greece; and 233 earned less than £1.80 per hour, Spain.

Restart Interviews

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) if he will list the numbers leaving restart interviews, as an actual number and as a percentage of total leavers, for each year of its operation stipulating those who went into work, those who went into further employment schemes and those who become unemployed, and, of these, if he will list the type and level of qualification each leaver obtained, including those who failed to obtain any qualification at all; [27509]

(2) if he will list the numbers attending and leaving restart interviews, for each year of their operation. [27519]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for the subject of the questions has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from M. E. G. Fogden to Mr. Frank Field, dated 21 June 1995:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your questions about the number of people attending Restart Interviews for each year of operation and the numbers who went into employment schemes.

I have set out the information you have requested in the attached tables. Restart interviews do not lead directly to qualifications, although they do lead to opportunities such as Training for Work which provide qualifications. Nor do they have "leavers" in the way that our programmes do.

It may also be helpful if I explain the scope and purpose of the Restart interviews which are offered at regular six monthly intervals as part of a comprehensive advisory and information service aimed at helping people back into work. These interviews provide clients with the opportunity to discuss with an Employment Service (ES) Client Adviser, the steps they are taking to find work, how to access the employment and training opportunities that are available to them, and the course of action which, if followed, will offer the best prospects of returning to work.

I should emphasise that the figures quoted in the tables represent only the immediate result of Restart interviews. However, the real measure of the effectiveness of these interviews lies in their longer term effects. Many people subsequently take up a job or a place on an employment or training programme as a result of the guidance given to them at their interview. Independent researchers who have studied the Restart Interview programme have concluded that this indirect effect is extremely significant. For example, a study published by the Policy Studies Institute in August 1992, "The Restart Effect", found that the difference made by Restart in influencing the time people took to leave unemployment was about the same as the difference between being qualified or not qualified, fit or in poor health, in a favourable or unfavourable labour market.

I hope this is helpful.

Travel-to-work Areas

Sir David Madel: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the latest position about changes in the boundaries of travel-to-work areas; and if he will make a statement. [28854]

Mr. Portillo [holding answer 15 June 1995]: I do not intend to make changes to the boundaries of travel-to-work areas.

Occupational Disease

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what assessment he has made of the article on diagnosing and managing occupational disease, a copy of which has been sent to him, with special reference to the employment medical advisory service. [29185]

Mr. Oppenheim: The Health and Safety Executive is conducting a prior options feasibility study of the employment medical advisory service. Such studies consider how best value for money can be obtained from available resources. The results of the EMAS study, on which the article speculates, have yet to be finalised. The HSE gives high priority to occupational health, and EMAS staff continue to be available to provide advice to family practitioners.

Health and Safety Executive

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on how the Government are ensuring that ILO convention No. 81 (1947) is applied consistently in the Health and Safety Executive's market-testing and contracting-out programme. [29227]

Mr. Oppenheim: ILO convention No. 81 (1947) concerns the provision of labour inspection in industrial and commercial workplaces. The Government have decided that the Health and Safety Executive's inspection and enforcement functions will not be subjected to market testing or contracting out and therefore the convention is not relevant.

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how much money has been spent to date onundertaking the current review of the Health and Safety Executive's field operations division; and what he expects the final cost will be. [29215]

Mr. Oppenheim: To date, the cost of the Health and Safety Executive's field operations division management arrangements feasibility study is estimated at £30,000 plus the time spent on staff consultation, which cannot readily be measured.

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the average frequency of visits by Health and Safety Executive inspectors to (a) high-risk premises and (b) low-risk premises. [29221]

Mr. Oppenheim: The Health and Safety Executive does not specifically identify high-risk and low-risk premises, nor does it base its inspection programme on frequency. Although years elapsed since the previous inspection are one consideration in determining inspection priorities, more account is taken of the degree of hazard and risk posed to employees and the public.

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many premises will be transferred from the Health and Safety Executive's SHIELD computer system to the new FOCUS system. [29213]

Mr. Oppenheim: Approximately 445,000 premises' records were transferred from SHIELD to FOCUS. Each record represented one employer working at or from one fixed workplace. In the transfer process, those were split into separate employer and location records. At the start of FOCUS, there were approximately 343,000 employers registered, identified as working at approximately 420,000 locations.

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how much it will cost to equip and train field inspectors, and other staff, at the Health and Safety Executive's Cardiff office to use portable computers; and from what budget these costs are to be met. [29217]

Mr. Oppenheim: The hardware and software cost of providing staff in Cardiff with portable computers is £163,000 excluding VAT, met from a central Health and Safety Executive information technology budget. The cost of training those staff to use portable computers is £13,400—there is no VAT on this service—met from a training budget held by the HSE's field operations division.

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the total loss of experience in staffing years to Health and Safety Executive (a) factory inspectors in area offices, (b) agricultural inspectors in area offices, (c) doctors in area offices and (d) nurses in area offices as a result of the recent early retirement scheme. [29208]

Mr. Oppenheim: Total loss of experience in staffing years is shown in the table:

Total loss of experience in HSE Area Offices as a result of<pathe recent Early Retirement Scheme

Grade	Total staffing years
(a) Factory inspectors	476
(b) Agricultural inspectors	55
(c) Doctors	119
(d) Nurses	41
Total	691

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will place in the Library (a) the Health and Safety Executive's management arrangements feasibility study report and its implementation plan and (b) the Health and Safety Executive's employment medical advisory service feasibility study. [29224]

Mr. Oppenheim: No. The documents represent internal management advice to the Health and Safety Executive and commission and will not be placed in the Library.

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what exceptions exist to the Health and Safety Executive's policy that all workplaces should be visited by an inspector over a period of time; and what policy changes are planned. [29220]

Mr. Oppenheim: Since 1977 preventive inspections by the Health and Safety Executive's field operations division have been prioritised on the basis of an inspection rating system. The inspection rating system is currently being refined. The refined system will come into use shortly.

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many premises were registered on the health and Safety Executive's SHIELD computer system in each area office on (a) April 1992, (b) 1 April 1993 and (c) 1 April 1994. [29212]

Mr. Oppenheim: The number of premises registered on SHIELD in each area office on the specified dates is not readily available and can be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment which industrial or work sectors will not be visited on a preventive inspection basis by a Health and Safety Executive inspector after 1 August. [29216]

Mr. Oppenheim: No industrial or work sectors are excluded from preventive inspection. The Health and Safety Executive's field operations division aims to ensure that contact with duty holders is proportionate to the hazard and risk at any organisation, and focuses its inspection effort on higher-risk premises. Low-hazard, low-risk premises are contacted in the main by other non-inspection techniques, but inspectors retain discretion to inspect where necessary, and investigate accidents and complaints in accordance with HSE policy.

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the percentage reduction in the Health and Safety Executive staffing levels of (a) factory inspectors in area offices, (b) agricultural inspectors in area offices, (c) doctors in area offices, (d) nurses in area offices, and (e) specialist staff in policy divisions as a result of the recent early retirement scheme. [29222]

Mr. Oppenheim: The percentage reduction of staffing levels as a result of the recent early retirement scheme is shown in the table:

Grade	Reduction in staffing levels as percentage of staff employed in the grade
(a) Factory inspectors	4.1
(b) Agricultural inspectors	1.9
(c) Doctors	22.2
(d) Nurses	11.5
(e) Specialist staff in policy divisions	6.9

Workplace Accidents

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on the statutory obligations on employers to report accidents and injuries involving their employees to his Department; and what plans he has to change these arrangements. [29074]

Mr. Oppenheim: The Reporting of Injuries, Diseases and Dangerous Occurrences Regulations 1985—RIDDOR—require employers to notify the enforcing authority, for the purposes of the Health and Safety at Work, etc. Act 1974, in the event of an accident at work to any employee resulting in a fatality or major injury forthwith. Accidents at work to employees resulting in an absence of more than three days must be reported within seven days. Separate reporting arrangements currently apply offshore and on the railways.

The Health and Safety Commission published a consultative document last year containing proposals to update the regulations, incorporating all onshore and offshore reporting requirements. New regulations should be laid later this year.

Civil Servants

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment, pursuant to his answer of 2 May, Official Report, column 145, if he will provide comparable details on civil service early retirement packages on grounds of inefficiency. [29292]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 19 June 1995]: Inefficiency is a ground for dismissal rather than early retirement. In some circumstances, usually where the inefficiency is deemed not to be the fault of the individual, a lump sum payment of up to two years' salary may be made. Where compensation is agreed and the person dismissed is over age 55, that may be forgone in favour of immediate payment of the accrued superannuation benefits that would otherwise be preserved for payment at retiring age.

Information is readily available for only the last four financial years, during which there have been 172 departures on inefficiency grounds from the Department. Details of the individual payments made could be obtained only at disproportionate cost, but the number of dismissals on inefficiency showing whether or not compensation was paid is given in the table:

Financial year	With compensation	No compensation	Total
1991–92	10	19	29
1992–93	21	31	52
1993–94	9	39	48
1994–95	9	34	43
Total	49	123	172

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what percentage of his Department's civil servants are now based in central London. [29648]

Miss Widdecombe: Ten per cent. of staff in the Employment Department group are based in central London.

Food Manufacturing

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many people were employed in the food manufacturing industry in each region in each of the last five years. [29356]

Mr. Oppenheim: The available information is shown in the table:

Employees in food manufacturing in Great Britain (Not seasonally adjusted)

Privatisation

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list those parts of his Department or departmental agencies which were privatised without an in-house bid; if he will indicate the expertise which was absent in his Department or departmental agencies which prevented an in-house bid taking place; which future parts of his Department or departmental agencies he intends to privatise; and which of them do not have the necessary in-house expertise to mount an in-house bid. [29429]

Miss Widdecombe: Under the Government's "Competing for Quality" programme for 1992–94, the following activities within the Employment Department group were contracted out without an in-house bid:

Employment department
The Field System
Training and Enterprise Council National Providers Unit

Employment service
Travel services
Forms supply/distribution
Employment rehabilitation courses
Financial management training
Field staff training (First aid)
Building maintenance and new works

Health and safety executive
Graphics services
Estates management
Distribution of publications
Field support (Norwich)

For 1994–95, the following activities are due to be contracted out without an in-house bid:

Employment department
Staff development (support services)

Employment service
Warehousing

Health and safety executive
Scientific management and on-site sampling and analysis
Analysis of chemical substances Accident coding
Staff training
Advice helpline
Dosimetry services

The decision to contract out without an in-house bid was taken in each case in the light of a range of considerations. Information about the extent to which the availability of in-house expertise was a relevant factor in each case could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Jobseeker's Allowance

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if unemployed persons receiving benefit who join non-schedule 2 further education courses not funded by the Further Education Funding Council will be allowed to participate for up to 21 hours per week in such courses without prejudice to benefit entitlement when the jobseeker's allowance is introduced. [29478]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 19 June 1995:]: As now, people studying full time will not be able to claim jobseeker's allowance. Those studying part time will, however, be able to claim JSA, provided they remain available for and actively seeking employment. For courses funded by the Further Education Funding Council, where there is no longer a clear distinction between full and part-time courses, the threshold below which courses will be considered to be part time will be 16 guided learning hours per week. The rules for courses that are not funded by the Further Education Funding Council, including non-scheduled 2 courses, will remain unchanged.

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the estimated reduction of unemployment figures (a) immediately following the introduction of the jobseeker's allowance, (b) six months following the introduction of the jobseeker's allowance and (c) one year following the introduction of the jobseeker's allowance. [29920]

Miss Widdecombe: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Peckham (Ms Harman) on 8 December 1994, Official Report, column 342. It is too early to say exactly when any effect of the jobseeker's allowance on the claimant count will become apparent.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what representations he has received about his staff implementing aspects of the jobseeker's allowance's procedure in advance of its implementation. [29715]

Miss Widdecombe: None. However, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has been asked a number of questions by the hon. Member for Bradford, North (Mr. Rooney) relating to whether various provisions of the jobseeker's allowance might be introduced in advance of the date of implementation. I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Bradford, North on 6 June, Official Report, column 102.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement about the training process for staff in respect of the planned jobseekers allowance; and how long the training will take. [29716]

Miss Widdecombe: A variety of modular training courses, based on a detailed analysis of training needs, is being developed for staff who are to deliver jobseeker's allowance, depending on the duties they are to perform. We recently commissioned an external review of the arrangements being made to implement JSA. In the light of the findings of that review, and the decision to defer the implementation of JSA, the timing, length and content of the training proposed are now being reviewed, to ensure that it is adequate, appropriate and effectively targeted. All the training needed to ensure that JSA is delivered effectively will, however, take place before October 1996.

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what estimated reduction he has made of the unemployment figures following the introduction of the jobseeker's allowance (a) nationally and (b) in Nottinghamshire. [29919]

Miss Widdecombe: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to hon. Member for Peckham (Ms Harman) on 8 December 1994, Official Report, column 342. No estimates have been made below national level.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what estimate he has made of the cost of installing the new computer system for the jobseeker's allowance. [29728]

Miss Widdecome: A jobseeker's allowance payments system is being developed to pay jobseeker's allowance, by girocheque or automated credit transfer, at an implementation cost of around £40 million to March 1997. Further releases of software to enhance the system are already planned for 1997–98 at a cost of around £11 million.

In addition, the delivery of JSA will be supported by a labour market system. The Employment Service has been developing the LMS for some time to replace the existing computer systems in ES jobcentres, which support vacancy filling and advisory work. The implementation cost of the LMS is around £70 million.

European Commission Expert Group

Mr. Battle: To ask the President of the Board of Trade who on behalf of the United Kingdom Government attended the European Commission's expert group on the social aspects of the information society meeting held on Thursday 18 May; and if he will make a statement. [29862]

Miss Widdecombe: I have been asked to reply.

The members of the Commission's "High Level Group of Experts on the Social and Societal Aspects of the Information Society" were selected and appointed by the European Commission itself and are not in any sense representatives of member state Governments.

Training and Enterprise Councils

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what procedures exist to register conflicts of interest declared by training and enterprise council board directors; and how many such matters have been notified to his Department. [29667]

Mr. Paice [holding answer 20 June 1995]: The Department's contract with training and enterprise councils requires that a register of declared interests of both TEC directors and employees is maintained, detailing the nature and extent of such interest. The register is available for inspection by representatives of the Department at any reasonable time. Formal notification to the Department is not required.

Inward Investment

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many jobs have been created in the United Kingdom by (a) direct investment from within the EU and (b) direct investment from elsewhere and how many secondary to (a) and (b). [29007]

Mr. Eggar: I have been asked to reply.

Between 1979–80 and 1993–94, the last year for which figures are available, inward investment projects from within the EU, notified to the Invest in Britain Bureau, were expected to create nearly 51,000 new jobs and safeguard over 130,000 existing jobs. Over the same period, projects from outside the EU were expected to create over 229,000 jobs and safeguard nearly 228,000 existing jobs. No estimate has been made of the number of secondary jobs associated with those projects, although benefits to other UK-based companies will occur through the supplier chain. A study published in 1991, based on a sample of inward investors, estimated that those investors had bought over 50 per cent. of their capital equipment within the UK.

Those figures are based on information provided by companies themselves at the time of the decision to invest and take no account of subsequent developments. Companies are under no obligation to notify investment decisions to the Department and the figures are therefore based only on projects that have come to the attention of the Department's Invest in Britain Bureau.

DEFENCE

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he has been requested by Lord Justice Scott to provide information on the role played by the Saudi Monetary Agency in funding the export of British military equipment. [28997]

Mr. Freeman: Requests for information from Sir Richard Scott's inquiry are a matter for the inquiry and my Department.

Rapier Missiles

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to bring forward the follow-on contract for Rapier mark 2 missiles. [28888]

Mr. Freeman: None. The follow-on missile buy is based on a detailed analysis of Her Majesty's Government's Rapier missile requirements, which on present analysis will not be required for delivery before 1999. As missiles have a finite shelf life, buying them before they are required significantly reduces their value for money.

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, when he expects the contract for Rapier 200 tranche 1A missiles to be placed. [28886]

Mr. Freeman: I hope to be able to announce a decision shortly on an order for Rapier field standard C ground and support equipment and spares. The order will not include missiles.

Brent Spar

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which Government Department has commissioned HMS Alderney to follow the Shell flotilla towing the Brent Spar oil platform. [29183]

Mr. Soames: A Royal Navy ship has been deployed to the area of the Brent Spar flotilla by my Department in response to a request from the Department of Trade and Industry, reflecting a Government decision that the Royal Navy should monitor developments with the disposal operation.

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if a financial contribution is being made by Shell towards the current voyage of HMS Alderney. [29184]

Mr. Soames: No.

Upholder Class Submarines

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on his discussions with the Canadian authorities concerning the leasing of Upholder class submarines to Canada in exchange for free British armed forces access to training areas in Canada. [29093]

Mr. Freeman: Since the Ministry of Defence's decision in 1993, announced in Cm 2270, to withdraw the four Upholder class submarines from RN service, the Defence Export Services Organisation has offered the submarines for sale or lease to friendly or allied countries. DESO is currently in discussion with the Canadian Government and a number of options regarding price, the methods of payment and means of transfer are being considered, but no decisions have been taken.

Defence Research Agency

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 9 June, Official Report, column 337, how many contracts have been awarded to the SEMA Group plc, since July 1991 by the Defence Research Agency; and what is their total estimated value. [29747]

Mr. Freeman: Since July 1991 a total of 14 contracts have been placed with SEMA Group. Those fall into three broad categories; nine contracts in support of DRA technical work with a value of £317,000; four contracts in support of developing and maintaining the DRA commercial accounting systems with a value of £4.9 million and one enabling agreement with SEMA, against which eight orders have been placed with an approximate value of £216,000.

Staff

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many staff were employed as non-industrial grades and how may staff were employed as retired officer grades for each year since 1979. [28793]

Mr. Freeman: The information is as follows:

Year	Non-industrial grades 1 April	Retired officer grades 1 April
1979	114,758.0	1,922.0
1980	112,637.0	1,923.0

1982	102,638.0	1,871.5
1983	100,490.0	1,846.5
1984	98,029.0	1,819.5
1985	94,943.0	1,793.5
1986	93,822.5	1,769.0
1987	93,289.5	1,687.5
1988	88,626.5	1,693.5
1989	88,709.5	1,685.5
1990	89,866.0	1,677.5
1991	90,332.5	1,718.0
1992	90,682.0	1,768.0
1993	87,884.5	1,784.0
1994	82,761.0	1,839.0
1995	79,806.0	1,882.0

From 1979 to 1994 part-timers are counted as half. However, from 1995 part-timers have been counted on the basis of the hours that they have worked.

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the breakdown of (a) non-industrial staff and (b) retired officer staff by gender and by ethnic origin. [28790]

Mr. Freeman: The number of non-industrial staff and retired officers employed by my Department and its agencies, broken down by gender and ethnic origin, is shown in the table:

	Civilian staff as at 1 April 1995[1]			Respondents to ethnic origin survey[2]
	Total	Male	Female	Total	White	Black	Asian	Other ethnic origin
Total Non-Industrial Staff	81,041	51,939	29,102	69,965	68,504	590	682	189
Retired Officers	1,883	1,872	11	1,696	1,692	<5	<5	<5

[1] Figures on headcount basis, counting part-timers as one.

[2] On grounds of personal confidentiality, where the number of staff in any one ethnic minority category is less than five, the actual number is not disclosed.

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many staff were employed as retired officers in the Army, Royal Navy and Royal Air Force and central areas for each of the years since 1985. [28792]

Mr. Freeman: The information requested is available only from April 1992 onwards, and is as follows:

Number of retired officers by board

	Number: full time equivalent[1]
	1 April 1992	1 April 1993	1 April 1994	1 April 1995
Army	1,146.5	1,151.5	1,153.5	1,185
Navy	178.5	194.5	202.5	209
RAF	289.0	284.0	293.0	300
Centre and PE	154.0	154.0	190.0	189
Total	1,768.0	1,784.0	1,839.0	1,882

[1] Full-time equivalents counts part-timers as a half up to 1 April 1994 and as the proportion of conditioned hours worked from 1 April 1995. Figures for 1995 have been rounded independently and therefore the total may not equal the sum of the parts.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Private Clegg

Dr. Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what representations he has received about the continued imprisonment of Private Clegg; and if he will make a statement. [28630]

Sir John Wheeler: Since January more than 4,800 letters and eight petitions have been received about Private Clegg's imprisonment. Replies have been sent to most correspondents.

Illegal Waste Dumping

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what representations he has received about illegal dumping near the River Enler at Newtownards road, Comber; what areas in this location are designated as (a) areas of outstanding beauty and (b) sites of special scientific interest; and what action he has (i) taken against dumping (ii) proposes to take, if dumping has ceased at this location; what volume of waste material remains on the site; and if he will make a statement. [28613]

Mr. Moss: The site is located within the Strangford lough area of outstanding natural beauty and part of it is also situated in the Strangford lough area of special scientific interest. Following representations from residents of the Ballydrain road, the Department of the Environment initiated enforcement action to have illegal dumping stopped and the materials removed from the site. No action was taken on foot of the enforcement notice and summons action has been instigated. The Department's objective is to secure the removal of all the material and to have the site satisfactorily restored. It is not possible to give a precise figure as to the volume of waste remaining on the site.

Prisoners (HIV and AIDS)

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) how many cases of HIV and AIDS have been reported in prisons in Northern Ireland for each year since 1986; [28975]

(2) how many prisoners have been infected with HIV while in prison in Northern Ireland; [28974]

(3) how many inmates are currently HIV positive or have AIDS in prisons in Northern Ireland. [28976]

Sir John Wheeler: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Northern Ireland Prison Service under its chief executive, Mr. Alan Shannon. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from B. R. D. White to Rev. Martin Smyth, dated 20 June 1995:

In the absence of the Chief Executive, the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland has asked me to reply to the three Parliamentary Questions you have tabled relating to the number of reported cases of AIDS and HIV in Northern Ireland Prisons.

There have been no known cases of prisoners with AIDS reported in Northern Ireland since 1986. In the same period only one prisoner has identified himself as HIV positive. HIV antibody tests are treated in medical confidence and information is not centrally available to determine if there are further HIV positive prisoners in the prison system. Records are kept by the Department of Health and Social Services based on test results notified by test facilities but these are included in statistics for Heath Board Regions and do not specify positive tests among prisoners in individual establishments.

There is no medical evidence to suggest that any prisoners have been infected with HIV whilst in prison in Northern Ireland.

There are no known cases of AIDS among the current prison population in Northern Ireland and at present only one prisoner is reported to be HIV positive.

I hope that this information is helpful.

Market Testing

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement regarding market testing of the legal directorate of the Northern Ireland Central Services Agency for Health and Social Services. [29775]

Mr. Moss [holding answer 20 June 1995]: As part of the Government's commitment to this programme, set out in "Competing for Quality", DHSS officials are working closely with officers in the health and personal social services to market test services provided by the legal directorate of the Central Services Agency for Health and Social Services.

Employment Statistics

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many persons in Northern Ireland are employed by (a) United States firms, (b) Great Britain owned-firms, (c) European-owned firms, (d) far eastern-owned firms and (e) Irish Republic-owned firms; and, in each case, what percentage of the total work force this represents. [29040]

Mr. Ancram: Employment figures for all externally owned companies operating in Northern Ireland are not readily available. The Central Statistics Office in London will be able to provide disaggregated figures on externally owned companies across all sectors of industry and commerce in Northern Ireland and my noble Friend the Minister with responsibility for the economy will write to the hon. Member shortly about this matter.

However, the following information on companies in the manufacturing and internationally tradeable services sectors has been drawn from the Industrial Development Board's client company data:

Number of employees in IDB client companies

	Number
USA	9,077
Great Britain	18,301
Europe	3,715
Far East	2,757
Republic of Ireland	3,504
Total	37,354

Education Expenditure

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what proportion of identifiable Government expenditure on education in Northern Ireland, including mandatory loans and awards to students, is devoted to (a) primary education, (b) secondary education, (c) further education and (d) higher education; and if he will make a statement. [29044]

Mr. Ancram: The information for 1993–94 is as follows:

	Per cent.
Primary education	24.0
Secondary education	31.1
Further education	9.0
Higher education	17.8

Small and Medium-sized Businesses

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland in which sectors of the economy (a) small businesses and (b) medium-sized businesses are predominantly to be found. [29581]

Mr. Ancram: An analysis of the numbers of Northern Ireland businesses by size of turnover, for all economic sectors is published in the Central Statistical Office Business Monitor publication PA 1003, table 3E, copies of which are available in the Library.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people were employed in (a) small businesses and (b) medium-sized businesses in each of the last 10 years; and if he will break these figures down by gender. [29580]

Mr. Ancram: Details of the numbers employed by employment size band are available for manufacturing industries from the Central Statistical Office Business Monitor PA 1003, table 10, for the years 1985 to 1994 inclusive. Similar figures are not available for other sectors, or by gender.

Multiple Births

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many sets of (a) twins, (b) triplets, (c) quadruplets, (d) quintuplets and (e) sextuplets were born in Northern Ireland in each year from 1990 to 1994; what was the total number of maternities in Northern Ireland in each year; and how many multiple births of each type in each year were conceived as a result of (1) in-vitro fertilisation, (ii) gamete intra-fallopian transfer and (iii) other forms of assisted conception; and if he will make a statement. [29530]

Mr. Moss: The information requested is set out in the table:

Type	1990	1991	1992	1993	[1]1994
Sets of
(a) twins	267	315	258	280	302
(b) triplets	5	6	8	9	6
(c) quadruplets	—	—	—	—	—
(d) quintuplets	—	1	—	—	—
(e) sextuplets	—	—	—	—	—
Maternities	26,338	26,058	25,425	24,741	23,821

(ii) triplets	2	11	n/k	n/k	n/k
(ii) GIFT[3]

[1] Provisional.
[2] These figures are the result of IVF by year of conception.
[3] GIFT was available in Northern Ireland only in 1986 and 1987.

Dispensing of Medicines

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when the Southern health and social services board received a request from Dr. Mary Allen to be allowed to dispense in her Cullyhanna medical practice. [29607]

Mr. Moss: A request was received in November 1994.

The general principle under the legislation governing dispensing arrangements is that doctors should prescribe and pharmacists dispense. Exceptionally, if a health and social services board is satisfied that patients are experiencing serious difficulty in obtaining their medicines from a pharmacist, it may require the doctor to dispense for those patients. This action is taken only if alternative arrangements cannot be made with pharmacists.

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what are the current dispensing arrangements for the Cullyhanna area; and what assessment of the dispensing requirements of the residents of the Cullyhanna area has been made by (a) the Southern health and social services board, (b) the Central Services Agency and (c) the Department of Health and Social Services; [29608]

(2) what steps are being taken to ensure that the dispensing requirements of the residents of Cullyhanna area are being fully satisfied. [29610]

Mr. Moss: Patients in the Cullyhanna area are served by pharmacies in Newtownhamilton and Crossmaglen. The Southern health and social services board is currently reviewing the dispensing arrangements and needs in the Cullyhanna area and this will include the possibility of a delivery service being provided by pharmacists. Neither the Central Services Agency nor the Department of Health and Social Services has been involved, as this is primarily a matter for the board.

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what proposals have been received, and on what dates, for the provision of dispensing facilities for the residents of the Cullyhanna area, by (a) the Southern health and social services board, (b) the Central Services Agency and (c) the Department of Health and Social Services. [29609]

Mr. Moss: Dr. Mary Allen contacted the Southern health and social services board in November 1994 requesting the right to dispense for her patients in Cullyhanna. At the same time, the Cullyhanna community committee wrote to the board indicating that some residents in Cullyhanna were experiencing difficulty in obtaining medication. Neither the Central Services Agency nor the Department of Health and Social Services has received any proposals.

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps the Southern Health and Social Services Board has taken to ensure that a speedy decision is made in relation to the dispensing requirements of the residents of the Cullyhanna area. [29611]

Mr. Moss: The Southern health and social services board asked Dr. Allen to provide a list of her patients who were having serious difficulty in obtaining medicines. The board has received that list and will be contacting these patients and considering whether their difficulties can be resolved by the provision of an improved community pharmacy service. If such a service cannot be provided, the board may require Dr. Allen to dispense.

EU Peace and Reconciliation Funding

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what measures will be introduced under the European Union's fund for peace and reconciliation to promote (a) employment, (b) urban and rural regeneration, (c) cross-border developments, (d) social inclusion and (e) industrial development and productive investment. [29612]

Sir John Wheeler: The guidelines for the European Union's initiative for peace and reconciliation allow for an extensive range of measures under the five priorities of social inclusion, employment, urban and rural regeneration, cross-border developments and industrial development/productive investment. The programme submitted makes provision for such actions. However, as the details are still the subject of negotiation between the relevant member states and the European Commission, it is premature to give a definitive list of the measures which will be funded.

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what procedures are in place for monitoring the operation of the European Union's fund for peace and reconciliation. [29613]

Sir John Wheeler: A programme under the European Union's peace and reconciliation initiative has recently been submitted to the European Commission and is presently being negotiated. Monitoring arrangements consistent with stipulations in the guidelines will be put in place following agreement on the programme between the relevant member states and the European Commission.

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what body or organisation will be charged with the task of dispensing the European Union's fund for peace and reconciliation; how applications will be assessed; and if there will be a right of appeal for unsuccessful applicants. [29614]

Sir John Wheeler: The draft programme under the peace and reconciliation initiative which has been submitted to the European Commission envisages that a range of organisations will be used to dispense the available funds. The details of these arrangements are currently being discussed with the Commission and will be publicised when the programme is agreed. Applications for assistance from the initiative will be assessed against criteria to be published in the programme. Decisions on grant applications to EU programmes are normally considered to be final, but unsuccessful applicants will be given an explanation for refusal and may wish to amend and resubmit their proposals accordingly.

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement about the specific funding programmes which will be supported by the European Union's fund for peace and reconciliation. [29699]

Sir John Wheeler: The guidelines for the European Union's peace and reconciliation initiative stipulate that the following priorities might be funded—employment, social inclusion, cross-border developments, urban and rural regeneration and industrial development/productive investment. The specific funding programmes will reflect these priorities.

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when applications will be invited for programmes supported by the European Union's fund for peace and reconciliation; how these programmes will be advertised; how long each funding programme will remain open for applications; and what support will be made available to advise and support applicants through the application procedures. [29615]

Sir John Wheeler: Applications will be invited for projects under the European Union's peace and reconciliation initiative as soon as the programme is agreed between the member states concerned and the European Commission. Appropriate steps will be taken by the member states, the European Commission and, if necessary, other funding bodies under the programme to publicise the measures to be funded. The length of time allowed under individual measures for applications to be received will be a matter for specific funding bodies but may depend, inter alia, on the resources available and the demand for particular measures. The programme envisages that technical assistance will be made available to assist with the implementation of the programme; the exact details are being negotiated between the member states concerned and the European Union.

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement about the application process for individuals and organisations wishing to apply to the European Union's fund for peace and reconciliation, including details of application forms, closing dates for individual programmes and addresses of the appropriate department or dispensing body. [29698]

Sir John Wheeler: The programme under the European Union's peace and reconciliation initiative is currently being negotiated between the member states concerned and the European Commission. The details of the application process can be settled only when all the management arrangements have been agreed. The application procedure will be fully publicised when the programme is agreed.

"Accountability through Partnership"

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will place in the Library the submissions made in response to his document "Accountability through Partnership". [29976]

Mr. Ancram: No responses to the consultative document on educational administration issued in 1993 were submitted in confidence.

Education and Library Boards

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will state the populations represented by his proposed education and library boards and, in each case, the number of people represented by each member of each board. [29977]

Mr. Ancram: Based on the 1993 mid-year estimates, the population of the four areas proposed would be as follows:

	Population
North Eastern	375,500
Western	267,600
Southern	385,100
Greater Belfast	603,600

The members of education and library boards are appointed to reflect a range of interests in education, not as representatives of particular populations.

Military Complaints Report

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he intends to lay before Parliament Mr. David Hewitt's second annual report as independent assessor of military complaints procedures in Northern Ireland. [30621]

Sir Patrick Mayhew: I have today arranged for the second annual report of the independent assessor of military complaints procedures in Northern Ireland to be laid before each House of Parliament. I welcome this report which clearly demonstrates the thoroughness with which the assessor has approached his task. I note with satisfaction that the General Officer Commanding has been able to accept all five of the report's recommendations. This fully justifies the assessor's comment that

"the Army continues to be seriously committed to proper investigation of genuine complaints as part of its overall strategy, which increasingly understands the value of public acceptability and fostering good community relations."

The Army's presence on the streets of Northern Ireland is, of course, diminishing. But while there still remains a need for the Army to patrol in support of the Royal Ulster Constabulary there will still clearly be a need for the post of independent assessor. I look forward to the day when there will be no further need for it.

Contracting Out

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland for each piece of work subject to a bidding process under the auspices of (a) his Department and (b) agencies for which his office is responsible (i) where work was contracted out, who were the successful bidders and (ii) which contracts were won by in-house bidders in (1) 1993–94, (2) 1994–95 and (3) 1995–95. FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Indonesia

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the progress of human rights in Indonesia. [29317]

Mr. Goodlad: We follow closely the human rights situation in Indonesia. We discuss it regularly with the Indonesian Government. Depsite a number of recent setbacks, there have been some improvements over recent years. But more needs to be done. With our European Union partners we shall continue to press for further progress.

European Parliament

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what changes have been proposed to the intergovernmental conference by officials, academics or other bodies into the terms of the current consolidated treaty on European Union concerning the powers and duties of the European Parliament in respect of their functions of appropriation, surveillance and audit of expenditure, examination of public accounts, and discharge of the budget of the European Community. [29339]

Mr. David Davis: Several bodies have proposed changes to the powers and duties of the European Parliament. The European Parliament's own proposals have been tabled for scrutiny—EP:A4–0102/95. The European Parliament needs to do more to monitor EC spending, tackle fraud and waste. We have yet to hear a convincing case that the European Parliament needs additional powers which were gained for this purpose. Some new powers which were gained at Maastricht and which could be useful in this connection have yet to be used, for example, temporary committees of inquiry.

Malaysia

Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of States for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the Government Ministers who accompanied the then Secretary of State for Defence when he visited Malaysia on 31 March 1989; and if he will list the Ministers who visited Malaysia in the first six months of 1989. [29341]

Mr. Goodlad: No Ministers accompanied the then Secretary of State for Defence on his visit to Malaysia.

In addition to the Secretary of State for Defence, the following Minister visited Malaysia in the first half of 1989:

Mr. Robert Atkins—Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Industry.

Privatisation

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list those parts of his Department or departmental agencies which were privatised without an in-house bid; if he will indicate the expertise which was absent in his Department or departmental agencies which prevented an in-house bid taking place; which future parts of his Department or departmental agencies he intends to privatise; and which of them do not have the necessary in-house expertise to mount an in-house bid. [29415]

Mr. Goodlad: Since April 1992, no parts of the FCO diplomatic wing or its agency, Wilton Park, have been privatised without an in-house bid.

Two contracts have been let by the Overseas Development Administration without an in-house bid: travel unit messagerial service and daytime security guarding of the London premises. In both cases, a strategic decision was taken to contract out because outside contractors are better equipped to deliver the services.

The following services have already been identified as possible candidates for privatisation:

FCO

Travel accounts unit

Pensions

ODA

Natural Resources Institute

A strategic decision has been taken not to include an in-house bid in the privatisation of the FCO's travel accounts unit, based on the relatively small size of the operation. In-house bids have not been ruled out in the other cases.

Nigeria

Mr. Keith Hill: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what types of lethal military equipment the United Kingdom has supplied to Nigeria's United Nations contingents, to which contingents, and when. [29845]

Mr. David Davis: Although the measures adopted by the EU in December 1993 leave open the possibility of exporting to Nigeria equipment for peacekeeping use, it has been the practice of successive Governments not to reveal details of export licences or applications for licences unless the requirements of confidentiality are outweighed by the public interest.

Eastern Europe (Investment)

Ms Quin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 12 June, Official Report, column 376, what steps would be necessary to obtain the information sought on investment in eastern Europe. [29476]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: It would have been necessary, through our embassies, to approach the authorities in Germany, France, Italy and the Netherlands and/or the authorities in the six recipient countries.

Further research here has revealed a recent OECD publication containing some of the figures requested. I can now provide figures on German, French and Italian investment into the six countries, as shown in the tables.

The publication does not provide figures on UK, Dutch or EU investment into the countries concerned.

Too much significance should not be read into the figures given the problems of data capture, defining investment and determining national origin.

Ms Quin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 12 June, Official Report, column 376, what estimates he has made of the costs which would have been incurred in providing a full answer. [29475]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I refer the hon. Member to my earlier reply. The cost in time and resources needed to pursue the inquiries would clearly have been in excess of £450 and no more accurate estimates were made.

Ms Quin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what contacts he has had with the embassy of the Federal Republic of Germany to discuss levels of German and EU investment into the countries of Hungary, the Czech Republic, Slovakia, Rumania and Bulgaria. [29363]

Mr. David Davis: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by the Minister of State, my right hon. and learned Friend the Member for Grantham (Mr. Hogg), today. The Department is in close contact with the embassy of the Federal Republic of Germany on a wide variety of matters, but we have not recently discussed German and EU investment levels in the countries mentioned.

Foreign Affairs Council

Sir Malcolm Thornton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the outcome of the Foreign Affairs Council on 12 June. [30412]

Mr. David Davis: The A points listed in document 775/95, a copy of which has been placed in the Library of the House, were adopted unanimously.

The Commission was mandated to conclude the negotiations with Israel on a new agreement and report to the Committee of Permanent Representatives, COREPER.

The Council approved the initialling of a Europe agreement with Slovenia.

On former Yugoslavia, the Council expressed appreciation for the contribution of Lord Owen and welcomed his successor, Mr. Bildt. Agreement was given to open negotiations with Croatia for a trade and co-operation agreement.

The presidency concluded that the situation in Chechnya did not yet allow the EU to proceed with signature of the interim agreement with Russia. But the Council agreed to keep the question under review, and to prepare to sign the agreement as soon as possible.

The presidency outlined subjects for discussion at the European Council at Cannes.

The Council agreed to the disbursement of the first tranche—200 million ecu—of a balance of payments loan to the Ukraine.

The Council agreed that negotiations should be opened for partnership and co-operation agreements with the countries of the Transcaucasus, and to open exploratory talks with Uzbekistan.

There was a further discussion of the European development fund. The subject was referred to COREPER for further work.

The Commission reported on the state of play in negotiations for agreements with Morocco and Egypt, and announced details of a new Mediterranean financial regulation. There was a brief exchange over lunch on the forthcoming Barcelona Euro-Med conference.

Negotiating directives for an EU/MERCOSUR framework agreement, plus an accompanying political declaration, were agreed.

Agreement was reached on negotiating directives for a long-term agreement with South Africa, subject to the solution of one outstanding problem by COREPER.

There was a discussion of free trade areas, and the subject was remitted to COREPER for further discussion.

The Council agreed that if Canada dropped its threatened retaliation over compensation for tariff increases resulting from EU enlargement, the Community would introduce tariff reductions on newsprint.

Sir Leon Brittan reported on subjects on the agenda of the World Trade Organisation. The Council took note without debate, and endorsed the procedural conclusions on trade and social standards agreed previously in COREPER.

The Council agreed, following a vote, the Commission's proposed negotiating directives for the revision of the protocols on textiles with the central and eastern European countries. Italy, Portugal and Greece opposed, and made minutes statements.

A copy of the Council's conclusions will be placed in the Library of this House as soon as it is received by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office.

Intergovernmental Conference, Luxembourg

Sir Malcolm Thornton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the meeting of the study group to prepare for the 1996 intergovernmental conference which took place in Luxembourg on 13 and 14 June. [30413]

Mr. David Davis: As the Foreign Secretary's representative, I attended the second meeting of the study group in Luxembourg on 13 and 14 June. The meeting concentrated on institutional arrangements in the European Community—the "first pillar". Members of the group agreed that there was no need to change the overall balance between the central EC institutions—the Council, the Commission and the European Parliament.

In my contribution I stressed the need to arrest centralising tendencies in Europe, and to banish the notion of a European Government in embryo. The European Parliament had acquired important new powers in recent years. The EP needed to demonstrate that it was using its existing powers responsibly, and to the full, for example to secure better value for money from Community programmes and to hold the Commission more closely to account.

I put the case for closer involvement of national Parliaments in the work of the EU, and suggested that we might examine, in particular, whether national Parliaments could play a more active role in the application of the principle of subsidiarity.

With respect to the Council, I repeated my opposition to any extension of majority voting, and I put the case for changes in the voting system to increase democratic legitimacy and to reduce the present bias against large member states.

I argued that with the accession of new member states including perhaps some very small ones there could be a case for re-examining the system of six-monthly rotating presidencies in the EC.

Turning to the Commission, I commended Mr. Santer's emphasis on the need to do "less but better". The Council should take a closer interest in the Commission's legislative programme to help to achieve this. I suggested that we might examine the possibility of requiring the Commission to withdraw proposals which had not been agreed within, say, three years—a "sunset clause".

North Atlantic Assembly

Sir Malcolm Thornton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what changes have been made in the composition of the United Kingdom parliamentary delegation to the North Atlantic Assembly.

Mr. David Davis: The hon. Member for Hampshire, East (Mr. Mates) has replaced the hon. Member for Harrogate (Mr. Banks) as a member of the delegation.

EDUCATION

Research

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what proportion of English higher education departments received a research rating of (a) three or above and (b) five during the recent research assessment exercise; and if she will make a statement. [29041]

Mr. Boswell: The higher education funding bodies are responsible for the conduct of the periodic research assessment exercise. Of the 2,127 submissions made by higher education departments in England to the 1992 research assessment exercise, 62 per cent. received a research rating of three or above; 14 per cent. of the departments received the top rating of five. The Government and the High Education Funding Council for England are committed to the principle of selectivity in the allocation of funding for research. The next research assessment exercise is to be undertaken in 1996.

University Degrees

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what was the proportion of students obtaining (a) first class and (b) upper second class degrees at (i) the university of Oxford, (i) the university of Cambridge, (iii) the university of London and (iv) higher education institutions in England in (1) 1991–92 and (2) 1992–93; and if she will make a statement. [29046]

Mr. Boswell: The proportion of first degree graduates obtaining first class honours [1] is as follows:

Percentage Achieving

	Academic year
	1991–92	1992–93
University of Cambridge	24	24
University of London	10	10
University of Oxford	15	14
Other former UFC funded institutions	8	9
All former UFC funded institutions	10	10

[1] Source: USR Volume 1 "Students and Staff". Data on the number of graduates who obtain upper second class degrees are not published in volume 1 and are not readily available.

The proportion of graduates from former PCFC funded institutions in England who achieved a first class degree or upper second class degree is as follows:

Percentage achieving

	Academic year
	1991–92	1992–93
First class honours	5	5
Upper second class honours	39	40

Students

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what was the average mandatory loans and awards expenditure on each student from England and Wales in 1994–95; what proportion of the figure went on (a) student loans, (b) fee expenditure and (c) maintenance expenditure; what were the corresponding figures for those studying at the universities of (i) Oxford and (ii) Cambridge; and if she will make a statement. [29049]

Mr. Boswell: In the academic year 1993–94, the latest year for which data are available, the average expenditure per mandatory award holder in England and Wales was £3,790 of which 56 per cent. was on fees and 44 per cent. on maintenance.

The average loan to students, including those who do not qualify for mandatory awards, in England and Wales in the academic year 1993–94 was £740.

Separate data in respect of those studying at the universities of Oxford and Cambridge are not collected centrally.

Grant-maintained Schools

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Education, pursuant to her answer of 20 February, Official Report, column 52, when the chairman of the Funding Agency for Schools will reply to the questions on balances and deficits of grant-maintained schools. [29978]

Mr. Robin Squire: I understand that the chief executive of the Funding Agency wrote to the hon. Member on 16 June.

Funding Agency for Schools

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if the remuneration of the chairman and senior staff of the Funding Agency for Schools includes any element of performance-related pay. [29984]

Mr. Robin Squire: The chairman receives a fee with no element of performance-related pay. The chief executive's contract entitles him to receive a non-pensionable cash bonus; the basis for the determination of the bonus is his personal responsibility plan, which is agreed each year with the chairman. The remuneration of other senior staff includes an element of performance-related pay, as is the case for most senior staff employed by non-departmental public bodies whose terms and conditions are analogous to those of the civil service. The pay and conditions of senior staff are overseen by the board's remuneration committee.

Good Shepherd School, Sefton

Mr. Benton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if she will make a statement on the provision of speech therapists at the school of the Good Shepherd, Sefton. [29322]

Mr. Forth: Responsibility for the provision of speech and language services rests with the NHS. I understand that the Department of Health will be asking Sefton health authority to look into provision at the school.

Privatisation

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if she will list those parts of her Department or departmental agencies which were privatised without an in-house bid; if she will indicate the expertise which was absent in her Department or departmental agencies which prevented an in-house bid taking place; which future parts of her Department or departmental agencies she intends to privatise; and which of them do not have the necessary in-house expertise to mount an in-house bid. [29428]

Mr. Boswell: Since the start of the "Competing for Quality" programme in April 1992, my right hon. Friend has not contracted out any parts of the Department or its agencies without an in-house bid.

My right hon. Friend will be inviting expressions of interest for a contract to administer the teachers' superannuation scheme. We shall let a contract only if it would provide better value for money than keeping the administration of the scheme in the public sector. We shall not invite a bid from the Teachers Pensions Agency, which administers the scheme at present, because we are not conducting a market test. But it would be open to the management or staff of the TPA to seek to buy out the agency. Whether or not the administration is contractorised, the scheme itself will stay in the public sector, on its current statutory basis.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Insolvency Service

Mr. Hargreaves: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what targets he has set the Insolvency Service executive agency for 1995–96. [30596]

Mr. Heseltine: Against the Insolvency Service's business plan assumption of a further reduction in the number of compulsory insolvencies to 25,000 in 1995–96, I have set it the target of closing 35,000 cases. Taken together with the number closed in 1994–95, this will mean that nearly 90,000 case closures will have been completed by the service in two years. I also expect the service to continue to place increased emphasis on investigative work and hence exceed the number of disqualification proceedings commenced in 1994–95—930—itself an increase of 100 per cent. on 1993–94.

In addition, I have set the service the following quality of service targets for 1995–96:

—to report to creditors on assets and liabilities within eight weeks in at least 90 per cent. of all cases; and within 12 weeks in 98 per cent. of all cases;

—to hold the initial meeting of creditors within 12 weeks in at least 90 per cent. of all cases; and within four months in 98 per cent. of all cases;

—to submit reports within 10 months in at least 90 per cent. of bankruptcy cases and 80 per cent. of company liquidation cases where there is evidence of criminality;

—to submit disqualification reports within 15 months in at least 80 per cent. of cases where there is evidence of unfit conduct by directors;

—to check and action at least 95 per cent. of payment requisitions within five days or by the due date;

—to reduce by at least 10 per cent. the proportion of open cases that are more than 36 months old, so that there are no more than 1,900 such cases concerned at 31 March 1996.

The service is also required to reduce its unit cost of administering bankruptcy and compulsory liquidation cases by 3 per cent.

In addition, I expect the chief executive of the service to continue to reply within 10 working days to all letters from Members of Parliament delegated to him for reply and to produce audited commercial-style accounts for 1995–96.

I expect the service to complete its contracting-out exercise by 31 March 1996.

Teaching Company Schemes

Mr. Battle: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the teaching company schemes between academical institutions and industry and numbers participating sponsored by the research councils. [29859]

Mr. Ian Taylor: I am replying as my Department has the lead sponsor role for TCS on behalf of all Government Department and research council sponsors.

I have placed in the Library of the House a copy of the latest edition of the "TCS Quarterly Statistical Report", dated 31 March 1995, which includes brief details of all 518 TCS programmes current at that date. Pages 10 to 12 of the report list TCS programmes by academic institution, while pages 3 and 4 list the current TCS programmes by sponsor, including research council sponsors.

BMARC

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade whether BMARC received export credits support from the Export Credits Guarantee Department between 1984 and 1990. [29723]

Mr. Ian Taylor: Yes.

ECGD provided short-term insurance support to BMARC for export transactions to a variety of markets following the issue of a policy to the company in 1990.

In addition, ECGD guaranteed one medium-term transaction for BMARC in May 1988 involving a sale of ammunition valued at just under £1.6 million covered under a line of credit to the Jordan armed forces.

Renewable Energy

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if the funds that had been earmarked for the now cancelled research into a wave power station will be transferred to research into other forms of alternative entry. [28063]

Mr. Page: The answer given by my right hon. Friend the Minister for Industry and Energy on 31 March 1994, Official Report, column 1009, to my hon. Friend the member for Canterbury (Mr. Brazier) on the publication of energy paper 62, set out the Government's policy, strategy and forward programme for new and renewable energy, including closure of the wave programme. As set out in EP62, a copy of which is available in the Library of the House, the forward programme is expected to reduce in value over a 10-year time horizon as the technologies move towards the market and the DTI's task force role diminishes. Resources will be concentrated on key technologies with good prospects of commercial application in the coming decades—such as solar, energy from coppice and waste, wind and fuel cells. Expenditure estimates for the new and renewable energy programme, consistent with EP62, are published in the Department's annual report, a copy of which is also available in the Library of the House.

Irish Imports

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what has been the change in the United Kingdom share of the Irish Republic's market for manufactures following the loss of trade preferences against imports from the EEC Six. [29438]

Mr. Needham: The United Kingdom share of Irish imports was 51 per cent. in 1972 and 36 per cent. in 1993, the latest year information on a consistent basis is available.

Imports of Manufactures

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will provide a further breakdown of the figures contained in the tables in section D of the 1992 annual supplement to the monthly review of external trade statistics, to show for the EEC Six, the other eight EEC countries and the rest of the world the United Kingdom share in each case of their imports of manufactures. [29507]

Mr. Needham: The information requested is given in the table.

No. 1 Victoria Street

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how much it has cost to renovate his Department's building at 1 Victoria street, London. [28945]

Mr. Heseltine [holding answer 19 June 1995]: The Department of Trade and Industry does not own 1 Victoria street. The building was vacated in 1991 after condition surveys had shown substantial deterioration of mechanical and electrical services. The landlord, Legal and General Property, subsequently agreed to commit £59 million—net of VAT—to bring the building up to modern standards, in exchange for a new 25-year lease on commercial terms. DTI will finance the balance of the project costs which are expected to be up to £2.4 million.

Manufacturing Industry

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment he has made of the effect of the Government's monetary and exchange rate policies since 1979 on the rate of return in manufacturing industry. [29441]

Mr. Needham: The net rate of return on capital employed by manufacturing companies rose from 3.3 per cent. in 1979 to 5.8 per cent. in 1993. This reflects an underlying improvement in the performance of manufacturing industry.

Business Initiatives (Women)

Ms Primarolo: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what initiatives his Department has to assist and encourage women who want to start their own business; and how the success of any initiative is monitored and assessed. [29567]

Mr. Page: The Department of Trade and Industry's initiatives for businesses are open to all regardless of gender. All DTI business services are accessible through business links.

Nuclear Accidents

Mr. Simpson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the maximum amount of compensation the privatised nuclear utility will be liable for in the event of a nuclear accident; and if the utility will be required to be insured for that amount. [28598]

Mr. Eggar: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by the then Under-Secretary of State for Industry and Energy to the hon. Member for Blaenau Gwent (Mr. Smith) on 10 January 1995, Official Report, columns 29–30.

Patent Office

Mr. Touhig: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what further plans he has for full privatisation of all Patent Office functions. [28075]

Mr. Ian Taylor: The plans are as set in the answer given to my hon. Friend the Member for Windsor and Maidenhead (Mr. Trend) by my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade on 14 December 1994, Official Report, columns 657–58.

Telephone Numbers

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) if he will publish or place in the Library a list of towns or areas which are expected to run out of telephone numbers by (a) January 1997, (b) January 1998, (c) January 1999 and (d) January 2000 if further action is not taken by the Office of Telecommunications; [29897]

(2) if he will hold an inquiry into Oftel's recent addition of "1" to all telephone numbers; [29893]

(3) what steps he took to secure an undertaking from Oftel that the addition of "1" to all telephone numbers in April would be the last major number change this century; [29895]

(4) what steps he took to ensure that the addition of "1" to all telephone numbers in April would meet the needs of all current and future telephone users; [29894]

(5) if he will estimate the cost to business and individuals of the addition of "1" to all telephone numbers in April; [29892]

(6) if he will ensure that the recommendations of Oftel's consultation into the requirement for new numbers in London, Cardiff, Belfast, Reading, Portsmouth and Southampton are the subject of independent scrutiny. [29896]

Mr. Ian Taylor: My Department welcomes the evidence of increased use of telephones and the demands for new applications of technology in telephony. The need to create new numbers reflects this.

Specific numbering issues are the responsibility of an independent regulator, the Director General of Telecommunications, and I have therefore asked him to write to the hon. Member about the matters he has raised.

TRANSPORT

River Thames

Mr. Forman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the potential of the River Thames for residents and tourists. [28061]

Mr. Norris: Both the River Tnames working group report and the Thames strategy report, the latter launched by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment, recognise the importance of the Thames as a leisure and amenities resource for residents and visitors alike. Both reports make recommendations for maximising transport and recreational use of the river. Work on implementing these recommendations is continuing.

Bull Bars

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what communication he has received from European Commissioner Kinnock on bull bars; and what is his response. [29304]

Mr. Norris: European Commissioner Kinnock wrote to me on 24 May and I replied on 8 June. I have placed a copy of the correspondence in the Library.

Coastguard

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport at what time Falmouth received notification of distress signals issued by two British yachtsmen 110 nautical miles off La Corunna, Spain; when validation was confirmed by the coastguard station; when surface-to-air rescue was dispatched; and when it located the crew. [29332]

Mr. Norris: This is an operational matter for the Coastguard agency. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from C. J. Harris to Ms Joan Walley, dated 21 June 1995:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question as the question deals with an operational matter, for which I have responsibility as Chief Executive.

At 0954 Universal Time Coordinated (UTC) on 5 June 1995 a 'detect only' signal was passed to the UK Mission Control Centre (UKMCC) and the Marine Rescue Coordination Centre (MRCC) Falmouth. This initial satellite 'hit' was "detect only"' that is, the data picked up by the satellite was insufficient to provide a position.

The beacon was registered to the trimaran SEVERALLES CHALLENGE which was known to be participating in the AZAB race (Azores and back race), which departed from Falmouth on 3 June 1995. MRCC attempted to contact the vessel via BT International Radio Station, Portishead while AZAB race control were contacted for the last known position of the vessel.

At 1053 UTC the UKMCC received positive information which indicated that the SEVERALLES CHALLENGE was positioned approximately 110 nautical miles off La Corunna, Spain. As the vessel was within the Spanish Search and Rescue Region the details were passed to MRCC Madrid.

A search and rescue helicopter was despatched from the Marine Rescue Sub Centre La Corunna at 1155 UTC and located SEVERALLES CHALLENGE at 1300 UTC.

Channel Tunnel

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of (a) the balance of payments gains to the United Kingdom tourist industry and (b) the losses in holidays abroad following the construction of the channel tunnel. [29444]

Mr. Watts: None.

Births at Sea

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many ships masters have reported a birth aboard their vessel to a marine superintendent during the last 10 years. [29593]

Mr. Norris: This is an operational matter for the Marine Safety Agency. I have asked the chief executive to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from R. M. Bradley to Mr. Barry Field, dated 21 June 1995:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your question about reports of births on ships.

During the last ten years masters of ships have reported to Department of Transport marine superintendents that there have been twelve births at sea. All births were on UK registered ships. No reports were received of births of UK citizens on non-UK registered ships.

A1 Steering Group

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many times the A1 steering group has met during the last two years; what were the dates of the meetings; what were the principal items on the agenda; and if he will make a statement on the future of the A1 steering group and his Department's representation on it. [27583]

Mr. Watts: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him on 14 June 1995 by the Under-Secretary of State for Scotland, the Minister with responsibility for roads in Scotland, my hon. Friend the Member for Edinburgh, West (Lord James Douglas-Hamilton), Official Report, column 589.

Fatal Accidents

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the current cost of a fatal accident used by his Department's Highways Agency in its cost-benefit analysis used for justifying new highway schemes; and how many fatalities involving HGVs there were in 1991–92, 1992–93, and 1993–94. [27874]

Mr. Watts: The latest estimate of the cost of a fatal accident is £913,140—in 1994 prices and values.

The number of fatalities in accidents involving heavy goods vehicles were:

1991–92: 759 (of which 359 were on trunk roads)

1992–93: 730 (of which 292 were on trunk roads)

1993–94: 677 (of which 307 were on trunk roads)

Estonia Accident

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what was the purpose of his visit to a roll-on roll-off ferry following the sinking of the Estonia; and what was the link between the exercise he witnessed and the disaster in the Baltic sea. [29299]

Dr. Mawhinney: As soon as preliminary investigations linked the cause of the Estonia accident to a failure of the bow door mechanism, I asked the Marine Safety Agency to carry out precautionary checks on the bow doors of all ro-ro ferries operating to and from United Kingdom ports. These inspections involved an examination of the bow door structure and locking system, a hose test to verify the watertight integrity of the doors and checks of surveillance equipment. Operational and reporting procedures were also examined.

I was informed regularly of the progress of the inspection campaign, and I visited a ro-ro ferry in Dover to witness the comprehensive tests that were being carried out by MSA surveyors.

Rail Privatisation

Mr. Speed: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what has been the net profit or loss so far of the preparation for and implementation of rail privatisation. [29337]

Mr. Watts: The net benefit of privatisation will be assessable only after the privatisation process is complete. We fully expect the benefits to passengers, of introducing private sector management and of freeing the railway from the constraints of public sector ownership, to far exceed the costs of restructuring and privatisation.

SCOTLAND

Offshore Installations

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to meet the Scottish Fishermen's Federation to discuss the effect of the abandoning of offshore oil and gas installations on the fishing industry. [28988]

Sir Hector Monro: I have been asked to reply.

Scottish Office Agriculture and Fisheries Department officials have liaised closely with the Scottish Fishermen's Federation on abandonment policy prior to and since the federation submitted its view to the Government's Abandonment Policy Review Committee. I have no plans to meet the federation to discuss this matter.

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what monitoring his Department intends to undertake on the effect on the Scottish fishing industry of the abandonment of offshore oil and gas installations. [28986]

Sir Hector Monro: I have been asked to reply.

The possible impact of abandoned offshore oil and gas installations on the marine environment or on the fishing industry is considered fully as part of the Government's assessment of each abandonment plan. That is described in the Government's Abandonment Policy Review Committee's recent "Guidance Notes for Industry". The monitoring requirements of each abandonment will be specified in the abandonment plan, as necessary.

Dounreay

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will conduct an inquiry into the criticisms of the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority and Her Majesty's industrial pollution inspectorate made by the Committee on Medical Aspects of Radiation in the Environment in relation to their failure to conduct a full investigation of the release of particles at Dounreay; and if he will ensure that UKAEA provides COMARE with all the information in their possession, now and in the future, relevant to their investigation of the Dounreay foreshore. [29195]

Sir Hector Monro: No. Her Majesty's industrial pollution inspectorate has confirmed that it will make available to COMARE any information in its possession that is relevant to COMARE's inquiries. I understand that a similar assurance has been given by UKAEA.

College Lecturers

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what was the total cost of the 1991 Anderson committee of inquiry into training of college lecturers. [28932]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: This matter is the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland. The review of the arrangements for the initial training of further education college lecturers in Scotland was undertaken during the period December 1991 to August 1993. The analysis was undertaken by a review committee, the membership of which was drawn from further and higher education and other interests. Direct costs of the exercise were confined to travelling and subsistence for members of the review committee; and the printing of the report. Total costs in the those respects amounted to approximately £5,500.

Highlands and Islands Airports Ltd.

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will name the consultants who are to conduct the review of private sector involvement in Highland and Islands Airports Ltd.; what is the cost of the exercise; what are their terms of reference; when the consultants are due to report; and if he will undertake to publish the final report. [29315]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Proposals by a number of firms of consultants have been received and are currently being assessed. The successful candidate will be selected by the end of June and will report by mid-October. The study will cost around £60,000. No decision has been taken yet on whether the final report will be published.

The aim of the study will be to advise my right hon. Friend on how the private sector might be involved in all or part of the business of Highlands and Islands Airports Ltd., with the objective of ensuring the most cost-effective delivery of high-quality services to users, both passengers and air transport operators.

The terms of reference for the study make it clear that the airports are seen as essential for the social and economic well-being of the highlands and islands of Scotland and that it is essential that any arrangements should secure the long-term future of those services. The consultants will be asked to advise on a range of options, including: the sale of all or part of the business; franchising all or part of the business to the private sector; and other options for involving private sector finance and/or management skills.

Those options will be considered against a base case of no change in the present arrangements. No decision has been taken at this stage to privatise HIAL of any part of it.

Water Supply

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will meet the chairmen of the water boards to discuss quality and reliability of water supply. [28060]

Mr. Kynoch: The Secretary of State intends to meet chairmen-designate of the new Scottish water authorities in July to discuss a range of issues of mutual interest.

Higher Education

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many people from Scotland were studying at a higher education institution in the United Kingdom in (a) 1993–94 and (b) 1994–95; and if he will make a statement. [29042]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The number of people from Scotland studying at higher education institutions in the United Kingdom, for the latest two years available, is set out in the table:

Number of people from Scotland in UK Higher Education Institutions

	Number
1992–93[1]	97,860
1993–94[2]	103,059

[1] Includes full-time university students only for HEIs in Wales and Northern Ireland.

[2] Includes university students only for HEIs in Wales and Northern Ireland.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what proportion of Scottish higher education departments received a research rating of (a) 3 or above and (b) 5 during the recent research assessment exercise; and if he will make a statement. [29047]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Of the total number of units of assessment for which submissions were made by Scottish higher education institutions, 63 per cent. received a rating of 3 or above and 9 per cent. received a rating of 5.

The 1992 research assessment exercise rated research by units of assessment which do not necessarily coincide with the internal structure of departments in the higher education institutions, and not all departments made submissions of research for assessment.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the average loans and awards expenditure on each student from Scotland in 1994–95; what proportion of the figure went on (a) student loans, (b) fee expenditure and (c) maintenance expenditure; what were the corresponding figures for those studying at the universities of (i) Oxford and (ii) Cambridge; and if he will make a statement. [29048]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: In the academic year 1994–95 the average awards expenditure per student domiciled in Scotland is estimated to be £1,227 on fees and £1,560 on maintenance. The reduction in average fee payments by comparison with earlier years reflects a shift in the overall funding of tuition costs as between institutional grant in aid and individual tuition fees.

The average loan to students domiciled in Scotland, including those who do not qualify for an award, in the academic year 1993–94, the latest for which information is available, was £695.

Separate data in respect of those studying at the universities of Oxford and Cambridge are not available centrally.

Estate Ownership

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the foreign-owned companies which currently own estates in Scotland; which are (a) wholly owned by foreign state Governments and (b) partly owned by foreign Governments; and if he will make a statement. [29745]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: No specific record is maintained for the purpose of identifying foreign companies, owned wholly or partly by foreign state Governments, which own land in Scotland.

Education (Government Expenditure)

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what proportion of identifiable Government expenditure on education in Scotland, including mandatory loans and awards to students, is devoted to (a) primary education, (b) secondary education, (c) further education and (d) higher education; and if he will make a statement. [29043]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Identifiable Government expenditure on education in Scotland in 1993–94 was £3,644 million. That includes expenditure by the Secretary of State directly and by local authorities, and was divided as follows:

	Per cent.
Primary	30.0
Secondary	34.1
Further	7.7
Higher	22.8

The following points are relevant to interpretation of these figures:

1. The percentages do not total to 100 as other items of education expenditure—principally nursery and community education and the careers service—are excluded.

2. The figure of £3,758 million for identifiable Government expenditure on education in 1993–94 included in table 7.6A of Cm 2821—Public Expenditure: Statistical Supplement to the Financial Statement and Budget Report 1995–96—also includes expenditure on recreation and leisure, sport and Gaelic broadcasting.

3. Pupils began secondary education in Scotland at age 12.

4. Further education expenditure includes bursaries paid by local authorities.

5. Higher education expenditure includes the costs of grants—paid by the Student Awards Agency for Scotland—and of student loans received by all Scottish domiciled students undertaking higher education courses. It does not include expenditure on awards or loans for students who are domiciled elsewhere in the United Kingdom but are undertaking courses in Scotland.

6. Some higher education courses are provided at further education colleges; further education courses may also be provided at higher education institutions. The costs of these cannot readily be separately identified and are attributed to the sector of provision.

Small Businesses

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland in which sectors of the economy (a) small businesses and (b) medium-sized businesses are predominantly to be found. [29572]

Mr. Kynoch: Although there is no fixed definition of "small" or "medium-sized" businesses, VAT registration data are available by turnover size band and are often used as a basis for analysis. Sectoral data on the number of VAT-registered legal units, by turnover size band, are available for Scotland in table 3E of Business Monitor PA1003 "Size Analysis of UK Businesses" for various years. Copies are available in the Library.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many people were employed by (a) small businesses and (b) medium-sized businesses in each of the last 10 years; and if he will break these figures down by gender. [29571]

Mr. Kynoch: There is no single official definition of small or medium-sized business. However, data for Scotland on the number of persons employed in census of employment data units, which roughly correspond to workplaces, broken down by employee size band are available for 1984, 1987, 1989 and 1991. Those data can be obtained from the NOMIS database, which can be accessed by the staff of the Library of the House. Information by gender is not available.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his Department's definition of a small business and a medium-sized business. [29569]

Mr. Kynoch: There is no single "official" definition of what constitutes a small or medium-sized business. A range of definitions is used, each valid in its own context. For example, the SMART competition is aimed at businesses with up to 50 employees with an annual turnover not exceeding 5 million ecu or a balance sheet total not exceeding 2 million ecu, whereas the SPUR scheme if open to businesses with no more than 250 employers and an annual turnover not exceeding 20 million ecu or a balance sheet total not exceeding 10 million ecu.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many (a) small businesses and (b) medium-sized businesses were started up in each of the last 10 years; and if he will break these figures down by gender of the entrepreneur. [29570]

Mr. Kynoch: Although there is no fixed definition of "small" or "medium-sized" businesses the vast majority of new business start-ups will, by any definition, be small. The best guide to trends in the number of start-ups in Scotland is given by registrations for VAT. Copies of "VAT registrations and deregistrations, county and district analyses 1980–91" and "VAT registrations and deregistrations, county and district analyses 1992–93" are in the Library. Information is not available on gender of the entrepreneur.

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much land in Sweden is owned by the Scottish Office. [29744]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: None.

Woodland Grants

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will list the foreign-owned companies which have been paid Government grants to plant trees on estates in Scotland in the past five years; and how much each has been paid in Government grants for this purpose; [29742]

(2) if he will list the foreign-owned companies in receipt of Government grants for planting trees on estates in Scotland in 1995–96; and how much has been paid out to each company; [29746]

(3) how much his Department has allocated to pay out to foreign-owned companies to plant trees on estates in Scotland in 1995–96; and how much is allocated to be spent on foreign-owned companies planting trees on Scottish estates in (a) 1996–97 and (b) 1997–98. [29743]

Sir Hector Monro: We do not record the nationality of the owners of companies which have received, or will receive, grants under the woodland grant scheme.

M80

Mr. Norman Hogg: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the present position concerning the proposed construction of the M80 motorway between Stepps and Haggs; and if he will make a statement. [29749]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: In response to an earlier question I had indicated that a decision on the proposed route for the M80 would be taken soon. Because of the scale and complexity of this scheme, its substantial cost and the need to minimise its impact on the environment, further studies have been commissioned. Those are nearing completion.

Research Centres

Mr. Battle: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when the interdisciplinary research centres were last reviewed; and if he will make a statement. [29860]

Mr. Horam: A list of the interdisciplinary research centres is as shown, indicating when they were last reviewed. Reviews are conducted by the funding research councils, as part of each council's normal funding review programme and according to each council's normal monitoring and evaluation review processes.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Yugoslavia

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make it his policy to resist the intervention of the European Union directly or indirectly in the military situation in the former Yugoslavia. [29946]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The EU has no military role in the former Yugoslavia. Forces from EU member states are there under UN and not EU mandates.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what evidence he has to what proportion of atrocities in former Yugoslavia have been committed by each party. [29947]

Mr. Hogg: It is generally regarded, by the UN and other humanitarian organisations, that the Serbs have committed most of the atrocities. However, all parties have been responsible for acts of this kind. We condemn all human rights abuses and atrocities committed in the course of the conflict.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs to what extent his policy in the former Yugoslavia has been influenced by religious considerations. [29951]

Mr. Hogg: Not at all.

Obscene Publications

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the United Kingdom is meeting its obligations under the agreement and convention for the suppression of the circulation of obscene publications; and what steps he is taking to ensure future compliance. [30020]

Mr. Baldry: The 1910 agreement requires contracting states to designate an authority to co-ordinate information and communicate it, where appropriate, to the authorities in other countries. In the United Kingdom, the Home Secretary is the designated authority.

The 1923 convention encourages signatories to introduce domestic and import legislation to curb the trade in obscene publications. The UK meets its main obligations under the convention through the provisions of the Obscene Publications Acts 1959 and 1964 and the Customs Consolidation Act 1876.

Child Abduction

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what has been the work of his Department in the field of child abduction over the past year; and what work is planned in the year ahead. [30389]

Mr. Baldry: We provide support to families in 75 cases worldwide. We initiated an EU demarche urging a range of countries to sign up to the Hague and European conventions. We raised child abduction at the 50th session of the UN Commission on Human Rights and in an EU presidency statement to the Commission on Human Rights. We maintained our funding and commitment to Reunite, the national council for abducted children. We held two meetings with the all-party parliamentary group. We work closely with the Lord Chancellor's Department.

In the year ahead we shall continue to press foreign Governments to sign the conventions and to support the families of abducted children.

Nuclear Tests (France)

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what efforts he is making (a) through the EU and (b) unilaterally to persuade the French Government not to test nuclear weapons in the Pacific; what representations he has received from (i) New Zealand, (ii) Australia, (iii) other Commonwealth countries o this issue; and if he will make a statement. [30175]

Mr. David Davis: We have received representations from a number of Commonwealth Governments, including those of Australia and New Zealand, expressing concern over the French decision to suspend their moratorium on nuclear testing. We understand that concern, but do not believe that a strictly limited programme of tests need affect the prospects for the early conclusion of a comprehensive test ban treaty, which remains our and the international community's main priority.

Anti-personnel Land Mines

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he has taken to introduce controls on the production, stockpiling and transfer of anti-personnel mines apart from the recent extension of the moratorium on the export of anti-personnel land mines from the Untied Kingdom. [31032]

Mr. David Davis: We have been working with the Untied States for some time on ideas for regulating the production, stockpiling and transfer of anti-personnel land mines. I am pleased to announce that we and the United States have reached agreement on proposals for a land mine control programme. These will be discussed at an international meeting in Budapest, Hungary, on 29 and 30 June at which a number of European countries and others from key regions will be represented. Our aim is to reduce the dangers to civilians from anti-personnel land mines, by seeking international agreement to effective controls.

I shall place a summary of the proposed programme in the Library of the House.

Gibraltar

Mr. Booth: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what provision has been made to make payments to certain beneficiaries of the Gibraltar social insurance fund. [31078]

Mr. Baldry: Pending agreement with the Government of Gibraltar on distribution of the assets of the fund, provision has been made for further interim payments to the value of £2 million in the current financial year, following the full draw-down of payments made available to the fund in 1989. Provision for these payments has been made within class II, vote 5.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Child Abduction

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department whether he will make it his policy that the passports of wards of court and other children at risk of child abduction be endorsed with details of relevant court orders. [30393]

Mr. John M. Taylor: Consideration is currently being given by the Lord Chancellor's Department and the Home Office to the question of the endorsement of the passports of children at risk of child abduction. It is not possible at this stage to indicate the likely outcome of this process.

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what has been the work of his Department in the field of child abduction over the past year; and what work is anticipated in the year ahead. [30387]

Mr. Taylor: The child abduction unit within my Department carries out work relating to the Hague convention on child abduction and the European custody convention. In 1994 the unit dealt with 323 new cases, an increase of 18 per cent. on those received in 1993. A further rise in work load is anticipated in the year ahead.

District Judges

Mr. Alton: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many days each of the full-time Liverpool district judges, formerly registrars, have been absent in each of the last 10 years for which the information is available. [28925]

Mr. John M. Taylor: The question concerns a specific operational matter on which the chief executive of the Court Service is best placed to provide an answer and I have accordingly asked the chief executive to reply direct.

Letter from M. D. Huebner to Mr. David Alton, dated 22 June 1995:

The Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, has asked me to reply to your Question about the number of days each Liverpool district judge has been absent.

I should explain that each district judge is expected to sit between 215 and 220 days each year. This includes sitting at a court centre and other official business, such as training and conferences. The table provided in PQ 95/605 shows that in 1993 and 1994 the full-time district judges at Liverpool exceeded the number of days they are expected to sit each year. In these circumstances, it is therefore inappropriate to refer to absences.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department (1) what procedure should be followed by persons who wish the Lord Chancellor to be apprised of matters which are or may be relevant to the exercise of his powers to remove from office or otherwise discipline district judges; [28943]

(2) what powers the Lord Chancellor has to remove district judges from office or otherwise discipline them. [28940]

Mr. Taylor: Under the provisions of the County Courts Act 1984 the Lord Chancellor has power to remove a district judge from office on account of misbehaviour or on account of the district judge's inability to perform the duties of his or her office. The Lord Chancellor is unable to comment on, or intervene in, judicial decisions or the conduct of legal proceedings by a judge. The appropriate recourse in relation to such matters is through the appellate process provided by statute. Persons wishing to make a complaint about the conduct of any member of the judiciary should write to the Lord Chancellor.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department which full-time Liverpool district judges, formerly registrars, have sat in the Liverpool district of the High Court and Liverpool county court in each of the last 10 years for which information is available. [28934]

Mr. Taylor: The question concerns a specific operational matter on which the chief executive of the Court Service is best placed to provide an answer and I have accordingly asked the chief executive to reply direct.

Letter from M. D. Huebner to Mr. David Alton, dated 22 June 1995:

The Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, has asked me to reply to the above Question about the district judges at Liverpool.

[28936]

Mr. Taylor: The question concerns a specific operational matter on which the chief executive of the Court Service is best placed to provide an answer and I have accordingly asked the chief executive to reply direct.

Letter from M. D. Huebner to Mr. David Alton, dated 22 June 1995:

The Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, has asked me to reply to your Question about how much time the Liverpool district judges have spent sitting and on other business in the past ten years.

I should explain that information is available only for the past three years. The following tables show for each year since 1993 the number of days each full-time district judge at Liverpool has spent sitting and on other official business, such as training and conferences. You have also asked for the annual total amount of time each district judge has spent in his official capacity. This figure, which also includes annual leave and sick leave, is given in the final column of each table.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what public expense other than in terms of remuneration has been incurred in respect of maintaining the full-time district judges at Liverpool including the costs or relative proportion thereof (a) buildings, (b) equipment, (c) support staff, (d) pensions and national insurance and (e) other expenses in each of the last 10 years for which information is available. [28937]

Mr. Taylor: The question concerns a specific operational matter on which the chief executive of the Court Service is best placed to provide an answer and I have accordingly asked the chief executive to reply direct.

Letter from M. D. Huebner to Mr. David Alton, dated 22 June 1995:

The Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, has asked me to reply to your Question about the cost of maintaining district judges at Liverpool.

I am sorry to have to tell you that this information is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many complaints have been made about or against full-time Liverpool district judges, formerly registrars, to (i) the Lord Chancellor in person and (ii) the Lord Chancellor's Department in each of the last 10 years for which information is available. [28939]

Mr. Taylor: Records relating to complaints about the conduct of district judges have been kept only since 1992. They are broken down into the following categories: (i) complaints made to the Lord Chancellor via a Member of Parliament and (ii) complaints from all other sources. No complaints are recorded under the first category. Under the second, the figures are as follows:

1995 (part): 1

Mr. Alton: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what documentation or other evidence must be produced by a district judge to the Lord Chancellor's Department to substantiate or justify his absence through illness. [28938]

Mr. Taylor: District judges are expected to notify the Department of any sickness absence within 24 hours of the first day of incapacity and to follow this up with a self-certificate for absences of seven days or less. A doctor's statement is required for absences exceeding seven days.

Civil Legal Aid

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will give for each year since 1979–80 and by each legal aid group or area the total number of legal aid certificates for civil claims involving (a) personal injury claims and (b) mucous membrane disease. [28927]

Mr. John M. Taylor: The total number of certificates issued in respect of personal injury claims in each year since 1990–91, the first year for which these figures are available, is as follows:

1991–92: 82,102
1992–93: 92,071
1993–94: 81,550

It is not possible to break these figures down by legal aid area, nor is it possible to identify separately certificates issued in respect of mucous membrane disease.

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will give for each year since 1979–80 and by each legal aid group or area the total number of appeals against the withdrawal of legal aid certificates for civil claims involving (a) personal injury claims and (b) mucous membrane disease. [28928]

Mr. Taylor: The information requested is not available.

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what is the average cost of civil legal aid excluding matrimonial and family proceedings for personal injury claims and mucous membrane disease for each legal aid group or area. [28929]

Mr. Taylor: The average cost of civil legal aid bills in personal injury cases in 1994–95 by legal aid board area was:

London	4,724.68
South Eastern	3,721.27
Southern	3,923.94
South Western	3,510.97
South Wales	1,971.24
West Midland	2,203.33
East Midland	2,660.46
Eastern	3,441.09
Northern	1,695.75
North Eastern	2,584.09
North Western	2,609.15
Chester and North Wales	2,473.23
Merseyside	1,744.52
All offices	2,712.71

The information requested in respect of mucous membrane disease is not separately identifiable on the legal aid board's computer systems and, therefore, it is not possible to provide separate figures for that category of case.

TREASURY

Rent-a-room Tax

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what would be the cost to the Exchequer of extending the rent-a-room tax allowance to all tenanted property. [28883]

Sir George Young: The rent-a-room scheme was introduced in the Finance (No. 2) Act 1992. It applies to individual owner occupiers and tenants who let furnished accommodation in their only or main home.

Under this scheme gross annual rents from this sort of letting which do not exceed £3,250 per annum for one qualifying individual, or £1,625 per annum; for more than one, are exempt from tax altogether. Individuals who receive income which exceeds £3,250, or £1,625, in a year are able to choose between paying tax on it in the ordinary way—that is on the balance of gross receipts after actual expenses—or paying tax only on the amount by which their gross receipts exceed £3,250, or £1,625, without any relief for actual expenses.

The annual cost of extending the rent-a-room allowance to all individual landlords of tenanted property would be £250 million, without allowing for any behavioural effects which would increase the cost.

Visitor Accommodation (VAT)

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish a table showing the rate of VAT which is chargeable on visitor accommodation in each of the EU member states; and what is his estimate of the net loss to the Treasury if a level of eight per cent. VAT were applicable in the United Kingdom to such accommodation. [29925]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The information requested is in the tables. No figures for VAT from hotels and holiday accommodation are available.

Company Cars

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what are the current tax reliefs and exemptions available for company cars; and what was the cost of such reliefs and exemptions in (a) 1994–95 and (b) 1995–96. [30095]

Sir George Young: The discounts, for business mileage and for older cars, from the tax charge on the benefit of private use of a company car are regarded as part of the charging structure, rather than as specific exemptions. The exemption for car accessories for the disabled, introduced in the Finance Act 1995, is expected to have negligible cost for 1995–96.

Arms Exports

Mr. Hain: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many Customs and Excise staff were responsible for processing arms exports for each year since 1979. [29333]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answer 19 June 1995]: Customs' control of arms exports is integrated into general export procedures. It is not possible separately to identify numbers of staff engaged in processing any particular type of export consignments.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Recycling

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Chairman of the Administration Committee what steps are being taken to increase the amount of recycling of all types of waste product by the Houses of Parliament.

Mr. Michael J. Martin: The policy of the two Houses is to recycle all waste matter which can reasonably be segregated and recycled. The process is audited to ensure compliance with the Palace's waste collection contract. Waste which is unsuitable for recycling is taken to an authorised landfill site for disposal. Further segregation before collection is precluded by space and staffing constraints.

PRIME MINISTER

Engagements

Sir Peter Tapsell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Thursday 22 June. [28550]

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Thursday 22 June. [28549]

The Prime Minister: This morning I presided at a meeting of the Cabinet and had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House, I shall be having further meetings later today.

Singapore

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Prime Minister on what occasions since 1984 the Government have made representations to the Government of Singapore about the activities of a company called Charter Industries of Singapore. [29726]

The Prime Minister: Chartered Industries of Singapore are part of the Government-owned Singapore technologies group. The British high commission, in the course of its export promotion activities, has regular discussions with the Singapore Ministry of Defence, which may include reference to Chartered Industries of Singapore.

HEALTH

Asthma

Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many deaths of children aged under 17 years were caused by asthma in each of the past five years. [29091]

Mr. Sackville: The following is the information deaths coded to Asthma (International Classification of Diseases, 9th Revision, code 493) as underlying cause to children aged between 28 days[1] and up to 16 years of age, England and Wales 1989–1993.

Numbers

Year	Males	Females	Total
1989	21	11	32
1990	30	12	42
1991	26	14	40
1992	15	9	24
1993	11	11	22

[1] For deaths at ages less than 28 days it is not possible to derive an underlying cause of death. However between 1989–93 there were no deaths under 28 days of age with an infant mention of Asthma.

Special Transitional Grant

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer of 13 June, Official Report, column 429, if she will list those authorities that were unable to spend 85 per cent. of their special transitional grant for 1993–94 in the independent sector. [29551]

Mr. Bowis: We are not yet able to give a complete list of those authorities which have failed to satisfy the 85 per cent. condition on the special transitional grant for 1993–94. This depends on the resolution of reports raised on the audited returns of a number of local authorities by district auditors. Inquiries are being pursued with the district auditors and the local authorities as appropriate.

Bristol Royal Infirmary

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will (a) publish, or (b) place in the Library the submissions made in early 1992 by Dr. Bolsin expressing concerns about arterial switch operations on paediatric patients at the Bristol Royal infirmary. [29515]

Mr. Sackville: The Department did not receive a submission from Dr. Bolsin in 1992.

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what conclusions were drawn by officials from her Department who visited the Bristol Royal infirmary in July 1994 and considered the performance of arterial switch operations on paediatric patients at that hospital. [29517]

Mr. Sackville: An official visited Bristol Royal infirmary in July 1994 but this was on a matter unconnected with arterial switch operations.

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will (a) publish or (b) place in the Library the report submitted earlier this year by Marc R. De Leval and Stuart Hunter regarding the performance of arterial switch operations on paediatric patients at the Bristol Royal infirmary. [29516]

Mr. Sackville: The report was commissioned by Dr. John Roylance, chief executive of United Bristol hospitals trust. Inquiries regarding the report should be directed to Dr. Roylance.

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what sources informed her Department's decision to instruct the discontinuation in January of the performance of arterial switch operations on paediatric patients at the Bristol Royal infirmary. [29518]

Mr. Sackville: The Department did not instruct the trust to discontinue arterial switch operations.

In-House Bids

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list those parts of her Department or departmental agencies which were privatised without an in-house bid; if she will indicate the expertise which was absent in her Department or departmental agencies which prevented an in-house bid from taking place; which future parts of her Department or departmental agencies she intends to privatise; and which of them do not have the necessary in-house expertise to mount an in-house bid. [29427]

Mr. Sackville: During the period 1 April 1992 to 31 March 1995, the Department contracted out four activities without in-house bids: the welfare food scheme; the provision of office services at Quarry house, Leeds; security services at Richmond house; and building management for part of the London estate. In the case of the latter, the private sector was better equipped to deliver the service and to advise on the new technology that was required. The decision to contract out the other three activities was taken for management and operational reasons.

Contracting out is under consideration in a number of other areas but we have no firm plans as yet.

Residential Care

Mr. Wicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people were in residential and nursing homes in November 1994 whose care was being purchased by the local authority social services department following an assessment of their needs for care. [29345]

Mr. Bowis: The information available centrally relates to the position as at 31 March 1994 and was published in statistical bulletin 1994/13 "Personal Social Services: Residential Accommodation in England 1994", copies of which are available in the Library.

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the total number of people receiving care in (a) nursing homes and (b) residential homes; and how many are being financed by (i) the local health authority, (ii) benefits, (iii) community care payments by local authorities and (iv) their own resources. [29714]

Mr. Bowis: The available information is summarised in the table. No information is routinely available on numbers of people financed by their own resources or by the local health authority.

[4] Sources of financial support are not mutually exclusive. Residents may receive financial support from a number of different sources, including both income support and local authority support, as well as using their own resources.

Hospital Discharge

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate she has made of the number of beds blocked as a result of hospitals being unable to discharge patients due to the lack of appropriate arrangements being made by social services departments for their care in the community. [29711]

Mr. Bowis: The information is not available in the form requested. The results of a survey of hospital discharge were published in "Community Care Monitoring Report 1994" copies of which are available in the Library.

Dental Services

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients have been treated by dentists (a) within the national health service and (b) privately each year since 1979. [29641]

Mr. Malone: National health service dental treatment may be provided by the general dental service, the community dental service or the hospital dental service. Information on the general dental service and the community dental service is shown in table 1. For the general dental service, information is available centrally only about the number of courses of treatment administered to patients, rather than the number of patients treated. Since October 1990, the majority of treatments for children have been carried out under a capitation scheme. Therefore, since 1989–90 the number of courses of treatment recorded for children represents only a partial picture of the number of children receiving treatment.

For the hospital dental service, the information available is for episodes completed and first referrals, rather than the number of patients treated. The information is shown in table 2.

Information on private treatments is not available centrally.

Milk Consumption

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what studies have been carried out by her Department on the effect on the health of the population of the level of milk consumption. [29616]

Mr. Sackville: No studies have been carried out by the Department of Health on the effect of the level of milk consumption on the health of the population in general.

Community Care

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the value of the independent living transfer element of the community care transfer funding for 1996–97 and future years (a) in total and (b) for each local authority; how it will be identified; and what plans he has to make new arrangements relating to it. [29769]

Mr. Bowis: Final decisions on these matters have yet to be taken. I shall be consulting the local authority associations later this year.

Diet

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what advice she gives to the public on the importance of milk and cheese to a balanced diet. [29591]

Mr. Sackville: The Department of Health's nutrition task force, in conjunction with the Health Education Authority and the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, published the "National Food Guide, The Balance of Good Health", in July 1994. This shows that milk and dairy foods can make an important contribution to a balanced diet. It advises people to choose lower fat versions whenever they can. Copies of the "National Food Guide" will be placed in the Library.

Foetuses

Mr. Patten: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer of 21 April, Official Report, column 310, what plans she has for new research following that completed for the Department in 1988 by Dr. Maria Fitzgerald into whether foetuses feel pain while being aborted. [30021]

Mr. Sackville: The Department recently asked Dr. Maria Fitzgerald to update her original report. A copy of her second report entitled "Foetal Pain: an update of current scientific knowledge" will be placed in the Library.

Consultants

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the number of consultants in whole-time equivalents in each of the last five years. [30425]

Mr. Malone: The information is shown in the table.

Hospital medical consultants:
Whole-time equivalents England at 30 September each year

Year	Consultants
1989	13,670
1990	14,190
1991	14,500
1992	14,850
1993	15,210

Note: All figures rounded to the nearest 10.

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the average number of hours worked by consultants in any available year in each of the last 10 years. [30427]

Mr. Malone: This information is not routinely collected by the Department. However, data are available from surveys carried out by the Office of Manpower Economics in 1989—the results were published in the 20th (1990) report of the Doctors and Dentists Review Body—and by the Monopolies and Mergers Commission, published in 1994.

The OME gave average weekly hours spent on all national health service activities including emergency recall in 1989 as:

Contract type	Hours
Whole time	49.4
Maximum part-time (MPT)	47.7
Other part-time	36.3
Honorary	54.4
Whole time and MPT	48.6

The MMC estimated that mean weekly hours spent by consultants on NHS and private practice work in 1992 were as follows:

Contract type	NHS hours	Private practice hours
Whole time	53	6
Maximum part-time	51	11
Less than maximum part-time	45	16

Consultants on whole-time and maximum part-time contracts are required to devote substantially the whole of their professional time to NHS work. Maximum part-time consultants forgo one eleventh of their salary in return for no limit on private practice earnings.

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information she has on the proportion of time spent by consultants on administration in the last 10 years. [30252]

Mr. Malone: This information is not available centrally.

NHS Trusts

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if candidates for management posts at national health service trusts are obliged to declare personal connections to trust chairmen; and if chairmen are required to make declarations in such circumstances. [28326]

Mr. Malone: All board members are required to subscribe to the code of conduct for national health service boards, which makes it clear that chairman and board members should act impartially and should not be influenced by social or business relationships when acting on behalf of the trust. When recruiting for management posts, trusts should take appropriate steps to ensure that potential conflicts of interest are identified and dealt with in line with the code.

Appetite Suppressants

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what evidence she has of side effects and addiction caused by appetite suppressant drugs. [29307]

Mr. Sackville: There are currently five drug substances licensed for use as appetite suppressants—dexfenfluramine, diethylproprion, fenfluramine, mazindol, and phenteramine. All these medicines have a stimulatory effect on the nervous system and it is recognised that long-term use may lead to dependence. Appetite suppressants are only indicated for short-term use, limited to a maximum of three to six months. The numbers of adverse drug reactions reported through the yellow card scheme for these medicines are shown in the table. A report of a suspected adverse reaction does not necessarily mean that it was caused by the drug. The larger number of reactions with dexfenfluramine and fenfluramine reflects their wider usage and the five drugs cannot be compared directly using these figures.

Other than dependence, recognised adverse reactions to appetite suppressants include systematic and pulmonary hypertension, insomnia, agitation, depression, psychosis, diarrhoea, headache and rash. These effects are included in the product information on these medicines provided to doctors.

Adverse reactions reported to the Medicines Control Agency for appetite suppressants

Drug	Total number of reactions	Number of reactions indication dependence
Dexfenfluramine	1,518	12
Diethylpropion	350	35
Fenfluramine	1,071	30
Mazindol	410	0
Phenteramine	202	3

Backlog Maintenance

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what were the estimates of capital expenditure required for backlog maintenance for each region for each year since 1991; and what was the value of the actual backlog maintenance programme for each year since 1991 in each region. [29533]

Mr. Sackville: The available information is shown in the table.

Both capital and revenue expenditure may be used to meet backlog maintenance costs. Expenditure figures for this purpose are not separately identified.

The figures in the table indicate the estimated cost at the end of each financial year for clearing repairs and bringing the estate up to a satisfactory condition. From 1991–92 they include an additional element for meeting statutory and safety standards arising from the removal of Crown immunity to the national health service.

Capital Revenue Expenditure

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what were the outturn figures for each regional health authority of the capital and revenue expenditure for 1994–95; and what were the revenue and capital allocations for each region for 1994–95. [29534]

Mr. Sackville: The 1994–95 total revenue and capital cash limits for regions are shown in the table. The split between revenue and capital will not be known until figures for permitted virement between capital and revenue have been reported by regions. On the basis of total cash drawings, outturn for all regions is expected to equal cash limits. Final figures on attribution between revenue and capital cash limits and outturn will be available at the end of July.

Ms Coffey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people were admitted under the Mental Health Act 1983 as a percentage of total admissions for the last five years for which figures are available, broken down into health authorities. [29905]

Mr. Bowis: Information on the number of patients is not available centrally as some patients may be admitted more than once. Information on the number of formal admissions under the Mental Health Act 1983 and other legislation as a percentage of total admissions in the psychiatric specialities by region of treatment is shown in the table. Comparable data are not available for the special health authorities.

Bull Bars

Mrs Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the number of child and adult deaths caused each year by bull bars on vehicles. [30253]

Mr. Sackville: This information is not available centrally.

Assaults

Mrs Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on trends in assaults in casualty departments in the last five years. [30295]

Mr. Sackville: Information on assaults in casualty departments is not available centrally.

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many assaults have taken place on NHS premises in each of the last five years; and how many have taken place in casualty departments. [30296]

Mr. Sakville: This is a matter for local management and information is not available centrally.

Casualty Departments

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of casualty departments have a designated area for the assessment of patients with psychiatric problems and specialist personnel to do this assessment. [30294]

Mr. Sackville: The information is not available centrally.

Medical Students and Consultants

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of (a) medical students and (b) consultants were women in each of the last five years. [30250]

Mr. Malone: The table shows the percentage of women medical students and consultants in the years 1989 to 1993 in England. We do not yet have figures for women medical students and consultants for 1994.

Student	1,467	1,544	1,576	1,721	1,720

Consultant	2,256	2,418	2,540	2,688	2,837
Per cent.	15	16	16	17	17

Note:
The figures for medical students are taken for academic years starting in the year shown. Consultant figures are as at 30 September.

Junior Doctors' Hours

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to issue guidance on the minimum amount of sleep a junior doctor should have in a 24-hour period and in one week. [30254]

Mr. Malone: None.

We continue to make significant progress through the new deal on junior doctors' hours, copies of which are available in the Library, to reduce both contracted and actual hours of work.

The priority new deal target this year is to see that no junior doctor works more than 56 hours a week on average during their contracted duty period. Ensuring that juniors benefit from adequate rest periods means that this target can more easily be met.

Childhood Psychosis (Schools)

Mrs. Golding: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps she is taking to ensure that local education authorities provide sufficient appropriate special school places for children who suffer from autism and other forms of early childhood psychosis. [29085]

Mr. Forth: I have been asked to reply.

The assessment of children with autism and early childhood psychosis and the identification of a suitable school for them is the responsibility of the local education authority in whose area they live. The appropriate school for such children will not always be a special school. It may be a mainstream school or in a specialist unit attached to a mainstream school.

Passive Smoking

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps she is taking to protect workers and customers in the tourism and leisure industry from the effects of passive smoking. [29647]

Mr. Oppenheim: I have been asked to reply.

The Government's view is that passive smoking can best be addressed by voluntary means. To this end, the Health and Safety Executive has issued guidance to employers calling on them to adopt smoking policies to protect workers from the effects of environmental tobacco smoke. The Department of the Environment has issued a code of practice for owners and managers of public places.

ENVIRONMENT

Offshore Installations

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his Department's policy on the abandonment of offshore oil and gas installations; how many representations he has received on the subject; and if he will make a statement. [28989]

Mr. Atkins: The Government's policy on the abandonment of offshore oil and gas installations is that the operators responsible should establish the best practicable environmental option in the light of a detailed case-by-case examination, thus complying with the United Kingdom's international commitments. My Department has received a few dozen representations, mainly about an individual case.

Nuclear Waste

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he is taking to ensure that all nuclear waste imported into the United Kingdom for recycling is safely transported and stored. [29640]

Mr. Atkins: The transport of radioactive materials is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport; the storage of radioactive materials on nuclear licensed sites is a matter for the Health and Safety Executive.

Sonic Repellents

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what measures exist to ensure that companies test sonic repellents to determine the physiological and wider effects of their devices on marine wildlife before they are put into commercial operation.

Mr. Atkins: I am not aware of any evidence to suggest that such devices in use represent a threat to marine wildlife. The Department, jointly, with the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, is sponsoring Loughborough university to carry out research into acoustic position fixing devices, and the use of passive deterrents, on fishing nets, aimed at reducing cetacean fatalities through bycatches.

Rents

Mr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what studies he has commissioned or evaluated in respect of possible regulation of private rents. [29604]

Mr. Curry: None.

Mr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what estimate his Department has of the average current market rent for (a) a bedsit, (b) a studio flat, (c) a two bedroom flat and (d) a four bedroom home in (i) the country as a whole and (ii) each region. [29605]

Mr. Curry: The most recent available information on estimated average market rents in England for 1993–94, is as follows:

	£ a week
Bedsit	40
Studio flat	67
Two bedroom flat	88

The estimates are from the survey of English housing 1993–94. Like all estimates from household surveys they are subject to sampling error. The sample is not large enough to provide a regional breakdown and the sample of four bedroom properties with market rents is too small to provide a reliable estimate for England.

Mr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the bodies that have sent representations to him asking for private rent levels to be regulated. [29603]

Mr. Curry: None.

Architects (Registration) Acts

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will introduce legislation to amend the Architects (Registration) Acts 1931 to 1969; and if he will make a statement. [29970]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: The need for reform of this legislation is accepted. We are seeking an early legislative opportunity bearing in mind other pressures on the programme.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list by shire county the amounts of county fund revenue reserves each is budgeting to hold at the end of 1995–96 excluding estimated balances held by schools under local management of schools; and what percentage this represents of the budget requirements for 1995–96. [26855]

Mr. Robert B. Jones [holding answer 6 June 1995]: The following estimates of the level of reserves at 31 March 1996, excluding schools balances, are calculated from authorities' planned use of reserves in their budgets for 1995–96 as reported on their revenue account return. These reserves include amounts, which may be significant in some cases, which may be earmarked for specific purposes and thus not be available to the council for general use. Further information, including estimates of the split between earmarked and unallocated reserves at the beginning of 1995–96, is currently being collected by my Department via an ad-hoc survey of revenue reserves, but the following figures do not incorporate any amendments which may be made as a result of that survey.

Council Tax

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what action he proposes following the High Court decision by Mr. Justice Ognall on the appeal by the Inland Revenue on the separate valuation for council tax purposes of annexes set aside in houses for elderly relatives; and if he will make a statement. [30022]

Mr. Curry: We will study the full text of the judgment as soon as it is available, in order to decide what action may be necessary. Our current understanding is that it affects only a small number of cases where there is an unresolved dispute as to whether a property contains one dwelling or more than one dwelling for council tax purposes.

The ruling, as we understand it pending full examination of the transcript, does not mean that thousands of families caring for elderly relatives are likely to face additional back dated council tax bills. The High Court has not said that either granny annexs generally or the particular granny annexs which were the subject of these cases are liable to separate council tax. They have merely said that the valuation tribunals concerned took irrelevant factors into account in taking their decisions. They have remitted the cases to the tribunals for reconsideration.

The Government do not believe, and the judgment does not appear to suggest, that families should be financially penalised for sharing their home with an elderly relative or relatives.

Local Government Commission

Sir John Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment for which districts he will direct the Local Government Commission to carry out new reviews, and if he will make a statement. [30933]

Mr. Gummer: In my statements of 2 and 21 March I said that I would be directing a newly constituted commission to carry out new structure reviews of a small number of individual districts.

I named 20 districts which I had in mind to refer to the commission. I said that nine of these would definitely be referred; for the remaining 11 we would hold meetings with the district councils and their county councils before coming to a view. That programme of meetings is now complete. I have considered all the arguments and decided that all 20 districts should be referred to the Commission for new reviews. They are: Basildon, Blackburn, Blackpool, Broxtowe, Dartford, Exeter, Gedling, Gillingham, Gloucester, Gravesham, Halton, Huntingdonshire, Northampton, Norwich, Peterborough, Rochester upon Medway, Rushcliffe, Thurrock, Warrington, and the Wrekin.

I also said that, while I would consider requests from other districts to be reviewed, it was very unlikely that I should want to add significantly to the number of referrals to the commission. I have carefully considered all the requests which I have received, and in the light of those representations I have concluded that the district of Spelthorne in Surrey should be added to the list of reviews. Spelthorne is in many ways similar to the Berkshire districts which are to be given unitary status, and the proximity of Heathrow airport creates unusual and specific problems for the authority. Against that background I judge that the district's case for unitary status deserves to be considered.

We have concluded that in these cases the arguments are substantial enough to warrant further consideration. It will be for the commission to recommend whether or not it should have unitary status. It will then be for me to accept, modify or reject the proposals and Parliament ultimately to decide. I have not been convinced by the representations from other districts and have therefore concluded that no others should be referred to the commission for review.

The commission will be directed to carry out these reviews with effect from the beginning of July. All of them will be carried out under new guidance to the commission. We have consulted on a draft and I shall publish the final version in the next few days, in time for the commission to start work promptly.

I have also considered further the case of Rutland, in particular the implications for costs and service delivery, following my statement of 21 March. Rutland has a very clear sense of local identity and I am now satisfied that a unitary authority in Rutland would best reflect the identities and interests of the local community and secure effective and convenient local government. I have therefore decided to accept the commission's recommendation for Rutland to be given unitary status. We shall be consulting in due course on a draft order to give effect to that decision.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Offshore Installations

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate his Department has made of the effect on fishing opportunities of the abandonment of offshore oil and gas installations. [28985]

Mr. Jack: My Department is contributing to an interdepartmental review of offshore abandonment policy. The committee charged with this work has prepared a consultative document, "Guidance Notes for Industry", setting out the Government's policy and procedures on offshore abandonment and this has been sent to fishermen's organisations and other interested bodies to seek their views. Copies have been placed in the Library of the House.

Brent Spar

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what consideration he has given to a memorandum by W. McMinn of his Department's fisheries laboratory for Dr. John Campbell, dated 6 December 1993, dealing with the contents of the Brent Spar storage unit. [30245]

Mr. Jack: The memorandum prepared by fisheries scientists does not require further consideration in the context of deep sea disposal as the remarks made related to the removal of sludge and ballast water for disposal in coastal waters.

Veterinary Products

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what veterinary products containing organophosphorous compounds have been licensed for use in sheep dipping since 1972; and if he will give their proprietary name, the manufacturing company, the exact ingredients and the date of licence in each case. [29733]

National Lottery

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage (1) what is the average prize received by winners in (a) the national lottery and (b) the national lottery scratch card competition; [30028]

(2) on what date Camelot received income from the national lottery which completed recoupment of its initial investment; and on what date this had been expected when the contract was signed. [30027]

Mr. Dorrell: This is an operational matter for Camelot Group plc. I have therefore asked the director-general of the national lottery, who is responsible for regulating the operation of the Lottery, to write to the hon. Member, placing copies of his response in the Libraries of the House.

Advisory Council on Libraries

Mr. Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage, what plans he has to revise the membership of the Advisory Council on Libraries following the local election results on 4 May. [30170]

Mr. Dorrell: None.

Film Industry

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what were the costs of the compilation, publication and distribution of his Department's publication on the British film industry. [29755]

Mr. Dorrell: The document was published as a Command Paper by HMSO, which has borne the printing and publishing costs with the aim of recovering these from sales revenue. My Department incurred additional production and distribution costs of approximately £14,150, including VAT.

Rugby

Mr. Lord: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will make a statement on his Department's response to the third report of the National Heritage Select Committee's report on Rugby League and Rugby Union, HC (1994–95) 276. [29902]

Mr. Dorrell: I am pleased to be able to announce the following appointments to the Library and Information Commission:

Douglas Adams—author

Mark Wood—Reuters

Dr. Sandra Ward—Glaxo

Sir Charles Chadwyck-Healey — chairman of Chadwyck-Healey Publishing

Rabbi Julia Neuberger—Camden and Islington community health service NHS trust

I am confident that with the breadth and depth of experience this membership represents, the new commission is well equipped to deal with all the issues on which I originally anticipated it working.

Churchill Papers

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if any person associated with the Winston Churchill memorial trust sought to interest him or his predecessor in the possible purchase for the nation of the Churchill papers prior to the acquisition of the papers by the national heritage memorial fund. [29854]

Mr. Dorrell: Neither I nor my predecessor were ever approached with any specific proposal by the Churchill Archive settlement trust to purchase the papers direct.

Memorial Fund

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for national heritage what responsibility he has for ensuring that the national heritage memorial fund operates in such a way as to secure economy and value for money in relation to its acquisitions policy. [29654]

Mr. Dorrell: The primary responsibility for securing economy and value for money in the operations of the national heritage memorial fund lies with the trustees and the accounting officer of the fund. These responsibilities are established by way of a financial memorandum agreed between my Department and the fund and the directions I have issued to them in accordance with section 26(3) of the National Lottery etc. Act 1993 for securing the proper management and control of the money paid to them.

Mr. Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will list the membership and terms of appointment of the national heritage memorial fund. [29656]

Mr. Dorrell: There are currently 14 trustees of the National Heritage memorial fund, each appointed for a term of three years from the dates indicated.

TRANSPORT

Rail Franchises

Ms Glenda Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what discussions he has had with the franchising director concerning the eligibility of Compagnie Generale Des Eaux to receive an invitation to tender for rail franchises, as defined by clause 26, subsection (3) of the Railways Act 1993; [30171]

(2) what guidance he has given to the franchising director regarding his duties as defined by clause 26, subsection (3) of the Railways Act 1993. [30172]

Mr. Watts: None.

Ms Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport as of 17 June how many companies, organisations or individuals have been refused an invitation to tender for private rail franchises for reasons of (a) an inappropriate financial position, (b) inappropriate managerial competence and (c) not being an appropriate person as defined by clause 26, subsection (3) of the Railways Act 1993. [30173]

Mr. Watts: This information is commercially confidential.

Rail Fares

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what was the average change in rail fares between (a) 1965 and 1979 and (b) 1979 and 1995. [30248]

Mr. Watts: The information requested is not available for the period between 1965 and 1979. Based on a basket of over 2,000 fares, the average annual change in British Rail fares between 1971–72 and 1978–79 was 2.7 per cent. in real terms. Between 1978–79 and 1994–95, the average annual change was 1.9 per cent. in real terms.

"The Way Ahead"

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what were the costs of the compilation, publication and distribution of his Department's publication, "Transport: The Way Ahead". [29756]

Dr. Mawhinney: The costs of design, printing, compilation and distribution of "The Way Ahead" were £29,000.

Road Construction

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list annual outturn and planned expenditure on new construction of roads in England, as defined in figure 22 of his Department's "Transport Report 1995", for the period 1979–80 to 1997–98 in (a) cash terms, (b) constant prices and (c) constant prices allowing for the introduction of value added tax on motorway and trunk road improvement contracts let after 1 April 1989. [29532]

Mr. Watts: The information requested regarding new construction outturn and expenditure in cash terms and constant prices is set out in the table.

The effect of VAT is more difficult to determine because:

complex transitional arrangements applied when VAT on construction contracts was introduced in 1989;

VAT does not apply uniformly to all costs; and the Department's accounting records do not identify separately VAT that is not recoverable. To identify this would involve examining every contract and this could be done only at a disproportionate cost.

Contractors

Ms Glenda Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list those consultant, outside organisations and individuals employed by his Department in each year since 1990, the purposes of their employment and the total payments made to those contractors. [30177]

Mr. Norris: I will write to the hon. Member with details and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Pollution Report

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects the Government's response to the Royal Commission on environmental pollution report on transport to be published. [29491]

Mr. Norris: Decisions on the Government's response will be taken in the light of the national debate on transport policy initiated by the Secretary of State and outlined in "Transport: The Way ahead", published on 12 June.

Heathrow

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make it his policy to resist any attempt by the European Commission to decide directly or indirectly how many aircraft may fly over west London on their way to Heathrow and at what times of day. [29446]

Mr. Norris: Yes.

Emergency Landings

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list by airport the number of emergency landings that have taken place in Scotland in the past five years. [30015]

Mr. Norris: This information is not held by the Department or by the Civil Aviation Authority.

Driving Tests (Impersonations)

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many driving tests took place in 1994–95; and what was the estimated number of impersonations that occurred. [30461]

Mr. Norris: The number of driving tests that took place in 1994–95 was 1,649,570. A total of 282 possible impersonations were queried. There were 33 convictions.

Departmental Scientists

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many scientists there are in his Department, listed by grade. [30218]

Mr. Norris: According to the Department's personnel information system, my Department, including executive agencies, had 338 staff in either a science grade or science discipline. A breakdown by grade is shown in the following table:

Grade title	Staff
Grade 4	1
Grade 5	4

Marchioness Disaster

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what considerations underlay the decision that there should be no public inquiry into the Marchioness disaster in the immediate aftermath of the disaster; and who was responsible for this decision. [29319]

Mr. Norris: The power to order a formal investigation into a maritime casualty rests with the Secretary of State for Transport. Following the loss of the Marchioness, Transport Ministers of the day decided that the use of the new powers available under the Merchant Shipping Act 1988 were the most appropriate way of establishing the cause of the tragedy and of identifying what lessons could be learnt to avoid a recurrence. The chief inspector of marine accidents ordered an investigation of the incident, the results of which were published as a Marine Accident Investigation Branch report, on 15 August 1991. The report's findings were subsequently endorsed by an inquest jury.

EDUCATION

Drug Education Programmes

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what drug education programmes in (a) the United Kingdom or (b) elsewhere have resulted in a reduction in drug use. [29308]

Mr. Forth: There is some evidence from outside the United Kingdom that information can play a vital part in reducing demand for drugs. For example, research undertaken by the United States' National Institute on Drug Abuse published in 1991 showed that "information, presented in a realistic and credible fashion, plays a vital part in reducing the demand for a drug".

The Government are clear that education has a key part to play in preventing drug misuse amongst the young. The Office for Standards in Education will undertake a specific study of provision for drug education in schools during the academic year 1995–96 to establish evidence on best practice.

Directors of Education

Mr. Barry: To ask the Secretary of State for Education, pursuant to her answer of 17 May, Official Report, column 240, how many directors of education there will be in Berkshire following the reorganisation of the county. [31074]

Mr. Forth: Director of education is a title that some authorities give to their chief advisers on educational issues: chief education officer is another. I therefore refer the hon. Member to the reply that my hon. Friend gave to him on 17 May, Official Report, column 240.

Access Funds

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State what resources will be available for access funds for students in further and higher education institutions in England in 1995–96, and when he proposes to issue new guidance on the use of the funds.

Mr. Boswell: The Department is making available £27.733 million for access funds for students in further and higher education in England for 1995–96. This sum is being allocated between the two funding councils for England as follows:

	£ million
(i) Higher Education Funding Council for England	21.624
to be allocated as follows:
Undergraduate fund	15.88
Postgraduate fund	5.40
Further Education fund	0.34
(ii) Further Education Funding Council for England	6.109
Total	27.733

The Department will be writing shortly to the two funding councils with guidance to be given to institutions about allocation and use of the funds for 1995–96.

Students

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what percentage of young people attending university come from homes in which parents earn less than the average industrial wage. [29639]

Mr. Boswell: This information is not held centrally.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Davie Inquiry

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Attorney-General what was the total cost of the Davie inquiry of July 1994. [28933]

The Attorney-General: The direct costs attributable to the Davie inquiry totalled £18,335.

War Crimes Act

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Attorney-General when he expects to announce decisions about prosecutions under the War Crimes Act 1991. [29259]

The Attorney-General: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to his earlier question on 22 May 1995, Official Report, column 451.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Benefit Payment Card

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the items of data to be held on the benefits card; and what is his estimate of the number of times per year the information on the card will be changed. [29762]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The design of the benefit payment card has not yet been decided.

It is not envisaged that the card itself will need to be changed other than by replacement due to damage, loss or expiry.

Home Visits

Mr. Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 6 June, Official Report, column 114 what financial targets he has set for each benefit office to achieve as a result of home visits. [29908]

Mr. Roger Evans: No such targets are set.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what funds are available for local authorities that consider the funding available under regulation 11 is insufficient to meet local needs. [29606]

Mr. Roger Evans: No additional funds are available. We believe the current funding arrangements for direct and indirect subsidy for local authorities' expenditure on cases exempt from rent restriction to be fair and reasonable. The arrangements ensure local authorities have an incentive to make prudent decisions when considering rent restrictions.

Mr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what advice he plans to issue to claimants and local authorities with special reference to Coventry city council in respect of private landlords charging rents above the current costs of a market rent in relation to the new housing benefit changes. [29598]

Mr. Evans: This Department will be publicising the proposed changes to the housing benefit scheme by means of a publicity campaign. The campaign will include a new leaflet aimed at the general public which will be available from post offices and local authorities. Local authorities have already received details of the proposals and will receive further detailed written guidance before the changes come into effect.

Child Support Agency

Sir Dudley Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what consideration underlies the authority of the Child Support Agency to charge individuals an annual fee for the review of their cases when no review has been supplied; and if he will make a statement. [28281]

Mr. Burt: We accept that the Child Support Agency has not been able to provide an adequate level of service. Fees have, therefore, been suspended for two years until April 1997.

The assessment fee is not charged for specific actions on a child maintenance assessment; it covers the administration costs of servicing the assessment. For that reason we believe it right that those who use such a service should pay a fee rather than have the cost borne by taxpayers, as would have been the case if the courts and lawyers had been involved.

Income Support

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people were claiming income support in Scotland, Wales and in each of the standard English regions; and how many partners and dependents they had in each of the last five years. [29328]

Mr. Roger Evans: The available information is set out in the tables:

Income support recipients by country: May 1990

Housing Benefit

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will amend the proposed housing benefit changes to take into consideration the shortage of housing stock and reduced bargaining power of claimants in certain areas. [29599]

Mr. Evans: No. Where the tenant is unable to find alternative accommodation or negotiate a lower rent, the local authority will be able to use its discretion to pay above the restricted rent, or encourage the claimant to look for properties in adjoining localities. Furthermore, pre-tenancy determinations will help tenants to get a better indication of the likely rent that housing benefit will meet before they commit themselves to a tenancy.

Mr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he expects to make a decision to amend the housing benefit changes in respect of its effect on sheltered and supported housing. [29600]

Mr. Evans: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has recently received the report of the Social Security Advisory Committee following its public consultation on the proposed changes to housing benefit. We will consider carefully the position of sheltered and supported housing as part of our response to the report.

Mr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if local authorities will be given the funding under the new housing benefit procedures to enable local authorities to use their discretion to respond to local needs to the same extent as currently occur under the regulation 11 payments. [29601]

Mr. Evans: The Government consider the level of funding for the new arrangements to be realistic. It will allow local authorities scope to help individual cases of exceptional hardship they consider to be most urgent. For claims made under the new arrangements, it is not expected that local authorities should continue to protect all those cases which would currently satisfy the criteria in regulations to have their rent met in full.

Mr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of administration costs resulting from the proposed housing benefit changes being implemented. [29602]

Mr. Evans: An estimate of the total administration costs has still to be completed.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Business Grants Advisory Group

Mr. Alton: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations he has received about the Liverpool-based Business Grants Advisory Group; what steps he will take, through business links and local authorities, to ensure that companies, and small business in particular, are aware that the information sold by the Business Grants Advisory Group is available free of charge from Government agencies; whether his Department will initiate inquires into this practice; and if he will make a statement. [29899]

Mr. Page: My right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade has received no representations about the Business Grants Advisory Group (Liverpool) Ltd.

The wide range of free or low-cost services to business offered by business links and local authorities is widely publicised, and includes advice on finding grants and soft funding. Private sector consultancies also offer this advice. The Department will always investigate well-founded complaints, but cannot interfere with legitimate business activity. Businesses are free to choose which advisory services they will use.

Government office for Merseyside has written to Liverpool city council and to all business links and chambers on Merseyside and in the north-west asking them to advise businesses of the availability of free advice on grants and funding through business links. The Association of British Chambers of Commerce has advised all chambers to remind their members that free advice in this field is readily available, and Merseyside chamber has done this.

Contractors

Mr. Battle: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many Government-owned, contractor-managed, establishments are covered by his Department. [30212]

Mr. Heseltine: None.

Mr. Battle: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the contractors bidding for the scientific establishment which his Department has put out to tender. [30214]

Mr. Heseltine: Members of the two consortia currently bidding for the contract to provide research services to DTI at the National Physical Laboratory are:

(a) W. S. Atkins, SIRA and Scientific Generics

(b) Serco, AEA Technology and Loughborough University of Technology

Mr. Battle: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how long the management contracts are for Government-owned, contractor-managed establishments (a) in general and (b) for the National Physical Laboratory. [30213]

Mr. Heseltine: The duration of management contracts for Government-owned, contractor-operated establishments varies widely. The duration of the contract for provision of research services at the National Physical Laboratory is under discussion with the shortlisted bidders.

Mr. Battle: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many contracts have been tendered for and won by (a) W. S. Atkins and (b) Serco since 1990. [30221]

Mr. Heseltine: My Department does not keep a central record of all contracts tendered for and awarded to individual companies. An exercise to establish how many contracts have been tendered for and won by W. S. Atkins and Serco since 1990 would incur disproportionate costs.

Military List

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many export licences were (a) applied for and (b) granted under the military list between 1986 and 1989. [29162]

Mr. Ian Taylor: The required information[1] is as follows:

	1986	1987	1988	1989
Applications received	16,847	17,590	15,697	14,601
Licences granted	[2]—	16,745	[3]16,005	13,584

Notes:

[1] The figures include all applications for licences for equipment classified under Group 1 of the Export of Goods (Control) Order. This includes all goods classified "ML", for 1989, it also includes goods classified "PL" in Group 1 of the Order.

[2] For 1986, separate figures were not kept for applications granted and refused. The provision of this information would incur disproportionate costs.

[3] The figures make it appear that more licences were issued in 1988 than the number of applications received. This is because the licensing process always carries over from year to the next. Hence some of the licences issued in one year will have been received in the previous year.

1. The corresponding figures for all export licences received (including those for the military goods listed above) for the period in question are:

1986: 89,705
1987: 97,842
1988: 92,280
1989: 75,952

Company Directors (Misconduct)

Mr. Harvey: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many unfit conduct reports pursuant to the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 were submitted by official receivers and were rejected for not being evidentially strong enough in each of the last three years. [29187]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The number of unfit conduct reports submitted by official receivers and not proceeded with were:

Financial year	Total submitted without full report	Total submitted with full report	Total not proceeded with
1992–93	2,536	121	32
1993–94	3,425	107	13
1994–95	2,281	244	26

The number of reports not proceeded with relates only to those submitted as a full report, some of which would have been submitted in the previous financial year. It also includes those where there were parallel criminal proceedings, the bankruptcy of the potential respondent or the discovery of evidence which would refute or mitigate the allegation of misconduct.

Mr. Harvey: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many unfit conduct reports pursuant to the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 were submitted by insolvency practitioners and were rejected for not being evidentially strong enough in each of the last three years. [29188]

Mr. Evans: The number of unfit conduct reports submitted by insolvency practitioners and not proceeded with were:

Financial year	Total submitted	Total not proceeded with
1992–93	3,901	3,320
1993–94	3,727	3,604
1994–95	3,147	3,032

The number not proceeded with cannot be related to:

(i) those reports submitted in that year because in some 25 to 30 per cent. of cases decisions following investigation will be taken in the next accounting period, and

(ii) the number of reports accepted for further investigation, because some are not proceeded with subsequently because of parallel criminal proceedings, the bankruptcy of the potential respondent or the discovery of evidence which would refute or mitigate the allegation of misconduct.

Contracting Out

Mr. McNamara: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list those parts of his Department or departmental agencies which were privatised without an in-house bid; if he will indicate the expertise which was absent in his Department or departmental agencies which prevented an in-house bid taking place; which future parts of his Department or departmental agencies he intends to privatise; and which of them do not have the necessary in-house expertise to mount an in-house bid. [29418]

Mr. Heseltine: The following areas of work have been contracted out without an in-house bid under the "Competing for Quality" programme:

(i) 1992–93
Press Notice Distribution
Offshore Focus Magazine
Gas and Oil Measurement Branch Security
Database Maintenance
Photographic Service (National Physical Laboratory)

(ii) 1993–94

Stationary Supply

Translation

Various Support Services (Patent Office)

(iii) 1994–95

Accounts Services Agency

Ships Radio Licensing (Radiocommunications Agency)

Decisions to contract out without an in-house bid have been taken where the private sector was clearly better-equipped to deliver a specific service, has had a better understanding of market needs, or has had the capacity to invest in new technology. Such decisions have also been taken when the activity has been relatively small and peripheral to my Department's core functions. In each case overall value for money has been assessed through comparing the quality and cost of bids against a benchmark of continuing in-house provision which includes planned efficiency and quality of service improvements. Information on an individual test basis can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Work is under way to contract out the following in 1995–96 without an in-house bid:

Building Management Services

The National Physical Laboratory

Companies House:

London Office and Satellites

Edinburgh Office

Cardiff Office—range of activities

The Insolvency Service:

Official Receivers' Administrative Functions

Patent Office:

Various support services

Radiocommunications Agency:

Various support services

Of course, staff are always free to make bids on a staff buy-out basis alongside other bidders, taking the work into the private sector. For example, there was a management bid on this basis for the Accounts Services Agency.

Output and Employment

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is his estimate of the effect of membership of the EC on output and employment in (a) the United Kingdom cotton textile industry, (b) the United Kingdom bus and coach industry and (c) the United Kingdom pottery industry; and what has been the change since 1970 in the volume of United Kingdom output, imports from and exports to the EC Six, in import penetration from the EC, and in the numbers employed in the industry. [29440]

Mr. Ian Taylor: My Department has made no such estimate. Consistent information from 1970 is not readily available and can be compiled only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment he has made of the effect EU membership has had on output and employment in (a) the United Kingdom wool industry, (b) the United Kingdom carpet industry, (c) the United Kingdom motor car industry and (d) the United Kingdom commercial vehicle industry; and if he will show in respect of each the change from 1970 in (i) the volume of United Kingdom output and (ii) imports from and exports to (1) the EC Six and (2) other EC countries, (3) import penetration from the EC and elsewhere and (4) the numbers employed in the industry. [29944]

Mr. Taylor: My Department has made no such estimate. Consistent information from 1970 is not readily available and can be compiled only at disproportionate cost.

Import Penetration

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what has been the percentage change in import penetration of the United Kingdom market for manufactures less food, drink and tobacco since 1971; and to what extent it is due to (i) the reduction in the tariff, (ii) the removal of tariff protection against EC countries and (iii) the monetary and exchange rate policies of successive United Kingdom Governments; [29979]

(2) if he will publish for each year since 1970 his estimate of import penetration of the United Kingdom market for manufactures less food, drink, tobacco, printing and publishing. [29980]

Mr. Ian Taylor: The import penetration levels requested can be calculated only at disproportionate cost. My Department has made no assessment of the specific factors listed. However, the rising share of imports in the United Kingdom market for manufactures reflects a number of influences, including the increasing specialisation of world trade.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps he is taking to reduce the share of imports in the United Kingdom market for manufactures; and over what time scale. [29949]

Mr. Taylor: The best way United Kingdom businesses can increase market share at home is by continually improving their competitiveness. The competitiveness White Paper, "Forging Ahead" identifies areas where the Government have helped, for example, by stimulating enterprise and innovation and by encouraging best practice in quality, design and management. Discrimination against imports jeopardises the UK's export successes.

Brent Spar

Ms Ruddock: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what analysis or assessment (a) his Department or (b) any other Government Department or agency has made of the contents of the Brent Spar storage unit; what was the result of that analysis or assessment; and if he will publish the results of those analyses or assessment; [30247]

(2) what inspections, analysis or assessment of the contents of the Brent Spar storage unit were made in the last 10 years by (a) his Department or (b) any other Government Department or agency; what were the results of these inspections, assessments or analyses; and if he will publish them in full. [30246]

Mr. Eggar: The Government accepted Shell's proposal that deep-sea disposal of the Brent Spar was the best practicable environmental option. That judgment was reached after a comparative assessment of the options which took into account many factors including information on the contents of the installation. The abandonment programme contains a detailed inventory of the equipment and materials on board. Scottish Office officials who visited the Spar on 3 and 4 June verified that cleaning operations had been performed to the standard required.

Trading Standards Officers

Dr. Strang: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many trading standard officers were employed (a) for each year since 1979 and (b) at the latest available date. [28586]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: Information provided to my Department by local weights and measures authorities in England, Wales and Scotland indicates that since 1987–88 the number of qualified trading standards officers has been as follows:

1987–88: 1,454
1988–89: 1,438
1989–90: 1,456
1990–91: 1,504
1991–92: 1,548
1992–93: 1,598
1993–94: 1,637

Figures for preceding years are not readily available.

Dr. Strang: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many trainee trading standards officers there were (a) for each year since 1979 and (b) for the latest available date. [28587]

Mr. Evans: Information provided to my Department by the local government management board indicates that numbers of trainee trading standards officers registered in each year since 1987 were as follows:

Year	Number
1987	98
1988	105
1989	102
1990	90
1991	91
1992	74
1993	36
1994	32
1995	24

In addition, there were 24 graduates in the BSC honours consumer protection degree in 1994, of whom 15 are now in the process of becoming fully qualified trading standards officers.

Figures for the preceding years are not readily available.

Dr. Strang: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement about the change in numbers of trainee trading standards officers since the end of the incentive training scheme for trading standards officers. [28588]

Mr. Evans: The Government are committed to a trading standards service which functions effectively and efficiently. It is for individual local authorities to ensure that numbers of qualified staff are sufficient to provide adequate levels of service in their respective areas and to make budgetary decisions which will reflect that need.

In response to concerns about staffing levels my Department encouraged and supported the introduction of a grant scheme for trainee trading standards officers which began in 1987–88. The decision not to extend the term of this scheme beyond 1991 was taken by the local government management board on behalf of the local authority associations. Since that decision, total numbers of qualified staff have steadily increased from about 1,500 in 1990–91 to more than 1,630 in 1993–94.

Mines Rescue Service

Mr. Tipping: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement about the future of the mines rescue service following the abolition of British Coal. [29900]

Mr. Page: At my Department's request, British Coal has established a working group on mines rescue to act as a forum for the coal industry to develop its plans for the future ownership and management of the mines rescue service. The working group also contains representatives from Government.

Coal

Mr. Tipping: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the amount of subsidy paid in respect of deep mined coal as outlined in "Prospects for Coal", the number of tonnes this reflects, the number of individual contracts involved and outstanding bids waiting the approval of the European Commission. [29901]

Mr. Page: Since the coal subsidy was announced in March 1993, 10 offers have been made. To date, £12,776,193 has been paid in respect of almost 1 million tonnes of coal delivered since April 1993. One application, which was received just before the scheme ended on 31 March 1995, is currently being considered.

European Commission approval for payments in respect of production in 1993 was given in Commission decision C(94)883 of 29 March 1994. Approval for payments in respect of production the financial year 1994/95 was given in Commission decision C(94)1436 of 1 June 1994.

Businesses

Ms Primarolo: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is his Department's definition of a small business and a medium-sized business. [29563]

Mr. Page [holding answer 21 June 1995]: There is no single, official definition of what constitutes a small firm. There is, however, a wide range of definitions used in practice, each valid in its own context.

Eligibility for the annual SMART competition—small firms merit award for research—is limited to firms with a maximum of 50 employees. Eligibility under the loan guarantee scheme, however, is determined by both turnover and employee numbers and these vary from sector to sector. Generally, eligibility is limited to firms with fewer than 200 employees, except in the construction sector where the limit is 25. In the manufacturing sector the turnover ceiling is £3 million whereas in the service sector it is £500,000.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many (a) small businesses and (b) medium-sized businesses were started up in each of the last 10 years; and if he will break these figures down by region and by gender of entrepreneur. [29564]

Mr. Page [holding answer 21 June 1995]: The number of businesses stated up in Great Britain is available from 1988 onwards and given in the table. Almost all business start-ups are small. Information on start-ups by gender is not available for each year in the table. Research carried out for Barclays bank suggests that of the businesses started up in 1994, nearly three out of 10 were started by women.

The best guide to trends in the number of businesses started up by region is given by registrations for VAT. Copies of "VAT Registrations and Deregistrations, County and District Analyses "1980–1991", and "VAT Registrations and Deregistrations, County and District Analyses 1992–1993" are in the Library of the House.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many people were employed by (a) small businesses and (b) medium-sized businesses in each of the last 10 years; and if he will break these figures down by region and gender. [29565]

Mr. Page [holding answer 21 June 1995]: The number of people employed in businesses of different sizes are given in the table below. The figures are available for some of the last 10 years only. Although there is no official definition of what constitutes a small firm, the usual practice in statistical analyses is to consider firms with fewer than 100 employees small, and those with between 100 and 499 employees medium sized. There is no breakdown of these figures by region or gender.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the President of the Board of Trade which sectors of the economy (a) small businesses and (b) medium-sized businesses are predominantly to be found. [29566]

Mr. Page [holding answer 21 June 1995]: The numbers of businesses of different sizes in each industry division are given in the table. Although there is no official definition of what constitutes a small firm, the usual practice in statistical analyses is to consider firms with fewer than 100 employees small; and those with between 100 and 499 employees medium sized.

Crown Immunity

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list all areas within (a) his Department, (b) agencies under his Department's control and (c) organisations for which he has ministerial responsibility to which Crown immunity applies; what consideration he has given to removing this; and if he will make a statement. [28658]

Mr. Heseltine [holding answer 15 June 1995]: An Act of Parliament is presumed not to bind the Crown unless the contrary intention is clearly stated, or there is a necessary implication that the Crown is to be bound. Ministers and civil servants will not necessarily share the Crown's immunity from criminal prosecution.

The Government's policy on Crown immunity, as set out in CM1599—"The Citizen's Charter—Raising the Standard"—is that Crown immunity is being progressively reduced, as legislative opportunities arise. In the meantime, Crown bodies are expected to behave as though they were bound by regulations.

Detailed information on the circumstances where Crown immunity does not apply is not held centrally, and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

DEFENCE

Executive Agencies

Mr. Jim Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement about defence agency status for the Defence Codification Authority. [30865]

Mr. Soames: The Defence Codification Authority is part of RAF Logistics Command, and is responsible for the information and direction of MOD codification policy, and the sponsorship and control of codification quality assurance services. It has been decided that the authority is to be considered for defence agency status under the next steps procedures. An entry to this effect will appear in the July 1995 edition of the "Market Testing Bulletin."

Mr. Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what key performance targets have been set for the chief executive of the Meteorological Office executive agency for the financial year 1995–96. [30866]

Mr. Soames: The agency has been set a range of quality, financial and efficiency targets to ensure that it delivers progressive improvements in the provision of weather-related services. In addition, the agency is to achieve trading fund status on 1 April 1996.

The key quality targets set for the Meteorological Office during the financial year 1995–96 are to achieve 80 per cent. of the designated business plan external targets for customer satisfaction, forecast accuracy and timeliness; and to attain an average accuracy over the United Kingdom of at least 84 per cent. for the 24-hour national weather forecasts broadcast at 17.55 hours by BBC Radio 4.

The financial targets are to deliver the agreed Meteorological Office programme within a business plan cash limit of £78,300,000; to reduce net expenditure, as shown in the annual report and accounts, to £90,300,000, representing a decrease of 2.6 per cent. on the 1994–95 budget, both at 1994–95 prices; and to provide a net contribution to the agency's core costs and general overheads of £3,800,000 from commercial services to the public, industry and commerce excluding the Civil Aviation Authority and the Department of the Environment.

Individual areas of the Meteorological Office have been set targets to increase efficiency by between 1 and 3 per cent. mainly through improvements in quality and volume of services and reduced unit output costs.

Training Land

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the areas of land in Scotland not owned or leased by his Department, which are currently available to the armed services for training under licence agreements with the owners. [29073]

Mr. Soames: At present, there are 12 areas of land in Scotland where my Department holds military training rights under licence agreements. These are as follows:

Binn Hill, Perthshire
Blair Adam (Tayside)
Galloway
Kinlochleven (Lochaber)
Tighnablair (Tayside)
Hopsprigg (Dumfries and Galloway)
Castle Kennedy (Stranraer)
Ardgarten (Strathclyde)
Balduff (Tayside)
Tullymurdoch (Tayside)
Pyall Farm (Tayside)
Blackhall (Tayside)

In addition, there are other areas of land where my Department has agreements with private landowners to cover specific short-term requirements. In the last financial year, there were 356 such agreements.

Environmental Information

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many applications for information have been made to his Department under the environmental information resolutions since their entry into force; what was the total number of different applicants making the applications; in how many of these cases information was provided; what was the average total assessed cost of meeting each application; and what was the average cost charged to the applicant. [29082]

Mr. Soames: We have received six such requests for information since the regulations came into effect, and information has been provided in each case. The cost incurred by my Department in meeting the applications has amounted to less than £50 in each case. No charges have been levied for the information that has been provided, though in one case a request for more detailed information was withdrawn after a warning of charges.

Chinook Crash, 2 June 1994

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the date of the Chinook helicopter disaster at the Mull of Kintrye, Scotland; how many military police and civilian personnel lost their lives in this disaster; what compensation has been paid to the families of the victims; when he expects payment of compensation to be completed; and if he will make a statement about the basis of compensation to be paid to the dependants of those killed. [28982]

Mr. Soames: Twenty nine people were killed in this tragic accident on 2 June 1994. The position on compensation was explained in the answer given to my hon. Friend the Member for Tayside, North (Mr. Walker) by my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Defence on 15 June, Official Report, column 597.

Low Flying

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many low-flying incidents were reported in (a) Wales, (b) England, (c) Scotland, (d) Northern Ireland and (e) the United Kingdom in each of the last three years. [28482]

Mr. Soames: The number of inquiries and complaints received by my Department about military low flying in each of the last three years are as follows:

Year	England	Wales	Scotland	[1]United Kingdom
1992	4,401	904	990	6,295
1993	4,141	556	1,041	5,738
1994	4,072	617	1,089	5,778

[1] The figure for the United Kingdom excludes Northern Ireland where most low flying is of an operational nature, with only a limited number of training sorties. Complaints arising from this activity are dealt with locally, and no central record is available of the number received.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what measures his Department has taken to monitor and deal with incidents of low flying by military aircraft; and if he will make a statement. [28483]

Mr. Soames: All complaints and inquiries about military low flying are recorded and examined and, when appropriate, a written response is given.

Where there is sufficient evidence to suggest that a breach of military flying regulations may have occurred, the details are passed to the RAF police for investigation. On completion, the RAF police report is, where appropriate, passed to the commanding officer of the aircrew concerned for consideration as to what further action may be necessary and what can be learnt from the incident. In each case, the complainant is provided with the conclusions and a summary of the findings of the report.

My Department will pay compensation where a reasonable connection can be established between military aircraft activity and any loss, injury or damage sustained.

Captured Service Men

Sir Keith Speed: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what briefing and instructions are given to service men who may be captured or taken hostage about their response to their captors and the media. [29338]

Mr. Soames: In the event of capture by an enemy, service personnel are instructed to follow article 17 of the Geneva convention relative to the Treatment of Prisoners of War 1949 and reveal their name, rank, serial number and date of birth to their captors. They are also trained to respond to further questioning without releasing any useful information or allowing themselves to be exploited for propaganda purposes. Queen's regulations forbid service personnel from responding to approaches from the media without authorisation.

Nuclear Tests

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions he has had with his (a) United States counterpart and (b) French counterpart concerning the development of simulations systems to replace nuclear tests; and if he will make a statement. [30041]

Mr. Freeman: In the absence of underground testing, we intend to develop further a range of experimental techniques and facilities for the stewardship of our nuclear weapons stockpile, including above ground experiments, lasers and computer simulation. This work will be undertaken in continuing co-operation with the United States. Discussions have also been held with French authorities on issues relating to nuclear weapons stewardship.

Dartmouth Naval College

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the cost per officer at the Dartmouth naval college; how many officers pass through Dartmouth naval college each year; and which Royal Navy training facilities are situated in Dartmouth. [30043]

Mr. Soames: This is a matter for the Naval Recruiting and Training Agency under its framework document. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from J. P. Clarke to Dr. David Clark, dated 22 June 1995:

The Secretary of State for Defence has asked me to reply to your Parliamentary Question, about the training of young Royal Naval officers at the Britannia Royal Naval College, Dartmouth, in my capacity as Chief Executive of the Naval Recruiting and Training Agency.

On entry to Dartmouth for Naval General Training, Young Naval Officers undertake 16 weeks shore-based training followed by a further 8 weeks of sea-based training, all of which is administered by the College. Following a further 8 months training in the Fleet, non-graduate entry Officers return to the College for an Academic course lasting some 24 weeks. The College is resourced for a training capacity of 460 (including Medical Dental, Special Duties and International Officers) which gives a cost per trainee day of £229.00 for the Naval General Training Course and £149.00 per day for the Academics Course.

You will also wish to be aware that the Agency is developing initiatives with private industry and academic institutions to market the unallocated irreducible training capacity which is caused by fluctuating recruiting levels reflected in the figures quoted below. These initiatives will generate enduring income streams, thereby reducing the overall costs of the College.

Over the last two years the officer training throughput has reduced in line with lower recruiting targets. From 1995 onwards higher recruiting targets will, however, increase trainee throughput to the level of the College's resourced capacity.

The College's officer training throughput since 1991 is as follows:

1991: 554
1992: 465
1993: 369
1994: 220
1995: 240*
1996: 298*

The above figures include RN Officers of Seaman, Engineer, Supply and Secretariat, Instructor, Medical, Dental, Chaplaincy and Special Duties specialisations in addition to international officers from Foreign and Commonwealth Navies. The figures marked by an asterisk denote predicted throughput figures.

Seamanship training is provided at BRNC's Sandquay facility and the College's proximity to Dartmoor is utilised for leadership training activities.

I hope this is helpful.

Chemical and Biological Weapons (Russia)

Mr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of Russia's (a) biological and (b) chemical capabilities; and if he will make a statement. [30042]

Mr. Soames: Russia inherited offensive chemical and biological warfare capabilities from the former Soviet Union. Her Majesty's Government place a high priority on confirming the elimination of the former Soviet programmes in accordance with the biological and toxin weapons convention and the chemical weapons convention; we are pursuing this objective through discussions with Russia and in multilateral arms control negotiations.

Trident

Mr. Hicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what review he is undertaking of the decision of June 1993 to award the refitting of Trident submarines to Devonport Management Ltd. and if he will make a statement. [30045]

Mr. Freeman: We have no plans to revisit the decision taken in 1993 that future refitting of nuclear powered submarines will be undertaken at Devonport.

Mr. Hicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if a contract has been signed between his Department and Devonport Management Lltd. for the refitting of Trident submarines; [30018]

(2) when a contract will be signed between his Department and Devonport Management Ltd. for the refitting of Trident submarines following the decision of June 1993; and if he will make a statement. [30044]

Mr. Freeman: No contract has yet been awarded for the construction of the Trident refitting facilities at Devonport. Negotiations with Devonport Management Ltd. are continuing with a view to completing the process by the end of the summer.

Health and Safety Inspectors

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many health and safety inspectors were in post in each region in each of the last five years. [29359]

Mr. Oppenheim: Table A shows the number of health and safety inspectors employed in the Health and Safety Executive's field operations division regions. The figures comprise factory inspectors, agricultural inspectors, specialist inspectors and quarries inspectors. Table B shows the number of mines inspectors in the Mines Inspectorate, which is organised in districts. The figures are for the 1 April for each year. They do not include HSE inspectors working in nationally organised inspectorates; nor inspectors employed by other enforcing authorities.

EMPLOYMENT

Labour Statistics

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what has been the year-on-year change in employment in (a) the United Kingdom, (b) France, (c) the United States of America, (d) Germany and (e) Japan, for each year since 1979. [28119]

Mr. Oppenheim: Information showing the levels of employment in France, the United States, western Germany and Japan is published in OECD labour force statistics, 1972–92 and OECD quarterly labour force statistics no. 1, 1995. Copies of these publications are available in the Library. The latest available information for the United Kingdom which may differ from that printed in these publications is shown in the table:

Food Manufacturing Industry (Accidents)

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many reportable accidents have occurred in the food manufacturing industry in each region in each of the last five years. [29357]

Mr. Opppenheim: The information requested is given in the table:

Training

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what proposals he has to amend the budgeting system for training courses for areas where there is high long-term unemployment. [29717]

Mr. Paice: Training for work is the main programme for adults out of work for a long time or at a disadvantage. The budget for the programme is distributed to training and enterprise councils by reference to the numbers of long-term unemployed, past levels of expenditure and performance in securing outcomes for participants. Budgets are also subject to negotiations between Government offices and individual TECs.

South Thames TEC

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what estimate he has made of the total bill of his Department to the administrative receiver of South Thames TEC; and what assessment he has made of its impact on the other creditors' prospects of debt recovery. [29625]

Mr. Paice: The Department estimates that it is owed £8.48 million by South Thames training and enterprise council and has presented the receiver with a bill to that effect. The Department is a secured creditor under the terms of its debenture. Until the receiver has completed his work, it will not be possible to assess the impact of the Department's bill on the prospects for unsecured creditors recovering money owed them.

Jobseeker's Allowance

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what estimate he has made of the administrative cost for (a) the preparation for the implementation of the jobseeker's allowance and (b) the actual implementation of the jobseeker's allowance. [29727]

Miss Widdecombe: Initial estimates of the one-off administrative costs of implementing the jobseeker's allowance, including both preparation and actual implementation, and the back-to-work bonus were £280 million over the period 1995–96 to 1997–98. This figure is currently being reviewed, following the decision to defer the full operation of JSA to October 1996.

Workplace Accidents (Children)

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what assessment he has made of surveys and official statistics on the number of school-age children involved in accidents while in paid employment in each year since 1985. [30287]

Mr. Oppenheim: The survey reports of which I am aware are unrepresentative of the country as a whole and inadequately distinguish between serious accidents which should be reported to the enforcing authorities and minor cuts and bruises.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what statistics are available concerning the number of accidents to school-age children involved in paid employment in the years 1992–93 and 1993–94. [30288]

Mr. Oppenheim: The tables show injuries to employed people aged under 16 reported to the Health and Safety Executive's factory and agricultural inspectorates and to local authorities under the Reporting of Injuries, Diseases and Dangerous Occurrences Regulations 1985:

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how his Department (a) collects and (b) collates information and statistics concerning the incidence of accidents to children in paid employment who are of school-leaving age. [30289]

Mr. Oppenheim: Under the Reporting of Injuries, Diseases and Dangerous Occurrences Regulations 1985, employers have a duty to report to the relevant enforcing authority injuries, arising out of work activity, to employees of all ages. The relevant authority may be either the Health and Safety Executive or the local authority.

Reports made to HSE are collated and held centrally. Information from reports made to local authorities is submitted annually to HSE on a voluntary basis and aggregated with the reports made direct to HSE.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what information is available for each year since 1985 concerning children involved in accidents while in paid (a) agricultural and (b) horticultural employment; [30286]

Mr. Oppenheim: The table shows injuries to employees aged under 16 reported under the Reporting of Injuries, Diseases and Dangerous Occurrences Regulations 1985 in each year for which reliable figures are available. The figure in brackets show the only injury reported in Wales.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) what assessment has been made of surveys and official statistics on the number of school-age children in Wales involved in accidents while engaged in paid (a) agricultural and (b) horticultural employment in each year since 1985; [30285]

(2) what assessment has been made of surveys and official statistics on the number of school-age children in Wales involved in accidents while engaged in paid (a) agricultural and (b) horticultural employment in each year since 1985. [30283]

Mr. Oppenheim: The survey reports of which I am aware are unrepresentative of Wales and the country as a whole and inadequately distinguish serious accidents which should be reported to the enforcing authorities from minor cuts and bruises.

The official statistics show that one injury was reported in Wales in the period, from 1987–88 to 1993–94, for which reliable figures are available.

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will describe the technical and expert assistance which the United Kingdom has provided to the International Labour Organisation in each of the last 10 years. [30227]

Miss Widdecombe: The areas where assistance is provided include health and safety and statistics. The information requested is not, however, held centrally by the Department and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Organophosphorus Products

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what proportion of (a) sheep farms and (b) market gardens which may be expected to use organophosphorus products are visited by inspectors each year to check on protective measures when handling these products. [29734]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 20 June 1995]: It is impossible to predict in advance the sheep farms or market gardens that use organophosphorus products. However, in the course of routine visits to these premises, health and safety inspectors inquire about compliance with the Control of Substances Hazardous to Health Regulations, which apply to the use of organophosphorus products, including sheep dips.

Visits are, of course, supplemented by published guidance and by advice through other means.

Crown Immunity

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list all areas within (a) his Department, (b) agencies under his Department's control and (c) organisations for which he has ministerial responsibility to which Crown immunity applies; what consideration he has given to removing this; and if he will make a statement. [28652]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 15 June 1995]: The Employment Department group consists of the Employment Department, the Employment Service, the Health and Safety Commission and Executive and the Advisory, Conciliation and Arbitration Service.

Certain legislation is expressly applied to the Crown. In most legislation, however, particularly older legislation, there is no such express provision. In those circumstances whether legislation applies to the Crown will depend on the implications to be drawn from the drafting and context of the legislation.

The Government's general policy on Crown immunity is set out in the "Citizen's Charter—Raising the Standard", Cm 1599.

Unemployment Benefit

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) how many of those people who are no longer eligible to receive unemployment benefit will be eligible for income support (a) nationally and (b) in Nottinghamshire. [29922]

(2) following the introduction of the jobseeker's allowance, how many people will no longer be eligible for unemployment benefit (a) nationally and (b) in Nottinghamshire; [29922]

Mr. Roger Evans: I have been asked to reply.

Subject to parliamentary approval of the Jobseeker's Bill unemployment benefit and income support for unemployed people will be replaced by jobseeker's allowance in October 1996. Contributory entitlement to jobseeker's allowance will end after six months. On current assumptions, at any one time 165,000 people in Great Britain would be in receipt of unemployment benefit beyond six months. It is estimated that income-based jobseeker's allowance would offset the difference fully for 30,000 of these, and partially, for a further 65,000. Separate estimates for Nottinghamshire are not available.

Notes:

1. Caseload estimates rounded to the nearest 5,000.

2. Estimates assume 2.4 million unemployed claimants and 500,000 Unemployment Benefit cases.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Reckless Driving

4. Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he is taking to amend the criminal law to ensure that where reckless and dangerous driving results in death or injury the penalties will be appropriate.

Mr. Maclean: Parliament has increased the maximum penalty for causing death by dangerous driving to 10 years. But it is entirely up to the courts and judges to impose the right sentence in each case.

Learmont Inquiry

13. Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the findings of the Learmont inquiry into the breakout at Parkhurst prison in January. [28409]

Mr. Howard: I have not yet received the report.

Closed Circuit Television

14. Mrs. Lait: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress is being made on installing closed circuit television in town centres. [28410]

Mr. Maclean: Many local authorities and partnerships have installed closed circuit television systems in their town centres and other areas. The recent CCTV challenge competition has injected £5 million of prize money into 106 CCTV schemes across the country. These schemes will generate up to £13.8 million in matching funding from other sources, including the private sector.

Police

15. Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the current number of policemen serving in the United Kingdom. [28411]

Mr. Howard: At the end of March 1995, there were approximately 150,000 police officers in the United Kingdom. In addition I understand that there were around 3,200 full-time RUC reserves.

Police Operations

16. Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his response to the report of the National Audit Office on controls over indirectly funded operations of the police service. [28412]

Mr. Maclean: The Committee of Public Accounts considered this report on 14 June. The Government will respond to the Committee's recommendations when they are received.

Immigration Service Interpreters

17. Mr. Jim Cunningham: to ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress has been made in improving the provision of interpreters for the immigration service following the report of the complaints audit committee. [28413]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: While the provision of interpreters for the immigration service is generally satisfactory, the recommendations of the complaints audit committee are under consideration. A new training package is being devised and a review of the arrangements under which interpreter services are provided to immigration and nationality department is planned under the Department's "Competing for Quality" programme. This review will examine both the quality and cost effectiveness of the arrangements.

Police Funding

18. Mrs. Angela Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department by what percentage police funding has changed since 1979 in real terms. [28414]

Mr. Maclean: Expenditure on the police in England and Wales has increased by 96 per cent. in real terms between 1978–79 and 1995–96.

Crime Prevention

19. Mr. Hoon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the Home Office's expenditure on crime prevention in the last year for which figures are available. [28416]

Mr. Maclean: Expenditure on crime prevention activities across Government in 1993–94—the latest period for which the figures are available—was £240 million. Expenditure on specific Home Office crime prevention initiatives in 1994–95 was £18.3 million, an increase of 39.7 per cent. on the previous year.

Memorandum of Good Practice

20. Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will revise the memorandum of good practice to include an unambiguous statement that it is possible for a child to receive therapy. [28417]

Mr. Maclean: The memorandum already states that it should be possible for a child to receive therapy once a video recording of the child's evidence-in-chief has been made. We are considering whether the guidance on this and other points in the memorandum needs to be revised in the light of research and experience to date.

Prison Discipline

21. Mr. Frank Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans his Department has to introduce more punitive practices in British prisons. [28418]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I have no immediate plans to introduce more punitive practices into prisons. However, the policy on prison discipline is kept under review and, where necessary, changes are made to ensure it remains at a proper level to maintain good order in prisons.

Drug Abuse (Prisons)

22. Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement about the current level of drug abuse within prisons. [28419]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Any level of drug abuse in prison is unacceptable; the presence of drugs leads to violence, bullying and intimidation and undermines regimes. Tackling drug abuse is one of the four key priorities for the Prison Service for this year. The new mandatory drug testing programme will provide routine and detailed monitoring of the level and type of drug misuse in prison.

A wide range of measures are being taken up to prevent drugs from entering prisons. These include the increased use of drug dogs; more effective searching of prisoners, staff and visitors; the use of closed-circuit television cameras during visits; and the imposition of closed visits for prisoners found guilty of drug offences in prison.

All Prison Service establishments provide detoxification, education and counselling facilities to prisoners with drug misuse problems via the health care centre, probation department or community drug agencies. This year the Prison Service will be substantially expanding the number and type of drug treatment programmes. These will include: therapeutic communities; three-month treatment programmes; detoxification units; intensive counselling and education services; and community-linked throughcare programmes.

25. Lady Olga Maitland: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to counter drug taking in prisons. [28422]

Mr. Forsyth: Reducing the level of drug misuse is one of the four key priorities in the Prison Service this year. The Prison Service's strategy requires all prison governors to implement local strategies directed at the reduction of the misuse of drugs.

Capital and Corporal Punishment

23. Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received urging him to restore to the courts the options of both capital and corporal punishment. [28420]

Mr. Maclean: I receive numerous representations on the restoration of both corporal and capital punishment from a variety of sources.

Prison Staffing and Conditions

24. Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent discussions he has had about prison staffing and conditions with the Director General of the Prison Service. [28421]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: My right hon. and learned Friend has had a number of recent discussions with the Director General of the Prison Service. A wide range of issues were discussed, including general staffing matters and prison conditions.

Prison Conditions

26. Ms Quin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to make any new proposals concerning prison conditions. [28423]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Policy on prison conditions is kept under constant review and modifications are made from time to time as the need arises. The Prison Service business plan 1995–96 and the Prison Service corporate plan 1995–98, published on 2 May, contain full details of Prison Service priorities and targets for the next three years, and set out how these will be achieved. Copies have been placed in the Library.

Abdul Qayyum Raja and Mohammed Riaz

27. Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to review the sentences of Abdul Qayyum Raja and Mohammed Riaz. [28424]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I shall reconsider the tariff—that is the minimum period to be served by these mandatory life sentence prisoners—in the light of all the representations made by them or on their behalf.

Ethnic Minorities

28. Mr. Stevenson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his assessment of the effects of reductions in section 11 funding in the current year; and if he will make a statement. [28425]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: On 22 November my right hon. and learned Friend announced an extra £30 million over two years for new section 11 projects beginning in 1995–96. This means that the section 11 programme is supporting projects worth some £58 million. This is in addition to the £27 million of former section 11 projects continuing under the SRB, and in addition to SRB funded regeneration projects, 35 per cent. of which include initiatives specifically designed to benefit ethnic minorities. In all, this amounts to a sizeable and continuing Government commitment.

Cheshire Constabulary

29. Mr. Brandreth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the Cheshire constabulary's front-line policing policy; and if he will make a statement. [28426]

Mr. Maclean: I was pleased to note that crime in Cheshire fell by 7 per cent. in 1994, while the detection rate rose by 4 percentage points. The objectives set in the Cheshire policing plan for 1995–96 should enable this welcome trend to be maintained.

Home Security

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much home security support he is arranging for householders in the metropolitan area; at what cost to public funds; and if he will make a statement. [28551]

Mr. Maclean: The Home Office has no funds for the direct provision of security support to individual householders, although we do run regular information campaigns on various aspects of crime prevention. I understand from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis that his officers actively supports neighbourhood watch schemes and other local crime prevention initiatives; and offer home security advice to householders, including domestic surveys. His successful campaign against burglary—Operation Bumblebee—has also raised public awareness about home security.

Costings for the relevant elements of the Commissioner's work are not available centrally.

Assembly and Trespass

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the operation of the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 as it relates to assembly and trespass; and if he will make a statement. [29051]

Mr. Maclean: Section 70 of the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 amended part II of the Public Order Act 1986 by inserting two new sections to deal with trespassory assemblies. They provide for chief officers of police to apply to the appropriate local council for an order prohibiting the holding of all trespassory assemblies within a given area for a period of not more than four days, where they reasonably believe that a trespassory assembly will be held which might result in serious disruption to local residents or significant damage to a site of historical, architectural, archaeological or scientific importance.

The consent of my right hon. and learned Friend to the making of an order is required. This ensures that they are as restricted and selective in scope as is necessary to meet the objective of protecting the community. Since these provisions came into force my right hon. and learned Friend has given his consent to Salisbury district council making two such orders which applied to a four mile radius of Stonehenge between 29 May and 1 June and 17 and 21 June. The enforcement of these orders is an operational matter for the chief officer of Wiltshire constabulary. No other orders have been made under the section.

We are continuing to monitor the other public order measures in part V of the Act but it will be some time before we are able to assess their effectiveness.

Crime

Sir Michael Neubert: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of recent exercises in co-ordinated action against crime by the Metropolitan and county police forces. [29106]

Mr. Maclean: I would like to congratulate the forces which participated in the co-ordinated operation on 2 May against those involved in burglary; officers from 22 forces across the south of England and Wales searched 1,828 addresses, made over 1,300 arrests and recovered large quantities of stolen property.

I fully support police operations that send a clear message to criminals, and their victims, that effective action is being taken against crime.

Security Industry

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make it his policy to introduce a licensing system for the private security industry. [28415]

Mr. Maclean: The case for a licensing system is currently being considered. The report published recently by the Home Affairs Select Committee made a number of very helpful recommendations on this issue, and I shall respond to it soon.

Visitors Passports and Excursion Documents

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to abolish British visitors passports and British excursion documents in 1996; and if he will make a statement. [30391]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: I refer my right hon. Friend to the reply given to a question from my hon. and learned Friend the Member for Burton (Sir I. Lawrence) on 20 December 1994, Official Report columns 1214–15.

Local Taxation (Imprisonment)

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) men and (b) women were imprisoned in England and Wales for non-payment of council tax, poll tax or rates in each year since 1991. [30280]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. Gerald Bermingham, dated 22 June 1994:

Obscenity

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the progress of the working group on obscenity; and if he will list the topics which have been discussed. [30019]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: The group has met twice so far. The main topics discussed have been the use of computer networks for the importation and dissemination of obscene and indecent material, the enforcement of laws against child pornography, the display of indecent material in newsagents and the need for further research in the area of obscenity.

Fine Defaulters

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of (a) all sentenced prison receptions and (b) all receptions of prisoners sentenced to six months or less consisted of fine defaulters in England and Wales in (i) 1993 and (ii) 1994. [30278]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. Gerald Bermingham, dated 22 June 1995:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question asking what proportion of (a) all sentenced prison receptions and (b) all receptions of prisoners sentenced to six months or less consisted of fine defaulters in England and Wales in (i) 1993 and (ii) 1994.

The information requested is given in the table below.

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, how many (a) males and (b) females were imprisoned in 1993 and 1994, respectively, for non-payment of fines; and what were the numbers of cases where the original fines were imposed for (i) motoring offences, (ii) theft and handling, (iii) drunkenness, and (iv) non-payment of television licences. [30277]

Mr. Forsyth: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. Gerald Bermingham, dated 22 June 1995.

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question asking how many (a) males and (b) females were imprisoned in 1993 and 1994, respectively, for non-payment of fines; and what were the numbers of cases where the original fines were imposed for (i) motoring offences, (ii) theft and handling, (iii) drunkenness, and (iv) non-payment of television licences.

Provisional information for 1993 and 1994 is given in the attached table.

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the proportion of the average daily population of (a) all sentenced prisoners and (b) all prisoners serving sentences of six months or less consisting of fine defaulters in England and Wales in (i) 1993 and (ii) 1994. [30279]

Mr. Forsyth: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. Gerald Bermingham, dated 22 June 1995:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question asking for the proportion of the average daily population of (a) all sentenced prisoners and (b) all prisoners serving sentences of six months or less, consisting of fine defaulters in England and Wales in (i) 1993 and (ii) 1994.

The information requested is given in the table attached.

Fine defaulters as a percentage of the average sentenced population and average population sentenced to less than 6 months, 1993 and 1994[1]

	1993	1994
Percentage of average sentenced population	1.5	1.2
Percentage of average sentenced population sentenced to less than six months	12.6	9.9

[1] Sentenced population includes fine defaulters but excludes sentenced prisoners held in police cells.

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many female prisoners were received into jails in England and Wales in lieu of fine default during 1994; and how many were received for non-payment of fines in relation to (a) community charge offences, (b) television licence offences, (c) soliciting and loitering, (d) motoring offences and (e) other offences which were themselves non-imprisonable. [24270]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The available provisional information of receptions of female fine defaulters into Prison Service establishments in 1994 is given in the table. Receptions for non-payment of community charge tax or council tax are not classified as receptions for fine default and are not therefore included in the table. Provisional information, however, shows that 188 females were received into a Prison Service establishment in England and Wales for non-payment of community charge in 1994. Separate information is not centrally available on fine default for loitering or for other non-imprisonable offences.

Receptions of female fine defaulters into Prison Service establishments in England and Wales 1994[1]

Offence	Number
Using a TV without a licence	260
Soliciting	24
Motoring offences	198
Other offences	815
All receptions	1,420

[1] Provisional figures.

Dr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) male and (b) female prisoners were received into gaols in England and Wales for fine default in each of the last three years for which figures are available; and how many were received for non-payment of (a) community charge, (b) TV licence, (c) motor offences, (d) sexual offences and (e) other offences which were themselves not imprisonable. [26896]

Mr. Forsyth: The available provisional information for receptions of fine defaulters into Prison Service establishments for 1992–1994 is given in table 1. Non-imprisonable offences are not separately identifiable from the offence information held centrally. Those received into prison for non-payment of community charge or council tax are non-criminal prisoners rather than fine defaulters. Information about receptions of such prisoners is given in table 2.

Information on fine defaulters and non-criminal receptions is published in "Prison Statistics, England and Wales"—tables 6.2 and 7.2 of the 1992 edition, Cm 2581, a copy of which is in the Library.

The power to imprison fine defaulters should be used only as a final sanction where the court has inquired into the offender's means and is satisfied that the default is due to the offender's wilful refusal or culpable neglect and has considered or tried all other methods of enforcing payment of the sum and it appears to the court that they are inappropriate or unsuccessful. In the case of defaulters aged 18 to 20 the court may, instead of issuing a warrant of committal, make an attendance centre order if such a disposal is available locally.

When a fine has been imposed on an offender by a court it may require immediate payment, allow time for payment, or order payment by instalments. If it orders payment by instalments it may at the same time, if the court deems it appropriate, make a money payments supervision order or, if the offender requests it, make an attachment of earnings order.

If an offender subsequently defaults on payment then the court is required to inquire again into his or her financial circumstances. A fine may be remitted in whole or in part where the original sentence was imposed on the basis of insufficient information about the financial circumstances of the offender or if circumstances have changed since the conviction. Periodical payments or further time to pay may be ordered in cases where that would be appropriate.

The magistrates court enforcing the fine may also use any of the following range of powers available to it:

it can make a money payments supervision order;

it can make an attachment of earnings order;

it can make an application for deductions to be made from an offender's income support; and it may issue a distress warrant where the defaulter has goods which may be sold to meet the fine; where the defaulter is under 18:

the parent or guardian, whose consent must be obtained, can be ordered to enter into a recognisance to ensure the defaulter pays, provided the court is satisfied the defaulter has had the means to pay and has refused or neglected to pay; or the parent or guardian can be ordered to pay the fine provided the court is satisfied the defaulter has had the means to pay and has refused or neglected to pay.

A working group on the enforcement of financial penalties has been set up by the Lord Chancellor's Department to identify and promote good practice in the enforcement of financial penalties and recommend procedural, administrative or legislative changes which would improve the enforcement of financial penalties. A study has also been commissioned by the Home Office research and planning unit to examine the use made of each of the enforcement methods available to the courts. The findings of the study will help to inform the considerations of the working group.

Child Abduction

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he will make it his policy that the passports of wards of court and other children at risk of child abduction be endorsed with details of relevant court orders. [30392]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: Consideration is currently being given by the Lord Chancellor's Department and the Home Office to the question of the endorsement of the passports of children at risk of child abduction. It is not possible at this stage to indicate the likely outcome of this process.

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what has been the work of his Department in the field of child abduction over the past year; and what work is planned in the year ahead. [30388]

Mr. Maclean: In association with REUNITE—the National Council for Abducted Children—officials and police officers have been reviewing police practice in this field. It is hoped that some guidance materials for parents and police officers will be produced.

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, how many known cases there have been of child abduction from the United Kingdom in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [30390]

Mr. Maclean: No information is collected centrally on the number of children abducted from the United Kingdom.

Medical Research

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to make lottery money available for medical research. [30297]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: The distribution of the share of lottery proceeds which is allocated for charitable expenditure is a matter for the National Lottery Charities Board. The board has stated that, in its first grants programme, on which it expects to make awards in October, it is placing a high priority on funding organisations working with people on low incomes and that applications from medical research charities which meet this criterion will be considered by the board in line with these priorities. The board has also said that in addition, applications from medical research charities for other projects will also be considered in the first programme, if the application is for an exceptional project or initiative. The board has yet to announce its priorities for future grant rounds.

Mrs. Ifat Shaheen Hussain

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when his Department received a request from the United Kingdom post in Islamabad to interview the sponsor of Mrs. Ifat Shaheen Hussain (Ref: Imm/C6283); when the sponsor is to be interviewed; and if he will make a statement. [30069]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: The request from the British high commission in Islamabad for an interview of Mrs. Ifat Shaheen Hussain's sponsor was received by the Home Office on 28 February 1995. The papers are, at present, with the immigration service, at Leeds—Bradford airport who will contact Mrs. Hussain's sponsor to arrange an interview in due course.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum seekers are at present being held in prisons in England and Wales. [29545]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: As at 15 June 1995, a total of 240 persons who had at some stage sought asylum in the United Kingdom were detained in Prison Service establishments. This figure includes people awaiting the setting of directions for removal following refusal of the application, as well as those whose applications were under consideration or subject to appeal.

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of asylum applications made by people with leave to enter the United Kingdom as visitors in 1994 was made before the leave to enter expired. [29461]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: Seventy per cent. of asylum applications from people with leave to enter the United Kingdom as visitors in 1994 were made before the leave to enter expired.

Police Vehicle Accidents

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people have been (a) killed and (b) injured in accidents involving police vehicles in each of the last five years. [29514]

Mr. Maclean: The latest available information on casualties in police vehicle accidents in England and Wales is for the period 1989–1993 and is given in the following table. The figures relate to death or serious injury in the course of either police pursuits or responses to emergency calls.

Police vehicle accidents (England and Wales)

Year	Total fatal injuries	Total serious injuries
1989	39	333
1990	24	317
1991	32	271

Probation Officers

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 6 June, Official Report, column 125, if he will list the organisations that have responded to the consultative proposals concerning probation officer recruitment and training. [29486]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: The Home Office has received comments from a wide variety of sources including individuals or groups of individuals in organisations and professional bodies. Some of these have written in a personal capacity and it would not be appropriate to disclose details. Responses have been received from the following organisations, probation services and universities.

Mrs. Golding: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many responses were received to the consultation document on the recruitment and training of probation officers; and how many of these supported the Government's proposals as set out in the consultation paper. [28113]

Mr. Baker: A total of 493 responses had been received by the end of the consultation period on 26 May 1995, of which 11 supported those proposals in full. My right hon. and learned Friend will be carefully considering all responses received and will announce his conclusions in due course.

Police Charging

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 20 January, Official Report, column 694, if he will make a statement on what is (a) the basis of and (b) justification for the general gravity and specific gravity system for police officers' use when determining whether or not to charge a suspect with an offence and which offence to charge. [29660]

Mr. Maclean: Decisions on charging are matters for chief officers and the Crown Prosecution Service. Where systems containing gravity factors are in use, I understand that they are intended to ensure a more consistent and robust approach to decision making by bringing to the attention of officers all the relevant facts of a case.

Demonstrations (Live Animals Exports)

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what has been the total cost to police budgets of the protection provided to those involved in the export of live animals in the last year. [29642]

Mr. Maclean: In the last 12 months seven police authorities have incurred additional expenditure as a result of policing demonstrations against live animal exports. I understand from them that the estimated additional costs to date have been £6,848,206.

National Lottery

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the overall effect on the income of smaller charities of the introduction of the national lottery. [29653]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: It is too early to assess the overall effect that the national lottery is having in this area. My right hon. and learned Friend has undertaken to monitor changes in charitable income following the establishment of the national lottery. He is preparing proposals for giving effect to this undertaking.

Former Yugoslavia

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his Department's current policy in respect of the resolution adopted on 1 June 1993 by the European Council under the headings "Resolution on certain common guide-lines as regards the admission of particularly vulnerable groups of persons from the former Yugoslavia". [29652]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: The Government have agreed to receive 1,000 particularly vulnerable individuals and their close dependants from the former Yugoslavia. As at 20 June, 866 principals and 1,177 dependants had arrived. None of these people will be required to return to the former Yugoslavia until it is safe to do so.

In addition, the Government are maintaining their previously announced policy of not requiring nationals of the former Yugoslavia to return to areas of active conflict.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many written parliamentary questions were tabled for answer by his Department in each of the past five years; how many of these were not answered because the information (a) could be obtained only at disproportionate cost, (b) was not held centrally and (c) was not normally disclosed; how many of these could now be answered due to computerisation, more effective and efficient operational systems or more open government; and if he will list each question along with the name and constituency of the right hon. or hon. Member who originally tabled it. [28518]

Mr. Howard: The information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Justice and Home Affairs Council

Sir Michael Shersby: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the outcome of the Justice and Home Affairs Council held on 20–21 June. [30864]

Mr. Howard: I, together with the Minister of State, Scottish Office, Lord Fraser, represented the United Kingdom at the Council which was held in Luxembourg.

Before the Council began, the Ministers of the member states met their counterparts from the central and eastern European states and from the Baltic states to continue the structured dialogue with them on interior and justice affairs. The troika held a meeting after the Council to brief the USA, Canada, Malta and Cyprus on the Council's discussions.

The Council agreed as "A" points, among other things, a statistical report on crimes and offences linked to racism and xenophobia, a report on terrorism, a report on aspects of customs co-operation, a recommendation on means of combating illegal immigration and illegal employment and a resolution on the protection of witnesses in the fight against international organised crime.

The Council had a full discussion on the points outstanding on three important conventions, which are close to completion. These are the conventions on Europol, on the protection of the financial interests of the European Communities and on the Customs information system. The Council was able to resolve most of these points and to make progress in defining the remaining issues which relate mainly to resolving disputes on the interpretation of the conventions. These will be discussed by the European Council at Cannes.

The Council considered progress reports on work on the draft convention on controls on persons crossing external frontiers and on the draft convention on extradition. It also considered a draft convention on jurisdiction and the enforcement of judgments in matrimonial matters, and agreed that work would continue on this under the incoming Spanish presidency.

It agreed in principle a resolution on burden sharing with regard to the admission and residence of temporarily displaced persons which is not legally binding and is in terms acceptable to the United Kingdom.

The Council considered the draft Council regulation on third countries whose nationals must have a visa when crossing the external borders of the member states. It failed to reach final agreement due to a difference of opinion on the inclusion in the list of the former Republic of Yugoslavia, Serbia-Montenegro.

I raised with my colleagues the question of football hooliganism. The Council agreed with my proposal that work should be done to increase the effectiveness of the arrangements between member states for preventing and dealing with disorder arising at football matches.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Flatworms

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what resources are being applied to research into the effects of New Zealand flatworms; if he will list the studies being undertaken; what assessment he has made of (a) the control of the flatworm in 1995 to date and (b) whether the problem is increasing; and if he will make a statement. [29170]

Mr. Ancram: New Zealand flatworms were first observed in two gardens in Belfast in 1963. They have spread to other parts of Northern Ireland and have now been found in approximately 800 locations. The Department of Agriculture is continuing to carry out research into the effects and control of the flatworm. It is estimated that costs of £366,000 have been incurred on this work since 1988 and £48,000 will be spent on it in 1995–96. Research to date has not identified an effective control measure other than trapping and removal of the flatworms.

Education Service (Building Programme)

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much money has been allocated for the building programme for the education service for the financial year; how much of this is additional funding; how much of this is directly related to construction work, how many projects are involved; how many projects have been put out to tender; and how many projects have commenced construction work. [28991]

Mr. Ancram: A total of £48.05 million has been allocated in the 1995–96 financial year for major capital works in the education service, and all new building work under the education reform programme. No additional resources were made available in the 1994 public expenditure round. This total is directly related to construction work and 211 capital projects are involved. Construction work has commenced on 111 projects and 33 projects are out to tender.

Sulphur Quotas

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what representations he has received regarding additional sulphur quotas for Northern Ireland's electricity generators; and when he expects to make a decision. [28980]

Mr. Moss: On the basis of representations from public representatives, Northern Ireland Electricity and the Northern Ireland generators, consideration is being given to the possible transfer of surplus allocations of sulphur dioxide and oxides of nitrogen from power stations in Great Britain to Northern Ireland.

It is hoped that a decision on this can be made in the near future and, as already undertaken, I will advise the hon. Member of the outcome of this examination as soon as possible.

Schools (Funding)

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the reasons for the removal of direct links between the Department of Education in Northern Ireland and voluntary grammar schools. [28973]

Mr. Ancram: The Government have proposed that the recurrent funding of voluntary grammar schools and grant-maintained integrated schools would in future be undertaken by the education and library boards, which are responsible for funding the vast majority of schools in Northern Ireland, both controlled and voluntary.

Many representations on these proposals have been received by my Department as part of the consultation process, which officially ended on 9 June. I will now wish to consider these representations before making final decisions.

Washington Investment Conference

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much was expended out of public funds sent to delegates to the Washington investment conference. [28981]

Sir John Wheeler: Financial assistance was provided by the Industrial Development Board only to those business representatives who qualified under existing marketing programmes. Companies qualifying under this support through the matchmaker programme totalled 34 and assistance of up to £500 per attendee is available. So far, no financial support has been drawn down. Assistance of up to £500 per attendee was also provided to the voluntary sector. To date, £18,500 has been expended.

The Secretary of State and two Northern Ireland Office Ministers attended the conference, along with a number of senior officials and chairmen of Government-funded agencies. While in the United States, a number of the attendees at the conference undertook other official arrangements. Costs of attending the conference are being collated and apportioned to reflect this. I will write to the right hon. Gentleman with these details.

Accidents (Old Milltown Road)

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many accidents there have been this year along the Old Milltown road, Shaw's Bridge, Castlereagh; how many of these road accidents have involved pedestrians; what proposals there are for a footway along this road; what proposals there are to make the Old Milltown road a one-way road; what proposals there are for calming measures at the Old Milltown road; and if he will make a statement about road safety at this location. [28978]

Mr. Moss: On the road in question, there has been one recorded injury accident this year—no pedestrians were involved. There are no proposals to provide a footway, a one-way system or traffic calming measures at Old Milltown road. The accident history at this location compares favourably with that at similar locations throughout the Belfast area.

National Health Service

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what were the administrative costs incurred by (a) NHS purchasers and (b) NHS providers in each region in each year since 1990–91. [29094]

Mr. Moss: The purchaser-provider split was not recognised in the accounts of health and personal social services organisations in Northern Ireland until 1992–93. The information requested is not available in the precise form requested. The tables give expenditure on administration, training and miscellaneous items.

Note:
In 1992–93 the form of accounts for health and personal social services organisations changed to reflect the purchaser/provider split and the introduction of capital charges. Comparison of figures before 1992–93 with those since that date should be approached with caution.

Dr. Yin Yin Teoh

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the case of Dr. Yin Yin Teoh of the Belfast Victoria hospital [30255]

Mr. Moss: Dr. Yin Yin Teoh, a pre-registration house officer in the royal group of hospitals HSS trust was responsible for the accidental administration of an injection into the wrong drip line which resulted in the death of a patient, Mr. Samuel Beers. As a result, Dr. Teoh was charged with manslaughter but was found not guilty at her trial on 15 May 1995.

A thorough investigation of the circumstances surrounding the incident was carried out by the trust and the recommendations flowing from this investigation have been implemented.

During the period of the investigation and trial, Dr. Teoh was transferred to non-clinical duties. She has since been successful in obtaining an appointment as a senior house officer and has resumed clinical duties at the royal group of hospitals trust.

Rate Collection Agency

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the future of the Rate Collection Agency. [30937]

Mr. Moss: KPMG Management Consulting was commissioned to undertake an evaluation of the performance of the Rate Collection Agency and a review of the prior options of abolition, privatisation or contractorisation of the agency or the market testing of its functions. They concluded that:

- the RCA is an effective and efficient organisation, and that Agency status has acted as a catalyst to improvement in performance through the greater clarity of objectives and responsibilities which it has engendered;
- the delivery of the RCA functions by the private sector is feasible, and that the most appropriate way of ensuring the best value for money solution is to market test the Agency's functions.

The Government have decided to accept the KPMG recommendations that the agency's functions should be market tested. In the meantime, the status of the agency has been confirmed until the results of the market test are implemented. A revised framework document for the agency is currently being prepared.

Copies of the KPMG report are being placed in the Library.

Small and Medium-sized Business

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is his Department's definition of a small business and a medium-sized business. [29578]

Mr. Ancram [holding answer, 21 June 1995]: There is no generally accepted, single definition of what is a small and what is a medium-sized business. Where it is necessary to distinguish between small and medium-sized businesses, for example in the presentation of statistical data or in the context of a specific scheme of assistance, the definition used will always be made clear.

WALES

Training and Enterprise Councils

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the criteria for being appointed chairman of a training and enterprise council; when the criteria were last revised; and if he will list chairmen of the Welsh training and enterprise councils, and the business activities in which they are engaged corresponding to the criteria for selection. [28248]

Mr. Redwood: The chairman of each training and enterprise council is chosen by the TEC's board of directors. To be eligible the person concerned must hold the office of chairman or chief executive of a company, or be a top level operational manager at a local level of a company, or be a senior partner of a professional partnerships within the private sector, where the company or partnership concerned is of at least three year's standing and has either an annual turnover exceeding £5 million or 25 or more full-time employees. Any TEC director who ceases to be eligible while in office is expected to relinquish that position within three months after ceasing to be eligible, unless the TEC and I agree that he or she may continue in office.

These requirements are set out in the TEC operating agreement and were last reviewed in 1992.

The current chairman of TECs in Wales are listed. All of these except one satisfy the eligibility criteria for TEC chairmanship as either chairman or managing director of a private sector company employing more than 25 staff. The exception is Mr. Paul Rich who was eligible as the managing director of a private company employing more than 25 staff at the time of his appointment as TEC chairman. Mr. Rich has since ceased to hold this office but I have agreed to his continued chairmanship of the TEC up to 31 March 1996, unless the TEC identifies a suitable successor before then.

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the cost to public funds of hosting the Conservative Welsh conference at the Eisteddfod international centre in Llangollen on 9 and 10 June. [28810]

Mr. Redwood: Security and policing arrangements for the conference were provided by the North Wales police force. No other cost to public funds was incurred.

Medical Treatment

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his oral answer of 12 June to the hon. Member for Ribble Valley (Mr. Evans), Official Report, column 490, what assessment he has made of the reasons for the change in numbers of people needing medical treatment in Wales since 1979. [29157]

Mr. Richards: A large number of factors will have contributed to the increase, including a greater use of screening procedures, medical, technical and pharmaceutical advances, an overall increase in morbidity due mainly to the growing number of elderly people, and rising public and patient expectations of what NHS treatment can achieve.

Clinical Services

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will place in the Library a list of all contracts for non-clinical services worth £100,000 or more that have been awarded by national health service trusts under the compulsory competitive tendering process.

Mr. Richards: Only three NHS services are subject to compulsory competitive tendering—catering, laundry and domestic services. All the contracts awarded by NHS trusts for these services are in excess of £100,000.

Administrative Costs

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, what were the administrative costs incurred by (a) NHS purchasers and (b) NHS providers in each region in each year since 1990–91. [29096]

[28993]

Mr. Richards: The information requested is given in the following tables. In 1993–94 local authorities incurred no expenditure on, and received no income from, placements in unregistered independent residential care and nursing homes. The expenditure not covered by direct income is supported from sources not hypothecated to specific sources, primarily revenue support grant, non-domestic rates and council tax income.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The data requested are available for each year from 1987 for Wales and for 1987, 1989 and 1991 for Blaenau Gwent travel-to-work area. All these data can be obtained from the NOMIS database which can be accessed by the staff of the Library of the House.

Volatile Organic Compounds

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what support his Department is giving to local authorities in Wales to assist them to develop their systems for monitoring volatile organic compounds. [29488]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Under its strategy to curb emissions of volatile organic compounds, the Government are taking a range of measures including controls on industrial sources, tighter standards for vehicles, and increased monitoring. As part of this we are encouraging the integration of local authority monitoring into the UK network and aiming to provide support to councils on quality controls aspects. In Wales, the Welsh Office has also co-operated with councils on the establishment of the new air quality forum to help monitor and assess, on a consistent basis, compounds and other air pollutants.

NHS Dental Services

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much of the extra money for alleviating the dental crisis in Gwynedd, announced by him earlier this year to the Welsh Grand Committee, has so far been (a) spent and (b) committed; and if he will publish an analysis of such expenditure. [29924]

Mr. Richards: None of the extra £2.5 million has yet been allocated or spent.

All Welsh health authorities, as well as those in Gwynedd, were invited to bring forward proposals to improve dental services in their areas. Those proposals have been considered and discussed in detail at meetings with Welsh Office officials.

An announcement will be made shortly on how the money will be made available.

Income

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the current average gross weekly income of adult (a) male and (b) female full-time Welsh workers. [29618]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: According to the "New Earnings Survey", average gross weekly earnings of full-time males in Wales was £320.9 in April 1994. The corresponding figure for females was £239.0.

Mr. Redwood: If there are complaints about possible violation of the low flying regulations they should be referred to the MOD for investigation. Compensation is payable where military activity leads to an identifiable and agreed loss.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) how many (a) doctors, (b) nurses, (c) administrators and (d) other non-medical staff are employed by Welsh hospitals; and if he will make a statement; [29052]

(2) what is the number of (a) doctors, (b) nurses, (c) administrators and (d) other non-medical staff employed in extended community hospitals in Powys; and if he will make a statement. [29054]

Mr. Richards: Information is not available in the precise from requested. Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the average cost of a hip replacement operation in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [29062]

Mr. Richards: Information on treatment costs in contracts is not held centrally. Tariffs for treatment outside of contracts are published. Of the published tariffs specifically for hip replacements procedures, the average is £3,466.

The following are excluded from the above:

(1) fees paid to doctors, dentists and pharmacists for professional services and expenditure on the drugs bill;

(b) Gross domestic product[1]	20,033	22,761

Mr. Richards: There are no general medical practitioners in Wales whose salaries are paid directly by family health service authorities.

There were nine, out of 1,710, unrestricted principal GPs in Wales at 1 October 1994 who were "salaried partners": that is, their salary was paid by the partnership for whom they worked. The salaries of all assistant and trainee GPs—138 at 1 October 1994—are paid by the partnership for whom they work. Information on the cost of employing these staff is not available centrally.

NHS revenue expenditure in 1993–94 was:	1,443,652	—
The amount spent on salaries was:	951,937	66
The proportion of salaries bill accounted for by non-medical staff was:	262,894	28

Source:
Annual Accounts/Financial returns of DHAs, SHAs, FHSAs, NHS Trusts and Welsh Office records.

Notes:
1. 1993–94 data is provisional and the latest available.
2. Expenditure on non-medical staff includes the salaries and wages of general and senior managers, administrators and clerks, ancillary, maintenance, ambulance and "other non-specified" employees in health authorities, SHAs, FHSAs and NHS trusts. The chairmen's and non-executive members remuneration is also included. The costs of GPs' administrative staff are not included in the "non-medical" calculation as this information is not separately collected.
3. Non NHS staff (agency etc) are excluded from the non-medical staff proportion at this expenditure is not analysed by staff category.

Welsh Assembly

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will place in the Library all work undertaken by his Department on the subject of a Welsh Assembly since 1974. [30224]

Mr. Redwood: I do not have access to any departmental papers relating to that period of the Labour Government between 1974 and 1979. Such papers are subject to the provisions of the Public Record Acts 1958 and 1967. Consequently, those files selected for permanent preservation will normally be available for inspection at the Public Records Office, Kew, from January 2004.

For the period since 1979 I am advised that no studies or other substantive work has been undertaken.

West Wales Task Force

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when the next meeting of the strategy group of the West Wales task force is to be held. [30249]

Mr. Richards: The next meeting of the West Wales task force will be held on Monday 24 July.

Strategic Development Scheme

Mr. Sweeney: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he will announce his plans for the strategic development scheme in 1996–97. [30936]

Mr. Redwood: A circular inviting local authorities to bid for support under the strategic development scheme is being issued today. I am making two important changes to the scheme following detailed consultations with the Council of Welsh Districts and the Assembly of County Councils: local authorities are being given full responsibility for approving and administering smaller schemes—I am setting aside approximately £13 million in 1996–97 for the purpose. I am introducing a new community strategy initiative specifically designed to tackle the most severe social problems in targeted areas. A copy of the circular has been placed in the Libraries of the House.

Correspondence

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when Councillor Handel Morgan of Gwynedd county council can expect to receive a reply to the letter he wrote to the Under-Secretary of State on 6 February, regarding his comments on officials of Gwynedd county council, or to his subsequent reminder on 7 March; and if the length of time taken to reply is in accordance with the provisions of the citizens charter. [28480]

Mr. Richard [holding answer 19 June 1995]: I am grateful to the hon. Gentleman for drawing my attention to this matter. I have written to Cllr Morgan today, and have copied my reply to the hon. Gentleman.

Financial Management Policy Reviews

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 18 May Official Report, column 373, if he will list any previous examples of financial management policy reviews not being completed; if he will list the civil service guidelines for the carrying out of financial management policy reviews with specific respect to their non-completion; if he will list the principal reasons for non-completion; what proposals he has for strengthening the guidelines for the conduct of such reviews with regard to aborted reviews and the procedure for dealing with them; and if he will make a statement. [27012]

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 6 June 1995]: General guidance on the conduct and coverage of financial management policy reviews is contained in "Non—Departmental Public Bodies. A Guide for Departments", a copy of which is in the Library of the House. The guidance states that all reviews should be conducted in two distinct stages. Only after agreement has been reached on the recommendations of the first stage—the prior options review—will a review proceed to a second stage.

As I announced in response to the question by my right hon. Friend the Member for Conwy (Sir W. Roberts) on 3 November 1994, Official Report, column 1329, the prior options review of the Countryside Council for Wales indicated that there could be scope for elected bodies to play an increased role in the delivery of certain of the council's functions. The second stage of the financial management policy review was therefore overtaken by a review of the council's functions.

SCOTLAND

Scottish Ambulance Service

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met Mr. Freemantle of the Scottish Ambulance Service to discuss relations between the service and right hon. and hon. Members; what was the outcome of his discussions; and if he will make a statement. [28534]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. Friend has had no recent discussions with the chief executive of the Scottish Ambulance Service NHS trust, but the chief executive has met a number of right hon. and hon. Members this year and welcomes the opportunity for such meetings. If the hon. Gentleman has particular concerns regarding relations between the service and right hon. and hon. Members he should detail them and I shall ensure that they are investigated.

Renfrew District Elderly Forum

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will meet Renfrew district elderly forum to discuss local government reform, water and sewerage services, concessionary travel schemes, standing charges on utilities and other topics of concern; and if he will make a statement. [28570]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. Friend has no plans to meet Renfrew district elderly forum. He is, however, aware of its concerns, many of which have recently been raised with him or his Ministers by organisations that represent older people, including elderly forums. I met Strathclyde elderly forum in January to discuss concerns about concessionary travel schemes.

Care in the Community

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on his willingness to support and fund (a) community and (b) staff-led co-operatives to provide care in the community in Scotland. [28531]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Direct financial support from the Scottish Office is generally provided to national voluntary organisations to assist with headquarters running costs and for innovative projects with potential national significance. Locally organised projects may be eligible for funding under the urban programme. Local authority social work departments have been given the responsibility and financial resources to develop and purchase high-quality, cost-effective services from a range of providers in response to local need. This could include staff-led co-operatives.

Conservation Areas

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what considerations underlie the difference between planning application fees for minor developments within conservation areas for flatted dwellings and dwelling houses; and if he will amend regulations to equalise the fees. [29205]

Mr. Lang: Where a planning authority has, under the relevant legislation, removed permitted development rights in a conservation area, owners of dwelling houses and flatted dwellings must submit a planning application for minor proposals. A planning fee is payable in the case of a dwelling house, but not in the case of a flatted dwelling. This accords with the position outwith conservation areas where a dwelling house would, subject to certain limitations, enjoy permitted development rights but planning proposals in flatted dwellings require planning permission and, accordingly, payment of a fee.

The reason for the distinction is that alterations to flats are more likely to affect neighbouring interests and are not therefore granted the permitted development rights available to dwelling houses.

Agricultural Grants

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the mean, median and standard deviation for the length of time between receiving a claim and the payment of a claim for each agricultural grant handled by his Department. [29455]

Sir Hector Monro: The information requested is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. Targets for the payment of claims for grants and subsidies are set out in the Scottish Office Agriculture and Fisheries Department's charter standard statement entitled "Serving Scottish Farmers". A second edition was published on 21 June. In 1993–94, the Department attained a performance rate of 90 per cent. or above for the majority of the targets set out in the first edition of "Serving Scottish Farmers". I will report on performance for 1994–95 later this year.

Residential Care

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the total expenditure in 1993–94 by each local authority from placements of old people in (a) registered and (b) unregistered independent residential care and nursing homes, inside and outside the local authority area and from placements in local authority homes for older people; and if he will break down by income from (1) Government grants, inside aggregate external finance and outside aggregate external finance, (2) sales, (3) fees and charges, (4) other income and (5) joint arrangements. [28992]

Local financial returns made by local authorities to Scottish Office.

Sand-eel Fishery

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many vessels are employed in monitoring the sand-eel fishery around Shetland and in the west of Scotland waters. [29344]

Mr. Lang: The Scottish Office marine laboratory would normally deploy one of its research vessels to help with any necessary stock assessment. In addition, the Scottish Fisheries Protection Agency deploys a number of vessels on surveillance and enforcement duties. These include four offshore fishery patrol vessels augmented by a similar Royal Navy vessel and two inshore launches. Their tasking covers the sand-eel fisheries but is not exclusively so.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps are being taken to monitor the age, composition and size of fish in each catch of sand-eels around Shetland. [29343]

Mr. Lang [holding answer 19 June 1995]: The Scottish Office marine laboratory in Aberdeen is analysing daily samples from the Shetland fishery on the basis of age and length composition.

Wild Mink

Mrs. Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he has made of the damage done to marine birdlife by wild mink. [29624]

Sir Hector Monro: My right hon. Friend has received advice from Scottish Natural Heritage on the impact of mink on Scottish wildlife. The species is an active predator and established itself in the wild after escaping from mink farms as long ago as 1929. Research results indicate that the mink has generally not had a serious effect on our wildlife although there remains concern about its possible effect on some colonies of ground-nesting seabirds.

Mrs. Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what guidance his Department has issued to relevant authorities on the control of wild mink populations; what controls are already in place; and where they are being carried out. [29621]

Sir Hector Monro: Guidance on the provisions of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981 was issued in 1991 in a circular to local authorities and other relevant organisations. Under that Act it is an offence to release mink or to allow mink to escape into the wild. The Mink (Keeping) Regulations 1975 also apply strict requirements to mink farming to prevent escapes from adding to the wild mink population. In addition there are voluntary efforts to trap mink by groups such as the Argyll bird club and the Harris and Lewis mink control group.

Mrs. Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the estimated population of wild mink in (a) Scotland (b) Argyll and Bute for the years (i) 1992, (ii) 1993 and (iii) 1994. [29623]

Sir Hector Monro: It was estimated recently that there are some 50,000 wild mink in Scotland. Further details requested are not available.

Fatal Accident Inquiry

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he will be in a position to state whether there is to be a fatal accident inquiry into the death of a constituent of the hon. Member for Greenock and Port Glasgow in a traffic accident in East shaw street, Greenock on 21 April; and if he will make a statement. [29306]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The death to which the hon. Member refers has been reported to the procurator fiscal at Greenock, and he is inquiring into the circumstances. Members of the deceased's family were interviewed on 7 and 8 June. The procurator fiscal anticipates that his inquiries will be completed by the end of June.

Boundary Commission Review

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what procedures there are for changing the name of a parliamentary constituency between Parliamentary Boundary Commission reviews; and if he will make a statement. [30292]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Recommendations as to the names of parliamentary constituencies in Scotland are a matter for the Boundary Commission for Scotland alone. The commission is empowered to undertake interim reviews of constituencies, between general reviews, as it sees fit.

Police

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the number of police officers per 1,000 population in Grampian region and in Gordon district. [30012]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The regular police establishment per 1,000 population in Grampian region is 2.21 as at 31 March 1995. The information for Gordon district is not available.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the average number of police officers per 1,000 population in Scotland. [30011]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The authorised regular police establishment per 1,000 population in Scotland is 2.77 as at 31 March 1995.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the location and number of rural police stations in Scotland that have been closed over the past 10 years. [30013]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: This information is not held centrally. Closure of police stations is a matter for the chief constable and police authority of the force area concerned.

Farmwatch

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list by region the number of farmwatch schemes operating in Scotland; and what provision his Department has undertaken to encourage farmers to join this scheme. [30014]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Information by region is not held centrally, but the number of schemes by police force area is as follows:

Central Scotland police	—
Dumfries and Galloway constabulary	14
Fife constabulary	—
Grampian police	34
Lothian and Borders police	8
Northern constabulary	1
Strathclyde police	—
Tayside police	58

Farmwatch schemes, in common with a wide range of other watch schemes, continue to increase in number and operate in close co-operation with individual police forces. The demand for, and development of, such schemes are essentially driven by farming communities in the light of their perception of local circumstances.

Ayr County Hospital

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland for how long the old Ayr county hospital building has been empty; what action has been taken to protect its fabric; what action has been taken to find a new use for it; when he expects it to be re-occupied; and if he will make a statement. [30023]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Ayr county hospital was closed on 31 October 1991 and has been empty since that date. The fabric of the building has been maintained throughout this time in a wind and watertight condition. The hospital has been deemed surplus to requirements by Ayrshire and Arran health board and an offer has been accepted from a property developer who should take possession of the property in December 1995.

"Granny Flats"

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the effect of the English High Court decision by Mr. Justice Ognall on the separate valuation for council tax purposes of annexs set aside for elderly relatives in respect of Scotland; and if he will make a statement. [30024]

Mr. Kynoch: In Scotland, this matter is regulated by section 72 of the Local Government Finance Act 1992, which defines a chargeable dwelling for council tax purposes. Although each case is assessed on its merits, it is our understanding that assessors generally enter such dwellings separately in the valuation list. Any dispute or question over an assessor's interpretation of section 72 is a matter for the relevant valuation appeal committee and ultimately for the courts.

Electoral Ward Names

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what procedures there are for changing an electoral ward name in a new unitary authority; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Kynoch: There are no statutory procedures for changing the name of an electoral ward. The usual practice is that names of electoral wards are included by local authorities in any proposals made in the course of a review of local government electoral arrangements by the Local Government Boundary Commission for Scotland. Proposals for changes to electoral areas, including the name of electoral wards are subject to wide public consultation. The first review of electoral arrangements in respect of the new unitary authorities will commence as soon as practicable after 1 April 1996 with the aim of completing the review in time for the next election in 1999.

Crofters

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to amend the crofter building grants and loans scheme; and if he will make a statement. [30040]

Sir Hector Monro: My Department has no plans at present to introduce changes to the assistance available through the crofters building grants and loans scheme.

HIV

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much compensation has been paid to people in (a) Inverclyde, (b) Strathclyde and (c) Scotland who contracted HIV from contaminated blood products; how many people have received compensation; and how many were haemophiliacs. [28323]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 20 June 1995]: Payments totalling £4,050,000 have been made to 75 patients in Scotland who were infected with HIV through NHS treatment with blood, blood products or tissue transfer. Sixty three of these were haemophiliacs. Information available is on an all-Scotland basis and does not separately identify individuals according to area of residence.

NHS (Private Sector Involvement)

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Cunninghame, South (Mr. Donohoe) of 12 June, Official Report, column 367-68, what is the estimated cost of the process of seeking private sector partners to design, build and finance the new facilities in Edinburgh and Lanarkshire; and what are the non-clinical services referred to. [29583]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 21 June 1995]: The process of seeking private sector partners is not yet complete in the Edinburgh and Lanarkshire trusts, so final costs cannot yet be provided. However, two of the trusts have indicated that they expect the cost of the entire process to be between 0.5 per cent. and 0.75 per cent. of the total capital cost. The non-clinical services referred to include estates services, building maintenance, hotel services, supplies, laundry, theatre sterile supplies, medical records, transport services, security car parking, grounds and gardens, switchboard services and information technology. Not all of the services include every one of these areas.

Multiple Births

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many sets of (a) twins, (b) triplets, (c) quadruplets, (d) quintuplets and (e) sextuplets were born in Scotland in each year from 1990 to 1994; what was the total number of maternities in Scotland in each year; and how many multiple births of each type in each year were conceived as a result of (i) in-vitro fertilisation, (ii) gamete intra-fallopian transfer and (iii) other forms of assisted conception; and if he will make a statement. [29528]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 21 June 1995]: The information is as follows:

Type of birth	1990	1991	1992	1993	1994 (Prov)
Twins:
2 live	711	682	790	751	762

2 stillbirth	5	5	6	4	3
Triplets:
3 live	14	18	15	10	16
2 live, 1 stillbirth	2	4	—	—	—

Total maternities	65,556	66,630	65,307	62,946	61,224

Information on the number of multiple births in Scotland attributed to assisted reproduction is not available. Some information on these matters is published in the three annual reports of the Human Fertilisation and Embryology Authority, and in earlier reports of the interim licensing authority, copies of which are available in the Library.

Ayrshire and Arran Health Board

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) who were the members of the sub-committee of the members of the board of Ayrshire and Arran health board which oversaw the negotiations between Irvine Healthcare Ltd. and the health board prior to the conclusion of the current contract; [29697]

(2) when Ayrshire and Arran health board first entered negotiations with Irvine Healthcare Ltd. on the provision of a replacement facility for Ravenspark hospital; [29689]

(3) when the members of the board of Ayrshire and Arran health board approved the contract with Irvine Healthcare Ltd.; and when the contract with the company was formally concluded; [29680]

(4) if he will make available the detail of the agreement between Ayrshire and Arran health board and Irvine Healthcare Ltd. as regards the siting of the company's facility within the grounds of Ayrshire central hospital and the financial agreement allowing the lease of the site from the Ayrshire and Arran Community NHS Healthcare trust and the period covered by the contract with the company; [29696]

(5) what current contracts exist between Ayrshire and Arran health board and private and independent sectors for the provision of care beds to the NHS under contract; what are the companies involved in these contracts; what is the value of the individual contracts, and when they will lapse; [29684]

(6) what investigations Ayrshire and Arran health board has carried out into the patient care record of Irvine Healthcare Ltd.; and what monitoring processes will be put in place to ensure effective standards of patient care; [29686]

(7) what process was adopted by the Ayrshire and Arran health board to publicise its interest in involving the private sector in the building of the replacement facility at Ravenspark hospital; and what private companies indicated their interest in this contract; [29690]

(8) how Irvine Healthcare Ltd. first indicated an interest with the Ayrshire and Arran health board as regards its involvement with a replacement facility for Ravenspark hospital. [29692]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 21 June 1995]: These matters are for Ayrshire and Arran health board. The hon. Member may wish to write to the general manager of the board.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will instruct Ayrshire and Arran health board to make publicly available copies of its contract with Irvine Healthcare Ltd. [29681]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 21 June 1995]: No.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what current guidance exists and what guidance existed between 1993 and the present time to Scottish health boards relating to the tendering arrangements for medical facilities within the NHS. [29683]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 21 June 1995]: Various guidance exists on appraising projects and the private finance initiative. Guidance will shortly be issued on tendering arrangements for privately financed projects.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps Ayrshire and Arran health board has taken to appoint a new general manager; and whether any decision has been taken on his successor. [29685]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 21 June 1995]: Ayrshire and Arran health board is actively considering the arrangements for a successor to Mr. J. M. Eckford OBE who retires later this year. Part of these arrangements will be public advertisement of the post. No decisions have been taken on Mr. Eckford's successor.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he intends to begin the consultation on the closure of Ravenspark hospital; and what steps Ayrshire and Arran health board have taken to prepare the arrangements for the consultation process. [29687]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 21 June 1995]: Consultations on hospital closures are the responsibility of the health board concerned. Ayrshire and Arran health board is aware of the requirements for consultation set out in NHS circular GEN(1975)46.

The final decision on any hospital closure in Scotland rests with my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what guidance was issued to Ayrshire and Arran health board prior to 24 February 1993 by the national health service management executive concerning entering into long-term contracts with the private or independent sectors for the provision of continuing care beds; and whether this guidance is compatible with the board's decision to conclude a contract with Irvine Healthcare Ltd. for the provision of a replacement facility for Ravenspark hospital. [29691]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 21 June 1995]: The NHS management executive advised the board in late 1992 that it should not enter into long-term contracts with the private sector which would constrain its ability to meet changing needs. It gave approval to conclude the contract with Irvine Care Ltd. on 13 July 1994.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what representations Ayrshire and Arran health board received from the Ayrshire and Arran Community Healthcare NHS trust as regards the board's negotiations with Irvine Healthcare Ltd. for the provision of a replacement facility for Ravenspark hospital; [29693]

(2) what representations the Scottish Office or the national health service management executive has received from the Ayrshire and Arran Community Healthcare NHS trust on the contract between Ayrshire and Arran health board and Irvine Healthcare Ltd. [29682]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 21 June 1995]: The chief executive of the trust wrote on 9 February 1995 and received a response from the director of trusts in the NHS management executive on 3 March 1995.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what was the involvement of the National Health Service Management Executive in the conclusion of the contract between Ayrshire and Arran health board and Irvine Healthcare Ltd.; and on what specific issues they made representations to the health board about this contract; [29695]

(2) what discussions the Scottish Office had with Ayrshire and Arran health board relating to its contract with Irvine Healthcare Ltd.; and what was the subject of these discussions. [29675]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 21 June 1995]: The NHS management executive has had a number of discussions with officers of the health board between late 1992 and the present. They concerned the health board's assessment of the needs of its local population for the service to be provided under this contract, the quality of the service and its value for money.

Conclusion of the contract was a matter for the health board.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions his Department has had with representatives of the private and independent sectors concerning the provision of continuing care beds to the NHS and their involvement in private finance initiatives. [29674]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 20 June 1995]: My officials have had a number of discussions with various parties interested in the private finance initiative. Such discussions are of a general nature.

The commissioning of particular schemes is the responsibility of the health board or NHS trust concerned.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment his Department and the national health service management executive has made of the financial terms of Ayrshire and Arran health board's contract with Irvine Healthcare Ltd. [29676]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 21 June 1995]: The health board submitted an option appraisal covering the project to the NHS management executive. This was considered by the NHS management executive in line with normal procedures.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when the Scottish Office and the National Health Service Management Executive gave final approval to Ayrshire and Arran health board to the contract which it has concluded with Irvine Healthcare Ltd. [29677]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The NHS management executive wrote to the general manager of Ayrshire and Arran health board on 13 July 1994 giving approval for the contract to be concluded.

Mr. Donhoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if Irvine Healthcare Ltd. or its parent company Speciality Care PLC are currently involved in negotiations with any Scottish health boards other than Ayrshire and Arran concerning the provision of long-term care beds under contract to the NHS. [29678]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 21 June 1995]: This information is not held centrally. Negotiations on contracts are a matter for individual health boards.

Mr. Donhoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what consideration underlay the decision to exclude the Ayrshire and Arran Community Healthcare NHS trust from tendering for the replacement facility for Ravenspark hospital; and if this decision was in line with guidance from the national health service management executive at that time. [29694]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 21 June 1995]: The Ayrshire and Arran Community Healthcare NHS trust was not established when tendering took place. The trust was established in April 1993.

Tendering submissions were made in late 1991.

Lanarkshire Development Agency

Mr. Norman Hogg: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what changes he proposes to the representation on the board of Lanarkshire Development Agency to facilitate representation for Cumbernauld and Kilsyth; whom he will consult; and if he will make a statement. [29748]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 21 June 1995]: The boards of local enterprise companies are appointed by the enterprise bodies, not by my right hon. Friend. The members of the board serve as individuals, not as representatives of any particular interest. Where local enterprise company boundaries are due to change on 1 April 1996, Scottish Enterprise will be taking steps to ensure that the composition of the local enterprise company board is consistent with its new geographical area.

Gaelic Broadcasting

Mr. Norman Hogg: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the cost to his Department in each of the past three years of promoting Gaelic broadcasting; and what is the projected cost for the current financial year. [29750]

Sir Hector Monro [holding answer 21 June 1995]: Government support for Gaelic broadcasting over the past three years is given in the table. The projected expenditure in the current financial year is £8,930,000.

1992–93: £9,500,000
1993–94: £9,500,000
1994–95: £8,738,000

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what evidence he has evaluated to support Spanish Government assertions that illegal drugs are being transported via Gibraltar into the European Union. [30485]

Mr. David Davis: The authorities in Gibraltar have evidence that boats based in Gibraltar are being used to transport illegal drugs directly from Morocco to Spain.

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps Her Majesty's Government propose to take to ensure that Spain honours its obligations under European law and permits European Union visitors to cross from Spain into Gibraltar, and return, without unreasonable delay at customs and immigration checkpoints. [30486]

Mr. Davis: I refer the hon. Member to my answer of 7 June, Official Report, column 204. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs raised this matter in talks with the Spanish Foreign Minister, Senor Solana, in Madrid on 19 June.

Marine Environment Protection Treaty

Mr. Hain: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he proposes to re-ratify the Oslo-Paris—OSPAR—treaty; if he will make a statement indicating when the United Kingdom first signed this treaty; what time has elapsed between signature and implementation; and what discussions he has had with the Secretary of State for the Environment concerning the future implementation of OSPAR in connection with Shell and the Brent Spar platform. [30694]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The United Kingdom signed the convention for the protection of the marine environment of the north-east Atlantic—the OSPAR convention—on 3 November 1992.

The Department of the Environment has been checking since then whether all relevant UK legislation is consistent with the convention before ratification can take place. This also needs to be done for the Isle of Man and the bailiwicks of Jersey and Guernsey. Our decisions in connection with the Brent Spar installation have been entirely consistent with the new convention.

Charter Week

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what are the main events he is proposing for Charter Week; what is the total cost to public funds; and how many (a) civil servants and (b) other public officials will be playing a part. [30688]

Mr. Goodlad: The FCO's public service functions are mainly performed overseas. No events for Charter Week are being planned.

Crown Immunity

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list all areas within (a) his Department, (b) agencies under his Department's control and (c) organisations for which he has ministerial responsibility to which Crown immunity applies; what consideration he has given to removing this; and if he will make a statement. [28654]

Mr. Goodlad [holding answer 15 June 1995]: The reference to "Crown immunity" is taken to refer to legislation which does not bind the Crown. Certain legislation is expressly applied to the Crown. In most legislation, however, particularly older legislation, there is no such express provision. In those circumstances, whether legislation applies to the Crown will depend on the implications to be drawn from the drafting and context of the legislation.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Visitors' Appeals

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what is the number and percentage of visitors' appeals upheld by adjudication in the last three years prior to the appeal system in such cases being discontinued. [30481]

Mr. John M. Taylor: The information requested is as follows:

Period	Visitor Visa Appeals Determined	Number of Appeals Allowed	Percentage of Appeals Allowed
1991	n/a	n/a	n/a
1992	16,524	2,500	15
January–June 1993[1]	7,164	1,361	19

n/a=Not available

[1] The Asylum and Immigration Appeals Act 1993, which removed the right of appeal in visitor visa cases, came into force in July 1993.

Legal Aid

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what was the total cost of publishing and printing form LBF August 1994 for the Legal Aid Board's advice at police stations standby claim; and when it was made available to all solicitors involved in legal aid work. [29651]

Mr. John M. Taylor: The cost of the new form "Advice at Police Stations Standby Claim" is £32.88 per 1,000 copies; the same as for the old form. A small supply of the new forms was sent out in July 1994 to all legal aid account holders, together with a letter informing them of the change and the implementation date of 1 August 1994.

Mr. Griffiths: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what was the total cost of publishing and printing the legal aid forms, advice at police stations standby claim in use up to August 1994; how many copies were scrapped as a result of adding a question to the form; what consideration was given to continuing the use of the old form for solicitors offices without a crime franchise; and if he will make a statement. [29550]

Mr. Taylor: The cost of printing the form in use prior to August 1994 was £32.88 per 1,000. When the new form was introduced, there were approximately 58,200 copies of the old form held in stock. The Legal Aid Board considered all aspects of the change, including whether the old forms could continue to be used. The board always aims to minimise the cost of such changes by amending forms at the same time that routine reprints are required. Forms are changed only when necessary to provide information required to control and manage the legal aid system effectively.

Privatisation

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list those parts of his Department or departmental agencies which were privatised without an in-house bid; if he will indicate the expertise which was absent in his Department or departmental agencies which prevented an in-house bid taking place; which future parts of his Department or departmental agencies he intends to privatise; and which of them do not have the necessary in-house expertise to mount an in-house bid. [29414]

Mr. John M. Taylor: As well as the Lord Chancellor's Department, the Lord Chancellor has responsibility for four agencies: HM Land Registry, the Public Trust Office, the Court Service and the Public Record Office. The Lord Chancellor's Department, HM Land Registry, the Public Trust Office and the Court Service have not privatised or contracted out any activities without an in-house bid and neither the Lord Chancellor's Department nor any of these agencies has any plans so to do. The chief executive of the Public Record Office will be sending a separate reply.

Letter from Sarah Tyacke to Mr. Kevin McNamara, dated 26 June 1995:

I have been asked by the Lord Chancellor's Parliamentary Secretary to reply to your question about privatisation without in-house bids.

The Public Record Office's van and office cleaning services were contracted out without in-house bids. A strategic decision was made to contract out these services as they were peripheral to the main functions of the Public Record Office, the van service was a small service and the private sector was better-equipped to provide a cleaning service.

The Public Record Office's general office copying service is due to be contracted out. This is a small service peripheral to the main functions of the Public Record Office.

EMPLOYMENT

Upper Limb Disorders

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what studies his Department has funded into work-related upper limb disorders since the publication of the Industrial Injuries Advisory Council report into work-related upper limb disorders in May 1992. [29906]

Mr. Oppenheim: The Health and Safety Executive has funded a range of studies into work-related upper limb disorders since May 1992.

Intramural studies include work on musculoskeletal disorders in supermarket check-out workers, and techniques for assessing the risk of musculoskeletal disorders, both of which encompass ULDs.

Extramural research includes work on a user performance test method to support international visual display unit ergonomic standards; an ongoing epidemiological and ergonomic study of occupational factors associated with upper limb soft tissue disorders in keyboard operators; an ongoing project to assess the health and safety implications of virtual reality systems; and two projects to collect ergonomic case studies giving employers practical advice on ways of preventing ULDs which were published last October in the booklet "A pain in your workplace?"

School Leavers

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list the number of pupils who have left school with no formal qualifications and who have been able to carry out an apprenticeship which has led to full-time employment; and what is the breakdown of these figures for each of the last 15 years. [30744]

Mr. Paice: The information available on the education and employment of young people does not provide sufficient detail to answer this question.

Training

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how much was spent by employers on in-work training (a) in total and (b) per employee in each of the last five years. [30674]

Mr. Paice: It is estimated that employers in Great Britain spend over £20,000 million a year in total on training and developing their employees. Data for individual years and data on expenditure per employee are not available.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) how many, and what percentage, of the total number of employees in employment are employed by companies who are members of industry training organisations; [30690]

(2) how many and what percentage of British companies are members of industry training organisations. [30673]

Mr. Paice: The information is not available in the form requested. The latest available figures show that some 18 million—85 per cent.—of employees in employment worked in industries which were covered by industry training organisations.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) if he will make a statement on the Government's policy on in-work training; [30676]

(2) what consultations his Department has had with employer's representatives concerning the development of Government policy on in-work training; [30691]

(3) what consultation his Department has had with the Trades Union Congress and individual trade unions on the development of Government policy on in-work training. [30695]

Mr. Paice: The Government's policy is to encourage employers and those in work to invest effectively in the skills needed for business and individual success now and in the future. We consult regularly with employers' representatives, and with TUC and trade unions where appropriate, about the best ways of achieving this.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement about the work of the industry training organisations. [30689]

Mr. Paice: Industry training organisations represent the interests of employers in their industries on a wide range of training matters. They represent the sectoral dimension of the national training framework. complementing locally focused training and enterprise councils. There are 120 ITOs and they have four major roles:

(a) monitoring the future skill requirements and training needs in their sector;

(b) developing and promoting occupational standards;

(c) encouraging employers in their sectors to increase their training;

(d) taking the lead for industries to promote national initiatives for example, modern apprenticeship frameworks.

Investors in People

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) how many, and what percentage of, employers in Britain (a) have achieved, (b) are in the process of achieving, (c) have failed to achieve and (d) do not operate the Investors in People standard; [30692]

(2) if he will make a statement on the future of the Investors in People standard. [30675]

Mr. Paice: The Investors in People standard is run by industry based organisation, Investors in People UK, to promote excellence in employers' staff development practices. Over 1,800 organisations have achieved the standard and 18,000 more are committed to achieving it. Organisations who are recognised must be reassessed every three years.

Investors in People UK is now reviewing the standard to ensure its continued relevance and professional credibility as one of the national targets for education and training.

Construction Industry Training Board

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on the future of the Construction Industry Training Board. [30693]

Mr. Paice: The Construction Industry Training Board was reconstituted, following comprehensive review, from 1 May 1993 for five years. As is the practice with all non-departmental public bodies, it will be subject to further review before a decision is made on whether it should be reconstituted in 1998.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will estimate the number of vehicles currently in use without valid vehicle excise duty being paid. [28722]

Mr. Norris: The estimated number of unlicensed vehicles in use at any one time in Great Britain in 1994–95 was 1.5 million.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what percentage of the total number of vehicles in use on United Kingdom roads are without current vehicle excise duty road discs. [28723]

Mr. Norris: The estimated percentage of unlicensed vehicles in use on public roads in Great Britain in 1994–95 was 6.2 per cent.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what amount of vehicle excise duty is forgone as a result of vehicle excise duty evasion. [28724]

Mr. Norris: The estimated VED loss through evasion in Great Britain in 1994–95 was £163 million. This represents4.1 per cent. of the revenue due.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what resources are applied to combating vehicle excise duty evasion. [28725]

Mr. Norris: Vehicle excise duty evaders are detected by the police and traffic wardens as part of their normal duties. Follow-up enforcement action, including prosecution work, is the responsibility of the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency. The cost of agency staff directly involved in enforcement activities currently stands at some £26 million per year.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many prosecutions for vehicle excise duty evasion were brought over the past five years for which figures are available. [28726]

Mr. Norris: The numbers of prosecutions for vehicle excise evasion are shown in the table.

Numbers of vehicle excise duty prosecutions in the five year period 1990–91 to 1994–95

Year	Successful prosecutions	Unsuccessful prosecutions	Total prosecutions
1990–91	141,635	5,635	147,270

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he proposes to reduce the incidence of vehicle excise duty evasion; and if he will make a statement. [28727]

Mr. Norris: We are currently considering a wide range of proposals. These include measures to improve the quality of the vehicle register and to make it more difficult for motorists to drop out of the licensing system, as well as use of camera technology to automate the detection process.

Letter from C. J. Harris to Mr. Paul Flynn, dated 26 June 1995:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question.

Mr. Watts: Yes.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what safeguards are in place to ensure that staff driving Unimog machines, not appearing on the BR tops forms, do not book on for work under the influence of alcohol or drugs. [30231]

Mr. Watts: It is a criminal offence to work on the railways in a safety related capacity when unfit through drink or drugs, or to exceed the prescribed alcohol limit. Railway operators and employers other than the operator may also be liable if they have not exercised all due diligence to prevent the offence. Enforcement is a matter for the British Transport police. In addition, railway operators have their own strict policy on alcohol and drug abuse, including disciplinary action.

Unimog drivers are supervised by a member of British Rail's staff and are required to work to BR's instructions for all movements on track.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 21 March, Official Report, column 147, if he will list all those occasions on which he or any of his junior Ministers did not give prior warning of visits to hon. Members. [30750]

Mr. Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if a specification bid for the operation of services on the Manchester airport link, southern spur has been accepted by Railtrack plc; and what track access charges have been agreed. [30549]

Mr. Watts: I understand that no bid has yet been accepted by Railtrack and no access charges have been agreed.

Mr. Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what level of service he expects to be operated over the Manchester airport rail link, southern spur from May 1996; which destinations will be covered; and which train operators will be involved. [30551]

Mr. Watts: Commercial negotiations are still under way on these issues.

Eurostar

Ms Glenda Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects Eurostar east coast main line services to northern England and Scotland to be operational. [30495]

Mr. Watts: This is an operational matter for European Passenger Services. I understand that they intend to introduce Eurostar services along the east coast main line early next year.

"Transport: The Way Ahead"

Ms Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list those new policies he has implemented as a direct result of his "Transport: The Way Ahead" consultation. [30969]

Dr. Mawhinney: It would be premature to announce results from the discussions of "Transport: The Way Ahead.

Ms Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many representations he has so far received in support of rail privatisation during his "Transport: The Way Ahead" consultation. [30968]

Dr. Mawhinney: "Transport: The Way Ahead" invited views on a wide range of transport issues by the end of September. In the two weeks since publication, no formal responses have been received.

Efficiency Report

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what conclusions he has drawn from the report of the efficiency scrutiny of the traffic area network published by his Department on Friday 16 June; what steps he is taking to remedy the weaknesses in vehicle monitoring and inspection which it identifies; and if he will make a statement. Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what guidance he has issued to highway authorities concerning the provision of advance startling lines for bicycles at suitable signal-controlled intersections; and what action in this regard is being taken by London boroughs. [30804]

Mr. Norris: Guidance has been given in the form of traffic advisory leaflets, which are distributed free to local authorities and other interested bodies. Four leaflets have been issued. The most recent one, TAL 8/93, summarises the findings of the research studies on all our trial installation of advance stop lines, and provides basic design details. We expect this advice to be reflected within the 1,200 mile London cycle network which is now under construction.

South Yorkshire Passenger Transport Authority

Mr. Clapham: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he last met the chairman of the South Yorkshire passenger transport authority to discuss the impact of rail privatisation; and if he will make a statement. [30267]

Mr. Watts: I met the chairman of the South Yorkshire passenger transport authority in April this year along with representatives from other PTAs to discuss the future funding of PTE-supported railway passenger services from 1996–97.

Most of these came from the Newbury area. We have also received four petitions in favour of the bypass containing a total of 12,700 signatures. During the same period, we have received some 398 letters and 59 pre-printed postcards opposing the bypass. The majority of these came from outside the area.

Channel Tunnel

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what he expects to be (a) the gains and (b) the losses to the United Kingdom tourist industry from the construction of the high-speed link to the channel tunnel; and what is the expected net rate of return. [29445]

[29443]

Mr. Watts: The Government are currently holding a competition to select a private sector consortium to design, build, finance and operate the channel tunnel rail link. I provided details of numbers in a previous reply (ref PQ 523/94/95 and my letter of 25 January 1995). Information for the last 10 years and where staff were located can only be provided at disproportionate cost. I can provide you with an up to date figure on numbers employed at the end of May 1995. There were a total of 365 vehicle examiners and 160 traffic examiners. We are currently recruiting around 25 additional traffic examiners and around 35 vehicle examiners to increase complement, cover anticipated retirements and substantially fill current temporary posts.

[28168]

Mr. Watts [holding answer 20 June 1995]: This is an operational matter for the Highways Agency.

I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. David Chidgey, dated 26 June 1995:

As you know, the Minister for Railways and Roads, Mr. John Watts MP, has asked me to write to you in reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking in how many cases the actual growth in traffic has exceeded the anticipated traffic growth as projected by the Department in estimating future noise levels and what steps are taken to correct inaccurate predicted traffic levels and noise levels.

Comparisons are not made between the anticipated and actual growth in traffic used for noise level prediction. This is because entitlements to noise insulation are assessed in the light of actual conditions pertaining at the time the scheme is first open to traffic, on the basis of the best estimate of traffic available. A map showing eligible properties is published within six months of opening and offers of noise insulation must be accepted within a year of opening. The Noise Insulation Regulations require the noise calculations to be reviewed in individual cases on appeal, again within the first year.

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what was the cost of producing and distributing the brochure "Transport: The Way Ahead", speeches by the Secretary of State for Transport.

Dr. Mawhinney: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Derbyshire, North-East (Mr. Barnes) on 22 June.

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Prime Minister on what recent occasions Ministers' speeches have been published by their Departments at public expense; and if he will make a statement. [29754]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 22 June 1995]: It is usual practice for ministerial speeches made on official occasions to be published and distributed to the press by their departmental press office. This does not apply to speeches made in a party political context which are distributed through the party machinery.

Crown Immunity

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list all areas within (a) his Department, (b) agencies under his Department's control and (c) organisations for which he has ministerial responsibility to which Crown immunity applies; what consideration he has given to removing this, and if he will make a statement. [28644]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 15 June 1995]: The reference to the Crown immunity in the question is taken to refer to legislation which does not bind the Crown. Certain legislation is expressly applied to the Crown. In most legislation, however, particularly older legislation, there is no such express provision. In those circumstances whether legislation applies to the Crown will depend upon the implications to be drawn from the drafting and context of the legislation.

French Nuclear Tests

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Prime Minister what backing Her Majesty's Government are giving to the Government of Australia, New Zealand and others in the Asia/Pacific region in their protests against the French Government's intention to resume nuclear testing in the Mururoa atoll; and if he will make a statement. [30385]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 22 June 1995]: In our view the international community's main priority is the early conclusion of a comprehensive test ban treaty. While we recognise the concern of some countries, particularly those in the south Pacific, over the French decision to suspend their moratorium on nuclear testing, we do not believe that a strictly limited programme of tests should affect the prospects for this.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Prime Minister on what date his French counterpart informed him that the French Government would recommence the testing of nuclear weapons. [30047]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 22 June 1995]: We have very close contacts with the French Government on a wide range of defence questions, including defence procurement, issues of mutual interest and nuclear matters, including testing. I discussed both subjects when I saw President Chirac on 10 June. The details of these discussions remain confidential.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Prime Minister how many letters he has received on the home truths campaign by young people; and how he is replying. [30048]

I discussed both subjects when I saw President Chirac on 10 June. The details of these discussions remain confidential.

Amway UK Ltd.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many meetings Ministers in his Department have had with persons representing the interests of Amway in the last three years either formally or informally to discuss matters relating to the interests of Amway. [29848]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: We have been consulting widely over proposals to improve the effectiveness of the legislation controlling pyramid selling and similar trading schemes. As part of this process, Ministers have had two meetings, one in 1992 and one last month, with a delegation from the Direct Selling Association. On the earlier occasion, the delegation included a representative of Amway UK Ltd. Also I understand that almost all Members of Parliament, including most DTI Ministers, have been approached at least once during the last three years by constituents representing Amway.

BMARC

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) how many export licences were applied for by BMARC under the military list between 1984 and 1990: and how many were turned down; [29167]

(2) how many military export licences were applied for by BMARC between 1984 and 1990; and how many of those applications were refused; [29479]

(3) how many military export licences were applied for by BMARC between 1 September 1988 and 31 March 1990; how many of those licences did not supply end user statements or certificates; and how many of the applications in that period were rejected. [29480]

Mr. Byers: To aske the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his oral statement of 13 June Official Report, columns 595-606, how many export licences were granted to BMARC for the export of naval guns and ammunition to Singapore; and how many of these applications did not have the full supporting documentation. [29258]

Mr. Ian Taylor: Hon. Members have asked a number of questions about BMARC, which require detailed work on over 400 export licences. I shall write to the hon. Members as soon as I have a substantive answer to their questions.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his oral statement of 13 June, Official Report, column 595, on BMARC, if any of the BMARC export licences which were the subject of his recent statement to the House had been drawn to the attention of Ministers prior to March 1995. [30065]

Mr. Taylor: No, to the best of our knowledge.

Brent Spar

Mr. Dobson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade at what time and date, and by what method, Ministers or officials in his Department were first made aware of the decision by Shell UK to abandon plans to dispose of the Brent Spar installation by deepwater disposal. [31004]

Mr. Eggar: I received the information from Shell UK at a meeting which took place at approximately 4.30 pm on 20 June 1995.

Utility Regulators

Mr. Hain: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what were the salaries of the telecommunications, gas, electricity and water regulators for each year since their inception; and what has been the percentage change in their earnings since their inception in (a) cash terms and (b) real terms. [29335]

Mr. Eggar: The Director General of Water Services is appointed by the Secretary of State for the Environment and the Secretary of State for Wales and information about his salary is a matter for them.

Mr. Hain: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the external directorships held and remuneration received by each of the telecommunications, gas, electricity and water regulators. [29336]

Mr. Eggar: No external directorships are held at present by the telecommunications, gas or electricity regulators.

The Director General of Water Services is appointed by the Secretary of State for the Environment and the Secretary of State for Wales and questions relating to his terms of appointment are matters for them.

Information on the current remuneration of all the main utility regulators has been placed in the Library of the House by the respective sponsoring Departments.

Konver Initiative

Ms Hodge: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how much money Britain has received to date from the European Konver fund for arms conversion; and if he will give details of the projects the money has gone to. [30203]

Mr. Eggar: The purpose of the Konver initiative is to accelerate, with grants from the European Community structural funds, the diversification of economic activities in areas heavily dependent on the defence sector, so as to render them less dependent on this sector and encourage the adjustment of commercially viable businesses in other sectors. For Konver II, up to 1997, the Government have secured some £79 million, of which a first instalment should be received later this year. The UK was allocated some £18 million for Konver 1993.

For further details, I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. and learned Member for Fife, North-East (Mr. Campbell) on 3 April 1995, Official Report, column 901–2.

Charter Week

Mr. Morgan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what are the main events he is proposing for Charter Week; what is the total cost to public funds; and how many (a) civil servants and (b) other public officials will be playing a part. [30679]

Mr. Heseltine: The Patent Office is contributing to a bilingual leaflet being put together to publicise the customer service activities of member organisations of the charter mark winners in Wales group.

There will be on additional costs or staff resources required as a result of this event being held in July. The officials concerned will be working on the event as part of their normal duties.

X200 Jaguar

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what support his Department will offer to ensure that the X200 Jaguar is built in the United Kingdom. [30697]

Mr. Eggar: Discussions continue with Ford about the project. We are, of course, keen to ensure that the car is built here in Britain.

Photovoltaics

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the current United Kingdom installed capacity of solar photovoltaics, in megawatts; and what targets his Department has set for an increase in installed capacity by 2000. [30077]

Mr. Page: The installed capacity of photovoltaics in the UK at the end of 1994 has been estimated at about 320 (kW). This estimate covers all applications including remote power, consumer goods and grid connected systems. The Government are working towards 1,500 (MW) of new electricity generating capacity from renewable sources by 2000; photovoltaics is expected to contribute marginally to this capacity on this time scale.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the current level of expenditure on the development and deployment of solar photovoltaic technology in the United Kingdom; and what are the projected levels of funding for the years 1995, 1996 and 1997. [30075)]

Mr. Page: The spend by the Department of Trade and Industry's new and renewable energy programme on photovoltaics in the financial year 1994–95 was £564,000. In addition to this, there was expenditure in the UK on photovoltaics development and deployment by the Office of Science and Technology, the European Commission and the photovoltaics industry itself. Projected levels of DTI funding for new and renewable energy, including photovoltaics, were published in "Trade and Industry 1995: The Government's Expenditure Plans 1995–96 to 1997–98", and are as follows:

Year	£ million
1995–96	18.0
1996–97	15.5
1997–98	15.5

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many solar photovoltaic projects in the United Kingdom his Department has supported financially. [30079]

Mr. Page: To date, the Department of Trade and Industry has provided financial support to 20 photovoltaics projects.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans he has to encourage the regional electricity companies to generate electricity using (a) solar photovoltaic technology and (b) solar water heating. [30083]

Mr. Page: Measures are in hand to save electricity generation and encourage energy conservation by bringing the potential of photovoltaics and solar water and heating technology to the attention of the regional electricity companies. These measures include supporting, under the DTI programme:

an initiative of the International Energy Agency to provide information on photovoltaics to utilities involving for example a series of seminars held at REC offices;

(in association with some RECs) regional renewable energy studies to assist the RECs with their business planning for renewables. These studies have included consideration of the local resource for photovoltaics and solar water heating.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what support his Department is providing to the United Kingdom solar photovoltaic industry in order to assist an increase in its global market share; and what targets have been set for an increase in its market share. [30078]

Mr. Page: The Department of Trade and Industry's new and renewable energy programme in 1994 funded a business development study with the UK Photovoltaic Association to examine the world photovoltaics market and future market developments, and the opportunities for UK companies to succeed in these markets. The association has proposed its own target of a 15 per cent. market share of the world market by 2005. The DTI has initiated an export strategy for new and renewables within the overall new and renewable energy programme.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans he has to offer practical or financial assistance to householders who wish to obtain energy supplies from (a) solar photovoltaic technology and (b) solar water heating. [30082]

Mr Page: The Department of Trade and Industry programme is providing practical assistance to anyone interested in investing in solar technologies by providing case studies, results from monitored projects and technical guidance information.

Renewable Energy

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what effect he expects continued non-fossil fuel obligation support of mass burn energy from waste schemes to have on the Government's policy objectives for integrated waste management as set out in the national waste strategy; [30085]

(2) what assessment he has made of the potential contribution which will be made towards achieving the Government's renewables target by mass burn energy from waste technologies; [30235]

(3) what market intelligence he has regarding either the (a) size or (b) number of future mass burn energy from waste schemes in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement; [30086]

(4) if he plans to continue support for mass burn energy from waste technology in the fourth order of the non-fossil fuel obligation; [30084]

(5) what assessment he has made of the reasons for failure of those mass burn energy from waste schemes which were supported under the first three non-fossil orders; and what changes he is considering to the structure of future orders to ensure better success rates. [30087]

Mr. Page: Energy Paper No.62, "New and Renewable Energy: Future Prospects in the UK", set out the Government's renewable energy policy and summarised its strategy and programme to implement that policy over the next 10 years. Energy paper No. 62 estimated that energy from municipal and industrial wastes might contribute around 400 MW to the Government's aim of working towards 1,500 MW of new electricity generating capacity from renewable sources for the UK by the year 2000. The non-fossil fuel obligation in England and Wales, and similar arrangements in Scotland and Northern Ireland, are the Government's main instrument for creating an initial market for renewables so that in the not-too-distant future the most promising renewables can compete without financial support.

The Government have recently consulted on the structure of the fourth NFFO order and the Energy from Waste Association has provided market intelligence on potential future mass burn energy from waste schemes in the United Kingdom. I will take this information into account when the decisions on the structure of the NFFO4 are made shortly.

Energy from waste developments require planning permission and each application is determined on its own merits. The award of a NFFO contract is totally without prejudice to the planning process. Advice on planning issues is set out in planning policy guidance on planning and pollution control published in July 1994 and the annexe on waste combustion to planning policy guidance on renewable energy published in October 1994. The Department of Trade and Industry's renewable energy programme published a best practice guide for local authorities and private sector developers of municipal solid waste combustion projects in April 1995.

The Government are committed to issuing updated guidance to local authorities on tendering waste disposal contracts and this will reinforce the desirability of recovering energy from waste as part of a sustainable approach to waste management. The Department of the Environment and Welsh Office have recently consulted on a draft waste strategy for England and Wales and expect to publish a final version towards the end of the year. The targets and objectives set out in the waste strategy are to be achieved by a combination of mechanisms, including the proposed landfill tax and initiatives on producer responsibility for waste. These will contribute towards an integrated approach to more sustainable waste management practices which employ energy recovery alongside material recycling, in pursuit of the best practicable environmental option.

Energy Research and Development

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the current level of funding for research and development for the energy sector by type, including advanced fossil fuel combustion technology. [30076]

Mr. Page: The funding allocated by my Department for energy research and development programmes in 1995–96 is as follows:

	£ Million
Nuclear R and D:
Decommissioning and Radioactive Waste Management Support	5.9
Fast reactor	0.1
Safety and health	2.7
Fusion—including DTI's contribution towards JET	15.8
Safeguards	1.0
Non-Nuclear R and D:
Oil and gas production technology	3.4
Offshore environmental R and D	0.1
Clean coal technologies	7.0
Environment	0.6
Renewable and novel sources of energy	18.0

The final outturns may vary from the figures shown. There is no energy R and D expenditure on advanced fossil fuel technologies other than for coal.

TREASURY

BMARC

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer on how many previous occasions customs inquiries and investigations have been made into contracts placed with, for or on behalf of BMARC. [29720]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Customs' only known previous inquiry concerned information provided by BMARC about a contract for BMARC to supply goods to another United Kingdom company which was under investigation.

VAT-registered Businesses

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list for each of the last 10 years (a) the number of VAT registered businesses per 1,000 population and (b) the number of new businesses per 1,000 population created in (i) Bolton, (ii) the north-west region and (iii) the United Kingdom. [30210]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Customs does not hold information on the ratio of businesses to population or on the number of businesses registered in Bolton alone. Figures are available for VAT—registered businesses by local office. The local VAT office at Blackburn covers, in addition to Blackburn, the towns of Bolton, Accrington and Clitheroe. Figures for the north-west cover Lancashire, Greater Manchester and Merseyside. These are given in the table:

Year	New registrations at Blackburn office	New registrations in the north west region	New registrations in the UK	Total number of registrations at Blackburn office	Total number of registrations in the north west	Total number of registrations in the UK
1985	1,997	16,317	184,392	17,177	128,538	1,471,375
1986	2,115	16,602	190,259	16,967	128,846	1,494,368
1987	2,065	16,964	202,132	17,071	130,170	1,539,914
1988	2,595	20,110	239,351	17,527	133,868	1,605,817
1989	2,807	22,384	261,783	18,141	139,526	1,690,191
1990	2,680	21,574	234,264	18,762	145,053	1,742,966
1991	2,298	18,644	199,604	18,122	140,668	1,692,190
1992	2,114	17,326	186,816	17,849	136,439	1,640,409
1993	2,099	16,412	191,965	17,402	131,877	1,607,843
1994	1,904	15,174	176,771	16,986	134,619	1,582,911
1995[1]	395	3,776	44,710	16,799	134,921	1,579,869

[1] To end March.

The effect of the substantial increase in the registration threshold in both 1991 and 1993 provides an explanation for the net decrease in the number of registered businesses since 1990.

Customs Investigation and Intelligence Review

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if the further, separate and full review of the investigation and intelligence operations to be undertaken after the previous fundamental expenditure review into customs was completed is yet under way; and when and to whom customs will report. [30070]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The investigation and intelligence review was begun in January and is continuing. The report will go to Treasury Ministers in September 1995.

VAT Bad Debts

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the operation of the VAT bad debt relief scheme. [30510]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: All aspects of the VAT system are kept under regular review. If the hon. Member has any specific concerns about the operation of the VAT bad debt relief scheme, I would be happy to consider them.

North Sea Oil Revenue

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the different sources of Government revenue received in relation to the production of North sea oil; and if he will also calculate the total amount of revenue the Government have received from these sources for each year since 1979. [30176]

Sir George Young [holding answer 22 June 1995]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 7 June 1995, Official Report, columns 203–4.

Vehicle Excise Duty

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the annual change in revenue to the Exchequer which would result from raising the level of excise duty paid by lorries by £20 per vehicle per annum. [30096]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answer 22 June 1995]: The estimated additional revenue to the Exchequer which would result from raising the level of vehicle excise duty paid by lorries by £20 would be £8 million.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Child Support Agency

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many outstanding Child Support Agency cases are currently awaiting processing in the Dudley office; how many staff are employed in this office, and what training they have received. [29320]

Mr. Burt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Miss Ann Chant to Ms Joan Walley, dated 22 June 1995:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about the Dudley Child Support Agency Centre (CSAC).

As at the end of April 1995, Dudley CSAC was dealing with 38,200 cases, all of which were at various stages of the assessment process following the return of a maintenance application form (MAF) to the Centre, and some that have been referred to the local field office. There were a further 18,600 cases where a MAF had been issued but not yet returned.

The CSAC has 758 staff. In line with the Agency's determination to improve quality, all staff at the CSAC undergo formal induction training structured to cover the area of work they will be undertaking; maintenance assessment staff have a training programme which lasts for ten weeks; call handling staff receive a five week course covering the whole of the Agnecy's business and Operation Accounting staff receive four weeks training which includes instruction on debt management. All relevant staff received training on the recent policy changes and enhancements to the Child Support Computer System. All courses include one weeks customer service training and a period of consolidation with an experienced colleague.

After initial training, individual and collective training needs are continuously reviewed and both technical and personal skills based training courses are available and delivered regularly.

I hope this is helpful.

Benefits

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list for each change the impact on the numbers claiming benefit now and in 2000–01 as a consequence of (a) the new incapacity benefit, (b) the £40 per week child care effect on family credit for single parents, (c) the back-to-work bonus for single parents, (d) the Child Support Agency, (e) limiting housing benefit to the average for each category of property in each area and (f) the changed rules for claiming income support for mortgage interest payments; and if he will also list for each change the saving to public expenditure. [27222]

Mr. Hague: The medium-term projections of benefit expenditure did not involve explicit calculations of benefit case loads. Reliable estimates of the case load effects of the policy measures listed in 2000–01 could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

The effects of the policy measures on benefit expenditure in 2000–01 are estimated as follows:

(a) Incapacity benefit: Saving £2.3 billion

(b) Child care effect on family credit: adding £60 million

(c) Back to work bonus for lone parents: adding £10 million

(d) Child Support Agency: saving £0.6 billion

(e) Housing benefit limits: saving £190 million

(f) Changed rules for income support mortgage interest: saving £150 million

All these figures are the estimated costs and savings in the year 2000–01 in 1994–95 prices—rounded to the nearest £10 million. They represent the best estimate available of the effect of the policy measures, but detailed forecasts over that time span are subject to a wide margin of error. In particular, there may be behavioral effects from the policy measures not allowed for in the forecasts.

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to review the benefit entitlement of 16 to 18-year-olds. [30971]

Mr. Roger Evans: We will be issuing expanded guidance to Benefits Agency offices in respect of claims under the severe hardship provision. Our concern is to ensure that decisions taken with the authority of the Secretary of State are made taking account of all the available evidence.

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what would be the cost of reducing (a) housing benefit taper by 15 per cent. to 50 per cent., (b) family credit taper by 20 per cent. to 50 per cent., (c) council tax taper by 15 per cent. to 50 per cent. and (d) all benefit tapers to 50 per cent. [30380]

Mr. Evans: The information requested is set out in the table. The council tax benefit taper is currently set at 20 per cent. Separate estimates have therefore been provided assuming a reduction of council tax benefit taper of 15 per cent. to 5 per cent. and an increase to 50 per cent.

	Estimated cost (+)/saving(–) £ million per annum
Housing Benefit taper at 50 per cent.	+585
Family Credit taper at 50 per cent.	+555
Council Tax Benefit taper at 50 per cent.	–330
Council Tax Benefit taper at 5 per cent.	+965
All Tapers at 50 per cent.	+805

1. Estimates are based on 1990–91 to 1992 family expenditure surveys uprated to 1995–96 prices and benefit levels.
2. Figures are rounded to the nearest £5 million.

Income Support

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the income support liveload payments made for (a) E cases, (b) P cases, (c) A cases and (d) total cases for each quarter since January 1991 by (i) district and (ii) area directorate. [29331]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is not available.

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what would be the cost of raising earnings disregards for (a) single income support claimants from £5 to £10 per week, (b) couples to £10 each and (c) for the couple. [30382]

Mr. Evans: The cost of raising the disregards in the manner suggested would be:

(a) £10 million

(b) £10 million

(c) £35 million

Notes:

1. Based on data taken from the 1993 income support annual statistical inquiry and from the 1990–91–92 family expenditure surveys uprated to 1995–96 prices, benefits and earnings levels.

2. Costs are per annum, rounded to the nearest £5 million.

3. All costings exclude groups who already have a higher disregard in income support, particularly lone parents, the disabled and long-term unemployed couples.

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many recipients of income support were recorded as persons without accommodation in the last year for which figures are available. [30611]

Mr. Evans: In May 1994, 41,000 income support claimants were recorded as using the local benefit office as a mailing address. It is unlikely that this number relates only to roofless people.

Notes:

The figures have been rounded to the nearest thousand.

Income support quarterly statistical inquiry May 1994 and income support annual statistical inquiry May 1993.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many young people in Wales who left school at 16 years in 1994 are currently receiving (a) severe hardship payments under income support provisions and (b) other Benefits Agency payments. [31018]

Mr. Evans: The information is not available.

Charter Week

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what are the main events he is proposing for Charter Week; what is the total cost to public funds; and how many (a) civil servants and (b) other public officials will be playing a part. [30680]

Mr. Hague: A number of events are planned by district offices of the Benefits Agency which will coincide with the fourth anniversary of the citizens charter, including:

Participation by several districts in local radio phone-ins;

a charter mark winners roadshow organised jointly by South Tees district and the child benefit centre; charter mark winners open days organised by several districts, including Lothian West district, Springburn district and the benefit inquiry line in Preston;

Newcastle district, which has been informally twinned with South Tyneside hospital trust is organising a day trip for underprivileged children.

In addition, the South Lancs and Cheshire division of the Contributions Agency is running an information desk at public libraries in the area, to promote aspects of its service.

There will be negligible cost to public funds as a result of these events taking place. The officials involved will be working on them as part of their normal duties.

Pensioners' Incomes

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what are the latest figures available on the growth of pensioners' incomes since 1993. [30972]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The latest available information is for 1992. These figures showed that, on average, pensioners' net incomes have increased by 50 per cent. since 1979, before taking housing costs into consideration.

Estimated from the family expenditure survey, 1992.

Social Fund

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many applications there were for grants and loans from the social fund in the last month for which figures are available; what was the monthly average for the last financial year; and if there are any plans to increase the size of the fund. [30974]

Mr. Roger Evans: There were 318,231 applications for grants and loans in May this year. The monthly average for 1994–95 was 312,019.

The gross social fund budget for 1995–96 was increased by £38 million to £406 million, an increase of £53 million since April 1994–95.

War Disablement Pensions

Mr. Hall: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many former members of Her Majesty's armed forces have applied for a war disablement pension on the grounds of noise-induced sensorineural hearing loss since 7 January 1993; and how many of these applications have been refused on the grounds that the hearing loss was less than 20 per cent. [30944]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Information is not available in the exact form requested.

We estimate that since January 1993 a total of around 139,500 first claims have been made for hearing loss only. Separate claim figures for noise-induced sensorineural hearing loss are not available, because the exact diagnosis is not known when the claim is made, but the vast majority of the above claims were probably for that condition. In the same period, no payment was made in some 57,500 cases, because the assessed level of disablement due to service related NISHL was less than 20 per cent.

The figures include claims made under all the war pensions scheme,s including those covering service personnel, world war two civilians and mercantile mariners. Separate figures are not available for the individual schemes.

Low-income Families

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what additional support the Department will be providing next year to low-income families with children. [30973]

Mr. Burt: Over the next 12 months, a number of measures are to be introduced that will provide extra support for low-income families with children.

From July this year, low-income families with children working more than 30 hours per week will receive an extra £10 per week in family credit. Around 345,000 families are expected to benefit from this measure worth over £200 million. We also aim to speed up the payment of family credit. From April 1996, we expect almost all new claims for family credit to be arranged within five working days.

Also from next April, those who take a job after six month's unemployment will be able to keep their housing benefit at their existing full rate for an extra four weeks. From October 1996 the tax-free back-to-work bonus of up to £1,000 will help to smooth a family's income flow on taking up work.

Families will also benefit from the introduction of a national insurance holiday for employers taking on those who have been unemployed for two years or more, in April 1996.

Pensioners' Organisations

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he last met representatives of pensioners' organisations; and what matters were discussed. [30975]

Mr. Arbuthnot: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply I gave the hon. member for Bolsover (Mr. Skinner) on 19 June, Official Report, columns 12–13.

LORD PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL

Privatisation

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Lord President of the Council if he will list those parts of his Department or departmental agencies which were privatised without an in-house bid; if he will indicate the expertise which was absent in his Department or departmental agencies which prevented an in-house bid taking place; which future parts of his Department or departmental agencies he intends to privatise; and which of them do not have the necessary in-house expertise to mount an in-house bid.

Mr. Newton: No functions of the Privy Council Office have been contracted out, nor are any planned to be. I am not responsible for any agencies.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Sitting Hours

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Lord President of the Council on how many occasions in the current Session until 16 June the House has adjourned before 10 o'clock; and what has been the total approximate time between the time of adjournment and half-past 10 o'clock.

Mr. Newton: In the current Session up to the 16 June, the House has adjourned before 10 o'clock on 21 occasions, not including Fridays. This figure does not include the last day before the Christmas recess on 20 December, but does include 24 May 1995 when the House rose at 4.36 pm as a mark of respect to Lord Wilson on his death. Nineteen of the 21 occasions have been since January.

The total time between the hour of adjournment and half- past 10 o'clock on these 21 occasions is 42 hours 51 minutes. If the 24 May 1995 is not included in the figure, the total time is 36 hours 57 minutes.

Party Leadership Candidates

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Lord President of the Council, pursuant to his oral answer of 15 June, Official Report, column 896, if he will consult other parties on making arrangements for parliamentary time for statements by candidates for party leadership.

Mr. Newton: No.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Staff

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what was the number of staff-in-post in central Government Departments at 1 April 1995. [30195]

Mr. David Hunt: On 1 April 1995, there were 516,080 permanent staff-in-post in central Government, which is less than half the level of 50 years ago. This represents a decrease of 4.5 per cent. in the year since 1 April 1994. The number of casual staff fell by 2,984 over the year to 18,130.

The figures are measured as "full-time equivalent" staff, where part-time staff are recorded as a proportion of a full-time employee according to the proportion of a full week for which they are contracted to work. This method of calculating full-time equivalent staff is a new one introduced from 1 April 1995, replacing the former method in which part-time staff working 10 hours or more per week were recorded as half an employee, those working fewer than 10 hours being ignored. The new methodology has been introduced to provide more accurate estimates of the number of staff employed, enabling better financial planning and control. This change in the method of calculating the number is estimated to have resulted in an increase of 7,000—1.3 per cent.—in the total number of staff. In order that the change should not artificially distort comparisons over time or plans with outturn, estimates have been made on the new basis, broken down by Department, for 1 April 1994, and have been placed with the 1 April 1995 figures in the Library.

British Geological Survey

Mr. Battle: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what areas of the work of the British Geological Survey have been contracted out; who has bid for them; and who has been awarded them. [30222]

Mr. Horam: The British Geological Survey contracts out those areas which require scientific skills not available in-house and those functions which can be carried out more effectively by outside contractors. Specialist scientific support, such as research vessel hire and some drilling, is contracted out as the need arises. Some support, as in the case of computing services, is provided through service level agreements with the Natural Environment Research Council. The identity of many of the bidders for scientific and specialist support is considered by the survey to be commercial—in-confidence; others could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

The following service functions have been contracted out to national and local suppliers through open competitive tendering:

Service
Cleaning	Initial Cleaning Services
	Northern Maintenance plc
Security	Centuryan Security Ltd.
Catering	Sutcliffe Catering
Printing (part)	Colour Images Ltd.
	Saxon and Graphics Ltd.
	Linneys Colour Print Ltd.
	Hawthornes Ltd.
	Meridian
	Colourstream Ltd.
Travel services and Vehicle hire	Carlsson Wagon Lit

Mr. Battle: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster whether his Department has put out to tender the oil information services of the British Geological Survey. [30223]

Mr. Horam: Until 1993, the British Geological Survey provided scientific services to the oil and gas division of the Department of Trade and Industry under letters of agreement, on a repayment basis. In the course of that year, the DTI invited competitive tenders for the supply of those services over a five-year period under five separate contracts, one of which was awarded to the BGS.

Research Council Redundancies

Mr. Battle: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what is his latest estimate of redundancies that must be achieved by the end of the financial year in each of the six research councils; and if he will make a statement. [30240]

Mr. Horam: There is no specific target for redundancies that must be achieved by the end of the financial year. However, staffing levels are kept under continuous review by the research councils' senior management and the Director General of the Research Councils, with the aim of ensuring that councils' missions are pursued as efficiently and effectively as possible. Councils endeavour to achieve any reductions in posts through natural wastage and voluntary departures.

Mr. Battle: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how much is in this financial year's budget for estimated redundancy payments to the research councils. [30241]

Mr. Horam: In the financial year 1995–96 the research councils currently expect to incur expenditure of around £17 million on redundancies—including early retirements and restructuring. This includes payments in respect of departures in 1995–96 and ongoing payments in respect of earlier departures.

Executive Agencies (Relocation)

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster which executive agencies are currently seeking to relocate from London to provincial towns. [30650]

Mr. Horam: This information is not held centrally: it is a matter for individual departmental Ministers and their agency chief executives.

Charter Week

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what are the main events his Department is proposing for Charter Week; what is the total cost to public funds; and how many (a) civil servants and (b) public officials will be playing a part. [30682]

Mr. Horam: The Office of Public Service and Science is planning a number of public service events to coincide with the fourth anniversary of the citizens charter, including:

a reception for users who have nominated organisations for the 1995 charter mark and representatives of the nominated organisations;

the publication of "Charter News";

a consultation and customer satisfaction seminar;

the publication of a guide to consultation;

a conference on the information super-highway; and an announcement on 1995 charter marks applications.

There will be no additional cost or staff resources required as a result of holding these events in July. The officials concerned will be working on the events as part of their normal duties.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, pursuant to his answer of 21 March, Official Report, column 178, if he will list all those occasions on which he did not give prior warning to hon. Members. [30749]

Mr. David Hunt: I always do my best to give prior warning to hon. Members when I visit their constituencies in an official capacity and I do not have a record of any occasions when the system has failed.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

Structural Adjustment Programmes

39. Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to study the social effects of aid programmes tied to structural adjustment programmes. [28775]

Mr. Baldry: ODA has been studying the social effects of structural adjustment for some years, in consultation with the World bank and independently, and will continue to do so.

European Development Fund

40. Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will support moves to budgetise the European development fund. [28776]

Mr. Baldry: We are opposed to budgetisation of the European development fund. This would reduce Government's ability to decide how much we wish to contribute. It would also increase the pressure on the Edinburgh financial ceilings.

European Union Aid

41. Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the total sum spent on overseas aid by the EU in the most recent year for which figures are available; and which committee or Department makes decisions on the issuing of individual grants. [28777]

Mr. Baldry: In 1993, the last year for which figures are available, total European Community overseas assistance was $4287.5 million of which $3637.2 million was net official development assistance to developing countries. Individual spending proposals are assessed by management committees on which ODA represents the UK.

Eastern Europe

42. Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the distribution of funds to organisations from the European Union's Poland and Hungary assistance for economic restructuring programme and the know-how scheme. [28778]

Mr. Baldry: The PHARE programme and the know-how fund channel funds through a variety of public and private sector organisations including non-governmental organisations and academic institutions. They are selected on the basis of value for money in helping to achieve the objectives of the two programmes.

Developing World (Debt)

43. Mr. Brandreth: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the role on the non-governmental banking sector in the reduction of debt in the developing world; and if he will make a statement. [28779]

Mr. Baldry: There has been effective action to reduce the debt owed by developing countries to commercial banks. Commercial bank debt is no longer the priority issues in solving developing countries' external debt problem.

Poverty Reduction

44. Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what proportion of United Kingdom multilateral aid is for poverty reduction. [28780]

Mr. Baldry: Poverty reduction is the highest priority of many of the multilateral agencies to which the UK makes contributions. Because the nature of their programmes varies widely, it is not possible to give precise figures for the proportion of our multilateral aid which is specifically for poverty reduction. However, of the UK's total contribution to multilateral agencies, we estimate that in 1993 more than 60 per cent. was spent in the poorest category of countries—that is, least developed countries as classified by the UN and in other low income countries with an income per head of under $676 in 1992.

Indonesia

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the intended use of the recent loan to Indonesia; and if he will make a statement. [29318]

Mr. Baldry: The new concessional loan arrangement for Indonesia will be used to support developmentally sound projects up to a cumulative contract value for British goods and services of £80 million. Projects to be funded under the loan are to be identified, but are expected to be in the health, education, water resources and transport sectors.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 3 March, Official Report, column 727, if he will state in respect of each Indonesian police office receiving scholarship training of less than one month, (a) the month during which and (b) the training establishment at which training took place. [30282]

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 22 June 1995]: The training took place in July 1990, July 1991 and July 1992. It was based at the Surrey police headquarters in Guildford.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 19 June, Official Report, columns 17–18, whether the project regarding the regional physical planning project for transmigration in Indonesia included East Timor. [30290]

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 22 June 1995]: Yes.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to his answer of 8 February, Official Report, columns 294–95, if he will state in respect of each Indonesian police officer receiving scholarship training of more than one month (a) the date on which the training was completed and (b) the training establishment at which the training took place. [30281]

Zaire

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress has been made in reducing the number of refugees in Zaire. [29506]

Mr. Baldry: The Government of Rwanda estimate 478,812 refugees have already returned from Zaire. The international community is working to encourage further voluntary refugee repatriation. Improved security in the camps has reduced intimidation. The United Nations High Commissioners for Refugees are considering resuming organised convoys to meet a growing refugee interest in repatriation.

Tehri Dam, India

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received about the fast by Sunderlai Bahuguna in opposition to the construction of the Tehri dam in India; and if he will make a statement. [30219]

Mr. Baldry: None. There is no British Government involvement in this project.

Somalia

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much aid has been given in (a) money and (b) personnel in Somalia over the past 10 years; and if he will make a statement. [29064]

Aid and Trade Project

Mrs. Ann Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many aid and trade provision projects are being funded in this financial year in countries with per capita GNP of less than $700. [28781]

Mr. Baldry: Forty-six projects are being funded in 1995–96 in countries with GNP per capita below $700.

Diversification

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what proportion of Britain's overseas aid budget is used to combat desertification; and which are the projects involved. [30394]

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 22 June 1995]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Birmingham, Selly Oak (Dr. Jones) on 14 June, Official Report, column 566.

China (Abandoned Children)

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what sums (a) the International Planned Parenthood Federation, (b) the United Nations Population Fund and (c) his Department have assigned for assisting the victims of the Chinese population control programme; [29790]

(2) what sums have been assigned by (a) the IPPF, (b) the UNFPA or (c) his Department for the care of orphans and abandoned children in China; [29784]

(3) on what occasions since 1965 (a) the IPPF, (b) the UNFPA or (c) his Department have advised the Chinese Government regarding the provision of care for orphans and abandoned children; [29785]

(4) what is the involvement of (a) the IPPF, (b) the UNFPA and (c) his Department in the funding of Chinese state orphanages. [29789]

Mr. Baldry [holding answers 20 June 1995]: Neither the Overseas Development Administration, the United Nations Population Fund nor the International Planned Parenthood Federation provides funding for operating orphanages in China or for the care of abandoned children. The United Nations system's involvement in the care of children comes under the remit of the United Nations Children Fund—UNICEF.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what reports has he received from the IPPF and the UNFPA regarding the condition of children in Chinese state orphanages; and what investigations his Department has conducted; [29788]

(2) what information he has on the standards of medical care for abandoned children in Chinese state orphanages; and if he will make a statement. [29782]

Mr. Baldry [holding answers 20 June 1995]: We have not received reports on the conditions of, or the standards in, China's orphanages from the United Nations Population Fund or the International Planned Parenthood Federation.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has on the links between the Chinese population control programme and the condition of orphans and abandoned children in China; and if he will make a statement. [29787]

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 20 June 1995]: We have no reliable analysis of the link between the Chinese population programme and the condition of orphans and abandoned children in China.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the balance between the sexes in respect of abandoned children and orphans in China; to what he attributes it; and if he will make a statement. [29786]

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 20 June 1995]: We have not made an assessment of the balance between the sexes in respect of abandoned children and orphans in China.

"Secret Asia: The Dying Rooms"

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will seek a transcript of the Channel 4 programme, "Secret Asia: The Dying Rooms", for his departmental library. [29779]

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 20 June 1995]: A copy has been placed in the ODA library.

Bangladesh

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what factors allow his Department to distinguish between funds donated by the Overseas Development Administration to primary health care and family planning in Bangladesh; and for what reasons his Department is unable to make this distinction in respect of the other countries where primary health care donations are made. [28962]

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 19 June 1995]: Most health projects funded under the aid programme include, as one of their aims, the promotion of better reproductive health through provision of voluntary family planning, safer motherhood, and sexually transmitted disease services. Given that such services are generally integrated with other aspects of primary health care, it is extraordinarily difficult to identify expenditure which could be classed as primary health care "excluding family planning provision". In the case of Bangladesh, a distinction was made for projects under way in the 1993–94 financial year, although with great difficulty. We have concluded that for our professional staff to undertake further estimates in other countries would consume unreasonable amounts of public servants' time, preventing them from designing new and high-quality primary health care projects.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Crown Prosecution Service

33. Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Attorney-General what are the criteria used by the Crown Prosecution Service in determining whether a prosecution is in the public interest. [28739]

The Solicitor-General: The criteria are set out in the code for crown prosecutors, which states that a prosecution will usually take place in cases of any seriousness, unless there are public interest factors tending against prosecution which clearly outweigh those tending in favour.

Serious Fraud Office

34. Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Attorney-General what plans he has to extend the operations of the Serious Fraud Office. [28740]

The Attorney-General: The revised criteria for allocation of fraud work between the Crown Prosecution Service and the Serious Fraud Office recommended in the Davie report have now been adopted. They are likely to lead over time to a heavier case load for the Serious Fraud Office.

Private Lee Clegg

35. Sir Michael Neubert: To ask the Attorney-General what representations he has received in the last month about the case of Private Lee Clegg; and if he will make a statement. [28741]

The Attorney-General: The Law Officers have received no representations in the last month about the case of Private Clegg.

Charter Week

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Attorney-General what are the main events he is proposing for Charter Week; what is the total cost to public funds; and how many (a) civil servants and (b) other public officials will be playing a part.

The Attorney-General: The Crown Prosecution Service has contributed to the court service charter for court users. This is due to be published in July to coincide with the fourth anniversary of the citizens charter. The charter has been drawn up as part of officials' normal duties. It does not involve any additional staff resources or additional costs. No other special events are planned in my departments.

NORTHERN IRELAND

South Eastern Education and Library Board

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what shortcomings in the performance of the South Eastern education and library board were revealed by his review of educational administration. [29503]

Mr. Ancram: The proposals for change were based not on the shortcomings of particular education and library boards but on an assessment of the most appropriate administrative structure for education across Northern Ireland.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many representations he has received about the abolition of the present identity of the South Eastern education and library board; and how many were in favour. [29500]

Mr. Ancram: So far, I have received some 1,300 written responses to the "Proposals for Change" document. These relate to the full range of proposals in the document rather than simply to the proposed merger of Boards. Further written responses are still being received and I am continuing to meet deputations from interested groups.

The responses are being analysed at present and I will write to the hon. Member when the analysis is complete.

Education Administration

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what are the administrative staffing costs of the Department of Education in Northern Ireland; [29499]

(2) what personnel with costs, are included in "Proposals for Change" under the term, administrative staffing costs of the education and library boards. [29496]

Mr. Ancram: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave the hon. member for Antrim, East (Mr. Beggs) on 5 May, Official Report, columns 334-35.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what proportion of the funding for the education service as a whole the administrative staffing costs of the education and library boards form. [29497]

Mr. Ancram: In 1994–95, the administrative staffing costs of the education and library boards were 2 per cent. of the funding provided for education, including libraries and youth.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland which areas of staffing of the Department of Education in Northern Ireland will increase under his "Proposals for Change", and which will decrease; and by how much in each case. [29498]

Mr. Ancram: The functions of the Department of Education for Northern Ireland which would be affected by the proposals for change are set out in the document itself, a copy of which is in the Library.

The effects on staffing will depend on final decisions still to be taken on the extent of any transfers of functions.

Privatisation

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list those parts of his Department or departmental agencies which were privatised without an in-house bid; if he will indicate the expertise which was absent in his Department or departmental agencies which prevented an in-house bid taking place; which future parts of his Department or departmental agencies he intends to privatise; and which of them do not have the necessary in-house expertise to mount an in-house bid. [29426]

Sir John Wheeler: Functions within the Northern Ireland Office and Northern Ireland Departments which have been contracted out as a result of market testing are as follows:

Department of Education

This Department contracted out two functions: catering and security at Waterside house for which there were no in-house bids. In these cases, the catering staff did not express an interest in submitting a bid and Waterside house was a newly opened building; therefore, no security staff were previously employed. There are no current plans to contract-out any other functions.

Department of Health and Social Services

This Department contracted out the health and personal social services computer mainframe operations without an in-house bid as the Department judged that the private sector was clearly better equipped to deliver the specific service and had the capacity to invest in new technology. There are no current plans to contract out further functions.

NI Child Support Agency

The following services were contracted out without in-house bids:

Facilities Management
Typing
Telephonists
Receptionist
Cleaning
Security
Post Opening
Messengerial
Porterage

The provision of these services arose when the agency was set up in April 1993 and there was no existing in-house capacity. There are no current plans to contract out further functions.

Department of the Environment

This Department contracted out the following services without an in-house bid:

Minor road surface dressing and general road maintenance work.

Grounds maintenance at historic monuments and country parks

Secretariats for the Council for Nature Conservation and the Countryside, the Historic Monuments Council and the Historic Buildings Council.

The operation of Castle Archdale caravan site.

In-house bids in these cases were not prevented by lack of expertise.

This Department has currently identified, subject to value for money considerations, the following activities for contracting out.

various roads service provider activities management of the Marina at Castle Archdale country park and the operation of the small railway at Peatlands country park; and research and analysis work associated with the preparation of area development plans and co-ordination of the Department's property certificate service.

Expertise is available to mount in-house bids.

Northern Ireland Office

This Department contracted out office cleaning, Government car hire and air travel contracts without an in-house bid as no NIO staff previously performed these tasks.

No parts of the remaining Departments and Agencies have been privatised without an in-house bid taking place. Any future contacting out will depend on the outcome of market testing. There are no plans to prevent in-house bids in any future tests.

Mr. Ancram: The average per capita costs based on the initial budget allocations in the 1994–95 financial year in the various types of secondary schools were as follows:

Environmentally Sensitive Areas

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what percentage of the total land area of Northern Ireland was designated as environmentally sensitive; what financial provision his Department allocated to environmentally sensitive areas in each of the years 1993–94, 1994–95 and 1995–96; what percentage of the total land area of Northern Ireland will be designated as environmentally sensitive; and what financial provision his Department will allocate to environmentally sensitive areas in each of the years 1996–97 and 1997–98. [29325]

Mr. Ancram: Five areas in Northern Ireland, totalling 220,000 hectares have been designated as environmentally sensitive, representing 16.29 per cent. of the total land area. The financial provision for the years 1993–94, 1997–98 is set out in the table. There are no plans at present to designate any further areas.

1993–94: 750,000
1994–95: 700,000
1995–96: 2,800,000

Mr. Ancram: The following statistics derive from an analysis of all claims paid under the main capital grant schemes in the period from 26 July 1994 to 16 June 1995.

Scheme	Mean (Weeks)	Median (Weeks)	Standard deviation (Weeks)

Sub-Programme for Agriculture and Rural Development Capital Grant Scheme	13.05	11.28	9.37

Note:

The information relates to all claims including those not properly substantiated when received. Delays in the issue of payments often arise from the need to return a high proportion of claim forms to applicants for further validation.

Further Education Colleges

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish any consultation paper on the structure and role of the corporate bodies he is establishing for colleges of further education. [29502]

Mr. Ancram: No decisions have yet been made on the future arrangements for further education.

Housing Policy Review

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he expects to publish the housing policy review. [29758]

Mr. Moss: The housing policy review is in its final stages and a consultative paper is expected to be published during the summer. Following publication, a consultation period of some three months is envisaged.

Departmental Property

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is his Department's estimate of the backlog of maintenance on properties owned by his Department. [29760]

Mr. Moss: The Northern Ireland departments have estiamted their backlog of maintenance work to be in the region of £7.5 million in the current year. This does not take account of any work arising from the implementation of the recommendations of the report by Sir Reginald Doyle on the Stormont fire and fire safety in Crown buildings.

Firearms

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the number of (a) firearms certificates held in Northern Ireland, (b) shotguns held on such certificates, (c) handguns held on such certificates, indicating how many are held by present or past members of the security forces, (d) .22 rimfire rifles held on such certificates, (e) sporting rifles held on such certificates of a calibre larger than .22 rimfire, (f) specialist target shooting rifles held on such certificates and (g) other rifles used for target shooting held on such firearms certificates. [29659]

Sir John Wheeler: As at 1 June 1995, there were 88,089 current firearms certificates. The following firearms were held under them:

Shotguns: 85,024

Pistols and Revolvers: 13,020[1]

.22 Rimfire Rifles: 11,225

Greater than .22 calibre Sporting Rifles: 402

Specialist Target Shooting Rifles: 1,537

Other Rifles[2]: 283

Notes:

[1] Information on how many of these handguns are held by serving or former members of the RUC and armed forces could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

[2] Includes miscellaneous target shooting rifles, other than .22 and .303 calibre.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the number of terrorist-related incidents in which firearms were used, the number of other crimes in which firearms were used and the types of firearms used with particular reference to (a) handguns, (b) assault rifles, (c) sub-machine guns and (d) other rifle types and shotguns in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [29657]

Sir John Wheeler: The available information is given:

Notes:

1. Explosive device includes bombs, drogue bombs and rocket launchers.

2. Recorded crime data are not collated so as to permit the extraction of non-terrorist crime, except at disproportionate cost.

3. Crime records are not collated so as to allow the disaggregation of weapon categories to show the number of crimes where assault rifles and other types of rifle have been used.

4. In a number of incidents, two or more firearms will have been used. In such cases the incident has been recorded under one firearm category only.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many legally held firearms have been identified as having been used by those entitled to hold them in the commission of (a) terrorist-related crime and (b) other crimes in Northern Ireland in each of the last five years for which figures are readily available. [29658]

Sir John Wheeler: This information is not available in the form requested and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Construction Industry

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what percentage of GDP in Northern Ireland is accounted for by construction; and what information he has about the equivalent figure in the rest of the United Kingdom. [29759]

Mr. Moss: In 1993 construction accounted for 5.37 per cent. and 5.43 per cent. of GDP in Northern Ireland and the rest of the United Kingdom respectively.

Roads Service

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement regarding market testing of the Roads Service agency. [29757]

Mr. Moss: It is planned that the Department of the Environment's Roads Service will become a next steps agency on 1 April 1996. In common with other departmental agencies, it will be expected to move progressively towards becoming a purchaser rather than direct provider of executive services. In this context, the Roads Service agency will be looking to contract out strategically to the private sector many of its existing "provider" activities, subject to value for money considerations. This has resulted in the current suspension of market testing in the Roads Service.

Private Lee Clegg

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he expects to make a decision and announcement about the release of Private Lee Clegg. [29847]

Sir Patrick Mayhew: I am considering the advice of the Life Sentence Review Board and I have sought the views of the judiciary. I will notify the prisoner of the outcome of my decision as soon as possible.

Charter Week

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what are the main events he is proposing for Charter Week; what is the total cost to public funds; and how many (a) civil servants and (b) other public officials will be playing a part. [30683]

Sir John Wheeler: The public service events planned in Northern Ireland to coincide with the fourth anniversary of the citizens charter are:

the publication of health and personal social services performance tables for 1994–95; the launch of a charter standard statement for community services.

There will be no additional cost or staff resources required as a result of holding these events in July. The officials concerned will be working on the events as part of their normal duties.

HEALTH

Census Statistics

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list, in rank order, by parliamentary constituency, the proportion of residents who are (a) in households headed by someone from the new Commonwealth or Pakistan or (b) not identified as white in the most recent census returns. [29560]

Mr. Sackville: This information will be placed in the Library.

Royal Colleges

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what sums of money have been paid each year from 1989 to 1995 from her Department's (a) research and development budget and (b) other budgets to the (i) Royal College of Surgeons, (ii) Royal College of Physicians, (iii) Royal College of Psychiatrists, (iv) Royal College of Obstetricians and Gynaecologists, (v) Royal College of Radiologists and (vi) Royal College of Anaesthetists. [29355]

Mr. Malone: The information is shown in the tables.

Notes:

1. For 1989–90 and 1990–91 advances to the anaesthetists from the medical education budget were made as part of the grant to the Royal College of Surgeons. The advances were not separately identified.

2. In addition to the funding shown, moneys have been provided, through those medical royal colleges which are responsible for undertaking, or have oversight of, specific clinical audit projects of national significance. This information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment her Department has made of the impact that funding from her Department to the medical royal colleges has had on (a) improving the cost-effectiveness of medical practice, as measured by rigorous randomised controlled trials and (b) changing clinical behaviour. [29354]

Mr. Malone: The medical royal colleges have a long and respected history of promoting the highest standards of professional practice, and this role has become even more important with the increasing specialisation of medical care. Improving the clinical effectiveness of services in the NHS is a key goal for my Department. As professional associations, the colleges provide leadership and guidance to their members in this important area. My Department provides funds to support their contribution to medical training and clinical audit in the NHS, in order to help local clinicians and managers provide more effective services.

Oestrogen

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research her Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the effect of oestrogen on (i) child health and (ii) adult health. [29458]

Mr. Sackville: None.

Tobacco Advertising

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action she is taking to counter advertising campaigns from the tobacco industry. [29644]

Mr. Sackville: Advertising campaigns for tobacco are governed by the voluntary agreement between the Government and the tobacco industry. The agreement includes a number of measures which restrict in particular the exposure of children and young people to tobacco advertising. The committee for monitoring agreements on tobacco advertising and sponsorship investigates any complaints alleging breaches of the agreement. If there is found to be a breach, the tobacco company concerned takes immediate remedial action.

Residential Care

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the average fee charged per week for a resident in (a) a residential home and (b) a nursing home; and what proportion of this is for nursing care. [29712]

Mr. Bowis: The Department does not collect information on fees charged, but Laing and Buisson have estimated on the basis of their latest—November 1994—survey of independent sector homes that the average weekly fees for elderly residents were £234 and £333 for residential care and nursing homes respectively. No information is available on the proportion of nursing home fees which relates to nursing care.

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people in (a) residential homes and (b) nursing homes have preserved rights to income support; and how many in each case are now receiving that benefit. [29713]

Mr. Roger Evans: I have been asked to reply. The information is set out in the table.

	Residential care homes	Nursing homes
Estimated number with preserved rights	154,000	116,000
Number in receipt of higher income support limits	116,200	84,460

Source:

Income support figures—The Quarterly Statistical Enquiry (QSE) November 1994.

Information on people not in receipt of benefit is not collected and the numbers have been estimated from the November 1994 QSE and the Department of Health Statistical Bulletin "Personal Social Services: Residential Accommodation in England 1994".

Paediatric Heart Surgery

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many paediatric cardiac units perform the "switch" operation. [30030]

Mr. Sackville: This information is not available centrally.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what factors underlay her Department's decision to set up a protocol covering future performance of all complex cardiac surgery in the United Bristol Healthcare Trust; and if she will list the other paediatric cardiac units similarly treated. [30007]

Mr. Sackville: The Department draw up no such protocol. In response to concerns expressed about the paediatric cardiac surgical service at Bristol Royal Infirmary, the United Bristol Healthcare Trust drew up a protocol on how it should manage the service pending the implementation of previously agreed changes. That protocol was then agreed with South and West regional health authority and the Department.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many paediatric cardiac surgeons were registered in each of the last five years. [30006]

Mr. Malone: The available information is shown in the table.

Paediatric Surgeons: whole-time equivalents England at 30 September each year

	1989	1990	1991	1992	1993
Consultant	40	40	50	40	50
Senior Registrar	20	20	20	20	20
Registrar	20	20	20	30	30
Totals	80	80	80	90

Notes:
1. All figures rounded to the nearest 10.
2. The figures in the table may not sum to the total because of rounding.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list each paediatric cardiac unit in England, indicating for each the number of beds. [30008]

Mr. Sackville: This information is not available centrally.

NHS Trusts

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the basis of the figure given as the ordinating capital debt for each national health service trust listed in SI 1955/407; if she will list each relevant component; and what method was used to ensure a common means of assessment of each. [30032]

Mr. Sackville: The originating capital debt of a national health service trust represents the excess of the value of the assets over the sum of the liabilities transferred to it on establishment. The relevant components of the originating capital debt and the method used to ensure a common means of assessment of each are as follows:

Asset/liability	Means of valuation
Land	District valuer
Buildings	District valuer
Assets under construction	District valuer
Equipment	Taken from asset registers
Debtors	As stated in the transferring authority's accounts
Creditors	As stated in the transferring authority's accounts
Stocks	As stated in the transferring authority's accounts
Cash imprests	As stated in the transferring authority's accounts

The Valuation Office Agency is appointed by the NHS Executive to act as an independent valuer and uses a standard method of valuation for land and building assets. The value of equipment is taken from an asset register which every health authority and NHS trust must maintain and which is subject to independent audit. The calculation of the current value of equipment in these asset registers is standardised throughout the NHS. Debtors, creditors, stocks and cash imprests are stated in accounts in accordance with generally accepted accounting practice.

In all instances, the values transferring to the trust are agreed and certified by both the transferring authority and the trust and are subject to external audit.

Food Safety

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the members of (a) the Committee on the Medical Aspects of Food Policy, (b) the Committee on Mutagenicity of Chemicals in Food and (c) the Committee on Toxicity of Chemicals in Food, together with their current employers. [29995]

Mr. Sackville: This information will be placed in the Library.

Consultants

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate she has made of the percentage expansion of consultant numbers required in each of the next five years to implement the Calman report. [30453]

Mr. Malone: Medical staffing policy aims to ensure an adequate supply of appropriately trained doctors in each speciality. Officials are currently taking advice from the medical profession and national health service managers, through SWAG—the specialist workforce advisory group—to ensure that there are enough doctors in training in each specialty and to assess the anticipated need for consultants as a result of the Calman changes.

GP Lists

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients have been struck of general practitioners lists in each of the last five years in each region and family health service authority. [30464]

Mr. Malone: I refer the right hon. Member to the reply that I gave her on 25 January 1995, Official Report, column 254.

Health Authority Addresses

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the name and address of each family health service authority, district health authority, trust and directly managed unit. [30428]

Mr. Malone: Information on the address of each health authority and trust in England is published annually in the National Health Service Yearbook, copies of which are available in the Library.

NHS Executive (Declaration of Interests)

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what arrangements are made by the NHS Executive to register interests; and how many interests have been declared by employees of the NHS Executive and her Department. [30438]

Mr. Sackville: The Department's staff rules require that business, financial or other interests which staff or immediate members of their families hold, and which might be influenced or affected as a result of their official position, must be declared to their line manager. Records of such declarations are not available centrally.

Drug Research

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research the Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into a comparison of the effect of Nifedipine GITS and hydrochlorothiazide/amiloride on cardiovascular and cerebrovascular morbidity and mortality; and if she will make a statement. [30474]

Mr. Sackville: This Department has neither commissioned nor evaluated any research in this area.

NHS Trusts (Public Relations)

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the Department's policy with respect to the employment by trust hospitals of press and public relations officers; and if she will make a statement. [30785]

Mr. Malone: It is for individual national health service trusts to determine their own press and public relations needs and ensure they employ the appropriate number of staff to meet these needs.

Hyperactive Children

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is her Department's assessment of (a) the relevance of attention deficit hyperactivity disorder for problems of school pupil behaviour and aggression, (b) the number and percentage of pupils affected by attention deficit disorder and (c) the likely degree to which children may inherit attention deficit hyperactivity disorder; and if she will make a statement. [28730]

Mr. Bowis: Attention deficit hyperactivity disorder is one of several possible causes of behavioural problems, including aggression, in school pupils. The number of pupils affected is not available centrally. Recent research suggests that severe hyperkinetic disorder, which is one form of attention deficit hyperactivity disorder, is found in about 1 in 200 children.

The degree to which children may inherit attention deficit hyperactivity disorder is a complex issue, but it is accepted that there is some inherited component.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has in association with the Department of Education to promote knowledge of attention deficit hyperactivity disorder, together with appropriate training, among child psychiatrists and paediatricians to contribute towards dealing with problems of classroom discipline. [28731]

Mr. Bowis: The handbook on Child and Adolescent Mental Health Services, which we published jointly with the Department for Education in March, includes references to the training of professional groups involved in the treatment of young people with emotional and behavioural disorders. Copies of the handbook are available in the Library.

Royal Berkshire and Battle Hospitals Trust

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations she has received alleging that fundholding patients are being seen ahead of non-fundholding patients with the same clinical problem at the Royal Berkshire and Battle Hospital Trust. [30298]

Mr. Malone: None.

Asthma

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will commission research on the relationship between the incidence of asthma and the number of undiagnosed thyroid sufferers; and if she will make a statement. [30265]

Mr. Sackville: I have no plans to commission such research at this time. However, within the Department's centrally commissioned research programme there is a range of projects under way and in planning of relevance to respiratory diseases and especially asthma, with a total estimated value of over £125,000. The Medical Research Council is also funding a large amount of work on asthma, concentrating mainly on the fundamental mechanisms underlying the disease, and some 14 projects supported by grants and work at MRC units are currently under way. In 1993–94, the latest year for which figures are available, the MRC spent £919,000 on research into asthma and a further £1,000,000 on research which may be relevant to the condition.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many asthma sufferers are estimated to live in each London borough. [30738]

Mr. Sackville: This information is not available centrally. I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member for Pembroke (Mr. Ainger) on 14 March 1995, Official Report, column 553, for the available information.

General Practitioners' Hours

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she has made any analysis of the ballot result of general practitioners on cuts in hours; and, if so, what that analysis is. [30299]

Mr. Malone: No. We shall continue our discussions with general practitioners to ensure that standards of service to patients are maintained.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer of 21 March, Official Report, column 130, if she will list all those occasions during the current parliamentary Session when warning of visits was not given to hon. Members. [30745]

Mr. Sackville: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave him on 21 March 1995, Official Report, column 131. We are aware of one such oversight.

Prescriptions

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proposals she has to issue guidelines to general practitioners and pharmacists concerning requests by patients for private prescription forms for items whose production and distribution costs are lower than the standard prescription charges. [30678]

Mr. Malone: Guidance to general practitioners on the issue of private prescriptions to national health service patients was issued on 4 May 1994 under FHSL (94) 26, copies of which are available in the Library. Pharmacists are already accustomed to dispensing private prescriptions, so no new guidance is necessary.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is her current estimate of the proportion of all prescription-only items in the formulary whose production and distribution cost is lower than the current pre-item prescription charge. [30677]

Mr. Malone: The information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Drug Addiction

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many children under the age of 16 years are currently receiving treatment for any form of drug addiction, giving figures for each region. [30740]

Mr. Bowis: The information is not available centrally in the form requested. Information on the number of children aged under 15 presenting to some drug services for the first time, or after an absence of six months or more, by region, can be found in table 7 of the statistical bulletin, "Drug Misuse Statistics", copies of which are available in the Library.

Ministerial Guidance

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what legislative powers she has to issue guidance which is required to be taken into account by courts and tribunals for the purpose of determining legal liability where approval by Parliament is now required; and what such guidance has been issued. [30496]

Mr. Sackville: Numerous enactments—for instance, section 7A of the Local Authority Social Services Act 1970 and section 17 of the National Health Service Act 1977—confer on my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State the power to give to certain public bodies, including local authorities, health authorities and NHS trusts, directions with which those bodies are obliged to comply. Unless contained in a statutory instrument, such directions are not laid before Parliament, but nevertheless have legal consequences.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State also gives guidance, falling short of directions, to certain public bodies with respect to their exercise of functions. In some cases, the power to give guidance is expressly recognised in statute—for instance, section 7 of the Local Authority Social Services Act 1970 requires local authorities, when exercising their social services functions, to act under the general guidance of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State. In certain other cases, guidance is given as part of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State's general statutory responsibilities; for instance, guidance is issued to health authorities under my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State's general powers in section 2(b) of the National Health Service Act 1970 to do anything which is conducive or incidental to the discharge of a duty imposed by that Act.

Even guidance which is given under express statutory powers does not necessarily require the approval of Parliament. Whether the courts would take account of guidance when determining the legal liability would depend on the matters at issue and the circumstances in which the guidance was given. They would, in appropriate cases, be likely to have regard to guidance given in pursuance of express statutory powers to a body which is required to act under it.

The statutory powers to give directions and guidance have been exercised on a large number of occasions over the years by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State and her predecessors. If the hon. Member has a particular problem in mind and would care to write to me about it, I will identify such relevant directions or guidance as there may be in existence.

Charter Week

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what are the main events that she is proposing for Charter Week; what is the total cost to public funds; and how many (a) civil servants and (b) other public officials will be playing a part. [30687]

Mr. Malone: There are no new major events planned for Charter Week. A number of events which were already scheduled to take place outside Charter Week have been re-timed to take place during that period. These are the launch of the second set of national health service performance tables and an announcement about a consultation leaflet on the patients charter and NHS services for children and young people. There will be no additional cost or staff resources required as a result of holding these events in July. The officials concerned will be working on the events as part of their normal duties. We are not collecting centrally information about activities in the NHS.

GP Fundholding

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the total of general practitioner fundholder savings in 1994–95. [30758]

Mr. Malone: This information will not be available until final audits are complete.

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will give the amount of general practitioner fundholder savings spent in each year since 1991–92. [30759]

Mr. Malone: This information is not available centrally.

Information Service

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what sums have been authorised and under which vote she has authorised them to be paid for the establishment of a pilot project known as the "Ask-a-Nurse" information service; what arrangement she has made with a named contractor for such a service; what locations are under consideration; and what consultations she has initiated with those professional and statutory bodies providing related services. [27900]

Mr. Malone [holding answer 12 June 1995]: The East London and City health authority has spent £25,000 London initiative zone grant on consulting interested parties about the feasibility of setting up a project. London initiative zone expenditure is made from vote 1. Decisions to purchase services are a matter for local health authorities.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Reem Abdulhadi

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on what charge Reem Abdulhadi is being held; and if he will make a statement. [28736]

Mr. Howard: I understand that Reem Abdulhadi was arrested on 2 June 1995 and charged with unlawfully possessing an explosive substance with intent to endanger life, contrary to section 3(1)(b) of the Explosive Substances Act 1883, and two counts of possessing a firearm and ammunition with intent to endanger life, contrary to section 16 of the Firearms Act 1968. Reem Abdulhadi appeared at Bow street magistrate's court on 5 June and was remanded in custody.

Police Pensions

Mr. MacKinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what plans he has to alter the funding of police pensions to fully funded schemes; and if he will make a statement; [30258]

(2) what would be the transitional cost to Her Majesty's Government if they were to facilitate a change in the financing of police pensions from revenue to fully funded self-financing schemes. [30259]

Mr. Maclean: My right hon. and learned Friend has no plans to alter the police pension scheme to a fully funded scheme.

The current police pension scheme came into operation in 1948. It is based like many other public service pensions scheme on the "pay as you go" principle under which the funding for liabilities is provided as and when those liabilities arise. The transitional cost of creating a fund which would be capable of meeting existing police pensions liabilities, including the present value of future pension benefits accrued to date, has been estimated by the Government Actuary's Department as about £20 billion.

National Lottery

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what further representations he has received from charities concerned about a loss of income as a result of the national lottery. [28752]

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received concerning losses suffered by charities because of a decline in contributions since the introduction of the national lottery. [28763]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: We have received a number of representations from charitable organisations concerned about a possible loss of income following the introduction of the national lottery. It is too early to assess the effect of the lottery on charitable income. The Government are, however, committed to monitoring any such changes. The National Lottery Charities Board will in any case be a major source of new income for the voluntary sector.

Fire Prevention Units

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Office how many fire prevention units of local fire authorities have been closed during the past 18 months; and if he will make a statement. [30483]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: We are unaware of any closures during this period.

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received in respect of the closure of the fire prevention unit of the Merseyside fire authority; and if he will make a statement. [30484]

Mr. Baker: We have received letters from four hon. Members about proposals by Merseyside fire and civil defence authority to reduce the level of fire prevention work.

It is entirely a matter for the authority how to deploy its resources in this area.

Police Identification

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what guidance he has issued concerning requirements on police officers wearing riot gear to display their number; and if he will make a statement. [30548]

Mr. Maclean: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to a question from the hon. Member for Don Valley (Mr. Redmond) on 7 February 1995, Official Report, column 222.

Charter Week

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are the main events he is proposing for Charter Week; what is the total costs to public funds; and how many (a civil servants and (b) other public officials will be playing a part. [30686]

Mr. Howard: The focus of the programme to mark the fourth anniversary of the citizens charter is on local events laid on by local services. No record is being kept centrally of the activities proposed. The UK Passport Agency has, however, contributed to a major article for the July edition of "Charter News" and the agency's regional managers stand ready to participate in joint events arranged through charter networks.

There will be no additional costs or staff resources as a result of these activities taking place in July. The officials concerned will be working on the events as part of their normal duties.

Mrs. Quereshi Bibi

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 26 January 1995, Official Report, column 302, if the sponsor of Mrs. Quereshi Bibi, BV100/25109 was invited to interview at Leeds/Bradford airport on 5 February; and if he will make a statement. [30707]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: The sponsor of Mrs. Quereshi Bibi. BV100/25109, was interviewed as arranged at Leeds/Bradford airport on 5 February.

Police Review

Sir Michael Shersby: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will publish the final report of the review of police core and ancillary tasks. [31089]

Mr. Howard: The final report will be published tomorrow and a copy placed in the Library.

Community and Race Relations

Mr. Bernie Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 14 June 1995, Official Report, column 523, how many staff at the police staff college have received training in race and community relations from the Home Office specialist support unit; when they received this training; and how many were (a) civilians and (b) police officers. [30727]

Mr. Maclean: There are currently two members of staff who have received training in community and race relations from the specialist support unit; one police officer and one civilian. The training was undertaken in 1989 and 1993 respectively.

Mr. Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 14 June 1995, Official Report, column 524, how many of the 15 directors of studies at CPTU and line managers at central planning and training unit at Bramshill have been deemed capable of delivering and assessing the delivery of race and community relations training by the Home Office specialist support unit. [30730]

Mr. Maclean: Information is not held in this form. For trainers attending courses provided by the specialist support unit, an assessment is made on an individual basis of the student's competencies during the course, and a written assessment is provided to the student and to the organisation which has requested the student's training.

Mr. Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 14 June 1995, Official Report, column 524, if the figure of Home Office funding of the support unit for race and community relations training for 1993–94 includes the sum of £60,000 for the salaries of police liaison officers. [30728]

Mr. Maclean: Yes.

Mr. Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many West Yorkshire police trainers have undergone training at the Home Office specialist support unit; how many are still delivering race and community relations to front line officers; and what research has been conducted into the effectiveness of such training. [30725]

Mr. Maclean: Eleven officers have undergone training in community and race relations at the specialist support unit. Six of those officers are still delivering training in the West Yorkshire police force, including community and race relations training. No specific evaluation of the effectiveness of training has been carried out, but the force relies on the validation of materials produced by the specialist support unit.

Mr. Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 14 June 1995, Official Report, columns 523–24, who is the Minister with responsibility for ensuring that the provision of police training in race and community relations is effective; and if he will make a statement. [30731]

Mr. Maclean: I have responsibility for police policy matters. It is for the police service itself to ensure that it delivers effective training programmes.

Mr. Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what training in community and race relations is currently received by front-line operational police officers (a) nationally and (b) in West Yorkshire. [30724]

Mr. Maclean: All new recruits to the police service receive community and race relations training at police training centres as part of their probationer course. Management training courses for inspectors and sergeants include material on community and race relations. In addition, various training is provided by individual police forces.

West Yorkshire police provide race awareness training for all officers; staff at chief inspector and superintendent level have received knowledge based training provided by specialist support unit staff, and a programme of knowledge and skill based training for other ranks is being prepared.

Mr. Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 14 June 1995, Official Report, column 523, which of the recommendations of Lord Scarman he has taken into account in relation to the employment of civilian staff in race and community relations training. [30721]

Mr. Maclean: The Government recognise the need to provide training in community and race relations issues for officers at all levels and the value of using civilian staff and contributors from the ethnic minority communities in such training. It is for police service managers to determine the content and structure of training courses, with assistance where appropriate from the specialist support unit.

Mr. Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what considerations underlie the change in the level of funding for the Home Office specialist support unit for community and race relations training for the police; and what assessment he has made of the effect on the level of risks of disturbances. [30726]

Mr. Maclean: Considerations include the level of service required by the police service from the unit; the level of training which the police service itself can deliver; and competing demands on expenditure. There continues to be regular contact between the Home Office and the police about the possibility of disturbances.

Mr. Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 16 May 1995, Official Report, column 193, if he will explain the discrepancy between this figure and the figures given in his answer of 14 June 1995, Official Report, column 524; and if he will make a statement. [30729]

Mr. Maclean: The figures given on 14 June are for the years 1993–94 and 1994–95, as requested. The hon. Member's previous question asked about the reduction in budget for 1995–96. The budget for 1995–96 is £504,000—a reduction of £39,000 on 1994–95.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many Algerian asylum seekers are currently detained in Rochester prison; and how many days each of them has been held in detention. [30378]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: The information requested is shown in the table.

Number of Algerian nationals detained[1] at Her Majesty's Prison Rochester, who had sought asylum, by length of detention on 20 June 1995

Length of detention at Rochester (days)	Number of detainees

[1] Persons detained solely under the powers contained in schedules 2 or 3 of the Immigration Act 1971. In some cases the asylum application will have been lodged subsequent to the applicant being detained. The figures include both detained asylum applicants who applied at ports, and those detained in after-entry enforcement work. These figures include people awaiting the setting of directions for removal following refusal of the application, as well as those whose applications where under consideration or subject to appeal.

Dr. Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people have requested asylum on arriving on the Eurostar train at Waterloo station since 1 January. [29627]

Mr. Baker: During the period 1 January–19 June 1995, 173 applications for asylum were received from people arriving at Waterloo on the Eurostar train.

Street Watch Schemes

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many street watch schemes are in operation in England and Wales. [30009]

Mr. Maclean: A total of 41 street watch schemes had been notified to the Home Office as at 21 June.

Women Prisoners (Births)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many women were sentenced to a term of imprisonment within (a) a week and (b) a month of giving birth for each year since 1990. [30377]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: This information is not collected centrally.

Prison Drugs Testing

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what is the cost of each mandatory drug test in gaols; [29955]

(2) what proportion of mandatory drug tests in England and Wales have proved positive; [29956]

(3) which was the main drug detected in cases where mandatory drug testing has proved positive; [29957]

(4) what disciplinary action has been taken in cases where mandatory drug testing in prison has proved positive. [29958]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State on 18 May to the hon. Member for Waveney (Mr. Porter), Official Report, columns 370–72.

Prison Security

Mr. Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to publish the findings of General Sir John Learmont's inquiry into prison security. [29983]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: My right hon. and learned Friend will publish the report after he has received and considered it.

Prison Food Expenses

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are the daily food expenses allowed per person inmate in prisons in England and Wales. [29543]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. Tom Cox, dated 26 June 1995:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the daily food expenses allowed per prison inmate in England and Wales.

Daily food allowances are allocated in three bands according to population sizes as follows:

Population	Food allowance
Up to 200	£1.405 per inmate day
201–500	£1.385 per inmate day
501 and above	£1.37 per inmate day

Prison Language Services

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will list the foreign language prison information packs which are available for prisons in England and Wales; how such information packs are obtained; and if prisons requiring such information packs are required to pay for them; [29539]

(2) if a list is kept in prisons of prison officers who are able to speak a foreign language and if he will make a statement; [59541]

(3) what funding has been made available to the foreign national liaison committee in prisons in England and Wales; [29538]

(4) what system exists in prisons in England and Wales to help foreign nationals who are held in custody on possible immigration offences and who do not wish to make contact with their high commission or embassy. [59542]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for these matters has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. Tom Cox, dated 26 June 1995:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Questions concerning foreign national prisoners' issues in the Prison Service.

Two foreign language information packs are issued centrally by the Prison Service. These are the Foreign Prisoners' Resource Pack, which is available in 11 languages and the Prisoners' Information Pack, which is available in 14 languages. These are provided to prisons on request. Other foreign language information packs have been produced locally by some establishments and by other agencies, but details are not kept centrally.

Some Prison Service establishments have produced local lists of staff who are able to speak other languages. However, these details are not held centrally and no single comprehensive list exists.

The setting up of any committee to consider issues solely relating to foreign nationals, is a matter for individual establishments, as is any funding.

To assist those held in custody on possible immigration offences, six Immigration Service advisory leaflets are provided for issue on reception to both foreign and Commonwealth nationals held under the Immigration Act 1971.

These leaflets include information about help agencies and are available in a minimum of four languages, although one is available in 11 languages. Further assistance is available from designated prison and probation staff.

Crown Immunity

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list all areas within (a) his Department, (b) agencies under his Department's control and (c) organisations for which he has ministerial responsibility to which Crown immunity applies; what consideration he has given to removing this; and if he will make a statement. [28656]

Mr. Howard: The reference to Crown immunity in the question is taken to refer to legislation which does not bind the Crown. Certain legislation is expressly applied to the Crown. In most legislation, however, particularly older legislation, there is no such express provision. In those circumstances whether legislation applies to the crown will depend upon the implications to be drawn from the terms and context of the legislation.

Immigration Detainees

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the total cost in 1994–95 to his Department of detaining persons under Immigration Act powers in (a) Immigration Service detention centres, (b) Prison Service establishments and (c) police cells. [26291]

Mr. Nicholas Baker [holding answer 25 May 1995]: The total cost of detaining persons under Immigration Act powers in Immigration Service detention centres in 1994–95 was £11.35 million. Both custodial and in-country escorting costs are included in this figure. The cost of detaining persons under the Act in Prison Service establishments cannot be obtained without disproportionate cost since accounting systems do not distinguish between Immigration Act detainees and those on remand or serving a prison sentence. In the year 1994–95 the police charged the Immigration Service £993,000 for the use of police cells and for escort duties.

In appropriate cases, the immigration department recovers costs from carriers under schedule 2 of the Immigration Act 1971.

Child Abduction

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to ensure that the removal of travel controls and documentation for EU nationals travelling between EU countries does not lead to an increased risk of child abduction from the United Kingdom. [30386]

Mr. Nicholas Baker [holding answer 22 June 1995]: Operational responsibility at ports and airports for identifying children who may have been abducted is a matter for the police. The Immigration Service gives every assistance, where embarkation controls make this practicable, to draw to the attention of the police departing children who may be in this category. As the under-Secretary of State, my hon. Friend the Member for Bexhill and Battle (Mr. Wardle), announced on 15 December 1993, Official Report, column 655, in response to a question from my hon. and learned Friend the Member for Burton (Sir. I Lawrence), embarkation controls are not routinely carried out on purely intra-EU traffic except where there is reason to believe that someone of interest to the police in connection with serious crime is likely to leave the country by a particular route.

Where a child is successfully abducted to a country which is a signatory to the Hague convention, an extradition warrant may be issued. If the country is not a signatory to the convention, the existing channels of communication and co-operation between the relevant police forces are used to seek the return of the abducted child.

Mr. Dorrell: In addition to my hon. Friend's correspondence on this subject, my Department has received one other representation, from one of his constituents.

19. Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what amount was raised in the most recent week for which figures are available from the national lottery and from scratch cards. [28762]

Mr. Dorrell: Income from the national lottery into the national lottery distribution fund for the week to Tuesday 20 June totalled £28.8 million. I understand that approximately 60 per cent. of ticket revenue comes from the on-line lottery game and 40 per cent. from scratch cards.

20. Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage when he last met the chairmen of the national lottery distributing bodies to discuss procedure; and if he will make a statement. [28764]

Mr. Dorrell: I meet the chairman of the national lottery distributing bodies frequently to discuss a wide range of lottery-related issues. Last week I met the chairman of the London-based distributors in my capacity as chairman of the Millennium Commission.

21. Mr. Mudie: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will list the sports bodies in West Yorkshire to which grants from the national lottery have been awarded, indicating the amounts given. [28765]

Mr. Sproat: The Sports Council has made seven awards to sports bodies in West Yorkshire:

Slazenger Sports and Social Club, Wakefield	100,000
Yarnbury Rugby Club, Leeds	35,000
Cumberworth Cricket Club, Kirklees	31,380
Todmorden Cricket Club, Calderdale	26,396
Roundhay Lawn Tennis Club, Leeds	13,169

Total	223,210

I understand that a further 23 applications from sports bodies in West Yorkshire are under consideration.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what assessment he has made of the way in which lottery funds have been spent to date; and if he will show the total amount spent and a list of the grants made to date to projects which indisputably benefit socio-economic groups who have contributed most of the money. [26865]

Mr. Dorrell: To date, 486 projects have been awarded national lottery funds of £95 million. I have today placed a full list of the projects that have received awards in the Libraries of both Houses. People in all socio-economic groups are enjoying playing the national lottery and will benefit from these lottery-supported projects.

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how many grants have been made from national lottery income to local authorities in respect of projects which would otherwise be met from normal local authority income; and if he will list each of these cases. [30025]

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 22 June 1995]: It is the Government's policy that national lottery funding should be additional to other forms of public expenditure. The 11 distributing bodies will take this into account when making individual funding decisions.

Tourism

16. Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what studies the tourism industry has made of the effect the daylight saving campaign would have on United Kingdom tourism. [28759]

Mr. Sproat: The Daylight Extra Group produced a survey in 1994 which estimated that additional earnings of £1 billion would be generated for UK tourism by a move to single/double summer time.

22. Sir David Knox: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will make a statement on tourism in the midlands. [28766]

Mr. Dorrell: Tourism makes a substantial contribution to the economy in the midlands, providing 240,000 jobs and generating revenue of at least £900 million.

The midlands will benefit, as will other regions, from Government initiatives to assist the tourism industry to become more competitive. These were announced in the document "Tourism: Competing with the Best", published by my Department earlier this year.

Island Games, Gibraltar

23. Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will make a statement on Her Majesty's Government's involvement in the island games to be held in Gibraltar in July. [28767]

Mr. Sproat: The Governor of Gibraltar, Field Marshall Sir John Chappell GCB CBE, will represent Her Majesty's Government at the opening of the island games.

Music Industry

24. Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what his Department is doing to promote the British music industry. [28768]

Mr. Dorrell: My Department supports the development and the wider availability and appreciation of music in this country through the Arts Council of England and the regional arts boards. The council will spend more than £42 million on music in 1995–96, as well as the funding disbursed by regional arts boards at a more local level. My Department is also the major sponsor of National Music Day. In addition, the Department of Trade and Industry has undertaken a range of measures in support of the commercial music industry in this country.

Channel 4

25. Sir Michael Neubert: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage when he next expects to meet the chairman of the Independent Television Commission to discuss matters concerning Channel 4. [28769]

Mr. Dorrell: I have no plans to meet the chairman of the Independent Television Commission to discuss Channel 4.

Regional Theatre

26. Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what plans he has to meet the Theatre Managers Association to discuss the implications of the Arts Council's consultation paper on regional theatre. [28770]

Mr. Dorrell: I have no such plans.

27. Mr. McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage when he expects to respond to the National Heritage Committee's third report of session 1994–95, HC 276, on relations between rugby union and rugby league. [28771]

Mr. Sproat: My Department responded to the National Heritage Select Committee's report on 31 May and a copy of the response was placed in the Library on 22 June.

Angling

Mr. Hall: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what representations he has received within the last six months with regard to angling. [28753]

Mr. Sproat: I have received a small number of representations on angling.

Charter Week

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what are the main events that he is proposing for Charter Week; what is the total cost to public funds; and how many (a) civil servants and (b) other public officials will be playing a part. [30684]

Mr. Dorrell: My Department is not proposing to hold any specific events itself for Charter Week, but it firmly supports the initiative and the progress made by our sponsored bodies in terms of public service and accountability. The Imperial War Museum, which won the award in 1994, will be hosting a display on the charter mark and its function. No additional cost or staff resources will be required.

Mar Lodge

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what consideration the national heritage memorial fund gave to consulting the Scottish people before buying Mar Lodge. [26847]

Mr. Dorrell: This is a matter for the national heritage memorial fund,which is an independent body. I have asked the chairman to write to the hon. Members and to place copies of his letters in the Libraries of the House.

Arts and Heritage Funding

Mr. Callaghan To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will make a statement on the effect of inflation on arts bodies over the past two years. [30977]

Mr. Dorrell: The Arts Council received an increase of over £5 million this year. Taken with increased attendances and low inflation, this has helped arts organisations to sustain a lively arts scene throughout the country.

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what will be the rate of increase of Government support for the arts and heritage over the next two years. [30976]

Mr. Dorrell: The Department of National Heritage annual report 1995 shows my Department's forward expenditure plans for 1996–97. A copy of the report is in the Library. My Department has not yet announced detailed allocation of its provision for 1997–98.

Royal Opera House

Sir Thomas Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what is his latest estimate of the cost of the Royal Opera House development plan. [28758]

Mr. Dorrell: The Royal Opera House development project is currently estimated to cost £193.8 million. A further £20 million is likely to be needed to cover transitional costs during the period of closure.

Cricket

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what support his Department is giving to English cricket at national, local and school levels; and if he will make a statement. [29063]

Mr. Dorrell: The Government are keen to encourage young people to participate in sport, including cricket. In 1994–95, the Sports Council, which is funded by the Department of National Heritage, gave grants of £187,500 to the Cricket Council, £37,500 to the Women's Cricket Association and £13,334 to the English Schools Cricket Association. Cricket projects are also eligible for funding from the sportsmatch scheme and for national lottery funding from the Sports Council.

DEFENCE

Royal Military Police

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on how many occasions and on what dates in each of the last 12 months the Royal Military police have stopped (a) military and (b) civilian vehicles on the A345 road between Salisbury and Amesbury; at what time of day; on what grounds; and what was the outcome on each occasion. [30099]

Mr. Soames: My Department has no record of the Royal Military police stopping any vehicles on the A345 during the last 12 months, but if the hon. Member wishes to write to my noble Friend the Under-Secretary of State for Defence with full details of any alleged incidents, we will ensure that the matter is thoroughly investigated.

Contaminated Land

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will list every contaminated site owned by his Department, together with the total area covered; [29844]

(2) what is his estimate of the cost of cleaning up contaminated land owned by his Department. [29841]

Mr. Soames: Information on the total number of Ministry of Defence sites with contamination problems and on possible decontamination costs is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 18 April, Official Report, column 126, by my right hon. Friend the Minister of State for Defence Procurement to the hon. Member for South Shields (Dr. Clark).

Land Sales

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much land owned by his Department has been sold off in each of the last five years. [29909]

Mr. Soames: The information is not held in the form requested and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. The total net figure of land and foreshore holdings in the UK, in thousand hectares, in each of the last five years is as follows:

1991: 242.8

1992: 243.4

1993: 242.5

1994: 241.9

1995: 240.3

RAF Woodvale (Noise Pollution)

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what measures he is taking to reduce the noise pollution created by training aircraft from RAF Woodvale, over West Lancashire. [29846]

Mr. Soames: A broad range of measures has been introduced to minimise any noise disturbance caused by military training aircraft operating from RAF Woodvale over west Lancashire. For example, flight paths are dispersed over as wide an area as possible avoiding populated areas, and aircrews are regularly briefed on the need to conduct their operations with consideration for those on the ground. The volume of military flying training from RAF Woodvale, which generally ceases by 5 pm, is kept to the minimum commensurate with service needs.

Astra

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on what date a schedule of documents removed from the Astra group of companies was prepared by his Department's police. [29719]

Mr. Soames: The Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 requires a police officer receiving property into Ministry of Defence Police possession to record it as soon as practicable. There is no one schedule of documents removed from the Astra group of companies by the MDP. The individual schemes were prepared between March 1990 and July 1992.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when his Department's police began their investigations into the Astra group of companies; and on what date those investigations were wound up. [29724]

Mr. Soames: Investigations by the Ministry of Defence police into the Astra group of companies began in February 1990. The inquiries closed in January 1993.

General Sir Donald Isles

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will set out the periods of service and the nature of duties with his Department of General Sir Donald Isles; and whether, as part of his duties, General Sir Donald Isles had any functional supervision of, or responsibility for, Mr. Gordon Foxley. [30061]

Mr. Freeman: Major General Donald Isles served in the general staff in the Ministry of Defence from 1968 to 1971; in the Royal Armaments Research and Development Establishment from 1971 to 1972; as director of munitions with the British defence staff in Washington from 1972 to 1975; as director of munitions with the British defence staff in Washington from 1972 to 1975; and as Director General Weapons (Army) in the Ministry of Defence from 1975 to 1978, responsible for managing the procurement of a wide range of weapons systems for the Army. In the last of these appointments, he was a senior line manager to Mr. Gordon Foxley, who was at that time an assistant director in his organisation.

International Military Services Ltd.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if IMS Ltd, and its subsidiaries have gone into liquidation. [30092]

Mr. Freeman: International Military Services Ltd. ceased trading in July 1991 but will not be wound up until all its outstanding obligations have been discharged.

Debt Collection

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 20 December, Official Report, column 1167, if he will update the number of collection visits; what was the value of the items; what was the nature of the items which were the cause of the debt collection visits; and whether that expenditure was incurred in this country or the countries specified. [29555]

Mr. Freeman: This is a matter for the chief executive of the Defence Accounts Agency. I have therefore asked him to reply.

Letter from M. A. Rowe to Mr. Jim Cousins, dated 26 June 1995:

On 15 June 1995 you asked the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 15 December 1994, Official Report, Column 1167, if he will update the number of collection visits; what was the value of the items; what was the nature of the items which were the cause of the debt collection visits; and whether that expenditure was incurred in this country or the countries specified. This matter falls to me, in the absence of the Chief Executive of the Defence Accounts Agency, for reply.

The only visit to add to the list provided in December is one to Belgium on 30 March 1995. As in the previous cases, this visit was to deal with the debt owed by the customer, both in Belgium and in the UK.

I regret that I am unable to provide details of the amounts owed and the services provided as this is a matter of confidentiality between Her Majesty's Government and their customers.

Naval Refits

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) in what circumstances shipyards other than Rosyth will be entitled to bid to undertake refits of Hunt and Sandown class minehunters in the period up to the year 2005; [30938]

(2) what further review he has undertaken of the allocation of future refits of Hunt and Sandown class minehunters as part of his consideration of the possible deferment of the transfer of nuclear refit work from Rosyth to Devonport; and if he will make a statement; [30942]

(3) what circumstances prevailing at the time of individual refits he intends to take into account when determining which shipyards should undertake the refit of Hunt and Sandown class minehunters; [30940]

(4) how he intends to fulfil the commitment referred to in his oral statement of 24 June 1993, Official Report, columns 447-50, to ensure that the cost of refits to Hunt and Sandown class minehunters in the period up to 2005 are fair and reasonable; [30939]

(5) what further review he has undertaken of the allocation of future refits of Hunt and Sandown class minehunters as part of his consideration of the possible privatisation of Rosyth; and if he will make a statement. [30941]

Mr. Freeman: The Government's policy on the refitting of Hunt class vessels remains as set out in my right hon. and learned Friend's statement to the House on 24 June 1993, Official Report, columns 447-50. Refits of Sandown class vessels are included in the allocated programme of refits to be undertaken at the royal dockyards. No review of this policy has been undertaken in the context of the planned privatisation of Rosyth or the on-going assessment of docking facilities for nuclear submarines. The precise details of the allocated programme are subject to the circumstances prevailing at the time of individual refits, including operational factors and the needs of other vessels. My Department has considerable information on market rates for refits and maintenance work on a wide variety of vessels. Under our "No Acceptable Price, No Contract" pricing initiative our policy is not normally to place a contract until we are satisfied that the price is fair and reasonable.

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what funds for submarine refitting have been diverted from Faslane to Devonport; and what factors underlay this policy. [30038]

Mr. Freeman: None. Submarine refits are not undertaken at Faslane.

Privatisation

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list those parts of his Department or departmental agencies which were privatised without an in-house bid; if he will indicate the expertise which was absent in his Department or departmental agencies which prevented an in-house bid taking place; which future parts of his Department or departmental agencies he intends to privatise; and which of them do not have the necessary in-house expertise to mount an in-house bid. [29419]

Mr. Freeman: Ministry of Defence activities, including those of Defence agencies, which have been privatised or contracted out without an in-house bid during the last three years under my Department's "Competing for Quality" programme are listed. Information concerning the lack of expertise in individual business areas which might have prevented in-house bids is not held centrally, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

The decision on whether to mount a market test with an in-house bid depends on the circumstances of the business in question. For example, the Department may consider that the private sector is better equipped to delivery a specific service, has better understanding of market needs or specialist expertise, or has a capacity to invest in new technology. Similarly, a strategic decision to contract out without an in-house bid could be taken where an activity is relatively small and peripheral to the Department's functions, leading to the conclusion that in-house provision of the service would detract from our ability to concentrate on our core functions. There is also a general presumption in favour of strategic contracting out of new services where there is no existing in-house operation, subject to management and value for money considerations.

It is not yet known what defence support business activities will in future be contracted out to the private sector. This will depend on the outcome of feasibility studies which determine how activities can best be exposed to competition from the private sector, and the results of the subsequent competitions.

Activities exposed to the "Competing for Quality" process between 1 April 1992 and 31 March 1995 which were contracted out with no in-house bid being made.

Bett Review

Sir Michael Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what work is in hand in analysing the independent review by Mr. Michael Bett of "Service Career and Manpower Structures and Terms of Service"; and when he expects to respond to the recommendations of that review. [30667]

Mr. Soames: We have conducted an initial examination of Sir Michael Bett's proposals. The aim, as foreshadowed in my statement of 5 April, Official Report, column 1143, has been to identify the interrelationships between the different elements of the recommendations, and to form a view on the work required before decisions can be taken. This initial examination has confirmed that Sir Michael's proposals merit detailed study and development. The next phase of work has now been set in hand. As well as considering a range of wider management issues, we are conducting major and detailed studies into pay and structures and job evaluation; career structures, incentives and pensions; allowances and charges; rank structures; mobility, stability, sociological assumptions, accompanied service and housing; personnel strategy; and administration and pay schemes.

This work will require a substantial amount of effort and time, and the studies will need to be developed into an overall strategy. I intend to have completed this process and to make a definitive statement on the way ahead in the spring of 1996. I shall keep the House informed of progress.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, further to his answer of 21 March, Official Report, columns 117-18, which visit it was that was not notified to hon. Members. [30747]

Mr. Soames: The visit in question was to a number of naval and Royal Marine establishments in the Plymouth area.

EDUCATION

Classroom Behaviour Difficulties

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what representations she has received from the general secretary of the National Association of Head Teachers regarding classroom behaviour difficulties; what assessment has been made of the role of attention deficit disorder in contributing to such problems; and if she will ensure a study of this field by her Department. [29913]

Mr. Forth: My right hon. Friend has received a number of representations from the National Association of Head Teachers about behaviour and discipline in schools. She has now invited the association to meet her to discuss what additional action might be taken to support schools in this area.

I understand that my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health is providing the hon. Member with such information as is available about the assessment of attention deficit hyperactivity disorder in contributing to pupils' behavioural problems. This Department has no plans to commission any further studies.

Special Educational Needs

Mr. Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for Education (1) how many special educational needs tribunals have been heard to date; [30612]

(2) what proportion of special educational needs tribunals has related to parents' wishes to have their child educated in the independent or non-maintained sector; [30613]

(3) what is the total amount of public money diverted to the independent or non-maintained sector as a result of decisions of special educational needs tribunals; [30614]

(4) if she will provide an annual report on the outcomes of special educational needs tribunals. [30615]

Mr. Forth: I understand from the president of the special educational needs tribunal that 170 tribunal hearings have taken place.

The decisions of tribunals are entirely independent of the Department. I have therefore asked the president to write to the hon. Member about the questions relating to the independent and non-maintained sectors.

The president of the tribunal will provide an annual report to the Secretary of State, a copy of which will be placed in the Library.

Examination Results

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if she will list the number of 16-year-olds in each local education authority in England who have left school with fewer than five GCSE passes above C grade for each of the last seven years. [30734]

Mr. Forth: Information on school leavers is no longer collected by the Department. The attached table lists the percentage of 15-year-old pupils, at the start of the academic year, achieving fewer than five GCSE passes above grade C in maintained schools, including grant-maintained and special schools, in each local education authority area in England for the last three years.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many 16-year-olds in each London borough have left school with fewer than five GCSE passes above grade C for each of the last seven years. [30743]

Mr. Forth: Information on school leavers is no longer collected by the Department. The attached table lists the percentage of 15-year-old pupils, at the beginning of the academic year, achieving fewer than five GCSE passes above grade C in maintained schools, including grant maintained and special schools, in each London borough for the last three years. The available data on school leavers for earlier years were not robust enough to be analysed at the individual borough level.

Key Stages (Tests and Tasks)

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what was the total cost of producing, administering, marking and providing supply cover for the tests and tasks for key stages (a) 1, (b) 2 and (c) 3, in each year since 1990. [30733]

Mr. Forth: The information by financial year for development, printing and distributing the tests and tasks is as follows:

£ million

	Key stage 1	Key stage 2	Key stage 3
1989–90	1.9	—	1.8
1990–91	2.9	—	3.7
1991–92	2.5	0.01	3.8
1992–93	2.5	0.2	5.6
1993–94	2.2	2.9	6.5
1994–95	1.2	2.2	2.5
Total	13.2	5.3	23.9

The costs of external marking of the test scripts of pupils at key stages 2 and 3 in 1994–95 were £3.4 million and in 1995–96 an estimated £18.6 million. In addition, my Department is supporting 60 per cent. of the estimated £8 million costs of auditing the marking of the tests and tasks for key stage 1 in 1995–96.

I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave about supply cover costs on 6 June, Official Report, column 11.

Nursery Voucher Scheme

Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Education (1) when she intends to introduce the nursery voucher scheme; and what will be the level of allowances made to parents; [30811]

(2) what plans she has to ensure that all four year-olds have the opportunity of a place in a nursery under the Government's nursery voucher plan. [30787]

Mr. Forth: My right hon. Friend has been considering a range of options for implementing the Prime Minister's commitment to provide, over time, a pre-school place for every four-year-old whose parents wish to take it up. A voucher system is one option under consideration for funding the commitment. An announcement on the new policy will be made soon.

Funding Agency for Schools

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what guidelines are issued to the Funding Agency for Schools on declarations of members' interests. [30945]

Mr. Robin Squire: The Department wrote to the then chief executive-designate of the Funding Agency for Schools on 15 March 1994, requesting that the agency set up and maintain a register of members' interests. That register is available for public inspection at the agency's headquarters at Albion wharf, York.

Standard Assessment Tests

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what policies her Department has for assessing pupils of too low an academic standard to take the formal standard assessment test. [30644]

Mr. Forth: Teachers formally assess the school work of all seven, 11 and 14-year-olds in English, mathematics and science. Practical classroom-based national curriculum tasks are provided for teachers to administer where they feel it is appropriate.

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what representations she has received concerning standard assessment tests (a) in total and (b) from people in Nottinghamshire; and what proportion of these representations was critical of the test. [30626]

Mr. Forth: We do not have a breakdown of all representations received.

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what has been the total cost of administering the standard assessment tests for (a) seven-year-olds (b) 11-year-olds and (c) 14-year-olds. [30635]

Mr. Forth: The costs of developing, writing, printing and distributing the tests and tasks between 1989–90 to 1994–95 are as follows:

(a) seven-year-olds: £13.2 million

(b) 11-year-olds: £5.3 million

(c) 14-year-olds: £23.9 million.

Grant-Maintained Schools

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education (1) what are her Department's stipulations for a school to be considered for grant-maintained status; [30648]

(2) on how many occasions her Department's stipulations for a school applying for grant-maintained status have been bypassed; and which were the schools involved; [30640]

(3) in what instances a school applying for grant-maintained status can bypass any of the stipulations for grant-maintained status issued by her Department. [30634]

Mr. Robin Squire: Country and voluntary schools apply for grant-maintained status only where the results of a ballot of parents held in accordance with sections 28 to 30 of the Education Act 1993 shows a majority of votes cast in favour of seeking such status for the school. The governing bodies of such schools are required to publish proposals in accordance with section 32 of the Act. There is no provision for these statutory requirements to be waived. When considering applications for grant-maintained status, my right hon. Friend considers proposals on their individual merits, taking into account all relevant factors.

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education (1) how much is the total value of grants and bonuses awarded to the grant-maintained schools in (a) 1993–94 and (b) 1994–95; and what is the estimated budget for grants and bonuses to be awarded to grant-maintained schools in 1995–96; [30633]

(2) what is the amount that has been awarded in grants and bonuses to schools in Nottinghamshire that are grant-maintained. [30636]

Mr. Squire: Responsibility for the calculation of grants for grant-maintained schools has been a matter for the Funding Agency for Schools since April 1994. The FAS also holds information on grants for earlier years. I have asked the chairman of the Funding Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what representations she has received concerning grant-maintained status (a) in total and (b) from existing grant-maintained schools; and what proportion of these representations was critical of grant-maintained schools. [30625]

Mr. Squire: My right hon. Friend receives a wide variety of representations on this subject from many sources, including grant-maintained schools. No GM school has criticised grant-maintained status, nor suggested that it would wish to revert to its former status, through several have sought further improvements to the benefits that GM status brings.

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if she will make it her policy to establish a direct link between standard spending assessments and the common funding formula for grant- maintained schools. [29649]

Mr. Squire: The common funding formula already takes as its starting point the education standard spending assessment for the local authorities in which it operates. This is adjusted to give a total for secondary schools which is allocated through a simple formula to provide actual budgets for grant-maintained schools and notional budgets for LEA schools. Where a local education authority, through its scheme for the local management of schools, funds its own schools at levels higher than those implied by the CFF, the budgets of GM schools are increased by the same proportion. This link to LEA decisions was triggered in Gloucestershire in 1994–95, but not in 1995–96.

Mature Students Grants

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Education who is entitled to claim the mature students grant allowance; what plans she has to discontinue this allowance; and if she will make a statement. [30512]

Mr. Boswell: The older students' allowance is payable under the current Education (Mandatory Awards) Regulations 1994 as part of a means-tested mandatory award. Students who are aged 26 and over at the start of their course and who meet an earning threshold are eligible. Most students starting new courses from 1 September 1995 will not be eligible for the allowance but transitional arrangements will protect the position of students who were in full-time further or higher education prior to that date.

Advertising Agencies

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what has been the total amount spent on outside advertising agencies in her Department in each year since 1979 including 1995 to date. [30632]

Mr. Boswell: The expenditure figures for advertising, including press, television and radio by the Department for the financial years since 1979 are provided:

	£000
1979–80	224.9
1980–81	18.5
1981–82	164.4
1982–83	10.6
1983–84	16.2

1992–93	1,119.6
1993–94	1,442.2
1994–95	147.1

In the current financial year, 1995–96, the Department has not spent any money on advertising to date.

Schools (Funding)

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what representations she has received concerning the funding of schools for 1995–96 (a) in total and (b) from people in Nottinghamshire. [30647]

Mr. Robin Squire: The Department receives many letters and other representations about all aspects of school funding, some of which from Nottinghamshire.

School Meal Services

Sir Irvine Patnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if she will list in ascending order the difference between income and expenditure for school meal services for all metropolitan districts in each of the last seven years. [29985]

Mr. Robin Squire: The table gives the total net expenditure on the school catering service for all metropolitan districts from 1987–88 to 1993–94, the latest year for which figures are available. The figures are not necessarily comparable because over the seven years, returns were not received from all authorities.

[29912]

Mr. Robin Squire: The information requested is not available.

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many people have completed teacher training courses in 1994–95 and in each year since 1979 (a) nationally and (b) in Nottinghamshire.

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how much has been spent on publicity concerning teacher training in 1994–95 and in each year since 1979. [29910]

Mr. Squire: The teaching as a career—TASC—unit was established in 1987 with the objective to promote teaching as a career and provide information and advice on teaching and teacher training. The functions of the TASC unit were taken on by the Teacher Training Agency in October 1994. Total DFE expenditure on TASC, and expenditure on the information and promotional activities of the Teacher Training Agency, since April 1987 was as follows:

1987–88: £493,398

1988–89: £913,166

1989–90: £931,631

1990–91: £1,448,383

1991–92: £1,548,631

1992–93: £1,360,556

1993–94: £1,021,770

1994–95: £1,106,966

In addition, the Department, in conjunction with TASC, ran teacher recruitment advertising campaigns in 1990 and 1991. The expenditure on these campaigns was as follows:

1990–91: £2,199,900

1991–92: £2,383,700

Expenditure on publicity for teacher training before 1987 is not separately identifiable within the Department's total expenditure on publicity.

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what percentage of people who completed teacher training courses found teaching jobs (a) within the first six months of qualifying, (b) within a year of qualifying and (c) within 18 months of qualifying in 1994–95 and in each year since 1979. [29913]

Mr. Squire: Information is not available in the precise form required but estimates made from teacher's service details show the following:
Of those successfully completing courses of initial teacher training leading to qualified teacher status in England and Wales in the calendar year 1984, 76 per cent. were known to be in teaching service as at 31 March 1985 and 76 per cent. in service as at 31 March 1986. Of those completing training in the calendar year 1991, 78 per cent. were known to be in service as at March 1992 and 77 per cent. in service as at March 1993.

Teaching service includes both full-time and part-time service in any school in England and Wales plus full-time and some part-time service in public sector further and higher education in England and Wales but excluding the old university sector.

This is the earliest and most recent data available. Information for the intervening years could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many people have embarked on teacher training courses in 1994–95 and in each year since 1979 (a) nationally and (b) in Nottinghamshire. [29915]

Mr. Squire: The information requested is as follows. Comparable data prior to 1982–83 are not available.

Year	England and Wales	Nottinghamshire
1982–83	16,928	497
1983–84	16,218	481

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what is the total budget for teacher training in 1994–95; and what it is for each year since 1979. [29911]

Mr. Squire: Allocations by the Higher Education Funding Council for England in respect of courses of initial teacher training were as follows:

Academic year	Allocation £ million
1993–94	107.3
1994–95	155.9

In addition, Department for Education allocations to schools running the school centred initial teacher training scheme totalled £1.3 million for 1993–94, and £4.8 million for 1994–95.

These do not include the costs of fees, met for most students by a mandatory award, or student support for those on courses of initial teacher training.

Funding of higher education was brought under one body for the first time in 1992. Information for earlier years is not available in the form requested.

These figures do not include expenditure on the in-service training of teachers.

Teacher Redundancies

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many teachers have been made redundant during 1994–95 and in each year since 1979 (a) nationally, (b) in Nottinghamshire and (c) in Norfolk. [29917]

Mr. Robin Squire: Information on the number of teachers made redundant is not centrally held.

Teacher Recruitment

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what projects are currently being run by her Department which have the objective of recruiting new teachers. [29923]

Mr. Robin Squire: Responsibility for promoting teacher recruitment is now a matter for the Teacher Training Agency. However, the following three projects due to end within this financial year are still being funded by the Department.

Manchester university school of biological sciences—taster courses to encourage biochemistry undergraduates into teaching.

The Open university—the development of course materials for a distance learning PGCE in music.

Bradford and Ilkley community college—compact with local secondary schools to encourage ethnic minorities into teaching.

SCOTLAND

Edinburgh Royal Infirmary

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions his Department has had with representatives of the British Linen Bank Group relating to the development of the proposed new Edinburgh royal infirmary; to what extent those discussions have included the construction and the management of hospital facilities and hospital services; and what facilities and services are being considered. [27932]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Scottish Office officials have met representatives of a number of private sector financial institutions, including the British Linen bank, construction companies and other organisations to discuss private finance issues. No meetings have taken place with representatives of the British Linen Bank Group specifically to discuss the royal infirmary of Edinburgh. The briefing documents prepared by the royal infirmary of Edinburgh NHS trust and issued to interested parties describes the scheme as being for the design, building and financing of the new hospital facility, together with the operation of a range of non-clinical support services. Staff involved in providing clinical services will continue to be employed by the trust.

Executive Search Agencies

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the occasions on which his Department has employed executive search agencies to recruit for direct or indirect employment in each of the past five years, including for employment in agencies, trusts, quangos and other arms-length bodies which are funded by his Department; what was the value of each assignment; and if he will make a statement. [28564]

Mr. Lang: The occasions on which my Department employed agencies to conduct executive searches are set out. The value of individual contracts is a matter of commercial confidentiality, but the total cost was approximately £300,000. The list does not include occasions when such agencies have conducted open recruitment competitions without search on behalf of my Department.

My Department commissions executive searches when it considers that the particular post will be difficult to fill and where suitable candidates are likely to be in current employment and therefore may not be expected to respond to press advertisement of the open recruitment competition.

Floods

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment his Department has made of the aftermath of the floods in Paisley and Johnstone since February 1995, excluding the visits he and his Ministers paid to the area before then; what benchmark he has used to assess the effect to people's lives and the need for new flood prevention measures since the floods; how such assessments have involved or resulted in the consultation of flood victims; when he next plans to revisit the area to discuss the longer-term impact of flooding on the lives of people'; and if he will make a statement. [28571]

Sir Hector Monro: The effects of the floods have been full considered by the Scottish Office and by Ministers. However, the assessment of flood prevention needs in Paisley and Johnstone is essentially for Strathclyde regional council. An internal report by the council has concluded that it would not be practicable for it to undertake any further major flood prevention works. Indeed, the council has undertaken only one scheme in its 20 years' existence, despite the wide powers available under the Flood Prevention (Scotland) Act 1961 and the availability of Government grant.

For the Government's part, we have already proposed a number of measures to enhance the statutory and planning framework so that councils may take well-informed decisions on flooding matters in the light of local concerns and the public interest.

Glasgow Regeneration Alliance

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much funding has been given in each of the last three years to each of the local employment companies covered by the Glasgow regeneration alliance areas. [29278]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Funding for the local economic development companies in Glasgow comes from a variety of sources, including the local authorities, Glasgow Development Agency, urban programme and European structural funds. The information is not held centrally.

Devolution

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of States for Scotland what recent representations his Department has received in favour of (a) devolution and (b) regional parliaments; and if he will make a statement. [29626]

Mr. Lang: In the period 1 January 1995 to 31 May 1995 my Department has received 43 representations in favour of devolution and none in favour of regional parliaments.

Assisted Places Scheme

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list those schools which have participated in the assisted places scheme in the past five years, and the number of placements for each school per year. [29708]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information for the last five school sessions is as follows:

Charter Week

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what are the main events he is proposing for Charter Week; what is the total cost to public funds; and how many (a) civil servants and (b) other public officials will be playing a part. [30681]

Mr. Lang: The Scottish Court Service agency will publish information about their performance against service standards during 1994–95 and several health boards are to launch revised local charters during Charter Week. These events were anyway due to take place at this time and there is therefore no additional cost to public funds. Information on the numbers of civil servants and public officials participating in Charter Week is not available.

NHS (Private Sector Involvement)

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer of 29 March, Official Report, column 702, if he will make a statement indicating what specific provision within (a) Dundee Teaching Hospital NHS trust, (b) the Grampian Healthcare NHS trust, (c) the Law Hospital NHS trust, (d) the Hairmyres and Stonehouse NHS trust, (e) the Royal Infirmary of Edinburgh NHS trust, (f) the Western General Hospital NHS trust hospital, (g) the Greater Glasgow Community and Mental Health Services NHS trust and (h) the South Ayrshire Hospital NHS trust is being considered for private finance initiatives; what companies have been consulted on the possible provision of these facilities; and what is the value of the services being considered under the private finance initiative and the current position as regards the formal conclusion of contracts between the NHS trusts and the potential investor in the facilities. [29688]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 21 June 1995]: The following schemes are in progress at the trusts listed, each of which involves a private finance element.

Dundee Teaching Hospital NHS trust—equipment for the new accommodation at Ninewells hospitals into which services provided at Dundee royal infirmary will be transferred.

Grampian Healthcare NHS trust—the preparation of a proposal for Grampian health board to provide clinical facilities including GP beds in Stonehaven, which has been offered by the board to open competition.

Law hospital, Hairmyres and Stonehouse, and the Royal Infirmary of Edinburgh NHS trusts—provision of new facilities to replace the existing hospitals.

Western General Hospitals NHS trust—extensive new build, refurbishment and alterations on current site.

Greater Glasgow Community and Mental Health NHS trust—an inpatient facility for the acute mentally ill at Stobhill.

South Ayrshire Hospital NHS trust—the preparation of a proposal for Ayrshire and Arran health board to provide specified clinical facilities in East Ayrshire, which has been offered by the board to competition between Ayrshire trusts.

Four NHS trusts have advertised in the Official Journal of the European Communities seeking private sector partners and all have shortlisted, or are in the process of shortlisting, tenderers. The shortlist for the Royal Infirmary of Edinburgh NHS trust contains three consortia—BICC/BET/Royal Bank of Scotland; Laing/Miller Group/British Linen bank; Wimpey/Serco Services/Impreglio SpA, Morrison Construction. Greater Glasgow Community and Mental Health NHS trust consists of four consortia—British Linen bank/McAlpine/Serco; Royal Bank of Scotland/Balfour Beatty/Initial; Henry Boot/Quayle Munro/Trigon; Laing/Nikko bank. The Western General Hospital and Hairmyres and Stonehouse NHS trusts have not announced their shortlists. None of the schemes has yet reached the stage of concluding contracts. The value of the services will not be known until final proposals have been received from the consortia.

Crown Immunity

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list all areas within (a) his Department, (b) agencies under his Department's control and (c) organisations for which he has ministerial responsibility to which Crown immunity applies; what consideration he has given to removing this; and if he will make a statement. [28646]

Mr. Lang [holding answer 15 June 1995]: An Act of Parliament is presumed not to bind the Crown unless the contrary intention is clearly stated, or there is necessary implication that the Crown is to be bound. The Government's policy on Crown immunity—as set out in Cm 1599—"The Citizen's Charter—Raising the Standard"—is that Crown immunity is being progressively reduced, as legislative opportunities arise. In the meantime, Crown bodies are expected to behave as though they were bound by regulations.

Council Tax Appeals

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many appeals are outstanding in (a) Inverclyde, (b) Strathclyde and (c) Scotland as a whole in respect of the valuation of properties for council tax. [27311]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 13 June 1995]: The available information relates to all classes of proposal to change the valuation list made to assessors and subsequent appeals, and is available only for regions and for Scotland as a whole. At March 1995, the latest date for which information is available, there were 5,974 outstanding proposals/appeals lodged in Strathclyde and 14,422 in Scotland.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Live Animal Exports

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many sheep in a consignment exported from Shoreham on the Northern cruiser on 17 May were dead on arrival in Dieppe; what was the cause of death; how many sheep gave birth during the journey; how many sheep died during the unloading and how; whether any prosecutions are to be brought in respect of any sheep that died and any sheep that were transported contrary to the prohibition of the Welfare of Animals during Transport Order 1994 on the transportation of an animal which is likely to give birth during transport; and if he will make a statement. [27105]

Mrs. Browning: The French authorities have reported that two sheep were dead on arrival at Dieppe and that one gave birth during the journey. The Ministry is supporting the local authority in investigations into these matters.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what percentage of parliamentary questions, which would have been answered directly by him or his Ministers prior to the establishment of executive agencies, are now referred to the chief executive of such an agency. [28498]

Mr. Jack: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster on 21 June 1995, Official Report, column 241.

Agricultural Grants

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the mean, median and standard deviation for the length of time between receiving a claim and the payment of a claim for each agricultural grant handled by his Department. [29454]

Mr. Jack: The information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost. Targets for the payment of claims for grants and subsidies are set out in the Ministry's regional customer service standard "Commitment to Service". A revised edition was published in January 1995. For details of performance against targets, I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for Havant (Mr. Willetts) on 20 July 1994, Official Report, column 356.

Similar details on performance for 1994–95 will be announced later this year. I should emphasise that for many schemes Community rules prescribe dates for submission of applications and payment of eligible claims. These vary between individual schemes.

Privatisation

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list those parts of his Department or departmental agencies which were privatised without an in-house bid; if he will indicate the expertise which was absent in his Department or departmental agencies which prevented an in-house bid taking place; which future parts of his Department or departmental agencies he intends to privatise; and which of them do not have the necessary in-house expertise to mount an in-house bid. [29424]

Mr. Waldegrave: I refer the hon. Member to the replies given to my hon. Friends the Members for Darlington (Mr. Milburn) and for Barking (Ms Hodge) on 16 December 1994, Official Report, columns 867–68 and 8 June 1995, Official Report, columns 313–18 inclusive.

Market testing, strategic contracting out and efficiency review exercises either in process or yet to start cover information technology service provision from the information technology directorate; staff training; the management maintenance and operations of the fisheries research vessels at DFR Lowestoft; IT services—other than that provided by the ITD—HQ reprographic services; non-scientific services, CSL; national food survey; training services procured from ATB landbase; fisheries aerial surveillance; and the national diet and nutrition survey, with Department of Health. In addition, it is intended that some elements of the industry development press and industry relations and marketing directorate functions of the Meat and Livestock Commission will be market tested.

For the future it is not possible to predict in advance of recommendations following structural, strategic or management reviews which services or functions will be contracted out. Contracting out without an in-house bid can occur when my Department judges that the private sector is clearly better equipped to deliver a specific service, has a better understanding of market needs or has a capacity to invest in new technology. This has been true, for example, in some cases of information technology services provision. Where an activity may be relatively small and peripheral to my department's functions, a strategic decision to contract out could also be taken. Decisions over whether services are most effectively discharged in-house or contracted out are taken in light of one of my Department's stated aims-namely, to ensure the best use of internal resources in support of the Ministry's business.

Milk

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what has been the change of cost of milk to the milk processing industry since the introduction of Milk Marque; and what assessment he has made of the change in employment in the dairy and milk processing industry since then. [29513]

Mr. Jack: It is not possible to make a general comparison between the price of milk for processing under the old and new milk marketing arrangements because of the different selling systems involved and the variety of contracts now on offer by Milk Marque. Some companies have announced restructuring plans since 1 November 1994, but most of the job losses are in the bottling and distribution of liquid milk where the principal factor is the intense competition from supermarkets rather than deregulation.

Advisory Committees

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the members of (a) the Advisory Committee on Novel Foods, (b) the Advisory Committee on Pesticides and (c) the Food Advisory Committee together with their current employers. [29996]

Intervention Grain

Mr. Gale: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps Her Majesty's Government are taking to ensure that Spanish pig farmers are not being given a competitive advantage through the purchase of cut-price barley from intervention stocks. [30554]

Mr. Jack: The sale of United Kingdom intervention barley to Spain is one of a package of similar special measures intended to alleviate feed grain shortages caused by the drought in this region. The UK and certain other member states remain strongly opposed to the supply of subsidised grain below the prevailing market or intervention price but were overruled on this occasion.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer of 21 March, Official Report, column 157, if he will list all those occasions during the current parliamentary Session when he did not give prior warning to hon. Members. [30748]

Mr. Waldegrave: I always do my best to give prior warning to hon. Members when I visit their constituencies in an official capacity.

Meat Levies

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what would be the total revenue raised for the Meat and Livestock Commission if animal exporters had paid the current levies on each animal exported in (a) 1993 and (b) 1994. [31014]

Mr. Jack: Total revenue due to the MLC from levies from all sources, including exported live animals, for the years ending 31 March 1993 and 1994 was £29 million and £29.9 million.

Early Retirement

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer of 3 May, Official Report, column 226, if he will provide comparable details on civil service early retirement packages on grounds of inefficiency. [29285]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 19 June 1995]: Inefficiency is a ground for dismissal. An immediate lump sum payment of up to two years' salary can be made in specific cases where a Department judges payment of compensation to be appropriate. Where compensation is agreed and the person dismissed is over age 55, this may be forgone in favour of immediate payment of the accrued superannuation benefits which would otherwise be preserved for payment at retiring age. There have been 23 departures on inefficiency grounds in the past five years. Details for the Ministry and its agencies are as follows:

	Annual compensation payment to age 60 (rate pa)	Superannuation lump sum	Lump sum compensation payment £	Compensation in lieu of notice £
1990–91	nil	nil	8,708.79	nil
1991–92	nil	nil	45,393.76	nil
1992–93	nil	nil	nil	nil
1993–94	nil	nil	51,316.94	11,969
1994–95	nil	nil	96,677.28	663.6

Fishing Subsidies

Mr. Key: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much subsidy has been given to the United Kingdom in each of the last three years from the European Community for fishing; and what is the forecast of funding to the United Kingdom for each of the next three years. [28163]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 19 June 1995]: As explained in my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for South Hams (Mr. Steen) on 6 June, Official Report, column 6, changes have taken place in the way these subsidies are provided. Prior to 1994, European aid to the fishing industry was financed under a variety of different sections of the EC budget and it is not possible to identify separately all the expenditure relating to fishing. If comparable figures are extracted from the same EC sources as my earlier reply then the statistics for UK would be as set out in table 1. However, we have more detailed information from departmental records for decommissioning of vessels, promotion activities, marketing and processing, vessel grants, market support—calender year—and aid to sea fisheries committees for enforcement and this is set out in the upper part of table 2. From 1994 onwards, the financial instrument for fisheries guidance came into force, amalgamating the various fisheries structures and marketing and processing regulations. The figures in the lower part of table 2 shown the amount of Community funding available for the investment set out in the relevant UK programmes for objective 1, 5(a) and PESCA. They include measures for the benefit of aquaculture. An additional £2.4 million—1995–96—and £2.2 million—1996–97 and 1997–98—is forecast for sea fisheries committee enforcement, and market support measures.

Table 1: Elements of European Community financial assistance to the UK fishing industry

WALES

Earnings (Hotels)

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his estiamte of the average wage in the hotel industry in Wales. [29630]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: There are no reliable estimates of average wage rates in the hotel industry in Wales.

Examination Papers

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the cost expressed in present day prices of the publication of examination papers in GCSE and pre-GCSE equivalent examinations in (a) 1964, (b) 1974, (c) 1984 and (d) 1994; and what assessment he has made of the level of reading age required to be able to understand the questions set. [29595]

Mr. Richards: Comparative publication costs for GCSE and equivalent pre-GCSE examinations for the relevant periods are not available; the Joint Council for GCSE Examination Groups commissioned research into reading age standards for GCSE papers in 1991. The findings were considered in the development of subsequent GCSE examination papers.

Gipsy Representations

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what recent representations he has received from local authorities and from hospital trusts concerning gipsies; and if he will make a statement. [29636]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: I have received a number of letters from Clwyd county council about gipsy sites in Clwyd. No representations have been received from hospital trusts.

Mental Hospital Discharges

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many people were discharged from mental hospitals in each of the last 10 years. [29633]

Mr. Richards: The number[1] of discharges—including deaths—from mental illness hospitals and mental illness units within other hospitals are as follows:

	Number
1984	13,111
1985	14,207
1986	13,825
1987	13,702
1988	14,080
1989	14,479
1990	14,668
1991–92	16,236
1992–93	16,342
1993–94	17,006

Data prior to 1991–92 is not strictly comparable with later years, since the data collection system changed on 1 April 1991.

[1]It should be noted that the data relates to discharges and deaths during the year and not to individual patients; patients discharged more than once during the year will therefore be included in the data upon each discharge.

Wepre CP School

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what measures he will take to ensure enhanced staffing at the Wepre CP schools language unit; and if he will make a statement. [30168]

Mr. Richards: Staffing at the language unit is a matter for the local education authority.

Wrexham–Birkenhead Railway

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what proposals he has for discussions with Regional Railways concerning the improved service on the Wrexham–Birkenhead line; and if he will make a statement. [30167]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Welsh Office officials discussed this railway line when they met the director of Regional Railways (North West) on 15 June. Regional Railways has no plans to change the service on this line.

Schools Inspections

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many HM inspectorate inspections were made in (a) 1991 and (b) 1994 of (i) high schools and (ii) primary/infant schools for each local education authority area. [30169]

Mr. Richards: This is a matter for Her Majesty's chief inspector to deal with and I have arranged for him to write to the hon. Member.

Environmental Industries Commission

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to meet the Environmental Industries Commission; and what proportion of United Kingdom exports of environmental technologies and services he assesses can be met by Welsh companies. [30521]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: There are no plans to meet representatives of the organisation known as the Environmental Industries Commission Ltd. Overseas markets for environmental technologies and services are important to Welsh companies in that sector. However it is impossible to say what proportion of United Kingdom exports can be met by Welsh companies since the size of the market and an individual company's capacity to export will vary from day to day.

Rhondda Borough Council

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he received a copy of the Audit Commission report entitled "Rhondda Borough Council: Audit of Accounts of 1993–94 Renovation Grants—Report of Investigations into the Operation and Management of the System and on the Results of Investigations into Alleged Irregularities"; and what action he plans to take. [30616]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The Welsh Office received a copy of the report from Rhondda borough council on 22 June.

Under part VIII of the Local Government and Housing Act 1989, local authorities are charged with the administration of the renovation grants scheme. It is for the council to act on the findings of the district auditor's report and to implement the agreed recommendations. Papers have been passed to the police. The Welsh Office will keep in close touch with the district auditor about any implications for the payment of Government subsidy.

Sheep Dips

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what advice his Department has issued on the safe use by farmers and farm workers of organophosphorus sheep dips. [30962]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The Government have issued numerous press releases and guides for information, the latest being the revised booklet on sheep dipping published in March this year.

Mr. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what guidance his Department has issued to Welsh farmers about the use of pyrethoid based sheep dips in preference to organophosphorus sheep dips. [30964]

Mr. Jones: The current booklet giving advice on sheep dipping provides information on the reasons for treating sheep and which licensed products are effective against particular parasites. The information includes alternatives to organophosphorus dips, but no specific advice has been given as this is a matter for individual farmers to decide in the light of their particular circumstances and in consultation with their veterinary adviser.

Mr. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what research his Department has undertaken in the last five years into possible links between organophosphorus sheep dips and (a) physical and (b) mental health problems; and what was the outcome. [30963]

Mr. Jones: Government agricultural research and development relating to Wales and England is undertaken by the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food. The Welsh Office discusses research and development programmes with the Ministry of Agriculture before they are implemented. The Government have accepted the recommendation of the veterinary products committee for epidemiological studies into possible long-term effects of using organophosphorus sheep dips, and proposals for studies are currently being considered.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what research his Department has undertaken in the last five years evaluating the effectiveness of protective clothing worn by farmers and farm workers when using organophosphorus sheep dips; and what was the outcome. [30961]

Mr. Jones: Research on the effectiveness of protective clothing used whilst dipping sheep has been undertaken by the Health and Safety Executive. It was found that where protective clothing was worn it reduced exposure very substantially in comparison with situations where it was not worn. Information on the use and care of protective clothing is set out in the Government's guidance on sheep dipping.

Suicides

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many farmers and farm workers have committed suicide in Wales in each of the last 10 years. [30983]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The information requested is shown in the following table.

Deaths of farmers and farm workers recorded as suicide

	Farmers	Farm workers
1983	12	2
1984	12	3
1985	6	6
1986	17	2
1988	9	2
1989	7	0
1990	10	1
1991	8	2
1993[1]	9	2

[1] In 1993 Office of Population Censuses and Surveys made changes to the coding and data collection system which may have affected the numbers of deaths for many causes, including suicides.

School Leavers

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many young people in Wales who left school at 16 years in 1994 are currently (a) registered for vocational training courses, (b) in employment and (c) receiving bridging allowance. [31020]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The information requested is not collected centrally.

ENVIRONMENT

Offshore Installations

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what factors led to the United Kingdom signing the United Nations law of the sea convention in relation to the abandonment of offshore oil and gas installations. [28924]

Mr. Atkins: The United Kingdom did not sign the United Nations convention on the law of the sea. Part XI—on mining the deep seabed—contained provisions unacceptable to the United Kingdom and most other industrialised states. An agreement adopted in July 1994 resolved these problems before the convention entered into force in November 1994. My hon. Friend the Member for Morecambe and Lunesdale (Sir M. Lennox-Boyd) announced to the House on 20 July 1994 the United Kingdom's intention to accede to the convention. The provisions of the convention which deal with artificial islands, installations and structures on the continental shelf are consistent with the policies and legislation of the United Kingdom.

Yorkshire Dales National Park (Quarrying)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment what representations he has received from the Council for National Parks and others concerning his decisions not to call in the planning application to extend quarrying at Swinden in the Yorkshire Dales national park. [30379]

Sir Paul Beresford: To date, no representations has been received from the Council for National Parks concerning the Secretary of State's decision not to call in this planning application. Two representations expressing concern about the decision have been received from members of the public.

Planning Inquiries

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when planning inquiries Nos. N/P/R0715/219/94/5 and N/P/B2925/174/94/1 are expected to conclude. [30037]

Sir Paul Beresford: The public inquiry into the Berwick Hills project in Middlesborough—Ref No. N/P/R0715/219/94/5—was held in September 1994. The inspector's report was received in January 1995 and is under consideration. It is hoped to issue a decision in mid-July.

The public inquiry into the proposed superstore at Fewsters depot, Hexham—Ref No. N/P/B2925/174/94/1—was held in October 1994. The inspector's report was received in December 1994 and is under consideration. It is hoped to issue a decision this month.

Local Government Ombudsman

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer of 19 June, column 132, how many representations he has received since 1 January 1994 (a) asserting that the local government ombudsman service is no longer needed and (b) asserting that it works unsatisfactorily. [30270]

Mr. Curry: Since 1 January 1994 we have received more than 200 written representations expressing some dissatisfaction about the operation of the local government ombudsman service, including some 20 questioning the need for the service.

Recycled Aggregate

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the Government's policy in respect of substituting recycled aggregate for newly quarried material. [30431]

Sir Paul Beresford: The Government's policy on the use of secondary and recycled materials in place of primary aggregates is set out in minerals planning guidance note 6—MPG6—on aggregates provision in England. This explains that recycling is a key policy in pursuance of sustainable development, and sets targets—40 million tonnes per year by 2001 and 55 million tonnes per year by 2006—for the increased use of recycled material in the construction industry.

Police Authorities

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will end the capping of police authorities for the year 1996–97. [30257]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: I shall consider capping criteria for 1996–97 in the context of decisions on next year's local government finance settlement.

Severn Trent Water

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made as to the extent to which savings made by Severn Trent Water plc are being proportionally passed on to consumers in terms of prices; and if he will make a statement. [30263]

Mr. Atkins: This is a matter for the Director General of Water Services, who has published his views on the sharing of benefits from greater efficiency by the water companies.

Right-to-buy Scheme

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much money has been spent by his Department advertising the right-to-buy scheme; and how many properties have been purchased under the scheme in each of the last 10 years. [30737]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: The information requested on the costs of advertising the right-to-buy scheme—including the costs of printing booklets, leaflets and posters—is as follows:

Financial year	£ thousands
1984–85	1,341
1985–86	266

1992–93	972
1993–94	321

The numbers of properties purchased under the scheme is as follows:

1993	41,248	180	666	42,094
1994	43,116	45	831	43,992

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many properties purchased from local authorities under right to buy have been for sale for over 18 months. [30736]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: This information is not available.

Homelessness

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what proportion of all new secure local authority lettings has been allocated to households accepted as homeless under part III of the Housing Act 1985 in each year since 1985; [30526]

(2) what proportion of all new housing association lettings has been allocated to households accepted as homeless under part III of the Housing Act 1985 in each year since 1985. [30527]

Mr. Curry: The available information for England, which relates to financial years, is given in the table:

	New secure local authority lettings		Housing association lettings (excluding transfers)[1]

Mrs. Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what proportion of repossessed owner-occupiers was accepted by local authorities for permanent rehousing under part III of the Housing Act 1985 in the last 12 months for which figures are available. [30529]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: The data provided by local authorities on the numbers of households for which they accept responsibility to secure permanent accommodation accepted under the homelessness provisions of the Housing Act 1985 include information on the main reason for the homeless households' loss of their last settled home. Eight per cent.—10,230—of households accepted in England in the 12 months ending March 1995 were as a result of mortgage arrears; cases where the mortgage arrears led to repossession are not separately identified.

Mrs. Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what proportion of new lettings by private landlords in the most recent 12 months for which figures are available would have been of suitable size and rent for the average household accepted as homeless by local authorities under part III of the Housing Act 1985. [30531]

Mr. Jones: The size and composition of households accepted as homeless are not recorded centrally, nor is the rent they could afford unaided. The rents of households on low incomes, however, can be met by housing benefit.

The most recent figures available are for 1993–94, when about half of all new lettings by private landlords were accessible to the public and in self contained accommodation with three or more rooms—including bedrooms.

These estimates are from the 1993–94 survey of English housing. Like all estimates from sample surveys, they are subject to sampling error.

Mrs. Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what analysis with regard to any additional expenditure local authorities may incur in implementing and administrating the proposed new duties towards homeless people as announced by the Minister for Housing on 18 July 1994, Official Report, columns 25–34 and if he will place this information in the Library. [30528]

Mr. Jones: In his statement to the House last July, Official Report, columns 25–34, the then Minister for Housing, my right hon. Friend the Member for Ealing, Acton (Sir G. Young), said that the Government estimated that the cost of the proposals for reform of the homelessness legislation would be broadly neutral, although it would depend on the timing of legislation and its interpretation. We are still analysing the likely financial effects of the proposals.

Mrs. Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many submissions he has received from private landlords in response to (a) the consultation paper "Access to Local Authority and Housing Association Tenancies" published in January 1994 and (b) announcement on the proposed arrangements for homeless people by the Minister for Housing on 18 July 1994 Official Report, columns 25–34, and what percentage was (i) in support and (ii) opposed to the proposal that homeless households should be rehoused in the private sector. [30530]

Mr. Jones: Nine responses to the consultation paper were classified as being from private landlords. Three of these were supportive of our proposal that local authorities could discharge their duty by placing homeless households directly with private sector landlords. Correspondence about the 18 July 1994 announcement was not recorded separately from general correspondence.

Mrs. Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what proportion of homeless applicants has been accepted for permanent housing by local authorities under the provisions of part III of the Housing Act 1985 in each year since 1985. [30525]

Mr. Curry: The information requested is not available. Data are collected from local authorities on applications/inquiries made but the data areas not reported on a common basis—they reflect differing local administrative practices—and cannot, therefore, be used for national or regional estimates of applications/inquiries.

Preston Farm, Stockton-on-Tees

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will estimate how many people now work on Teesside development corporation's Preston farm site in Stockton-on-Tees. [30649]

Sir Paul Beresford: It is estimated that 1,400 people now work on the Preston farm site.

Cash Incentive Schemes

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much money has been made available to each London borough to operate the tenants' cash incentive scheme in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [30739]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: The table provides information on the supplementary credit approvals issued to local authorities in London during this period. No SCAs were issued in 1993–94. With the approval of the Secretary of State, local authorities may also use their own resources to fund cash incentive schemes.

In the period 1989–90 to 1993–94 the cash incentive scheme has created over 6,000 vacancies for reletting in London and has enabled the same number of London households to buy their own home.

National Park Authorities

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many responses he has had in relation to his consultation on a proposed amendment to the membership of national park authorities as currently proposed in the Environment Bill [Lords]; if he will list those organisations that responded; and if he will list those who supported the proposed amendment and those who did not.

Mr. Atkins: Responses received by my Department up to 23 June 1995 have been deposited in the Library of the House, except for those where respondents indicated that they should not be made publicly available.

United Nations Environment Programme

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Finchley (Mr Booth), Official Report, 15 June, columns 612-13, if he will place in the Library a copy of the United Nations Environment Programme's refocused work priorities; and if he will arrange for copies of other countries' submissions to the Commission on Sustainable Development to be placed in the Library. [31060]

Mr. Atkins: I have arranged for copies of the United Nations Environment Programme's refocused programme of work to be placed in the Library.

The Department does not as a matter of course receive copies of other countries' reports to the Commission on Sustainable Development. However, I have arranged for copies of a matrix summary produced by CSD to be placed in the Library. The summary covers the reports of 44 countries, which were received in time to be included, on the thematic issues being reviewed at this year's CSD session

Local Authority Housing

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish an analysis showing the cash sum received by a local authority and the effects on its (a) capital receipts and (b) total borrowing if a local authority were to repurchase a local authority leasehold property valued at (i) £30,000 in 1986 or (ii) £20,000 in 1982 and sold at full discount, and it is repurchased for (1) the original sale price or (2) the original sale price uprated in line with inflation. [30790]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: There will be no implications for capital receipts whether the flat is repurchased at the original sale price or the original sale price uprated in line with inflation.

The expenditure on repurchasing property will be capital expenditure for the purposes of part IV of the Local Government and Housing Act 1989. Capital expenditure may be financed out of credit approvals, usable capital receipts or revenue.

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement listing the construction types of local authority leasehold properties which are not normally mortgageable under current market conditions; and if he will estimate the total number of such properties which have been sold under right-to-buy legislation and voluntary sales by local authorities. [30792]

Mr. Jones: Decisions on mortgage lending are for the commercial judgment of, and vary between, individual lenders.

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will place in the Library a copy of all the responses received to the consultation on the leasehold exchange scheme and the extension of mortgage indemnified by local authorities. [30794]

Mr. Jones: I will place a list of respondents in the House Library. Copies of individual responses can be obtained from the Department of the Environment central library.

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of the number of council leaseholders who will be eligible for assistance under (a) the leasehold exchange scheme and (b) the extended powers of local authorities to issue mortgage indemnities. [30791]

Mr. Jones: (a) Research carried out for my Department in 1994 showed that, of 168,000 leaseholders who had bought council flats, under 2 per cent. had difficulty in reselling. The number eligible for the exchange sale scheme will depend on how many people meet the criteria set out in the regulations which were laid before Parliament on 19 June.

(b) Mortgage indemnities are designed to facilitate lending in areas where lenders are otherwise reluctant to operate. It is for each authority to decide in the light of the individual circumstances of each case whether a mortgage indemnity would be appropriate.

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what estimate he has made of the average mortgage which will be required by a council leaseholder seeking to take advantage of the leasehold exchange scheme. [30793]

Mr. Jones: None. This would depend on a wide range of factors including individual leaseholders circumstances and the arrangement made between them and their local authorities.

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what regulations exist limiting total value of loans which can be identified by a local authority; what estimate he has made of the total value of loans indemnified by local authorities; and what assessment he has made of the extent to which local authorities' ability to extend mortgage indemnities will be restricted by the level of their existing indemnities on loans for those and other purposes. [30795]

Mr. Jones: There are no regulations limiting the total value of loans which can be indemnified by a local authority under section 442 of the Housing Act 1985. Estimates based on local authorities' returns to my Department indicate that in the period 1 April 1986 to 31 December 1994, local authorities entered into indemnity agreements with a total value of £48 million in respect of over 2,600 properties, and that in the same period some 90 agreements with a total value of just under £1 million were invoked. There is no obvious reason why local authorities' ability to enter into further indemnity agreements should be restricted by the level of existing agreements.

Sustainable Development

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the latest meeting of the United Kingdom round table on sustainable development.

Mr. Gummer: The third meeting of the UK round table was held on 15 June under the co-chairmanship of myself and Professor Sir Richard Southwood. The round table focused on transport, energy and mechanisms to secure environmental improvements. It concentrated on obstacles to sustainability and how these could be removed.

The round table decided to launch five projects:

i. defining a sustainable transport sector. Charles Secrett of Friends of the Earth will take the lead in preparing a definition, taking account of environmental, economic and social factors;

ii. a freight study. Roderick Paul, Chairman of the CBI's Environment Committee, will chair a working party looking at minimising freight journeys and where goods are transported, how to limit the environmental impact;

iii. a city-region project. A city or large town will be chosen as a demonstration project. The round table will work with local interests to devise and implement proposals to reduce traffic. Work will be steered by a group chaired by Professor Sir Richard Southwood, co-chairman of the round table;

iv. competition in energy supply. A round table subgroup, chaired by Barbara Young, chief executive of RSPB, will examine how the competitive market for the supply of gas and electricity can deliver objectives of sustainable development;

v. environmental auditing. A group chaired by the hon. Sara Morrison, a director of GEC, will carry out a study to identify, and assess the extent of best practice.

Proposed Environment Agency

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what progress is being made on the boundaries to be adopted by the proposed environment agency. [31199]

Mr. Atkins: The Environment Agency Advisory Committee has now submitted recommendations to Ministers on the boundaries of the agency. Copies of the recommendations have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses. I will announce shortly the Government's decision on EAAC's recommendations.

Brent Spar

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list, for the period January 1991 to June 1995, all meetings held and all correspondence or other documentation received or sent between Ministers or officials in his Department with any of the Royal Dutch/Shell group of companies or any of its subsidiaries, including the Shell Petroleum Co. Ltd. UK, in which options for the future of the Brent Spar installation were mentioned, giving for each separate meeting or documentation (a) the date on which the meeting was held, the correspondence or documentation received or correspondence or documentation sent, (b) a full list of attendees at each meeting or authors and recipients of the correspondence or documentation, and (c) the topics discussed at the meeting or title and nature of the correspondence or documentation; and if he will place copies of each piece of correspondence or documentation in the Library. [31002]

Mr. Gummer: Since the statutory responsibilities for the Government decisions on the disposal of the Brent Spar lie elsewhere, my Department was not involved directly in exchanges with Royal Dutch Shell or its subsidiaries. However, a representative of Shell UK saw the head of the UK delegation to the preparatory meetings for the North sea conference on 2 June, immediately before that conference, to explain Shell's views and gave him copies of some papers which Shell had made public.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment at what time and date and by what method Ministers or officials in his Department were first made aware of the decision by Shell UK to abandon plans to dispose of the Brent Spar installation by deepwater disposal. [31005]

Mr. Gummer: My office first learned of the decision of Shell UK from a telephone call followed by a facsimile from the company of their press release in the afternoon of Tuesday 20 June. My office immediately informed me.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list, for the period January 1991 to June 1995, all meetings held and all correspondence or other documentation received or sent between Ministers or officials in his Department and Ministers or other representatives of other foreign Governments in which options for the future of the Brent Spar installation were mentioned, giving for each separate meeting or documentation (a) the date on which the meeting was held, the correspondence or documentation received or correspondence or documentation sent, (b) a full list of attendees at each meeting or authors and recipients of the correspondence or documentation, and (c) the topics discussed at the meeting or title and nature of the correspondence or documentation; and if he will place copies of each piece of correspondence or documentation in the Library. [31003]

Mr. Gummer: Communications between Governments are conventionally sent and received in confidence.

Prisoners of War

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Prime Minister what was his response to the delegation which met him on 21 June concerning former British prisoners of war held by the Japanese; and if he will make a statement. [31135]

Mr. Newton: I have been asked to reply.

My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister expressed his very great sympathy for all that the former prisoners had endured. He agreed to ask his Japanese counterpart if he would meet representatives of the former prisoners when they visit Japan next month.

Mr. Newton: I have been asked to reply.

My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister discussed nuclear testing with President Chirac on other occasions. It was not considered necessary to do so at Halifax.

TRANSPORT

East London River Crossing

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how he proposes to develop the options for additional Thames crossings in east London identified in the Thames gateway planning framework. [31492]

Mr. Norris: A Consultation Document, "River Crossings to the East of Tower Bridge", was published today by the Government office for London. This seeks the widest possible views on the form and priorities for crossings, with the aim of identifying buildable schemes which have a broad degree of consensus.

I will place a copy in the Libraries of both Houses.

Transport Council

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, what was the result of the Transport Council in Luxembourg on 19th and 20th June. [31493]

Dr. Mawhinney: The Transport Council met in Luxembourg on 19 and 20 June. My right hon. Friend the former Secretary of State for Wales and I represented the United Kingdom.

The Council adopted conclusions on aviation relations with the USA. At my insistence, these require the Commission to carry out a thorough analysis to show whether a better result for all member states could realistically be produced by negotiations at Community level and to define the common interest.

The Council reached a common position on guidelines on trans-European networks in transport and on a draft directive on interoperability of the high-speed train network. In the case of the guidelines on trans-European networks, a unanimous decision was required in the face of objections by the Commission.

The Council reached a common position on a regulation on implementation of the international safety management code on the safety and management of vessels. The regulation provides for early mandatory application of the code from 1 July 1996 to all roll-on roll-off passenger ferries using EU ports.

The Council adopted a directive on the collection of harmonised statistics on the carriage of passengers and goods by sea and on vessel movements.

The Council held an orientation debate on alternative proposals for more effective recording equipment in road vehicles, in the light of member states' commitment to improve the enforcement of legislation on drivers' hours. At the end of an inconclusive debate the presidency called for further work to be carried out to assess the relative costs and benefits of the alternatives.

The Council discussed Commission proposals to relax the constraints on the hire of road haulage vehicles for international operations. Most member states saw substantial difficulties in the proposals as they stand. The Committee of Permanent Representatives was invited to carry out further work on them in the light of the Council's discussion.

The Transport Commissioner, Mr. Kinnock, made an interim progress report on the Commission's exploratory talks with Hungary, Romania and Bulgaria on possible road transport agreements with the Community.

The Council discussed proposals by the Commission for liberalisation of ground handling services at Community airports. It agreed that the Committee of Permanent Representatives should continue work on the proposal in the light of the debate.

The Council also agreed conclusions on research in the transport sector, on the mutual acceptance of aviation products and on maritime relations with third countries. A resolution was adopted calling for further work on the development of telematics and automatic tolling systems for use in road transport.

Marine Safety

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 15 June, Official Report, column 618, what is the estimated time necessary for full evacuation in a real emergency from The Viking. [30301]

Mr. Norris [holding answer 26 June 1995]: This is an operational matter for the Marine Safety Agency. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from R. M. Bradley to Mr. Paul Flynn, dated 27 June 1995:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your Question about the estimated time to carry out a full evacuation in a real emergency from the roll on-roll off passenger ferry "The Viking".

The vessel, now understood to be named "Peder Olsen", is not on the United Kingdom Register; the information requested is not, therefore, available. I can confirm, however, that agreed international provisions require the evacuation of all personnel to be accomplished within 30 minutes.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the estimated time for evacuation from a roll-on roll-off ferry with carrying (a) 600, (b) 650 and (c) 700 passengers. [30233]

Mr. Norris [holding answer 26 June 1995]: This is an operational matter for the Marine Safety Agency. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from R. M. Bradley to Mr. Paul Flynn, dated 27 June 1995:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your Question about the estimated time for evacuation from a roll on-roll off ferry carrying 600, 650 and 700 passengers.

I would refer you to the answer given on 9 May in a written reply to your Question reference PQ 1649/94/95. It is a requirement that all persons onboard a vessel could be evacuated within 30 minutes.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the estimated time for evacuation from the CONDOR 11 catamaran when at full capacity; and what is the evacuation procedure. [30234]

Mr. Norris [holding answer 26 June 1995]: This is an operational matter for the Marine Safety Agency. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from R. M. Bradley to Mr. Paul Flynn, dated 27 June 1995:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your Question about evacuation from the catamaran CONDOR 11.

The CONDOR 11 is provided with marine evacuation systems. Following a decision to abandon ship, passengers will be directed to use these to enter the life-rafts. The estimated time for evacuation of all personnel is 12 minutes.

Motorway Congestion

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what is his Department's policy on restricting access to any motorway during episodes of traffic congestion; to which motorways this policy has been applied in practice in the last six months; and whether it is his intention to extend such a policy to the M25; [30657]

(2) what is his Department's policy on restricting access to the M5 during episodes of traffic congestion; on how many occasions restrictions have been necessary in the last six months; and if he will list the junction numbers of the entry points which have been closed on each of the last three occasions. [30658]

Mr. Watts: These are operational matters for the Highways Agency. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. Michael Meacher, dated 27 June 1995:

The Minister for Railways and Roads, Mr. John Watts, has asked me to reply to your Parliamentary Questions asking about policy on restricting access to motorways during episodes of traffic congestion.

My Department has no general policy of restricting access to motorways during episodes of traffic congestion. The police, who are responsible for the day to day operation of motorways, may control access from time to time, particularly to enable them to deal more effectively with the aftermath of accidents and incidents.

A system of "ramp metering" as introduced on the southbound entry slip road to the M6 at junction 10 in 1986, and has since been extended to cover the northbound entry slips at junction 10, both entry slips at junction 9, and the southbound entry slips at junctions 5 and 7. Traffic signals control the rate at which traffic enters the motorway to smooth flows at peak periods.

The southbound entry slip road at junction 16 on the M5 has been closed since mid-April because of major maintenance. It is due to reopen within the next two weeks. Appropriate diversion routes are in place.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) how many scientists were directly employed by the ODA in each year since 1983; [29864]

(2) how many qualified scientists there are in each grade in the Overseas Development Administration. [30217]

TREASURY

Mortgage Tax Relief

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what would be the value of the £30,000 mortgage tax relief if it had been increased in line with inflation from the time of its inception. [29638]

Sir George Young: As a result of lower mortgage interest rates the average mortgage holder is over £130 a month better off than five years ago. The £30,000 limit on mortgage interest relief was introduced in 1983–84. If this limit had been indexed in line with the change in the retail prices index, the limit for 1995–96 would be £53,000.

Inflation

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer why he has decided to drop the Government's previous commitment to aim for a long-term rate of inflation of 2 per cent. or less. [30003]

Mr. Nelson: The Government's commitment to permanently low inflation is unchanged. In his Mansion House speech on 14 June my right hon. and learned Friend the Chancellor laid down precise guidelines for the day to day operation of policy. Interest rates will be set consistently to achieve inflation of 2½ per cent. or less, which should ensure that inflation will remain within the range 1 to 4 per cent. This would put us on course to achieve one of the best performances in Europe.

Council Tax

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what prior information he was given about the appeal by the Inland Revenue on the separate assessment for council tax purposes of annexes of houses set aside for elderly relatives; if the appeal was undertaken with his approval; what action he proposes to take as a result; and if he will make a statement. [30021]

Mr. Nelson [holding answer 22 June 1995]: Officials of the Valuation Office Agency briefed me on this issue earlier in the year. It is for the VOA and its legal advisers to consider whether to appeal to the High Court in council tax cases and the chief executive decided to do so in these cases.

The Government will study the full text of the judgment as soon as it is available, in order to decide what action may be necessary. Our current understanding is that it affects only a small number of cases where there is an unresolved dispute as to whether a property contains one dwelling or more than one dwelling for council tax purposes. The ruling, as we understand it pending full examination of the transcript, does not mean that thousands of families caring for elderly relatives are likely to face additional back-dated council tax bills. The High Court has not said that either annexes generally or the particular annexes which were the subject of these cases are liable to separate council tax. It has merely said that the valuation tribunals concerned took irrelevant factors into account in taking their decisions and has remitted the cases to the tribunals for reconsideration.

The Government do not believe, and the judgment does not appear to suggest, that families should be penalised for sharing their home with an elderly relative or relatives.

Housing Market and Retail Sales

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what studies his Department has carried out on the effect on retail sales of (a) an upturn, (b) a standstill and (c) a fall in the housing market. [30417]

Mr. Nelson: Treasury officials frequently review evidence on the relationship between consumer spending and real house prices. Most studies show a positive association, not least because factors such as actual and expected income and interest rates tend to drive both in the same direction.

Gilt-edged Stock

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will consider extending the consultation period for the recent proposals to change the taxation of gilt-edged stock. [31248]

Sir George Young: We considered the timetable for consultation very carefully before announcing the proposals in the Revenue's consultative document, as my foreword makes clear. We concluded that the period proposed struck the best available balance between the need to allow scope for consultation and to minimise uncertainly. That remains our view.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to bring proposals to the House in relation to the reform of taxation of gilt-edged stock. [31247]

Sir George Young: My hon. Friend the Minister of State announced the publication of an Inland Revenue consultative document in reply to the hon. Member for Southport (Mr. Banks) on 25 May 1995 Official Report, column 712. Copies were placed in the Library of the House. We will announce our decision whether to proceed shortly after the period for consultation closes at the end of this month. Any consequent legislative proposals will come before the House in the normal way.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps he will take to protect personal investors in gilt-edged stocks from the retrospective tax consequences of the recent proposals to reform the taxation of gilt-edged stock; and if he will make a statement. [31249]

Sir George Young: The proposals would not have retrospective effect: they would apply only to gains or losses building up in the future.

The consultative document on the possible reform of the taxation of gilts and bonds suggests that there should be a sizeable threshold for private investors below which only interest would be taxable. It seeks views on the size and form of this threshold. The Government envisage that the threshold would be set at a level high enough to ensure that the overwhelming majority of personal investors were below it.

Most current personal holders of gilts would, if anything, be likely to benefit from the reform: the accrued income scheme which taxes accrued interest on disposals of gilts, would be abolished; and in addition, for those above the threshold, losses on disposals of gilts would attract tax relief. We will, though, be carefully considering representations on how the transition to the new regime might best be handled if the reform goes ahead.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Civil Service Pension Fund

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if the proposed privatisation of the administration of the civil service pension fund will require secondary legislation. [31265]

Mr. Horam: The Government propose, following an efficiency scrutiny of administration of the PCSPS, to permit Departments to market test administration of the scheme. Parliamentary approval for this intended course of action will be sought. I expect shortly to make a statement on the matter. Occupational pension arrangements for civil servants will continue to be provided through the PCSPS.

Civil Service College

Mr. Congdon: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what key targets have been set for the Civil Service College for the current year. [31155]

Mr. Horam: I have set the following targets for the Civil Service College in 1995–96:

1. to break even in accrual accounting terms without a central payment from Cabinet Office (OPSS);
2. to earn £700,000 from consultancy;
3. to attract 8,000 students at grade 7 and above;
4. to attract 1,000 students from the private sector;
5. to earn 80 per cent. of course evaluations in the two highest of six categories.

EMPLOYMENT

Consultants

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how much money has been spent by the Health and Safety Executive in employing private sector consultants in support of its market testing and contracting out programme; and for what purposes. [29214]

Mr. Oppenheim: In the period from 1992 to 1993, the Health and Safety Executive has spent a total of £386,759 on private sector consultancy in support of its market testing and contracting out programme.

These consultants have been used to support in-house teams in constructing their bids, and to advise the HSE on the various aspects of particular procurements.

To date, the gross saving for market testing and contracting out is £2.68 million.

Safety Regulations

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many prosecutions for infringement of safety regulations have been brought before the courts over the last five years in each region. [29358]

Mr. Oppenheim: The number of prosecutions—measured by the number of informations laid—by the Health and Safety Executive's field operations division for infringement of safety regulations in each of the last five years in each HSE region is shown in the following table:

Proceedings instituted by HSE's Field Operations Division Inspectorates for breaches of health and safety legislation

Food Industry

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many prosecutions for infringement of health and safety regulations related to the food manufacturing industry have taken place in each region in each of the last five years. [29918]

Mr. Oppenheim: The number of prosecutions—measured by the number of informations laid—by the Health and Safety Executive for infringement of health and safety legislation by the food manufacturing industry as defined by standard industrial classification in each region in each of the last five years is shown in the following table:

Youth Training

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many people attended and left the YT programme in each year of its operation including those who left before the completion of the programme. [30034]

Mr. Paice: The information requested is given in the following table. Information on leavers is available only from 1992–93.

RJB Mining

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list the sums paid by Barnsley/Doncaster TEC to RJB Mining for miners that have been re-employed for retraining purposes. [30471]

Mr. Paice: The information requested relates to a contract between a training and enterprise council and one of its providers and is therefore commercial in confidence. TECs are private companies limited by guarantee, funded by the Government to provide training which best meets the needs of the local community. TECs are free to decide with whom they contract, taking into account the needs of the local labour market.

Redundancy Notifications

Mr. Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what percentage of total notifications to his Department of impending redundancies under section 193 of the Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992 did not fully meet the requirements of that section in each of the last five years. [30705]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 26 June 1995]: The information is as follows:

Year	Per cent.
1990	27
1991	27
1992	31
1993	23
1994	22

Mr. Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what inquiries are considered to be appropriate for his Department to make when an employer is alleged to have failed to notify impending redundancies to the Department under the terms of section 193 of the Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992. [30703]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 26 June 1995]: The Department seeks details of proposals from an employer who is alleged to have failed to notify and, if appropriate, an explanation of the reasons for such failure.

Mr. Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many instances there have been of an employer failing on more than one occasion to comply with, or fully comply with, the notice requirements of section 193 of the Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992 in the last five years. [30706]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 26 June 1995]: This information is not available.

Mr. Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what were the six most common kinds of failure by employers to meet fully the requirements of section 193 of the Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992 concerning notification of impending redundancies to his Department in each of the last five years. [30704]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 26 June 1995]: Reasons for non-compliance are not separately recorded. The most common reason would be failure to give the minimum notice required by section 193(1) or (2) of the Act.

Sick Building Syndrome

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what estimate he has made of the annual cost to the British economy of sick building syndrome. [29238]

Mr. Oppenheim: Sick building syndrome is not a diagnosable disease. There is no reliable information on the numbers who might be affected by it and it is not possible, therefore, to estimate the annual cost to the British economy.

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what research his Department is currently funding into the cause of sick building syndrome; and what will be the cost to public funds of that research. [29239]

Mr. Oppenheim: The Health and Safety Executive published a full review of sick building syndrome research in August 1992 and issued guidance for employers on 23 May 1995.

Remploy

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what targets Remploy has been set in its 1995–96 annual performance agreement. [31483]

Miss Widdecombe: I have written to the chairman of Remploy approving the 1995–96 annual performance agreement between the Department and the company. This agreement covers the year from 1 April 1995. It has been negotiated by the chief executive of the Employment Service on behalf of my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State. The targets are:

the average number of disabled people employed by Remploy Ltd. will be at least 9,200; of which more than 7,200 on average must be employed in factories;

at least 125 disabled employees will move from Remploy factories to Interwork having been employed there for at least one year, or from Interwork or factories to open employment;

the unit cost of Interwork should be no more than £4,500;

Remploy Ltd. will keep within a unit cost target (operating deficit per disabled worker) of £10,400;

Choices programme to be in place in every factory.

I have today arranged for the text of the annual performance agreement to be placed in the Library.

HEALTH

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of parliamentary questions, which would have been answered directly by her or her Ministers prior to the establishment of executive agencies, are now referred to the chief executive of such an agency. [28486]

Mr. Sackville: Ministers are accountable to Parliament for all matters concerning their agencies. Written parliamentary questions concerning matters which have been delegated to the chief executive of an executive agency in its framework document, normally receive a reply from the Minister to the effect that he or she has asked the chief executive to reply direct to the Member by letter. The chief executive's letter is published in Hansard below the Minister's reply.

Residential Care

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer of 19 April 1995, Official Report, column 131, what is the information for England for 1993–94 for both income and expenditure in respect of the placement of old people in residential care and nursing homes. [28941]

Mr. Bowis: The data with which to update my answer of 19 April to 1993–94 have recently become available. I shall place an updated table in the Library shortly.

Hypertension

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research her Department carried out into hypertension intervention in high risk patients; what have been the findings; and if she will make a statement. [30002]

Mr. Sackville: The available research is summarised in the "Health of the Nation" publications. "Assessing the Options: CHD and Stroke" and "Key Area Handbook: Coronary Heart Disease and Stroke" and the publication "Health Care Needs Assessment" which contain information on hypertension and which have been placed in the Library.

The main agency through which the Government support biomedical and clinical research is the Medical Research Council, which receives its grant in aid from the office of my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster. The MRC is an independent body deciding what research to support on its own expert judgment.

Soya Milk

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans her Department has to make (a) soya milk infant formula feeds and (b) other foods with high oestrogen and phytoestrogen contents designed for under five-year-olds available by prescription only. [29991]

Mr. Sackville: None.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research has been (a) started and (b) completed on phytoestrogen in soya milk following the 1992 recommendations of the committee on toxicity of foodstuffs. [29992]

Mr. Sackville: Since 1992, when the Committee on Toxicity of Chemicals in Food, Consumer Products and the Environment last considered phytoestrogens, the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food has commissioned two studies which include analysis of soya milk and infant formula. These have not been completed. In addition, a surveillance project measuring levels of oestrogens in the diets of infants, toddlers and young children will start shortly.

Private Nursery Schools

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proposals she has received from Coventry's education department regarding the safety of children at private nursery schools with fewer than five pupils; and what action will be taken on those proposals. [30205]

Mr. Bowis: The chairman of Coventry's education and training committee and other councillors have recently jointly written to the Secretaries of State for Education and for Health about the registration of independent nursery schools. Registration of independent schools which have five or more pupils of school age is a matter for the Department for Education. The Department of Health is responsible for the framework for the registration with local authorities of other day care services for young children. The Secretaries of State for Education and for Health keep the arrangements for ensuring appropriate standards of child care and education in all settings under regular review.

Peri-operative Deaths

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the paediatric cardiac unit doctors in Bristol have taken part in the National Confidential Inquiry into Peri-operative Deaths audit in each of the last 10 years. [30005]

Mr. Sackville: The information is not available. The National Confidential Inquiry into Peri-operative Deaths is an independent organisation.

Blood Transfusions

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to develop a service of autologous blood transfusion. [30419]

Mr. Sackville: We recognise the value of autologous transfusion for those patients where the procedures are applicable. In appropriate cases it can provide a useful supplement to the supply of blood from voluntary donors which the National Blood Service supplies to our hospitals. The medical profession is aware of autologous transfusion and advice is available from medical staff of the National Blood Service and hospital consultant haematologists. Selection of patients for this procedure has to be undertaken with extreme care to avoid any possible clinical risk to that patient.

Heart Defect HCM

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people have been recorded as dying of the heart defect HCM. [30422]

Mr. Sackville: I refer the right hon. Member to the reply that I gave the hon. Member for Thurrock (Mr. Mackinlay) on 20 December 1994, Official Report, column 1149.

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which European countries have screening programmes for the heart defect HCM. [30423]

Mr. Sackville: This information is not available centrally.

NHS Executive Staff

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance there is for staff of the NHSME speaking in debates on the NHS reforms. [30424]

Mr. Sackville: The Department's staff rules require that permission must be sought from the Department's information division before a civil servant supplies any information, material or comment to the media, other outside bodies or individuals.

Hospital Treatment Statistics

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many finished consultant episodes there were in each of the last five years. [30426]

Mr. Sackville: Information for the years 1989–90 to 1993–94 is available in Department of Health statistical bulletin 12/94, "NHS hospital activity statistics: England 1983 to 1993–94", copies of which are available in the Library.

Infection in Hospitals

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research her Department has carried out in respect of a national prevalence survey of infection in hospitals; and if she will make a statement. [30473]

Mr. Sackville: A national prevalence survey of infection in hospitals was carried out in 1993–94. The detailed results are expected later this year.

The Department continues to fund a number of research and audit studies aimed at providing a basis for improving practice. Within the next three months we shall be placing a contract to set up a national surveillance system for hospital-acquired infection.

Solihull Hospital

Mr. Mills: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will release funds to allow Solihull hospital to continue as a separate hospital with full facilities including children's wards and an accident and emergency unit. [30638]

Mr. Sackville: Allocation of funds to health authorities is a matter for the appropriate regional health authority. It is then the responsibility of health authorities to use this funding to purchase relevant and efficient local health services. Solihull health authority is responsible for ensuring effective provision of services for the people of Solihull. My hon. Friend may wish to contact Mr. Robert Fordham, chairman of Solihull health authority, for further information.

Mr. Mills: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will discuss with the regional health authority the possibility of restoring Solihull hospital to full trust status in the near future; and if she will make a statement. [30637]

Mr. Sackville: We have no such plans.

Male Reproductive Health

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research is being undertaken on male reproductive health and environmental chemicals with oestrogenic effects. [30539.]

Mr. Sackville: No research is being undertaken in this area by the Department.

Health Promotion in Schools

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made in setting up a pilot network of health-promoting schools as described in "The Health of the Nation;" and what her Department's budget has been for this project in the current year. [30545]

Mr. Sackville: England formally entered a European network of health-promoting schools in September 1993. The 16 pilot schools which make up the English network are currently involved in a wide variety of health education and health promotion activities, involving not only the school community but also external agencies. A number of schools have established European links with the wider European network of schools.

The Department of Health will contribute approximately £400,000 to the project for the current year.

Consultant Numbers

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the percentage change in full-time equivalent consultant numbers by region in 1991–92, 1992–93 and 1993–94. [30454]

Mr. Malone: The available information is shown in the table. Data for 1993–94 are not yet available.

Junior Doctors' Hours

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what evidence she has on whether any junior doctors are working such long hours for damage to their health to be foreseen. [30465]

Mr. Malone: None. The new deal on junior doctors' hours, a copy of which is available in the Library, sets limits on the maximum average weekly hours junior doctors can be both on duty and actually working.

Significant progress has been made through the new deal to reduce hours. Latest returns from regional task forces show that 96 per cent. of all junior doctors are within the contracted hours limits.

Hepatitis C

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when each EEC country brought in blood test screening for hepatitis C. [30467]

Mr. Sackville: European Community countries introduced testing for the hepatitis C virus at various times. We do not have information on the details. Screening was introduced in the United Kingdom in September 1991 when satisfactory kits became available, together with confirmatory tests.

Child Abuse

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many children who have been abused have been helped in each of the last five years. [30766]

Mr. Bowis: Information available centrally relates to children subject to initial stage child protection conferences and to children at risk placed on a child protection register. It does not give an indication of numbers abused. Available figures are published annually in "Children and young people on child protection registers, year ending 31 March 19XX, England", copies of which are available in the Library.

Mental Health

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the review by the clinical standards advisory group of standards of care for people with schizophrenia will be published. [30191]

Mr. Bowis: Shortly.

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients fell within the remit of the Mental Health Act Commission for each year since 1990. [30179]

Mr. Bowis: Information is not available in the form requested. The number of formal admissions to national health service facilities, private mental nursing homes and the three special hospitals is published in the bulletin "In-Patients Formally Detained in Hospitals under The Mental Health Act 1983 and Other Legislation, England: 1987–88 to 1992–93", copies of which are available in the Library.

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list, for the last five years, the total numbers of medical practitioners in England currently approved under section 12(2) of the Mental Health Act 1983 as having special skill and experience in the diagnosis and treatment of mental disorder, listing them, in England, by regional health authority area and distinguishing between general medical practitioners who are approved and specialist medical practitioners who are approved. [30181]

Mr. Bowis: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member for Newcastle upon Tyne, East (Mr. Brown) on 19 June at column 45.

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the total number of patients admitted to hospital under sections 3, 37 and 37 to 41 of the Mental Health Act 1983, distinguishing between each of those sections and the classification of mental disorder from which the patient was judged to be suffering in each of the last five years. [30183]

Mr. Bowis: Information on the number of patients is not available centrally. Information on the number of formal admissions under sections 3 and 37, with section 41 restrictions, and section 37 without section 41 restrictions, of the Mental Health Act 1983, distinguishing between each of those sections and the classification of mental disorder for the years 1990–91 to 1992–93 is shown in the table. Figures for the last two years are not yet available.

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what comments have been received by her Department on its draft "Guide to Arrangements for Inter-Agency Working for the Care and Protection of Severely Mentally Ill People" with particular reference to the after-care form contained in it; and when the guide will be published. [30185]

Mr. Bowis: We have received a number of comments in response to our wide consultation on the draft "Guide to Arrangements for Inter-Agency Working for the Care and Protection of Severely Mentally Ill People". The guide will be published later this year.

We consulted separately on the after-care form before its introduction in February. More than 100 agencies and individuals responded and the form was broadly welcomed.

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what has been the cost of the Mental Health Act Commission for each of the last five financial years; and what is its projected cost for 1995–96 and 1996–97. [30187]

Mr. Bowis: Past and projected expenditure on commissioners' fees and expenses and staffing and administration is as follows:

Financial year	£000
1990–91	1,264
1991–92	1,485
1992–93	1,546

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps she has taken to consider the contents and recommendations of the Law Commission's report No. 231 on mental incapacity; and if she will make a statement. [30189]

Mr. Bowis: The Department is represented on the inter-departmental working group, chaired by the Lord Chancellor's Department, which is considering the Law Commission's report.

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what arrangements her Department has made since August 1993 to provide better training for key workers under the care programme approach, including on the revised Mental Health Act code of practice and on new guidance on discharge from hospital, including what additional resources it has made available for such training, and an estimate of the numbers of staff trained as a result. [30193]

Mr. Bowis: Training for key workers on all appropriate issues under the care programme approach is primarily a matter for national health service provider units and social services departments and a wide range of local training is under way or planned. To support this process we have arranged a number of national conferences to improve training with further national and regional conferences planned; commissioned the Open university to develop an open learning pack for social services staff; and commissioned a development pack for local health and social services authorities which incorporates the outcome of a national key worker training conference.

Information on the number of staff trained is not available centrally.

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list for the last five years the total number of patients who have been received into guardianship under sections 7 or 37 of the Mental Health Act 1983 listing them by social services authority and distinguishing between different classifications of mental disorder and between sections 7 and 37. [30190]

Mr. Bowis: The centrally available information on the number of new cases by local authority, classification of mental disorder and section for the years 1989–90 to 1993–94 will be placed in the Library. An England summary of the data was published in "Guardianship under the Mental Health Act (1983) Year Ending 31 March 1994, England", copies of which are available in the Library.

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what arrangements her Department has made to provide improved training to doctors approved under section 12(2) of the Mental Health Act 1983 including on the revised Mental Health code of practice, on the new guidance on discharge from hospital and on supervision registers, including the additional resources it has made available for such training; and what is her estimate of the numbers of doctors trained as a result. [30192]

Mr. Bowis: Regional directors of public health are responsible, in association with professional and other bodies, for ensuring that suitable training is provided to doctors approved under section 12 of the Act. We have already recognised the potential value of a common core of training which would include the matters identified by the hon. Member and have been discussing with the Royal College of Psychiatrists the preparation of a training pack for this purpose. We expect to receive the college's detailed proposals shortly.

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, what arrangements exist to monitor and evaluate strict compliance by district health authorities, NHS trusts and local social services authorities with the requirements of HC(90)23/LASSL(90)11; how many district health authority areas she has assessed being fully complied with this guidance; and what steps her Department is taking to ensure compliance with the necessary arrangements in those remaining. [30178]

Mr. Bowis: We have been closely monitoring the introduction of the care programme approach in a survey of district health authorities earlier this year. From those responding it was clear that many districts were making rapid progress towards full implementation and over one third had already achieved this. We identified implementation of the care programme approach as a priority for the national health service in the priorities and planning guidance for 1995–96 and we have issued a revised "The Health of the Nation" mental illness key area handbook which contains further advice on implementing it. We have also commissioned an audit tool from the Royal College of Psychiatrists' research unit to enable district health authorities and trusts to monitor their performance. We are continuing to monitor the position closely to ensure that all districts achieve full implementation.

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research her Department is undertaking or funding into the impact and effectiveness of the Mental Health Act code of practice on decision making by those with powers under the Mental Health Act 1983, with particular reference to the effect of the revisions made to the code in November 1993 on the use of those powers to admit and detain patients in hospital for assessment or for treatment. [30180]

Mr. Bowis: None at present. We have given wide publicity to the 1993 revisions to the code clarifying the grounds on which a patient may be admitted to hospital under the Act, and have no reason to believe that they are not properly understood.

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on how many occasions she has been requested by the Mental Health Act Commission in accordance with section 121(4) of the Mental Health Act 1983 to direct it to keep under review the care and treatment of any patients other than those detained under the Act to which patients the requests related; and how she responded. [30182]

Mr. Bowis: The Commission made a request in 1986 for its remit to be extended to hospital patients other than those detained under the Mental Health Act 1983. Similar requests have been made with regard to patients subject to guardianship and those who would be receiving after-care under supervision. We have told the commission that we consider its overriding priority to be the protection of patients detained under the 1983 Act. This remains our view and we do not consider that an extension of its remit would be justified at this stage. We shall however keep this matter under review.

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to amend the Mental Health Act code of practice; and when draft revisions will be published for consultation. [30184]

Mr. Bowis: We shall be proposing amendments to the code to cover the provisions of the Mental Health (Patients in the Community) Bill, if this receives parliamentary approval. They will be published for consultation after Royal Assent and when the necessary regulations have been laid.

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what theoretical and practical training is received by general medical practitioners as part of their general syllabus in assessing the risk of harm which a person's mental disorder may pose to that person's health or safety or to the safety of others. [30186]

Mr. Malone: Training in psychiatry is an important part of the basic medical education common to all doctors. The body responsible for general practice vocational training—the joint committee on postgraduate training for general practice—expects general practitioners to be knowledgeable about the impact of psychological factors upon illness and of illness upon patients and their families and skilled in recognising and making appropriate decisions about all problems presented by their patients. The specific curricular arrangements are the responsibility of regional postgraduate organisations. Further training and experience are provided as part of the continuing education of practitioners.

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the organisations and individuals which have made representations to her Department during the last two years requesting her to establish a review of the Mental Health Act 1983. [30188]

Mr. Bowis: The Mental Health Act Commission submitted proposals for a review of the Mental Health Act 1983 to my right hon. Friend in September 1993. This was followed by a joint representation by the commission, the Law Society and the Institute of Psychiatry. In her response, my right hon. Friend said that while the Act as a whole would need to be reviewed at some stage this would have to take account of the impact of the Government's proposals for supervised discharge and related initiatives in the field of mental health.

Arguments for a review of the Act have been put forward by a number of other organisations and individuals including some of those who responded to our consultation on legal powers on the care of mentally ill people in the community and on Mental Health Act guardianship.

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, what arrangements exist to monitor and evaluate compliance by district health authorities and NHS trusts with the requirements of HSG(94)5; how many district health authority areas she has assessed as having fully and sufficiently implemented this guidance; and what steps her Department is taking to ensure that those remaining introduce the necessary arrangements. [30194]

Mr. Bowis: The introduction of supervision registers has been closely monitored by the national health service executive. Registers have been established in all districts. We are continuing to monitor the position to ensure that the registers are operating effectively.

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many general practitioners there are in each region approved under section 12 of the Mental Health Act 1983; and what steps are taken to ensure that a section 12 approved doctor can be contacted in an emergency. [31050]

Mr. Bowis: Regional directors of public health are responsible for ensuring that there are sufficient suitably trained and experienced doctors approved under the Act, and that the necessary out-of-hours cover is available. We are satisfied that these requirements are being properly met.

Protection of Young People at Work

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which groups and bodies she is consulting over her proposal to implement the EC directive on the protection of young people at work; when this consultation is due to end; what documents pertaining to this process have already been issued and to whom; what discussions she or her Department had with the Department of Employment over this issue; and if she will make a statement. [31023]

Mr. Bowis: We shall be consulting a wide range of groups and bodies in due course. We are in touch with all other Government Departments with an interest.

Liverpool Blood Transfusion Centre

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many representations she has received opposing proposed changes to the Liverpool blood transfusion centre. [31137]

Mr. Sackville: Ministers have received 88 letters about the National Blood Authority's proposals for the Liverpool blood transfusion centre since August 1994. In addition, there have been two early-day motions and one parliamentary question relating to the proposals for the Liverpool centre. This is in addition to other representations covering wider areas which include Liverpool.

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the proposed changes to, and the future of, the Liverpool blood transfusion centre. [31139]

Mr. Sackville: This is a matter for the National Blood Authority. We expect it to make its revised recommendations for the organisation to the National Blood Service shortly.

Capital Expenditure

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the capital expenditure on (a) new hospitals, (b) other new medical centres or units and (c) repairing existing NHS building in each of the last 16 years, excluding private capital. [28641]

Mr. Sackville [holding answer 15 June 1995]: Information is not available in the form requested. Total capital expenditure in each of the last 16 years is shown in the table. The definition of capital has changed during the 16-year period; therefore comparisons between years cannot readily be made. For 1993–94, the threshold value for the definition of capital expenditure was increased from £1,000 to £5,000. This technical change to accounting policy reduced capital expenditure as money spent on tangible assets which was formerly classed as capital was in 1993–94 recorded as revenue. In 1993–94, over £100 million was transferred from capital to revenue to take account of the increase to the capital threshold.

Year	Total capital expenditure (£000)
1993–94	1,719,271

Crown Immunity

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list all areas within (a) her Department (b) agencies under her Department's control and (c) organisations for which she has ministerial responsibility to which Crown immunity applies; what consideration she has given to removing this; and if she will make a statement. [28648]

Mr. Sackville [holding answer 15 June 1995]: The detail requested can be provided only at disproportionate cost, but the general position is as follows.

An Act of Parliament is presumed not to bind the Crown, and thus the Department of Health and its agencies, unless the contrary intention is clearly stated, or there is a necessary implication that the Crown is to be bound. Ministers and civil servants do not necessarily share the Crown's immunity from criminal prosecution.

Crown immunity was removed from those national health service bodies which had until then enjoyed it, by section 60 of the National Health Service and Community Care Act 1990 with effect from 1 April 1991, subject to certain exemptions provided for in schedule 8 to that Act.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Brent Spar

Mr. Betts: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how much public money has been spent to date on Shell's activities with regard to the proposed sinking of the Brent Spar oil platform. [30816]

Mr. Eggar: Consideration of Shell's proposals for disposal of the Brent Spar has taken three years and has involved a number of Government Departments and agencies. It is not practicable to quantify the cost in terms of public expenditure.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what requests for additional information about future options for the Brent Spar were made to Shell UK by Ministers or officials in his Department subsequent to the Department receiving the Brent Spar abandonment best possible environmental option analysis in early 1994; what date, and by whom and what method, such requests were made; what was the response of Shell UK; and if he will make a statement. [31082]

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 26 June 1995]: The decision to dispose of the Brent Spar at a deep-sea site was the best practicable environmental option. That decision was arrived at after three years of detailed work. Regular discussions with Shell throughout that time ensured that the Government were able to carry out a full assessment of the various alternatives. From 13 possible options, six were studied in detail and two exhaustively. It was concluded that deep-sea disposal was preferable to onshore dismantling. Any proposals that Shell now puts forward relating to land disposal will need to address the problems which led to the identification of deep-sea disposal at the best practicable environmental option.

Mr. Steen: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment he is currently making about the viability of relocating the Brent Spar oil rig to Brixham to form the northern arm of the harbour protection scheme; and if he will make a statement. [30990]

Mr. Eggar: None—it is for Shell UK Ltd. and Esso Exploration and Production UK Ltd. as owners of the installation, to come forward with proposals for its future.

Iraq (Export Credit Guarantees)

Mr. Byers: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer of 30 March, Official Report, column 777, if he will identify which categories of military list goods were supported by the Export Credits Guarantee Department; and which companies were involved. [30868]

Mr. Ian Taylor [holding answer 26 June 1995]: The defence-related equipment supported by ECGD over the period 1985 to 1990 did not include armaments of any sort. It ranged from radio communications equipment to power supplies, video recording systems and diesel test equipment.

It has been the policy of successive Administrations not to disclose details of exporters' Contracts unless the parties agree.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the President of the Board of Trade pursuant to his answer of 21 March, Official Report, column 183, if he will list all those occasions on which he did not give prior warning to hon. Members. [30752]

Mr. Heseltine [holding answer 26 June 1995]: As far I am aware, I always let hon. Members know when I visit their constituencies in an official capacity. If the hon. Member knows of occasions where this has not occurred, perhaps he could write to me.

Car Imports

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is his estimate of the relative effect of (a) the reduction in the tariff, (b) the removal of tariff protection against EEC countries and (c) the monetary and exchange rate policies of successive United Kingdom Governments on the increase in car imports since 1970; and if he will show the share of the United Kingdom market taken by the EEC, the other eight EEC countries and the rest of the world in 1968, 1972, 1979, 1990 and in the latest 12 months for which figures are available. [29948]

Mr. Ian Taylor: My Department does not make such estimates, which would be very imprecise because of the large number of other factors affecting car production and trade.

UK car production is at its highest for 20 years, with the number of cars exported running at over three times that of a decade ago, while the number imported has fallen by almost 20 per cent. in the last five years.

Figures of UK registration by country of final assembly are in the table; comparable data for 1968 are not available.

BMARC

Mr. Byers: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will place in the Library copies of all board minutes and reports to the board of BMARC which were obtained to enable inspectors to carry out their report into the reasons for the collapse of the company and retained by his Department. [31008]

Mr. Jonathan Evans [holding answer 26 June 1995]: No. Documents obtained by inspectors under statutory compulsory powers should in principle be used only for the purposes envisaged by the legislation. While I will always consider whether to release such documents for particular purposes where it is in the public interest to do so, it would not be appropriate for me to make information obtained during the course of an inspection generally available.

Imports

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) if he will publish for the industries which correspond most closely with those listed in table 15.10 of the monthly digest statistics, figures for ratio 1 import penetration on the United Kingdom market for manufactures for the years (a) 1968, (b) 1971, (c) 1979, (d) 1988 and (e) 1993; [29945]

(2) whether he will publish, for the industries which correspond most closely to those listed in table 15.10 of the monthly digest of statistics, figures for ratio 3 United Kingdom exports, United Kingdom sales of manufacturers for the years (a) 1968, (b) 1971, (c) 1979, (d) 1988 and (e) 1993. [29950]

Mr. Ian Taylor: The information is not available for 1968. Comparable data for all four remaining years are available for only four industries, as given in the table. Data for other industries are not available on a comparable basis and could be produced only in a limited number of cases, at disproportionate cost.

Industrial Output

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will publish output figures for the latest possible three months for the industries listed in table 15.10 of the monthly digest of statistics, c50 (95) 109 first release together with the change since 1988 and 1990 in the volume of output, imports and exports. Mr. Ian Taylor: The index of production for the level of detail required is not yet available. Table 1 gives the most detailed information available for Q1 1995.

Import and export figures by SIC(92) division are not available prior to 1990. Available figures at constant prices are given in table 2.

Plant-derived Fuel

Mr. Spearing: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what support is being given by his Department to research or development into internal combustion engines whose main source of fuel is from vegetable or cereal-based oils. [30809]

Mr. Page [holding answer 26 June 1995]: The Department of Trade and Industry is part funding, through its renewable energy programme, a European Community project, led by Ormrod Diesels of Skelmersdale, to establish whether pyrolysis oils derived from wood and cereal straw have the prospect of providing an economically attractive and environmentally acceptable fuel for internal combustion engines.

Non-Fossil Fuel Obligation

Mr. Tipping: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list (a) the bids that were successful under non-fossil fuel obligations 1 and 2, (b) those projects that are now operational and (c) those projects that are currently under construction. [29907]

Mr. Page: The status of individual contracts is a commercial matter for the parties to the contracts—the Non-fossil Purchasing Agency Ltd. as agent of the 12 regional electricity companies, and the generators. The Department does not hold information on projects under construction. Aggregate information on projects that were awarded contracts under the first and second renewables orders—SI 1990/1859 and SI 1991/2490 respectively—and on projects that were operational as at 31 March 1995, is as follows:

HOME DEPARTMENT

Firearms

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he has now received the report from Messrs Ernst and Young on the design of a recording and reporting system which would allow income and expenditure on the administration of firearms licensing to be monitored more closely; and if he will publish it. [29303]

Mr. Maclean: The report was received by the Home Office in July 1992 and is publicly available on request to the Home Office. Copies have been placed in the Library.

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make available the full report into firearms fees, including all supporting tables, provided to his Department in 1992 by Messrs Ernst and Young. [29310]

Mr. Maclean: A copy of the Ernst and Young report was placed in the Library on 20 July 1994.

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police forces are currently processing firearms licensing at a cost below the level of fees charged; and if he will estimate the amount of excess contribution thereby made by firearms users to general police funds in these police areas. [29311]

Mr. Maclean: This information is not available.

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) which police forces now have in place a mechanism for taking into account the views of the shooting public in respect of their administration of firearms licensing as recommended by Her Majesty's inspectorate of constabulary; [29312]

(2) if he will list for each police force in England and Wales the average time taken from the receipt of an application for (a) a shotgun certificate and (b) a firearm certificate to the issue of that certificate; [29313]

(3) if he will list for each police force in England and Wales how long before the due date for the renewal of a shotgun or firearm certificate a reminder is sent to the certificate holder. [29314]

Mr. Maclean: This information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Child Prostitution

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what powers he has to prosecute British subjects who procure child prostitutes in other countries. [28738]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 26 June 1995]: The Government deplore the sexual exploitation of children, wherever it may occur. Our own law against such abuse is rightly severe. However, our courts' jurisdiction is territorially based rather than nationality based, and we therefore have no power to prosecute British nationals who commit offences against children in other countries.

The United Kingdom is, however, willing to extradite its nationals to stand trial in the places where they are alleged to have offended, subject to the usual safeguards. We are also willing to provide legal assistance to foreign authorities who wish to prosecute British nationals, under the Criminal Justice (International Co-operation) Act 1990. In addition, we are currently considering ways in which it may be possible to improve liaison between our police and foreign enforcement agencies, and whether there is any scope for further Government action to tackle the dreadful problem of child prostitution and sex tourism.

Police Pensions

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the estimated cost to each police authority in the south-east of England of funding from revenue police pensions in the years 1995–96 and 1996–97; and what proportion these sums represent of each police authority's budget. [30260]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 26 June 1995]: The table sets out the budgeted net expenditure on police pensions in 1995–96, as estimated by police forces in the south-east of England.

£ million

Force	Total revenue budget	Budgeted net pensions expenditure	Percentage of budget
Metropolitan Police	1,628.68	133.74	8.2
City of London	61.33	4.68	7.6
Kent	158.10	16.63	10.5
Surrey	84.10	7.79	9.3
Sussex	145.78	14.44	9.9
Essex	147.80	13.68	9.3
Hertfordshire	87.04	6.06	7.0
Thames Valley	194.41	16.85	8.7

Equivalent budget information for 1996–97 is not available. It will be for the individual police authorities, in setting their budget requirements for 1996–97, to decide the appropriate provision to set aside to meet pension costs.

Police Funding

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make available in the Vote Office copies of the report, "The Critical Analysis of the Police Funding Formula", prepared by Price Waterhouse, which was commissioned by his Department. [30261]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 26 June 1995]: I have arranged for copies to be placed in the Library.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the losses to police authorities in the south-east of England that would arise from the removal of the area cost adjustment in police authorities' funding in the year 1996–97; and if he will make a statement. [30262]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 26 June 1995]: The table shows the effect, in 1995–96, of ceasing to pay the area cost adjustment to police authorities. The 1996–97 quantum will not be determined until later this year.

The area cost adjustment reflects the extra costs incurred in providing a service in the more expensive areas of the south-east, and we have no plans to abolish it. My right hon. and learned Friend the Home Secretary and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment will, however, consider the views of the police and local authority associations about any refinements to the calculation of the area cost adjustment which may be put forward.

Border Controls

Sir Ivan Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps have so far been taken by the European Commission in respect of its intention to bring forward a directive relating to the free movement of persons and possible abolition of internal border controls. [30054]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: In March this year, Commissioner Monti indicated his intention to bring forward proposals for Community legislation on the free movement of persons crossing the internal frontiers of the European Union. These proposals have not yet been published by the Commission. As we have frequently made clear, the Government will take whatever steps are necessary to maintain our frontier controls.

Money Laundering

Sir Ivan Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the countries with which the United Kingdom has signed (a) bilateral agreements to supplement the 1990 Council of Europe convention on laundering, search, seizure and confiscation of the proceeds of crime and (b) other bilateral agreements to facilitate mutual assistance in respect of money laundering and confiscation. [30052]

Mr. Maclean: The United Kingdom has concluded one bilateral agreement under article 39(2) of the 1990 convention, with the Netherlands. It entered into force on 2 June 1994. Other bilateral confiscation agreements have been concluded as follows:

Organised Crime

Sir Ivan Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what changes have taken place in the arrangements for co-ordination of the work of United Kingdom Government bodies concerned with fighting organised crime from those set out in paragraphs 40 to 43 of his Department's November 1993 memorandum to the Home Affairs Committee on organised crime, HC18–II if this Session. [30055]

Mr. Howard: None.

Drug-related Crimes

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many children and young people under the age of 14 years were arrested in connection with drug-related crimes for each of the last 10 years; how many were subsequently charged; and what is the breakdown of these figures (a) by local authority, (b) region and (c) police authority area. [30741]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 26 June 1995]: As detailed information on arrests and on the number of people charged is not collected centrally, cautioning and court data is given in the tables.

It is possible to distinguish centrally only offenders who have committed drug offences as opposed to drug related offences. It is also not possible to identify the date by local authority area.

Mr. Maclean: Invitations to tender for the design, construction/refurbishment, management and finance of secure training centres at Cookham Wood, Kent and Gringley, Nottinghamshire were issued on 31 March to nine companies/consortia:

Special Constables

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many special constables were on establishment in (a) England and Wales and (b) each constabulary in England and Wales in 1994. [30010]

Mr. Maclean: Special constables are volunteers and as such are not included as part of the permanent police establishment but are members of the special constabulary.

The number of special constables as at 31 December 1994 is given in the table.

Parks and Market Police

Mr. George: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which local authorities are legally empowered to establish and operate (a) parks police and (b) market police; and what is the statutory basis for each force. [30094]

Mr. Maclean: A full list of all such authorities is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of parliamentary questions which would have been answered directly by him or his Ministers prior to the establishment of executive agencies, are now referred to the chief executive of such an agency. [28496]

Mr. Howard: Ministers are accountable to Parliament for all matters concerning their agencies. Written parliamentary questions concerning matters which have been delegated to the chief executive of an executive agency in its framework document normally receive a reply from the Minster to the effect that he or she has asked the chief executive to reply direct to the Member by letter. The chief executive's letter is published in Hansard below the Minister's reply.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Market Testing

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list those parts of his Department or departmental agencies which were privatised without an in-house bid; if he will indicate the expertise which was absent in his Department or departmental agencies which prevented an in-house bid taking place; which future parts of his Department or departmental agencies he intends to privatise; and which of them do not have the necessary in-house expertise to mount an in-house bid. [29423]

Mr. Hague: The following areas of work have been contracted out without an in-house bid:

Benefit Agency:

Accommodation and Office services at the Quarry House site in Leeds;

Travel services;

Information Technology Services Agency:

Service Delivery.

An in-house bid was not invited for travel services or IT service delivery because it was considered that the private sector was better equipped to deliver these services, had a better understanding of the market needs and a capacity to invest in new technological support. In the case of accommodation and office services at Quarry house, Leeds, too few staff were prepared to re-locate with the work transferred from London to Leeds to be able to mount an in-house bid.

The Benefits Agency has decided to contract out quantity surveying work, in which four staff are currently employed.

The Contributions Agency has decided to contract out elements of estates work in which some 24 staff are currently employed. The CA considers that staff do not have the necessary technical, professional estates management expertise to compete with the private sector.

Incomes

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the real terms cash value of the 62 per cent. increase in income between 1987 and 1993 for the top 10 per cent. of earners shown in appendix 10 of the latest Households Below Average Income statistics. [30381]

Mr. Burt: The information is in the table. The 62 per cent. increase in income is between 1979 and 1992–93 for the top 10 per cent. of incomes after housing costs.

Median equivalised income of the top 10 per cent. of the UK income distribution after housing costs in March 1995 prices

	1979	1992–93	Increase from 1979 to 1992–93
Equivalised income (£ per week)	321	520	199

Notes:

1. Income is equivalised to allow meaningful comparisons between the incomes of households of different sizes and composition. The income values here represent the cash amounts (adjusted only for inflation) for a couple with no children. Appendix 4 of HBAI contains further information.
2. 1992–93 is the amalgamation of the calendar years 1992 and 1993.
3. Income after housing costs is defined in appendix 2 of HBAI.

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what are the figures for real income changes referred to in table A2 of the latest Households Below Average Incomes statistics, including self-employed earners both before and after housing costs. [30383]

Mr. Burt: The real income changes in table A2 of the latest households below average income are presented as percentage changes in table A1 of HBAI. Absolute income changes can be obtained by subtracting the 1979 income values from the 1992–93 values in table A2.

Mortgage Interest

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what support with mortgage interest payments will be available to existing borrowers after October 1995 if they are presently receiving income support help with mortgage interest payments and they accept a job on a short-term contract that will return them to unemployment after October 1995; and what type of insurance policy he expects people in these circumstances to take out to cover their mortgage interest repayments. [30515]

Mr. Roger Evans: Under our proposals for changes to the rules on income support help with mortgage interest payments, an existing borrower who is currently receiving help with his mortgage interest payments and who takes a short-term contract before October this year will be treated as if his claim for income support had been continuous if, when he re-claims income support after 1 October, his break in entitlement had been for 12 weeks or less.

If the break in their entitlement was for more than 12 weeks and a new claim is made after 1 October, existing borrowers will get no help with interest payments for two months—eight weeks—and 50 per cent. for the next four months—18 weeks. The full amount, calculated using the standard interest rate, will be payable thereafter.

It is a matter for the individuals concerned to decide how best to meet their mortgage commitments in the initial period of an income support claim. The Association of British Insurers is addressing many of the issues of concern about the interface between benefit and insurance, including the treatment of contract workers, in its forthcoming guidelines to best practice.

Students

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what would be the cost of restoring university student benefit entitlement to income support and housing benefit. [30313]

Mr. Roger Evans: This information is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Motability

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what powers his Department has to prevent the transfer of funds by way of gift aid from Motability Finance Ltd. into Motability's charitable funds; and if he will make a statement. [31051]

Mr. Hague: The transfer of funds from Motability Finance Ltd. to Motability, an independent charity, is a matter of discussion between the two organisations. The Department is consulted about such donations.

Mr. Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 19 June 1995, Official Report, columns 98–100 on Motability, if he will make available in the Library the financial memorandum to which he refers. [31052]

Mr. Hague: I will place a copy in the Library shortly.

Pensioners' Organisations

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his oral answer of 19 June 1995, Official Report, column 616 if he will list the organisations seen by a Minister; and if he will give a breakdown of the correspondence referred to. [31134]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Ministers have held many meetings, both formal and informal, with parties interested in the Pensions Bill. They have met hon. Members, noble Lords, pressure groups and employers.

In the past eight months, Ministers have met and discussed pensions' issues with the following organisations:

> The Law Society, The Pension Trustees Forum, The ABI, British Airways, The Association of Pensioner Trustees, The Fawcett Society, The National Federation of Sub-Postmasters, The Captains of Industry, The PMI, The CBI, The National Federation of Post Office and BT Pensioners, The Pensions Ombudsman, The EOC, Royal Insurance, OPAS, The Campaign for Pension Fund Democracy, The Consumers Association, Bacon and Woodrow, The Prudential Corporation, The Society of Pension Consultants, The TUC, Pensioners Voice, The National Association of Pension Funds, Scottish Widows, Hill Samuel, Greig Middleton and Co and The Occupational Pensions Board.

A breakdown of the 900 items of ministerial correspondence dealt with since the beginning of the year is given in the table. Some covered more than one topic and therefore the total is more than 900.

Income Support

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 21 June, 1995, Official Report, column 253, how much was recovered by claimants by way of arrears of supplementary benefit in the area covered by the Wrexham and North Wales Coast Benefits Agency office in June 1994. [31154]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many income support live load (a) E cases, (b) P cases, (c) A cases and (d) total cases there were in each quarter since January 1991 by (i) district and (ii) area directorate. [29329]

Mr. Evans: The administration of income support is a matter for Mr. Ian Magee, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ian Magee to Mr. Alan Milburn, dated 26 June 1995:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking about Income Support live load statistics since January 1991.

Complete information is available only from May 1991 which was the first quarter in which the Benefits Agency collected information by District Office and Area Directorate. Information in table 1 is for each Area Directorate and in table 2 for the District offices. Copies of these tables have been placed in the Library.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Compensation Recovery Unit

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 29 November 1994, Official Report, column 625, if he will update the table given in his answer to give the latest available information on the operation of the compensation recovery unit for the financial year 1994–95. [29262]

Mr. Roger Evans: This is a matter for Mr. Ian Magee, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ian Magee to Mr. Frank Field, dated 26 June 1995:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking for information relating to the operation of the Compensation Recovery Unit during the 1994/95 financial year.

The information is provided in the table below:

Period	Number of cases	Total amount recovered £ million	Operating costs £ million
1 April 1994–31 March 1995	39,915	[1]110.1	2.8

I hope you find this reply helpful.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Education and Library Boards

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what savings on administration costs he estimates will be achieved by reducing the number of education and library boards; and if he will itemise these savings. [29495]

Mr. Ancram: The initial estimate of savings in administrative costs arising from the proposals for change is £2 million. This is of necessity an overall estimate since, with the exception of the Western board, the education and library boards declined to take part in the appraisal of options for change. It would not, therefore, be appropriate to attempt to itemise any savings.

Economic Development

Dr. Hendron: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the total expenditure by the Department of Economic Development in each of the parliamentary constituencies of Northern Ireland for each of the last 10 years. [29971]

Mr. Ancram: The information is not held in the form requested. The total expenditure by the Department of Economic Development for the last 10 years was as follows:

Financial year	Expenditure (rounded to nearest £ million)
1985–86	437
1986–87	454
1987–88	441
1988–89	[1]742

1990–91	477
1991–92	454
1992–93	438
1993–94	431
1994–95	434

[1] Includes expenditure incurred on privatisations of Shorts and Harland Wolff.

Small and Medium-size Businesses

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) small businesses and (b) medium-size businesses were started up in each of the last 10 years; and if he will break these figures down by gender of the entrepreneur. [29579]

Mr. Ancram [holding reply 21 June 1995]: There is no fully comprehensive means of counting the number of business start-ups in Northern Ireland. However, VAT registrations give a useful indication of the number of new businesses created in any period. The figures set out in the table show the number of VAT registrations during the period 1985–93. Data for 1994 are not yet available. It is not possible to break this information down by gender.

Table 1: Number of VAT registrations in Northern Ireland

1990	4.3
1991	3.7
1992	3.7
1993	4.0

Notes:

Details of Northern Ireland VAT figures are included in VAT Registration and Deregistrations, County and District Analyses 1980–91 and VAT Registrations and Deregistrations, County and District Analyses 1992–93, copies of which are available in the Library.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what initiatives his Department has to assist and encourage women who want to start their own business; and how the success of any initiative is monitored and assessed. [29582]

Mr. Ancram [holding answer reply 21 June 1995]: The local enterprise development unit funds a series of business start programmes aimed specifically at women throughout Northern Ireland and a women's enterprise programme in the Greater Belfast area. These initiatives are monitored through periodical reviews and the overall success is assessed by the number of participants, the number of business plans which result from the programmes, the percentage of participants starting their own businesses and the number who enter other employment.

Higher Education

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is his estimate of the cost in the current year of restoring the value of the student maintenance grant to its real 1979 level. [30371]

Mr. Ancram: In view of the major changes made to the student support system in the intervening period, including the introduction of student loans in 1990, the cost would very much depend on whether the changes were to be reversed.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the university or polytechnic total student population for each year from 1974–75; and what it will be in each year to 1998–99.

Mr. Ancram: The information is available in the form requested only from the year 1975–76 and is as follows:

Year	Total student population
1975–76	13,060
1976–77	13,939
1977–78	14,416

1994–95	35,965

Note:
Projected Northern Ireland student numbers are published in "Northern Ireland Expenditure Plans and Priorities", a copy of which is available in the Library. Figures are not presently available for 1998–99.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) if he will list the changes to university and polytechnic student maintenance grant entitlement since 1974; [30368]

(2) what has been the value of the full university student grant for each year since 1974–75 in 1994 prices. [30366]

Mr. Ancram: The information is as follows:

[1] The standard maintenance grant rate is that applicable to students living away from home and studying outside London.

[2] Since 1990–91 student support has included grant and loan: the grant was frozen at the 1990–91 level (ie £2,265) until 1994–95 when it was reduced to £2,040. Figures for 1990–91 and subsequent years include grant plus full year loan for students living away from home.

[3] Based on the retail price index (excluding mortgage interest payments) in September of each academic year.

[4] Up to and including 1983–84 students claimed and were individually reimbursed, full travelling expenses; from 1984–85 most students had to meet their travel costs from within their main rate of grant.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the drop-out rate for university and polytechnic courses in each year since 1979. [30303]

Mr. Ancram: The information is not available in the form requested and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what is his estimate of the annual cost of providing the full maintenance grant to all university students. [30307]

(2) what would be the annual cost of paying (a) all fees for, and (b) the full maintenance grant to, all part-time university students. [30306]

Mr. Ancram: It is not possible to provide an estimate of these costs since it would depend upon such factors as the eligibility of courses, their duration, the maximum payable fee and maintenance grant, and the account to be taken of the personal circumstances of potentially eligible students.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what would be the cost of restoring university student benefit entitlement to income support and housing benefit. [30305]

Mr. Malcolm Moss: This information is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Ancram: This information is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is his estimate of the backlog of building repair and maintenance work at universities. [30365]

Mr. Ancram: The current backlog of building repair and maintenance work for academic buildings in the two Northern Ireland universities is estimated to cost £76 million. This figure is derived from an accommodation condition survey conducted in early 1992.

The Department of Education in Northern Ireland has spent £7 million during the past three years on grants for backlog maintenance, and universities themselves have spent £8 million during the same period. It is planned to continue to provide support towards £18 million of further work over the next three years. The remaining less urgent work will need to be funded by institutions themselves.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is his estimate of the (a) average cost and (b) marginal cost, of university students in 1995–96. [30373]

Mr. Ancram: The average recurrent grant and income from tuition fees per university student in Northern Ireland for the financial year 1995–96 is estimated to be approximately £4,570. No information is available on the marginal costs.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is his estimate of the number of students in higher education in 2000. [30304]

Mr. Ancram: Figures for students in Northern Ireland institutions of higher education are not available for academic years beyond 1997–98.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the average level of student loan for university students in 1994–95. [30308]

Mr. Ancram: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given him by my hon. Friend the Under-Secretary of State for Further and Higher Education earlier today.

ENVIRONMENT

Negative Equity

Ms Glenda Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many households in each local authority area in England are estimated to have had negative equity as of (a) the end of September 1994 and (b) the end of March. [28713]

Mr. Robert B. Jones [holding answer 15 June 1995]: Estimates of negative equity are not calculated by local authority area. For the latest national estimates, I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Darlington (Mr. Milburn), Official Report, column 138.

Homelessness

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the cost of providing accommodation for the homeless in Kirklees in (a) bed and breakfast hotels and (b) hostels in each of the last five years. [29092]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: The net costs of housing homeless households in bed-and-breakfast accommodation, as reported by Kirklees on its revenue outturn returns, for the years 1990–91—the first year in which this information was collected on the revenue outturn return—to 1993–94 were as follows:

	£000s
1990–91	464
1991–92	248
1992–93	177
1993–94	126

Microlight Aircraft

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement about the proposal by Aylesbury Vale district council to give permission for microlight aircraft to operate from Merrymead farm, College road, Aston Clinton. [30415]

Sir Paul Beresford: The Secretary of State has received a number of letters concerning this proposal and on 15 June 1995 served an article 14 direction on Aylesbury Vale district council which prevents it from granting planning permission without his consent.

This action provides the Secretary of State with the opportunity to look at the proposal and to judge whether or not he would be justified in using his powers of call-in in this case.

As this matter is under consideration, I am sure that the hon. Member will understand that I cannot comment upon the merits, or otherwise, of the proposal.

Birmingham Northern Relief Road

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how long the inquiry into the Birmingham northern relief road has now lasted; and what is the average time taken for major road inquiries. [30606]

Sir Paul Beresford: Since 21 June 1994, when it opened in Walsall. It is not possible to give an average time for major road inquires. Each is dependent on the complexity of the issues involved and the level of representations received.

Sellafield

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what request Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution has made of Nirex UK Ltd. to make public HMIP's safety assessment of Nirex's capability to prepare a full safety case for the proposed nuclear waste disposal facility at Sellafield; with what result; and if he will make a statement. [30606]

Mr. Atkins: HMIP has made no assessment of Nirex's capability to prepare a full case for the post-closure safety of an underground repository. Nirex has not submitted an application for such a facility.

Under an agreement with Nirex, HMIP has reviewed information which that company has provided voluntarily and has classified as commercial in confidence. Nirex has a right of confidentiality regarding such material. HMIP continues to press Nirex to review its position concerning the restrictions the company has placed on the release of such reports.

Montreal Protocol

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to ratify the Copenhagen amendments to the Montreal protocol. [31034]

Mr. Atkins: The United Kingdom ratified the Copenhagen amendment to the Montreal protocol on 4 January 1995.

Water

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will publish the responses to his consultation paper "Using Water Wisely". [30457]

Mr. Atkins: The Government's response to "Using Water Wisely" will be published within the next week or so.

Mrs. Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will consider extending additional safeguards to protect low-income households, large families and people with disabilities requiring high use of water, who live in properties which are compulsorily metered. [30460]

Mr. Atkins: Such customers are safeguarded by a code a practice for customer and a code of practice and procedure on disconnections which are part of every water company's instrument of appointment.

Mrs. Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will consider setting up a special body in conjunction with the industry and other interested parties to promote the installation of water-saving devices in domestic homes. [30459]

Mr. Atkins: The Government have tabled an amendment to the Environment Bill that places a duty on water companies to promote the efficient use of water by its customers, and provides the Director General of Water Services with powers to determine and publish standards of performance.

Mrs. Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has had from the industry or other interested parties with regard to the installation of water-saving devices in domestic homes. [30458]

Mr. Atkins: My right hon. Friend has received no such representations. My officials have from time to time received suggestions about the installation of water-saving devices in the home.

Mrs. Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the organisations that have submitted responses to his consultation paper "Using Water Wisely". [30456]

Mr. Atkins: I have today deposited a list of the organisations that submitted responses to the consultation paper "Using Water Wisely" in the House Library.

Mrs. Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make it his policy that people in new homes may choose whether to pay for their water and sewerage by metered charge. [30504]

Mr. Atkins: It is for water companies to decide the most appropriate method of charging in their areas.

Security Services

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment for what reason the final regulations laying down the compulsory competitive tendering by local authorities for security services have not yet been published; and what advice he gives to local authorities in the interim. [31136]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: I explained to the House on the 2 November, Official Report, column 1608–609, that we intend to exclude from security work CCT work entailing the enforcement of byelaws which cannot be undertaken by private contractor staff. It is important to get the scope of the exemption right, and to that end we have consulted the local authority associations in framing a suitable draft. We intend to lay the order shortly.

Local authorities have been aware of our intention to bring forward an exemption since guidance was published last December, over a year in advance of the contract start date for security work CCT of 1 January 1996. Authorities ought therefore to have been preparing, and to continue to prepare, for CCT on that basis.

Building Research Establishment

Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish the current key performance targets for the Building Research Establishment. [31480]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: The Building Research Establishment is working to the following key targets for 1995–96:

£90,000 net contribution to the Exchequer income to cover full economic costs on a trading basis gross non-Exchequer income of £3.5 million the average daily cost of commissions to be at 1994–95 levels, with costs of major management initiatives met through efficiency savings.

Compulsory Competitive Tendering

Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his policy on the application of compulsory competitive tendering to those authorities he has selected for a further review by the Local Government Commission. [31481]

Mr. Jones: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced on Thursday 22 June 1995, Official Report, column 353, that the Local Government Commission has been asked to carry out further reviews of 21 shire districts in 12 separate counties. Their selection for a further review should not of itself affect the continued operation of CCT, and I would urge all to continue to operate contracts for blue collar services already subject to CCT, and to continue with preparations for the extension of CCT to housing management and white collar services.

In the event of Ministers accepting a recommendation made by the Commission for a change in an authority's structure or function, I intend that our existing policy for authorities changed following review should apply to both the district and county council concerned. In summary this means that:

the "except window" which suspends the re-tendering of blue collar work and the implementation of housing management CCT will apply to both the district and county council from the date at which the Order providing for reorganisation comes into force until 18 months—or, in some cases, 24 months–after the changes have taken effect;

the timetable for the extension of CCT to white collar services in the district and county councils concerned will be determined by the date on which changes take effect. I anticipate that this will be 1 April 1997. On this basis, CCT for the first of the new white collar services will bite from 1 April 1999; and the extension of CCT to the further manual services—security work, management of vehicles and management of on-street parking—will take effect from 1 October 1998, again on the basis of changes in structure or function taking effect from 1 April 1997.

Authorities which remain unchanged following the further review will be expected to follow the timetable I announced on 29 March of this year, Official Report, column 644.

These exemptions are designed to provide space for reorganised authorities to rethink the way in which they deliver local services, and to adopt the model of an enabling authority. This will provide new opportunities in due course for external contractors to make an effective contribution to local services, and offset the short–term disadvantages which the temporary suspension of CCT brings.

Volatile Organic Compounds

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when the Government will issue its response to the first report of 1994–1995 from the Environment Committee on volatile organic compounds, House of Commons paper No. 39. [31494]

Mr. Atkins: I have now sent a memorandum to the Select Committee setting out the Government's response to their report on volatile organic compounds.

The Government have welcomed the Committee's report as a thorough and thoughtful analysis of a complex subject. The report makes a valuable contribution to the development of policy and to influencing the further development of the strategy which the Government have in place for tackling the adverse health and economic effects of these substances.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Royal Opera House

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what sum has been made available from public funds directly or indirectly to the Royal Opera House since 1980 in 1994 prices; what was the amount per seat; and what research he has carried out as to the beneficiaries of this expenditure. [29998]

Mr. Dorrell: Details in the form requested of annual grants from the Arts Council to the three Royal Opera House companies—the Royal Opera, the Royal Ballet and Birmingham Royal Ballet—are set out in the table. In addition, the Royal Opera House has received £259,000 under the national heritage arts sponsorship scheme—formerly the business sponsorship incentive scheme—since 1984. Neither my Department nor the Arts Council has carried out audience research, although the Royal Opera House itself undertakes such research on a regular basis.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will make it his policy that money provided by the national lottery will not be used directly or indirectly to subsidise the Royal Opera House. [29999]

Mr. Dorrell: It is for the distributing bodies to decide on the allocation of the proceeds of the national lottery.

National Lottery

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if grants made under the auspices of the national lottery can be used for matching purposes for grants made to organisations and projects by government departments. [30998]

Mr. Iain Sproat: Grants from national lottery proceeds are made by 11 independent distributing bodies in response to individual applications. Applicants are required to provide an element of partnership funding which can come from a variety of sources, including public funding.

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what has been the total cost of the establishment and administration of the national lottery and the related scratch card competition to date; and what proportion of the income this represents. [30026]

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 22 June 1995]: Total costs associated with the establishment of the national lottery fall (a) to Camelot Group plc, (b) to the Office of the National Lottery, (c) to my Department and (d) to lottery distributors.

Details of costs incurred by Camelot Group plc are a matter for Camelot. I have asked the Director General of the National Lottery to write to the hon. Gentleman with information about the costs of establishing and administering Oflot and to place copies of his response in the Library of the House.

The cost of setting up and administration of the national lottery distribution branch, within the Department of National Heritage, was £247,000 to 31 March 1995. This cost was met from the national lottery distribution fund. Other costs of national lottery division were met from the Department's administration vote. For the year ending 31 March 1995, these come to approximately £251,000.

Funds drawn down from the NLDF by the 11 lottery distributors to cover administration costs totalled £5.049 million for the period to 31 March 1995.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what percentage of the revenues collected from ticket sales for the national lottery came from outlets in Wales. [28123]

Mr. Dorrell: Figures are not currently available for the individual countries of the United Kingdom. I have asked the Director General of the National Lottery to write to the hon. Gentleman to explain the position more fully.

Dramatic Arts, Manchester

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage when he last visited the Greater Manchester area to discuss funding for the dramatic arts. [30979]

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 26 June 1995]: On Friday 23 June 1995.

Museums and Galleries

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how he intends to meet the need for the repair and refurbishment of museums and art galleries. [30978]

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 26 June 1995]: The museums and galleries sponsored by the Department of National Heritage have now all submitted their corporate plans to my Department. The information in these plans, including any information on proposed repair and refurbishment, will be considered in the course of the current public expenditure round. The Government's spending plans will be announced on Budget day.

Leicestershire Museums, Arts and Records Service

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will ensure that the Leicestershire museums, arts and records service will be maintained as an integrated operation after the coming into effect of local government reorganisation in Leicester. [30672]

Mr. Dorrell: The decision on how best to provide services for arts, museums and records is for the authorities concerned. However, my Department will shortly be issuing guidance to all authorities involved in reorganisation on the provision of suitable services in all these fields.

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what steps his Department is taking to ensure that the future on a country-wide basis of the Leicestershire museums, arts and records service is not adversely affected by any orders presented to Parliament by the Secretary of State for the Environment concerning the reform of local government in Leicestershire and the city of Leicester. [30668]

Mr. Dorrell: My officials are in close contact with the Department of the Environment about issues affecting services in which my Department has an interest. My Department is issuing guidance to all authorities involved in the reorganisation.

Women's Football

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what new proposals he has to promote women's association football. [30033]

Mr. Sproat: Responsibility for the development of women's football rests with the Football Association. The FA is committed to the development of female football and has recently produced a strategy document which sets out its aim to "increase the involvement of women in football at all levels, and in all functions and roles".

The England women's football team is to be congratulated on reaching the quarter-final stage for the second women's world cup which took place recently in Sweden.

Leeds Parish Church

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what assistance his Department is giving to restore the parish church of Leeds, West Yorkshire; and if he will make a statement. [30475]

Mr. Dorrell: Government funding for repairs to historic buildings is channelled through English Heritage, which is currently considering an application for grant aid to assist with repairs to the roof of Leeds parish church.

Welsh Fourth Channel

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will list the subsidies made available annually from public funds to S4C by source and amount. [30522]

Mr. Dorrell: S4C receives an annual payment from my Department. The level of the payment is fixed by a formula set out in the Broadcasting Act 1990 guaranteeing S4C an annual payment equivalent to 3.2 per cent. of the total terrestrial television revenues from advertising, sponsorship and subscription in the previous year. The amount paid for 1995 was £63.8 million.

Concessionary Television Licences

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage (1) what representations he has received from residents of St. Tydfil Court, Merthyr Tydfil, regarding concessionary television licences; and if he will make a statement; [30779]

(2) if he will review the regulations governing concessionary television licences to cover cases in which the warden does not live on the same floor as the residents. [30780]

Mr. Dorrell: There are no plans for any changes to the regulations governing the concessionary television licence scheme. The regulations require qualifying accommodation to have a person whose function is to care for the needs of the residents and who either lives in one of the dwellings within the group or works on site for at least 30 hours per week. There is no requirement for this person to live on the same floor as the residents. Details of representations from members of the public about specific sheltered housing schemes are not recorded separately.

DEFENCE

Nuclear Weapons

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the policy of his Department towards the export of missiles which have a nuclear version; and when the guidelines were introduced. [30114]

Mr. Freeman: Our policy is to control the export of missiles which are capable of delivering nuclear weapons. The missile technology control regime, of which the UK is a founding member, has established guidelines covering the transfer of nuclear capable missiles, and related equipment and technology. The guidelines were agreed by MTCR partners in 1987.

Faldingworth Range

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what grants or other assistance were provided to the Faldingworth range and storage area by his Department between 1986 and 1992. [30112]

Mr. Soames: We can find no trace of any grants or other assistance being provided to the Faldingworth range and storage area between 1986 and 1992.

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list those countries which had personnel trained at the Faldingworth range of Astra/BMARC between 1980 and 1992; and if he will give the dates of the residency of the trainees within the United Kingdom in each case. [30395]

Mr. Soames: Since the range was a purely commercial one, this is not a matter for my Department.

RAF Donna Nook

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list those countries which used the Donna Nook range between 1980 and 1992; and for what purpose in each case. [30396]

Mr. Soames: There are two separate range facilities at RAF Donna Nook, the air weapons range which is operated by my Department to provide training for aircrews of the Royal Air Force and other NATO nations, and the ammunition and test range. Since 1975, my Department has licensed BMARC and its successor companies to carry out trials of their weapon systems at the ammunition and test range at Donna Nook. Cambridge Military Hospital

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will specify the element of total running costs at the Cambridge military hospital proportionate to the percentage of patients treated on behalf of the NHS in each of the last five years. [30552]

Mr. Soames: The figures are as follows:

1990–91: £7,800,000
1991–92: £7,800,000
1992–93: £12,000,000
1993–94: £15,400,000
1994–95: £15,000,000.

These figures include fixed costs which would in any case have been incurred in the treatment of service patients. In addition, because of changes in budgetary responsibility and accounting procedures during the period, the costs are not entirely comparable year on year.

Porton Down

Mr. Derek Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will agree to the release of relevant individual medical records directly to the Porton Down Volunteers Association, in those cases where individuals have given their consent; and if he will make a statement. [30498]

Mr. Soames: Service medical records could be released to the Porton Down Volunteers Association where there is a right of individual access to those records under the Access to Health Records Act 1990 and the individual concerned has given his or her written authorisation. Such right of individual access applies only to medical records compiled after 1 November 1991. With regard to service medical records not covered by the provisions of the Act and for which there is no right of individual access, release can be made to an individual's doctor or solicitor only when required for the management of a particular case.

IMS Iran Ltd.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on which dates data relating to IMS Iran Ltd. were placed before Ministers. [30091]

Mr. Freeman: The accounts of IMS Iran Ltd. were consolidated with those of International Military Services Ltd. which are submitted to the Secretary of State for Defence each year for approval.

Sir John Bourn

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will set out the period of service with, and nature of duties performed for, his Department by Sir John Bourn. [30062]

Mr. Freeman: Sir John Bourn joined the Air Ministry in 1956. He held a variety of posts in the Ministry of Defence and on loan to other Government Departments culminating in his appointment as deputy under-secretary of state for defence procurement from 1985 until 1988.

RAF Institute of Pathology and Tropical Medicine

Mr. Burden: To ask the Secretary for Defence what assessment has been made in the consideration of possible co-location of the RAF Institute of Pathology and Tropical Medicine with the School of Aviation Medicine of the implications of co-location for support services, appropriate levels of financial resourcing and the need for appropriately trained and qualified personnel. [31025]

Mr. Soames: The Institution of Pathology and Tropical Medicine is planned to close as a separate establishment on 31 March next year, when the bulk of its functions will transfer to the new core service hospital at Haslar. The future location of the institute's aviation pathology and toxicology department is at present the subject of an investment appraisal which will, as a matter of course, take account of all relevant factors.

Mr. Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 20 June, Official Report, column 234, on employees at the RAF Institute of Pathology and Tropical Medicine, how many of those employed are pathologists with a specific responsibility for aircraft investigation; and how many of the others are support staff engaged in aviation pathology. [31024]

Mr. Soames: At present, the Institute of Pathology and Tropical Medicine employs one full-time civilian pathologist with a specific responsibility for aircraft accident investigation. He is assisted, as circumstances require, by four RAF pathologists and six support staff, two of whom are civilians.

Royal Naval Stores Depot, Portsmouth

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what area of storage facilities at MOD Portsmouth remains unused; and if he will make a statement as to its future use. [30039]

Mr. Soames: The storage facilities of the royal naval stores depot at Portsmouth comprise of some 123,000 cubic metres. Of this, an estimated 51,000 cubic metres is currently unused, while the various transfers and refurbishments involved in the "Front Line First" rationalisations are taking place. When this process is completed in 1997, all the depot's storage capacity, except that in the heritage area, will comprise of modern efficient facilities which will be fully utilised. Details of the unused area of storage facilities in the whole of MOD Portsmouth are not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Astra plc

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list those occasions on which his officials met with directors of Astra plc; [30106]

(2) if he will list those occasions on which representatives of Astra plc or its subsidiaries met with officials of his Department in connection with PRB of Belgium; [30110]

(3) if he will list those occasions on which representatives of Astra plc or its subsidiaries met with officials of his Department in connection with Mr. Gerald Bull. [30111]

Mr. Freeman: Aside from the meetings between MOD officials and representatives of Astra plc about which evidence was given to the Trade and Industry Select Committee in February 1992, MOD officials would have had routine contacts with directors of Astra. It is not possible to list all these routine contacts.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Treasury Counsel Fees

Mr. Byers: To ask the Attorney-General pursuant to his answer of 22 May, Official Report, column 451, how much each Treasury counsel retained for civil work received in fees from public funds in 1994–95; of the Treasury counsel based at the central criminal court, how many received between (i) £250,000 to £300,000, (ii) £300,000 to £350,000, (iii) £350,000 to £400,000, (iv) £400,000 to £500,000, (v) in excess of £500,000 from the Crown Prosecution Service for financial year 1994–95.

The Attorney-General: [pursuant to his reply, 21 June 1995, c. 260] Official Report, The figures given for fees paid to Treasury Counsel based at the central criminal court by the Crown Prosecution Service are being checked and a revised table will be made available as soon as possible. However, contrary to the original information provided by the Crown Prosecution Service as set out in the table of 21 June, it is clear from information that has since been made available to me that no Treasury counsel based at the central criminal court received more than £400,000 in payments from the Crown Prosecution Service during the financial year 1994–95.

Crown Prosecution Service

Mr. Booth: To ask the Attorney-General when he expects to lay before Parliament and to publish an annual report of the Crown Prosecution Service for the year 1994–95. [31083]

The Attorney-General: The annual report for the Crown Prosecution Service was laid before Parliament at 11 am today and then published.

Copies have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Colin Cockram (Sentence)

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Attorney-General when representations were received alleging leniency in the sentence passed against Colin Cockram following his conviction in Bristol crown court for wounding Mr. Barry Warne; and by whom, and on what date, a decision to refer the matter to the Court of Appeal was first made public. [31133]

The Attorney-General: On 10 March 1995, following his conviction for wounding with intent to cause grievous bodily harm, Colin Cockram was sentenced to perform 80 hours community service. The Crown Prosecution Service, after taking the advice of trial counsel, decided to forward the papers to me so that I could consider applying for leave to refer the sentence to the Court of Appeal for reconsideration. The papers were received in this Department from the Crown Prosecution Service on 30 March. Treasury Counsel's advice was received on 3 April.

The victim, Mr. Warne, wrote to the Home Secretary on 13 March, complaining about the sentence. The Home Office replied on 30 March and sent a copy of the correspondence to this Department, drawing the sentence to my attention. The correspondence was received here on 31 March. Both the Solicitor-General and I considered the papers and on 6 April, in my absence abroad, the Solicitor-General signed the reference applying for leave to refer the case to the Court of Appeal.

On the same day, officials from my Department lodged the reference with the criminal appeals office and notified the Crown Prosecution Service and the solicitors acting for Mr. Cockram of the Solicitor-General's decision. On the same day, an official of my Department attempted to speak to Mr. Warne at his place of work and a message was left. Mr. Warne later returned the call and was told of the decision. He was also later written to.

By a letter dated 31 May, which arrived at this Department on 7 June, the hon. Member for Bristol, South (Ms Primarolo) wrote to me enclosing a copy of the Home Office reply to Mr. Warne's original letter of 13 March. The Solicitor-General replied to her on 9 June.

I understand that the Bristol branch of the Crown Prosecution Service received written representations from the local police on the 24 March, after the decision to refer the papers to Crown Prosecution Service headquarters had already been made, and that one other item of correspondence has also been received by another Government Department and is in the process of being transferred to my office.

SCOTLAND

Prisoners (HIV)

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) how many prisoners have been infected with HIV while in prison in Scotland; [28462]

(2) how many cases of HIV and AIDS have been reported in Scottish prisons for each year since 1986; [28463]

(3) how many inmates in prisons in Scotland are currently HIV-positive or have AIDS. [28464]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 14 June 1995]: The subject of the questions relates to matters undertaken by the Scottish Prison Service. I have asked its chief executive, Mr. E. W. Frizzell, to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from E. W. Frizzell to Mr. Archy Kirkwood, dated 27 June 1995:

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton has asked me to reply to your questions about the number of prisoners who have been infected with HIV whilst in prison in Scotland; how many cases of HIV and AIDS have been reported in Scottish prisons for each year since 1986; and how many inmates are currently HIV positive or have AIDS in prisons in Scotland.

The only known incidence of HIV transmission inside a Scottish prison occurred at Glenochil in 1993. A group of prisoners, including a number who were HIV positive, shared syringes and needles to inject drugs. Evidence gathered during the medical response to an outbreak of acute, clinical Hepatitis B and HIV, which resulted from this reckless behaviour, indicated that 8 prisoners had become infected with the HIV virus whilst in Glenochil.

Information is not available centrally on how many prisoners had HIV or AIDS in each year since 1986. In 1989, however, the number of prisoners identified as being HIV positive averaged 90. In December 1994, 56 prisoners were known to be HIV positive but not all prisoners will be aware of their HIV status or will choose to disclose it.

Voluntary anonymous saliva tests were carried out in a number of prisons between 1991 and 1995 in order to assess the extent of HIV infection. The results are given in the enclosed table.

Screening prisoners for HIV +: Results of voluntary anonymous saliva tests

Stornoway Sheriff Court

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much was spent on renovation and refurbishment of Stornoway sheriff court since 1990. [29316]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The subject of the question relates to matters undertaken by the Scottish Court Service. I have asked its chief executive, Michael Ewart, to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Michael Ewart to Mr. Calum Macdonald, dated 27 June 1995:

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton has asked me to reply to your question about how much was spent on renovation and refurbishment at Stornoway Sheriff Court since 1990.

Work on the complete restoration and refurbishment of the B Listed, 19th Century Courthouse began in the autumn of 1993. The cost to date is £668,000. This includes £130,000 which is the subject of a claim following the liquidation of the original principal contractor.

Environmentally Sensitive Area

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what percentage of the total land area of Scotland was designated as environmentally sensitive; what financial provision his Department allocated to environmentally sensitive areas in each of the years 1993–94, 1994–95 and 1995–96; what percentage of the total land area of Scotland will be designated as environmentally sensitive; and what financial provision his Department will allocate to environmentally sensitive areas in each of the years 1996–97. [29324]

Sir Hector Monro: About 20 per cent. of Scotland's land area has been designated under the environmentally sensitive areas scheme and there are no plans to designate any further areas. The table sets out the financial provision for the schemes for 1993–94, 1994–95 and 1995–96.

The supply estimate provision for 1996–97 will be decided later this year in the light of forecast demand under the scheme.

Mink

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list those islands in Argyll and Bute which contain a wild mink population. [29622]

Sir Hector Monro: It is known that there are wild mink populations on Mull and Iona.

Sonic Repellants

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what protection there is for marine animals in United Kingdom coastal waters against the adverse effects of underwater sonic repellants employed by fish farmers in Scotland. [29842]

Sir Hector Monro: Sonic repellants have been brought into use as a non-lethal means of preventing predation of farmed fish. I am not aware of any evidence that they pose a threat to marine mammals which approach, but which then can retreat from, fish cages where such devices are in operation.

Women in Business

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what initiatives his Department has to assist and encourage women who want to start their own businesses; and how the success of any initiative is monitored and assessed. [29568]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 21 June 1995]: The Scottish Office Industry Department and its associated economic development agencies, Scottish Enterprise and Highlands and Islands Enterprise, have in place a wide range of measures to assist men or women who wish to start up businesses. The impact of these measures is monitored and periodically evaluated against the objectives set for them.

With regard to the specific needs of women who wish to start their own businesses, Scottish Enterprise published a report in 1994 "Women Starting Businesses—Making It Happen" which summarised its research into the problems and issues in this area. This was followed in December 1994 by the publication of an action plan to implement the recommendations of that report. This action plan, which is in the process of being implemented, sets out a number of specific tasks related to each of the following strategic issues, as set out in the plan:

"Releasing potential–encouraging more women to embrace the notion of becoming entrepreneurs and persuading more of them to 'have a go'.

Education and training—improving the contribution that schools and universities make to nurturing entrepreneurship among women.

The media—using TV, radio and the press to provide more positive encouragement, including promoting realistic role models, for women thinking about setting up in business.

Encouraging more growth companies—addressing the weakness highlighted in research whereby women seem to set up businesses with low aspirations and low growth prospects.

Access to finance—finding ways of improving access to loan and equity finance for women business founders, and improving the encouragement given to women business founders by banks and equity funders.

Informal networking—encouraging women entrepreneurs to make more effective use of their business, social and family networks to develop their businesses.

Support from formal networks–improving the support given to women business founders by local enterprise companies, enterprise trusts and other business advisers in both the private and public sectors."

A range of programmes aimed specifically at promoting business creation by women in their areas has already been put in place by individual local enterprise companies.

I will send the hon. Member copies of both publications referred to and have arranged for them to be placed in the Library of the House.

Prescriptions

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will issue guidance to general practitioners in Scotland relating to the issuing of private prescriptions to NHS patients in line with guidance FHSL (94) 26 issued by the Department of Health; and for what reasons the Scottish Office has not previously done so. [29597]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 21 June 1995]: My officials are considering the nature and content of guidance to be issued to general practitioners in Scotland.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer of 29 March 1995, Official Report, column 702, which further NHS trusts have approached his Department regarding the involvement of private finance in the provision of facilities within their trust; what specific provision within each of these NHS trusts is being considered for private financed initiatives; what companies have been consulted on the possible provision of these facilities in each of the trusts; and what is the value of the services being considered under the private finance initiative for each trust and the current position as regards the formal conclusion of contracts between the NHS trust and the potential investor in the facilities in the case of each NHS trust. [29679]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 21 June 1995]: An exploration of the opportunities under the private finance initiative must be undertaken in relation to all capital projects currently being proposed in the NHS in Scotland. The following is a list of schemes currently in the process of exploration. Within each trust the schemes proposed consist of new clinical facilities and/or equipment. Under the private finance initiative, the trusts will be exploring possibilities for the provision of non-clinical support services in addition to the capital element of the schemes. The value of these services will not be known until proposals come forward from potential private sector partners. Consultation between trusts and private sector companies takes place following the placement of an advertisement in the Official Journal of the European Community. At present, no further trusts have reached the stage of consultation, although many are in the process of preparing and placing advertisements. At present, no contracts have been concluded between the trusts listed and potential private sector partners. The Royal Infirmary of Edinburgh, Hairmyres Hospital and Greater Glasgow Community and Mental Health trusts have all drawn up shortlists of consortia with which a final tendering procedure will be undertaken.

Health Survey

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what recent research his Department has commissioned in respect of a health survey in Scotland. [30477]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: As foreshadowed in our policy statement "Scotland's Health—A Challenge to Us All", a Scottish health survey, commissioned and funded by the Scottish Office, is now under way. The survey focuses particularly on cardiovascular disease and the associated risk factors such as smoking, diet, drinking and exercise. The results, which will be published, will inform the development of policy and action in this priority area of health in Scotland.

Enterprise Zones

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many people are employed (a) full-time and (b) part-time in each enterprise zone. [30702]

Mr. Kynoch: There are currently 2,138 full-time and 52 part-time employees working in the Inverclyde enterprise zone and 1,974 full-time and 226 part-time employees working in the Lanarkshire zone.

Rights of Audience

Mr. Hamilton: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he intends to consult the Lord President of the Court of Session on the implementation of section 25 of the Law Reform (Miscellaneous Provisions) (Scotland) Act 1990; and what considerations underlie the timing of the consultation. [30479]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I will consult the Lord President shortly. We undertook not to implement section 25 of the Law Reform (Miscellaneous Provisions) (Scotland) Act 1990 until the provisions of section 24 had time to become established.

Edinburgh Royal Infirmary

Mr. Chisholm: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what services in the proposed new Royal Infirmary of Edinburgh will be operated by the private sector. [30813]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 26 June 1995]: The Royal Infirmary trust has yet to finalise details of services to be provided. In the information provided by the trust to prospective private sector partners, the following services are indicated as being those in which proposals for operation are sought:

Catering services

Estates Management

Buildings and equipment maintenance, equipment replacement

Domestic and housekeeping services

Management of residential accommodation

Portering and security services, car parking
Transport services
Supplies services
Grounds and gardens
Laundry and linen services
Switchboard and reception services and other administration
Sterile services
Medical records and information technology

Mr. Chisholm: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what estimate he has made of the revenue consequences of annual charges to a private sector owner of the proposed new Royal Infirmary of Edinburgh. [30812]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 26 June 1995]: The Royal Infirmary trust has yet to proceed to final tender stage and thus on-going revenue consequences are unknown. Charges specified by the private sector consortia will be compared against those arising from a publicly funded option so that best value for money can be achieved.

Mental Health

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland which organisations concerned with the needs of citizens with mental illness, or their families, have made representations voicing (a) support for and (b) opposition to those clauses in the Mental Health (Patients in the Community) Bill [Lords] which relate to Scotland; and if he will make a statement. [30708]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Scottish Office consulted widely in December 1993 about limiting long-term leave of absence from detention in hospital. A further consultation took place in December 1994 on the basis of detailed proposals for community care orders. A consultation was carried out in March 1994 about the proposals for the return of patients absent without leave. The organisations consulted were as follows:

[2] Consulted only about the detailed proposals for community care orders.

Except where there was a request for confidentiality, copies of the responses are being placed in the Library. A variety of views were expressed. Some of the organisations consulted did not make a response.

WALES

Patients Charter

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he expects to send the embargoed letter to the chief executives of Welsh health authorities, family health service authorities, national health service trusts and the unit general managers relating to the publication of the NHS patients charter performance tables, ready for Charter Week. [29235]

Mr. Rod Richards [holding answer 19 June 1995]: There are no plans to issue such a letter. Chief executives and general managers have been notified by Welsh Office officials.

School Funding

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many representations he has received from school governors in (a) Swansea, (b) West Glamorgan and (c) Wales about (i) school funding for 1995–96 and (ii) further funding. [29510]

Mr. Richards: The Department has received many representations concerning school funding in 1995–96, and future funding, from many parties, including school governors.

The figures exclude the small number of injuries reported to other relevant enforcing authorities, chiefly mines, railways and explosives inspectorates, for which a regional breakdown is not readily available. Data shown in the table prior to 1990–91 exclude reports made to the quarries inspectorate.

Regional Emergency Committee

Mr. Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish the names and designation of the members of the Regional Emergency Committee in Wales, together with the dates on which the committee has met in each of the past three years. [29988]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The Regional Emergency Committee is convened in the event of a serious emergency. This has not happened in the last three years. Members meet informally from time to time to keep in contact. The committee is chaired by the Welsh Office and the organisations represented on it include appropriate Welsh Office divisions, the police, the fire service, the Army, other Government Departments, the Post Office and the telecommunications industry. Other organisations are represented should circumstance require.

Mortgage Repossessions

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what his latest estimate of the number of homes repossessed in Wales in the last five years. [30162]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: In the first quarter of 1995, county courts in Wales made 444 mortgage possession orders together with 647 suspended orders, whereby the mortgagees are given an opportunity to clear their debts. Information is not recorded centrally on the number of cases in which mortgage possession orders led to warrants to have the defendants evicted.

Alzheimer's Disease

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how he proposes to help people who suffer from Alzheimer's disease; and if he will make a statement. [30166]

Mr. Richards: Local and health authorities have responsibility for assessing the needs of their residents and to plan services with the resources available to them. This includes individuals who have Alzheimer's disease.

Grant Payments

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what provision for compensation in respect of the late payment of grants is available to farmers. [29994]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Claims for compensation are dealt with on their merit in the light of the circumstances of each case.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many apprenticeships exist in Wales. [30163]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Estimates from the labour force survey for winter 1994–95 indicate that in Wales some 321,000 people have completed apprenticeships and 13,000 are still doing apprenticeships.

Noise Nuisance

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what proposals he has to deal with (a) noise nuisance and (b) other forms of anti-social behaviour by neighbours. [30165]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Proposals to help tackle neighbour noise nuisance were included in the Government's recent consultation document "Review of the Effectiveness of Neighbour Noise Controls". The comments received on these proposals will be considered before deciding whether to proceed with legislation. As for anti-social behaviour by neighbours, local authorities already have a number of powers to help them deal with the problem. In terms of anti-social council tenants, the Welsh Office recently consulted interested parties on the possibility of giving councils a new discretionary power to introduce probationary tenancies.

Negative Equity

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his estimate of the number of homes deemed to suffer negative equity in Wales. [30161]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: An estimated 11,000 households in Wales, representing 1.3 per cent. of the owner-occupied stock, were affected by negative equity in the first quarter in 1995. These estimates are prepared by the Department of the Environment on the basis of a house price index. The estimates are sensitive to the assumptions made and are intended only to provide a broad indication of the level of negative equity.

Welsh Health Survey

Mr. Redmond: To as the Secretary of State for Wales what recent research his Department has commissioned in respect of a health survey for Wales, and if he will make a statement. [30478]

Mr. Richard: The Welsh health survey was launched at the end of April 1995. It is a postal survey using a sample of 50,000 of the adult population drawn from the electoral register, and is designed to provide an accurate picture of the health of the people of Wales, the way the NHS is used, and areas where services could be improved.

The main aim of the survey is to collect information on representative samples of the population with a range of illnesses and disabilities and information on comparable groups of healthy people, without using any medical records. The information will help those responsible for the NHS in Wales to develop services more finely attuned to the needs of the general population, to carry out further improvements in services, and to inform the development of the patients charter for Wales.

The results of the survey will be published towards the end of this year. Copies of the questionnaire have been placed in the Library of the House.

Unemployment

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the ratio of unemployed persons for each vacant job for each county in Wales. [30604]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The information requested is shown in the following table. The figures relate to the numbers of claimant unemployed and the number of unfilled vacancies at jobcentres. The vacancy figures do not represent the total number of vacancies in the economy. Latest estimates suggest that nationally about one third of all vacancies are notified to jobcentres.

Number of claimant unemployed persons for each unfilled vacancy, May 1995[1]

Clwyd	6.6
Dyfed	6.6
Gwent	8.7
Gwynedd	6.2
Mid Glamorgan	9.4

Mentally Ill (Accommodation)

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish for each of the health authorities in Wales and for Wales as a whole the number of places available in accommodation schemes for people with severe mental illness; what proposals he has to promote high level support accommodation schemes for the severely mentally ill; and if he will make a statement. [28728]

Mr. Richards [holding answer 26 June 1995]: The required information is not available on a health authority basis nor is it possible to isolate information in respect of severe mental illness.

A large proportion of accommodation schemes for people with mental illness are the responsibility of local authorities. Places available in residential care homes—private, voluntary and local authority—as at 31 March 1994 are as follows:

Local authority	Places
Clwyd	117
Dyfed	134
Gwent	50
Gwynedd	82
Mid Glamorgan	69
Powys	51
South Glamorgan	83
West Glamorgan	144
Wales	730

Notes:
These figures exclude small homes—ie less than four residents.

The assessment of need, provision of appropriate accommodation and the monitoring of the quality of care is a matter for local determination.

Regional Enterprise Grant

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the companies awarded regional enterprise grant, investment project in the counties of Gwynedd and Clwyd for each year since 1988. [30256]

Mr. Richards [holding answer 26 June 1995]: Since 1988, 29 companies in Gwynedd and 328 companies in Clwyd have received offers of regional enterprise grant, investment. A complete list of these companies has been placed in the Library of the House.

Private Prescriptions

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received concerning the use of private prescription forms by (a) general practitioners and (b) pharmacists at the request of patients for those prescription items whose cost of production and distribution is lower than the standard prescription charge; and if he will make a statement. [30666]

Mr. Richards [holding answer 26 June 1995]: None.

Millennium Commission

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what proposals he has to notify the Millennium Commission of the priority rating for the projects shortlisted by the Commission for Wales. [31007]

Mr. Richards [holding answer Monday 26 June 1995]: Decisions on the selection of projects for funding are entirely a matter for the millennium commissioners, who are independent of Government. We have been invited by the Secretary of State for National Heritage to let us have any comments on the short list of major projects to help him inform his contribution to the deliberations of the commission.

School Leavers

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many young people in Wales who reached the school leaving age in 1994 (a) stayed at school to seek qualifications higher than GCSEs or equivalent, (b) stayed at school to take further GCSEs (c) left school to take courses of further or higher education and (d) are not in training, education or employment. [31019]

Mr. Richards [holding answer 26 June 1995]: The available information is contained in the following table. The figures relate to pupils on school rolls in LEA-maintained, grant-maintained and independent schools at the time of the January 1994 census, who would have attained school leaving age by 31 August 1994. The available information does not distinguish, in relation to those staying at school, between those proposing to do further GCSEs and those undertaking higher qualifications.

Intended destinations of pupils of school leaving age

Pupils continuing full time education at:
School	13,535
Further or Higher Education College	9,850
Pupils entering into full time employment or Youth Training	4,720
Other (including part time education, part time employment, unemployment or unknown)	3,915

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many young people in Wales reached the school leaving age in 1994. [31017]

Mr. Richards [holding answer 26 June 1995]: Some 32,339 pupils on school rolls at the time of the January 1994 schools census would have attained school leaving age by 31 August 1994.

Training and Enterprise Councils

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was Welsh Office expenditure on TEC programmes for each of the years since their inception. [30965]

Mr. Richards: As the information requested will take some time to collate, I will write to the hon. Member as soon as possible and place a copy of my reply in the Library of the House.

Suicides

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many suicides there have been in Wales in each of the last 10 years. [30984]

Mr. Richards [holding answer 26 June 1995]: The latest available information for Welsh residents is in the following table:

(11) what is his estimate of the total number of university students with a student loan, in each year from 1987–88 to 1997–98. [30326]

Mr. Richards: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given today by my hon. Friend the Under-Secretary of State for Further and Higher Education.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his estimate of the staff to student ratio at universities, and their forerunners, for each year from 1974–75 to 1997–98. [30335]

Mr. Richards: Information available on the staff/student ratio in the constituent colleges of the university of Wales and at other institutions providing higher education in Wales from 1986–87 to 1993–94 can be found in the following table. Comparable information for years prior to 1986–87 is not available for both sectors. Data for the year 1994–95 have not yet been collected. There are no projected figures.

Mr. Richards: The information is not available in the form requested. The average maintenance grants received by mandatory award holders domiciled in England and Wales in the academic years 1984–85 to 1993–94 are shown in the table set out in the answer given today by my hon. Friend the Under-Secretary of State for further and Higher Education.

In Wales, the estimated income from tuition fees and average recurrent grant from the Higher Education Funding Council for Wales since its inception in 1992 per student is around £4,500 in each of the financial years 1993–94 to 1995–96.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the drop-out rate for university and polytechnic courses in each year since 1979. [30319]

Mr. Richards: Information relating to drop-out rates for Welsh institutions is not collected centrally.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what are his estimates of the university or polytechnic total student population for each year from 1974–75 to 1998–99. [30341]

Mr. Richards: Information on the number of student enrolments on higher education courses at publicly funded institutions in Wales from 1974–75 to 1997–98 can be found in the following table. Comparable 1998–99 figures will be available later in the year as a direct consequence of this years public expenditure survey.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the backlog of building repair and maintenance work at universities. [30336]

Mr. Richards: Surveys undertaken in the early 1990s of the higher education estate in Wales showed a backlog of maintenance and repair which would cost just over £90 million to correct. Work to the value of £30 million has already been undertaken, including all work necessary to meet health and safety requirements. The Higher Education Funding Council for Wales has a target to eliminate the remaining backlog of work by 1999 at the latest.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his estimate of the (a) average cost and (b) marginal cost of university students in 1995–96. [30344]

Mr. Richards: The average funding council grant and income from fees per higher education student in Wales for the financial year 1995–96 is estimated at around £4,500. No information is available for marginal costs.

Local Government and Housing Act 1989

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what responsibilities his Department has for ensuring that local authorities in Wales comply with the regulations of the Local Government and Housing Act 1989; and if he will make a statement on the steps he has taken during the past two years with regard to such compliance. [30867]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: A large number of powers are vested in the Secretary of State under provisions in the Local Government and Housing Act 1989. They cover a number of different subject areas, including local authority membership, economic development, local government finance, local authority companies, housing and housing finance. If the hon. Member would indicate those parts of the 1989 Act that he is particularly interested in, or has concerns about, I will write to him.

EDUCATION

Grant-maintained Schools

15. Mr. Riddick: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what is the number of pupils who currently attend grant-maintained schools in the United Kingdom. [29122]

Mr. Robin Squire: We estimate that about 670,000 pupils are currently being educated in grant-maintained schools throughout the United Kingdom.

17. Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Education when she last met the National Union of Teachers to discuss grant-maintained schools. [29124]

Mr. Squire: My right hon. Friend has not had a meeting with the NUT at which grant-maintained schools were the principal subject for discussion.

28. Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if she will a make a statement about the progress and performance of grant-maintained schools. [29135]

Mr. Squire: For three successive years, GM comprehensive schools have, on average, achieved better GCSE results than their local education authority counterparts. Similarly, in 1994—the first year for which adequate data are available—GM primary schools achieved better key stage 1 results than LEA primary schools. These comparisons remain true even if account is taken of socio-economic differences in the schools' intakes.

Mature Students

16. Mr. Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what forms of public maintenance support are available to mature students in higher education. [29123]

Mr. Boswell: Mature students, like other students, are generally eligible for a variety of forms of public support. These include mandatory awards and student loans for most full-time first higher education courses, discretionary awards from local authorities, and various postgraduate bursaries.

Religious and Minority Schools, Harrow

18. Mr. Dykes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what recent representations she has received for new religious and minority schools in the London borough of Harrow. [29125]

Mr. Robin Squire: My right hon. Friend has received no formal representations recently. The Department is in contact with representatives of the United Synagogue Board of Education about its proposals to establish a new Jewish voluntary-aided primary school in Harrow.

School Buildings

19. Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what estimate she has made of the cost of outstanding repairs to schools. [29126]

Mr. Squire: Estimates based on a 1991 National Audit Office report suggested that the cost of structural repairs and maintenance to local authority school buildings was around £1.4 billion at current prices, but since 1990–91, some £3.5 billion has been made available from all sources for capital work in schools.

20. Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if she will make a statement on the standards of school buildings. [29127]

Mr. Squire: The main standards for school buildings are set out in the Education (School Premises) Regulations 1981. Building work at schools is covered by the Department's construction standards.

School Discipline

21. Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what measures she is taking to help schools enforce firm discipline. [29128]

Mr. Forth: In May 1994, guidance on pupil behaviour and discipline was sent to all schools, as part of the "Pupils with Problems" pack. The guidance aims to help schools maintain and improve discipline. In September 1994, the Department published an anti-bullying pack to help schools combat bullying. We are now considering what more might be done to support schools on discipline and behaviour, building on previous guidance.

Higher Education

22. Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what estimate she has made of how many students will be entering higher education this autumn. [29129]

Mr. Boswell: Our spending plans have allowed for overall funded student numbers in England to rise by 22,000 between the 1994–95 and 1995–96 financial years. This should enable approaching one in three young people to enter full-time higher education this autumn.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what is her estimate of the backlog of building repair and maintenance work at universities. [30346]

Mr. Boswell: The current backlog of building repair and maintenance work for academic buildings is estimated to cost £900 million. This figure is derived from accommodation condition surveys conducted in the early 1990s.

The Higher Education Funding Council for England, and its predecessor bodies, have spent £386 million over the past five years on grants for backlog maintenance, and HE institutions themselves have spent £216 million during the same period. The HEFCE plans to spend a further £100 million on grant aid for projects over the next three years to which it expects institutions to contribute an additional £300 million. The remaining less urgent work will need to be funded by institutions themselves.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what is her estimate of the (a) average cost and (b) marginal cost of university students in 1995–96. [30354]

Mr. Boswell: The average funding council grant and income from tuition fees per higher education student for the financial year 1995–96 is estimated as around £4,500. No information is available on the marginal cost.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what is her estimate of the staff-student ratio at universities and their forerunners for each year from 1974–75 to 1997–98. [30345]

Mr. Boswell: Information on the student-staff ratios in former English UFC and PCFC funded institutions was presented in table G of the Department's annual report, Cm 2810, published in March this year, a copy of which is in the Library. This table provides information for both sectors for the academic years 1990–91 to 1992–93. Information for earlier years, calculated on a different basis, is available in previous departmental reports.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what was the average cost to the Exchequer of each student in university education for each year from 1984–85 to 1994–95, broken down by (a) maintenance grant, (b) fees and (c) other. [30353]

Mr. Boswell: The information is not available in the form requested. The average maintenance grants received by mandatory award holders domiciled in England and Wales in the academic years 1984–85 to 1993–94 are shown in the table. Since 1990–91, most students in full-time education up to first degree level have had access to student loans. The average loan to students studying in England and Wales in the academic years 1990–91 to 1993–94 are also shown.

In England, the estimated average funding council grant and income from tuition fees per student for the financial years in question are also provided.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what are her estimates of the university or polytechnic total student population for each year from 1974–75 to 1998–99. [30351]

Mr. Boswell: Projections of the student population for home full-time and sandwich students in GB institutions are presently not available for years beyond 1997–98. However, comparable 1998–99 projections will be available later in the year as a direct consequence of this years public expenditure survey.

In addition, the number of students in English institutions is published in the Department for Education and Office for Standards in Education departmental report, copies of which are held in the Library. Following is table G: Higher Education student and staff numbers, England 1989–90 to 1997–98, from the March 95 edition.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Education (1) what is her estimate of the annual cost of providing the full maintenance grant to all university students; [30331]

(2) what would be the annual cost of paying (a) all fees for, and (b) the full maintenance grant to, all part-time university students. [30330]

Mr. Boswell: The cost in either case would depend upon the decisions taken about eligible courses, their duration, the maximum payable fee and maintenance grant, and the account to be taken of the personal circumstances of potentially eligible students.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Education (1) what has been the value of the full university student grant for each year since 1974–75 in 1994 prices; [30347]

(2) if she will list the change to university and polytechnic student maintenance grant entitlement since 1974. [30349]

Mr. Boswell: The information requested is given in the table.

[1] The standard maintenance grant rate is that applicable to students living away from home and studying outside London.

[2] Since 1990–91 student support has included grant and loan; the grant was frozen at the 1990–91 level (ie: £2,265) until 1994–95 when it was reduced to £2,040. Figures for 1990–91 and subsequent years include grant plus full year loan for students living away from home.

[3] Based on the Retail Price Index (excluding mortgage interest payments) in September at the beginning of each academic year.

[4] Upto and including 1983–84 students claimed, and were individually reimbursed, full travelling expenses; form 1984–85 most students had to meet travel costs from within their main rate of grant.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what was the drop-out rate for university and polytechnic courses in each year since 1979. [30327]

Mr. Boswell: Full-time and sandwich first degree drop-out rates for each year from 1982–1983 to 1992–1993 are shown in the table. The figures are published in the 1995 and 1994 departmental annual reports.

The figures show that drop-out rates have fluctuated but they appear low by international standards.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what would be the cost of reducing the level of university fees paid by non-European Community country students to the fee levels paid by students from European Community Countries. [30333]

Mr. Boswell: Information on fees for overseas students, which are set separately by each university and college, is not available.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what is her estimate of the cost in the current year of restoring the value of the student maintenance grant to its real 1979 level. [30352]

Mr. Boswell: The cost would depend on whether or not the changes made to the student support system since 1979, including the major changes made in 1990 when loans were introduced, were to be reversed.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Education, what was the average level of student loan for university students in 1994–95. [30332]

Mr. Boswell: The average level of loan for all borrowers in the academic year 1993–94, the latest year for which data are available, was £736. Separate figures for university students are not available.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Education, what has been the total Government expenditure on university and polytechnic maintenance grants, for each year since 1974–75 in 1994 prices. [30348]

Mr. Boswell: The information requested for England and Wales is shown in the table.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what is her estimate of the number of students in higher education in the year 2000. [30328]

Mr. Boswell: Projections for students in Great Britain institutions of higher education are not available for academic years beyond 1997–98.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what is her estimate of the total number of university students with a student loan in each year from 1987–88 to 1997–98. [30334]

Mr. Boswell: The information is not readily available in the format requested. The Student Loans Company first issued loans in the academic year 1990–91. The total numbers of loans issued in each academic year to students in higher education are:

1990–91: 180,000

1991–92: 261,000

1992–93: 345,000

1993–94: 430,000

The latest forecast of the number of student loans that will be issued in 1994–95 is 525,000.

The forecast of student loan numbers, as used in calculating the figures for the supply estimates, was:

1995–96: 672,000

1996–97: 731,000

1997–98: 768,000

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what was the percentage of university/polytechnic students entitled to (a) full maintenance grant and (b) no maintenance grant in each year since 1979. [30350]

Mr. Boswell: The information requested on this topic which the Department collects relates only to mandatory award holders domiciled in England and Wales. The available information is shown in the table.

1991–92	39	25
1992–93	42	24
1993–94	44	22

Note:

[1] Up to 1984–85 all mandatory award holders received at least a non-zero minimum maintenance grant (£335 in 1979–90 and £410 in 1983–84).

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education to what extent maintenance for younger children assessed under the Child Support Act 1991 is taken into account in assessing parental contributions towards grants for students in higher education; and if she will make a statement. [31213]

Mr. Boswell: Certain payments which are made by others for the benefit of a student are treated as part of the gross income of the parent in assessing that parent's contribution to the student's grant. These payments include any made under a trust deed or other enactment or instrument for or towards the maintenance, education or other benefit of the student, or of any person dependent on the student's parent, and include payments assessed under the Child Support Act. Where a parent makes such payments in respect of his children, other than the student whose grant is being assessed, and those children are wholly or mainly financial dependent on him, his contribution to the student's grant is reduced by £75.

Unemployed Graduates

23. Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what percentage of first degree graduates where unemployed in the December following graduation in the latest year for which figures are available. [29130]

Mr. Boswell: Short-term graduate unemployment increased during the recession. But 1993 provisional figures for England show increased numbers going straight into employment and a fall in the proportion believed unemployed in the December following graduation to 12 per cent. As the economy improves, graduates should be well placed to find jobs.

Class Sizes, Barnsley

24. Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what assessment she has made of class sizes in schools in Barnsley in the current financial year. [29131]

Mr. Robin Squire: Information on class sizes is derived from returns made by individual schools to the Department in January each year. This will include class size information for maintained nursery, primary and secondary schools in Barnsley. In January 1994 the average size of one-teacher classes in Barnsley was 27.4 for maintained primary schools and 22.9 for maintained secondary schools. Information for January 1995 will be available in the autumn.

Science

25. Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what percentage of 16-year-olds last year went on to study an A-level science subject. [29132]

Mr. Boswell: This information is not held centrally in the required form. In 1993, at the end of the academic year, 10.7 per cent. of 18-year-olds had at least one science GCE A-level compared with 8 per cent. in 1980.

University Fees

26. Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what plans she has to redistribute the student top-up tuition fees for Oxbridge colleges to all British universities. [29133]

Mr. Boswell: There are no plans to redistribute Oxbridge college fees in this way. A college fee is paid in recognition of the tuition and other facilities that the colleges provide to their students. The Higher Education Funding Council for England takes account of the Oxbridge colleges' fee income in determining the level of grant payable to the universities of Oxford and Cambridge and abates those universities' grants accordingly.

Nursery Education

27. Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if she will make a statement on the progress to date on the extension of nursery education provision. [29134]

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Education when she expects to make a statement on Government plans to widen the availability of nursery education; what is the estimated cost of these proposals, and if she will make a statement. [29365]

Mr. Forth: My right hon. Friend and I have been considering a range of options for implementing the Prime Minister's commitment to provide, over time, a pre-school place for every four-year-old whose parents wish to take it up. An announcement will be made as soon as the details have been finalised.

Bradford (Ministerial Visit)

29. Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Education when she intends next to visit Bradford for discussions with the local education authority. [29136]

Mr. Robin Squire: My right hon. Friend enjoyed visiting schools in Bradford on 1 March. There are no immediate plans for a return visit.

Music Teaching

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what assessment she has made of musical instrument teaching in schools and changes since 1985. [29263]

Mr. Forth: The Office of Standards in Education is responsible for reporting on the standards of music teaching in schools. It has recently published a review of its inspection findings in music in 1993–94, a copy of which is in the Library.

Sixth-form and Further Education

Ms Tessa Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what proportion of 16-year-olds stay on at school or further education colleges in (a) Southwark, (b) Lambeth, (c) Camden, (d) Hammersmith, (e) Birmingham, (f) Leeds, (g) Newcastle, and which of these authorities provide assistance with their travel cost.

Mr. Boswell: The proportions of 16-year-olds in full-time and part-time education in inner London, Birmingham, Leeds and Newcastle in the 1993–94 academic year are shown in the table:

Percentage

	Full-time	Full and part-time
Inner London	74	78
Birmingham	70	77
Leeds	66	78
Newcastle upon Tyne	68	75

Figures for individual inner London boroughs cannot be estimated reliably.

Information on authorities providing assistance with travel costs is not held centrally.

Further Education Institutions

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education (1) what are the total units of activity done or estimated to be done at further education institutions in (a) 1993–94, (b) 1994–95 and 1995–96; [31216]

(2) what is the percentage change in the average level of funding per unit at further education institutions, using 1993–94 as a base, in (a) 1994–95 and (b) 1995–96; [31215]

(3) what are the figures for the average level of funding per unit of activity at further education institutions in (a) 1993–94, (b) 1994–95 and (c) 1995–96. [31214]

Mr. Boswell: Details of the allocations of the funding to colleges are matters for the Further Education Funding Council. I am therefore asking the council's chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

School Leavers

Sir Irvine Patnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what was the total number of school leavers in the United Kingdom for each of the last five years. [31148]

Mr. Boswell: Data on school leavers in England, and hence the United Kingdom, were collected only up to 1991–92. The table shows the available information.

Pupils leaving school in the United Kingdom, 1988–89 to 1991–92

Teachers' Pensions Agency

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many representations were received to her proposals to privatise the administration of the Teachers' Pensions Agency; and how many were opposed to it. [31266]

Mr. Robin Squire: I refer the hon. Member to table 1 of the paper "The Future of the Teachers' Pensions Agency (TPA): Results of the Government's consultation exercise", which I placed in the Library of the House on 7 June 1995.

We had made no proposals, either before or during that consultation exercise, to let a contract to administer the teachers' superannuation scheme. My announcement of 7 June, Official Report, columns 205–7, said that we shall invite expressions of interest for a contract, but that we shall let such a contract only if it would provide better value for money than keeping the administration of the scheme in the public sector.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs by how much Government spending has changed in 1994–95 as a result of the private finance initiative; what is the estimated effect in 1995–96; how many jobs are to be created by schemes approved to date under the initiative and how many have been lost as a consequence in the public sector; and what is the forecast of transfer of employment from public to private sector over the last five years because of the initiative. [30841]

Mr. Goodlad: Spending by the FCO, including the Overseas Development Administration, did not change during 1994–95 as a result of the private finance initiative. Savings will be achieved in 1995–96 if better value for money can be secured under the PFI; it is not possible to forecast the impact on employment.

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many schemes and to what value have been approved in 1994–95 under the private finance initiative; what are the estimates for the current financial year; how many schemes are currently being considered and at what value; for how long have they been considered and how many have been in the assessment process for over (a) six months and (b) 12 months; and what was the average length of time taken to assess schemes so far approved. [30840]

Mr. Goodlad: No schemes were approved under the private finance initiative in the FCO, including the Overseas Development Administration, during 1994–95. The FCO faces special considerations beyond its control (e.g. legal requirements overseas) and it is not yet possible to estimate the numbers or value of capital projects to which the PFI can be applied in 1995–96. Currently two overseas building projects are at the feasibility stage and expressions of interest have been invited for PFI options in up to five projects within the FCO's communications strategy. The projects have been under assessment as PFI schemes for less than six months.

Capital Spending

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the expected capital spending figure for his Department for 1994–95; and what is the latest budget figure. [30882]

Mr. Goodlad: A total of £138 million and £149 million in 1994–95 and 1995–96 respectively.

Common Agriculture Policy

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the reform of the common agriculture policy to permit the further enlargement of the European Union requires amendment of articles 38 to 47 of the EC treaty will be reviewed as part of the 1996 intergovernmental conference. [31264]

Mr. David Davis: No. Reform of the CAP is possible without treaty amendments, as the 1992 MacSharry reforms showed. We will continue to press in the appropriate fora for the further reform of the CAP needed to permit EU enlargement.

UN Troops

Mr. Grocott: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list those countries where troops under United Nations authority are currently stationed, including in each case the numbers and nationalities of the troops involved. [30762]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: There are currently 16 UN operations, involving the deployment of over 64,000 troops from 84 countries. A full list of troop contributions to current United Nations peacekeeping operations has been placed in the House of Commons Library.

Inter-Parliamentary Union

Dame Jill Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will support the initiative of the Inter-Parliamentary Union in placing the topic of co-operation between the United Nations and the IPU on the agenda of the General Assembly of the United Nations. [30943]

Mr. Baldry: We broadly welcome closer co-operation between the United Nations and the Inter-Parliamentary Union. We will carefully consider the draft resolution which Senegal has requested to be included in the next session of the General Assembly.

Nuclear Testing

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the French Government concerning its resumption of nuclear testing in the Pacific. [31085]

Mr. David Davis: None. We have, however, close contacts with the French Government on a wide range of defence questions, including nuclear matters, and they are aware of our views.

UN Conference on Women

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the adequacy of arrangements for the participation of non-governmental organisations in the United Nations fourth international conference on women. [31086]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The Chinese authorities have accepted the criteria for arrangements at the conference set by the NGO facilitating committee. We are concerned that facilities should be consistent with those provided at other UN conferences and will continue to monitor progress made by the Chinese to meet their commitments.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations concerning the Chinese Government's one child policy he made to the UN in connection with the choice of venue for the UN conference on women. [28948]

Mr. Goodlad [holding answer 19 June 1995]: None. Peking was chosen in accordance with the UN practice that the venue of the world conference on women should rotate geographically. The Chinese Government are fully aware of UK concerns about their family planning policy and its implementation.

Gibraltar

Mr. Trimble: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list all the EC directives that he is asking the Gibraltar Government to implement. [31088]

Mr. David Davis: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. and learned Member for Fife, North-East (Mr. Campbell) on 27 June 1995, Official Report, column 543.

Kashmir

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussion he has had with the Indian Government to ensure that the International Red Cross and similar organisations are allowed free and unrestricted entry into the Indian-occupied area of Kashmir to administer help and aid to people in need of such services; and if he will make a statement. [31098]

Mr. Baldry: This is a subject that we have discussed regularly with the Indian Government. We welcome the signing of the memorandum of understanding on 22 June between the Indian Government and the ICRC, which will allow the latter to operate in Jammu and Kashmir.

Diplomats

Mr. Hutton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which British ambassadors or high commissioners use Rolls Royce cars in connection with their official duties overseas; and what was the cost of purchasing and operating such vehicles in each of the last five years. [28319]

Mr. Goodlad [holding answer 14 June 1995]: Rolls-Royce cars are in use at British diplomatic missions in:

Bonn
Paris
Tokyo
Washington
Brasilia
New York UKRep
Peking
Riyadh
Canberra

Purchasing and Operating Costs

1990–91: 31,221
1991–92: 37,085
1992–93: 96,846
1993–94: 133,317
1994–95: 191,804

These figures include the cost of discreetly armoured vehicles whose conversion and running costs are far higher than those of normal cars. They also include the cost of cars no longer in use in Pretoria and Moscow.

TREASURY

Bank of England

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what is the annual cost of operating the regional office of the Bank of England in Bristol; and what proportion of those costs is staffing costs; [30329]

(2) what is the annual cost for recreational facilities for staff at the Bank of England. [30200]

(3) what is the annual cost of operating the regional office of the Bank of England in Birmingham; and what proportion of those costs is staffing costs; [30328]

(4) what is the annual cost of operating the regional office of the Bank of England in Newcastle; and what proportion of those costs is staffing costs; [30198]

(5) what is the annual cost of operating the regional office of the Bank of England in Manchester; and what proportion of those costs is staffing costs; [30197]

(6) what is the annual cost of operating the Roehampton recreational and sporting area of the Bank of England; [30201]

(7) what is the annual cost of catering and hospitality (a) in the governor's and deputy governor's departments and (b) in the whole of the Bank of England; [30329]

(8) what is the annual cost of operating the regional office of the Bank of England in Leeds; and what proportion of those costs is staffing costs. [30199]

Mr. Nelson: The annual operating expenses of the bank's branches are £8.6 million, of which £6.4 million relates to staff. The expenses of recreational facilities for staff at the Bank of England, including the Roehampton sports centre, and of catering and hospitality, are not separately available. The bank's total operating expenses in 1994–95 were £238 million, of which £140 million related to staff.

Scotch Whisky

Sir David Steel: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the change in the amount of scotch whisky released for sale since the rise in duty imposed on spirits in the 1994 mini-budget, and on the loss to the Revenue. [30035]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The figures relating to spirits consumption since the increase in the rate of duty following the Budget should be read in the context of the cyclical nature of spirits sales. Little significance can be read into off season figures. The main season for spirits sales is the Christmas period, and the industry had a good Christmas in 1994. There was a greatly increased level of activity during late 1994 when the industry, quite understandably, took advantage of the delay between the announcement of the increase and the date of implementation to make substantial clearances during December.

Prices Increases

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish the non-food items listed in table 3 of the "CSO First Release" (95)91 in rank order of price increase since (a) May 1994 and (b) August 1992 indicating which increases he classifies as inflationary; and what is the basis for this classification. [30004]

Mr. Nelson: The information requested is given in the tables. Any increases over 12 months in the retail prices index component indices contributes to the all items' 12 monthly rate of inflation.

(a) Retail Prices Index: Sections excluding food ranked by percentage increases May 1994 to May 1995

Customs and Excise Information Systems

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to privatise, contractorise or give agency status to the VAT computer facilities at Shoeburyness and Southend-on-Sea. [30511]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: There are no plans to privatise the Customs and Excise information systems facility at Shoeburyness and Southend-on-Sea or to give it full agency status.

The system development and service delivery aspects of the organisation were recently market tested. The in-house team was awarded the resulting service agreements because they demonstrated best value for money. The division that provides these services, and other functions in addition to those recently market tested, is an executive unit, in accordance with the Department's next steps strategy, but full agency status is not considered appropriate.

PSBR

Mr. Shore: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the public sector borrowing requirement from 1965–66 to 1994–95 (a) in cash terms, (b) adjusted for inflation and (c) as a percentage of gross domestic product. [30796]

Mr. Aitken: The following table sets out the information requested.

[1] Real terms figures calculated using the GDP deflator.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 21 June, Official Report, column 262, what considerations underlie the change of his objective for fiscal policy from the policy of bringing the public sector borrowing requirement back to balance over the medium term, as set out in the "Financial Statement and Budget Report 1995–96"; to the policy of bringing the PSBR back towards balance, as set out in his answer; and if he will make a statement. [31250]

Mr. Aitken [holding answer 27 June 1995]: There has been no change in the Government's fiscal objective. The answer of 21 June repeats what my right hon. and learned Friend the Chancellor said in his Mansion house speech on 14 June.

National Lottery

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if grants made through funds derived from the national lottery are classified as public expenditure. [30997]

Mr. Aitken: These grants are classified as general Government expenditure in the national accounts. However, as my right hon. and learned Friend the Chancellor announced on 22 June, the grants are to be excluded from the definition of the public spending objective as well as from the public expenditure control total.

Open Government

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to the reply to the hon. Member for Southport (Mr. Banks) Official Report, 19 June, columns 7–8 on the Customs and Excise open government policy, to whom notice 950 has been circulated; and if he will place a copy in the Library. [31149]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Notice 950 has been circulated to all Customs and Excise's open government contact points, inquiry offices and advice centres, and to the independent adjudicator's office and the Office of the Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration. Copies have been placed in the Library.

Midwives' Allowances

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer which allowances paid to midwives are tax deductible; what changes to the rules governing the deduction of tax from midwives' allowances have been made over the last year; and if she will make a statement. [30264]

Sir George Young [holding answer 26 June 1995]: Generally, any allowances paid to midwives are taxable in the same way as allowances paid to any other employee or office holder. The corollary is that midwives may claim certain tax deductions in connection with the performance of their duties, in the same way as employees and office holders generally. There have been no changes in the last year to the statutory rules governing the deduction of tax from midwives' allowances. If the hon. Member has a particular case in mind he may like to write to me, and I shall be happy to look into it.

Hotels (VAT)

Mrs.Ewing: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the current relevant level of VAT levied by hotels in each of the European Union countries in respect of (a) accommodation and (b) food purchase. [30499]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answer 27 June 1995]: The VAT rates applied in European Union member states to hotel accommodation and meals are shown in the table:

VAT on Hotel Accommodation and Meals in the EU

Country	Hotel accommodation Percentage	Hotel meals Percentage
Austria	10	20
Belgium	6	20.5
Denmark	25	25
Finland	22	22
France	5.5	18.6
Germany	15	15
Greece	8	8
Ireland	12.5	12.5

Luxembourg	15	15
Netherlands	6	17.5
Portugal[2]	5	17
Spain	7	7
Sweden	12	21
UK[3]	17.5	17.5

Notes:
[1] The standard rate of 19 per cent. applies in both instances to luxury hotels.
[2] Lower rates of 4 per cent. and 13 per cent. respectively apply in Madeira and the Azores Archipelagoes.
[3] A rate of 5 per cent. applies to hotel accommodation in the Isle of Man.

Competitiveness

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the effect of the Government's monetary and exchange rate policies since 1968 on the competitiveness of United Kingdom manufacturers relative to those of the EC 15 measured in terms of relative unit values. [29975]

Mr. Nelson [holding answer 27 June 1995]: It is not possible to isolate with any confidence the effects on competitiveness stemming from monetary and exchange rate policies. However, the Government's commitment to deliver permanently low inflation will provide a stable climate within which British manufacturing can compete successfully, in both world and domestic markets.

Prosperity

Mr. Gill: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what evidence he has on the extent to which Britain's prosperity depends on EU membership. [31107]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answer 27 June 1995]: I have nothing to add to the reply I gave on 21 April 1995, Official Report, column 295, in response to a very similar question from my hon. Friend.

EDUCATION

Capital Spending

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what is the expected capital spending figure for her Department for 1994–95; and what is the latest budget figure. [30885]

Mr. Robin Squire: The figures requested are given:

£ million

Capital expenditure DFE and OFSTED	1994–95	1995–96
Central Government's own expenditure	694	735
Local Authorities	708	n/a

Notes:
1. Capital expenditure is given on a national accounts basis.
2. For 1995–96, a functional split of local authority capital spending is not available as the allocation of spending between services is a matter for determination by individual local authorities.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education (1) by how much Government spending has changed in 1994–95 as a result of the private finance initiative; what is the estimated effect in 1995–96; how many jobs are to be created by schemes approved to date under the initiative and how many have been lost as a consequence in the public sector; and what is the forecast of transfer of employment from public to private sector over the last five years because of the initiative; [30849]

(2) how many schemes and to what value have been approved in 1994–95 under the private finance initiative; what are the estimates for the current financial year; how many schemes are currently being considered and at what value; for how long they have been considered and how many have been in the assessment process for over (a) six months and (b) 12 months; and what was the average length of time taken to assess schemes so far approved. [30848]

Mr. Robin Squire: All expenditure on the staffing and work of the private finance units both in this Department and at the funding councils have been contained within the resources already available for education spending. In 1994–95 this Department published its booklet "Education means business" about private finance in education. The total cost of designing and printing the 50,000 copies was £101,000 with estimated distribution costs of about £19,000 for the 1994–95 financial year. The Department is setting up a full-time private finance unit which will cost approximately £150,000 in the current financial year.

The Department does not, in general, directly fund education institutions. Resources for the higher and further education sectors, grant-maintained schools and maintained schools are distributed by the funding councils and the local education authorities respectively. Although a great deal of private sector activity takes place in the higher and further education sectors, at present neither the Higher Education Funding Council nor the Further Education Funding Council collect the information requested. The Department is encouraging joint ventures between local authorities, schools and the private sector; legislative measures which came into effect on 1 April 1995 provide additional flexibilities for this area. Information about what has been achieved already by local education authorities and what is currently under consideration is not available centrally.

Higher Education

Sir Irvine Patnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what was the total number of school leavers entering higher education for each of the last five years; and if she will make a statement. [31147]

Mr. Boswell: Information on the numbers of young entrants to full-time HE is as follows:

Full-time and sandwich home-domiciled undergraduate entrants to English FE and HE institutions

Academic year	Entrants aged[1] 18 years and under	19 years
1989–90	73.3	41.3
1990–91	78.0	48.5
1991–92	85.9	55.7
1992–93	97.1	60.4
1993–94	102.7	61.3

Information on the numbers who entered full-time HE directly on leaving school is not readily available. In some cases, progression to HE will be direct from FE or tertiary college, and some students will enter after a year abroad or other sabbatical.

Nursery Education

Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if she will make a statement on the assistance provided by the Department to help local authorities to provide nursery places where there is a demand by parents. [30763]

Mr. Forth: At present, it is for local education authorities to determine their spending priorities including the level of pre-school education at the schools they maintain. My right hon. Friend will announce soon how the Prime Minister's commitment to provide, over time, a pre-school place for all four-year-olds whose parents wish to take it up will be fulfilled.

English Test

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if the key stage 3 English tests were carried out and marked according to new Department guidelines; and if she will make a statement. [31150]

Mr. Forth: There is no hard evidence yet of a systematic problem with the marking of the English tests for 14-year-olds.

The School Curriculum and Assessment Authority, which is responsible for developing the tests and organising the marking, has taken a number of steps to ensure that the system is robust and reliable; tests and the marking instructions were trialled extensively in schools; all the external markers were trained to national standards; and there were quality checks in place during marking process.

If schools are not satisfied with the results their pupils received, there is a procedure for requesting a re-mark which schools should use.

Head Teachers' Pay

Ms Estelle Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if she will list by local education authority area the average salary of the head teachers in each of the last four years in (a) primary schools and (b) secondary schools in the (i) local education sector and (ii) grant- maintained sector. [30700]

Mr. Robin Squire: The table shows the average salary of head teachers in all maintained nursery, primary and secondary schools for the most recent years available. The average salary is derived from information provided by local authorities and grant-maintained school primarily for pensions purpose. Information may be incomplete in some cases.

Separate figures for grant maintained schools are shown only at national level. This is to avoid both the disclosure of individual head teacher's salaries and the potential for distortion of average salaries where few head teachers are present. For the same reasons, some average salaries are not shown in the smaller LEA areas.

Head teachers are paid on 51-point pay spine with ranges of points from different sizes of schools. There is no automatic progression up the spine, but a governing body may appoint a head teacher at a point above the minimum of the range, and may move the head teacher as far along the spine as they think appropriate.

Average salary includes allowances such as London allowance.

Average salary of full-time head teachers in the maintained nursery, primary and secondary school sectors. Salary as at 31 March of each year shown.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Royal Palaces

Mr. Coe: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage when he will make available to the House the annual report on the maintenance of the occupied royal palaces. [31721]

Mr. Dorrell: I have today placed in the library copies of the annual report and accounts on the grant-in-aid for the maintenance of the occupied royal palaces in England, as promised in the Government's response to the 40th report of the Committee of Public Accounts. The annual report shows a significant reduction in the grant-in-aid since responsibility was transferred from the Department of the Environment to the royal household in 1991. The report also shows a continuation of the record of success which has already been noted by the Committee of Public Accounts.

Galleries and Museums

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what information he has on the current level of admissions to national galleries and museums. [30981]

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 26 June 1995]: I list forecasts for the number of visits to the national museums and galleries in England, Northern Ireland, Scotland and Wales. More accurate figures for 1994–95 for the English and Welsh national museums and galleries will be available in July.

National Lottery

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage (1) how many grants have been provided from the income arising from the national lottery; and if he will state the number of these within each region of the United Kingdom; [30016]

(2) what payments have been made to charities and good causes from the income arising from (a) the national lottery and (b) the associated scratch cards; and what proportion of the income such payments represent. [30029]

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 22 June 1995]: The national lottery distribution fund receives a payment from Camelot Group plc each week relating to the sale of both on-line and instant win tickets. A total of £673 million has been raised for the five good causes since the national lottery began in November last year. Of this, £95.5 million—15 per cent., has been awarded to 486 projects. The awards are listed according to region.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Betts: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department by how much Government spending has changed in 1994–95 as a result of the private finance initiative; what is the estimated effect in 1995–96; how many jobs are to be created by schemes approved to date and how many jobs have been lost as a consequence in the public sector; and what is the forecast transfer of employment from public to private sector over the last five years because of the initiative. [30837]

Mr. John M. Taylor: For the Lord Chancellor's Department, including the Court Service and the Public Trust Office, there was no change in spending in 1994–95 as a result of the private finance initiative, nor is there likely to be any change in 1995–96. No schemes have been approved to date. There has been no transfer of employment from the public to the private sector since the launch of the private finance initiative in November 1992.

Mr. Betts: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many schemes and to what value have been approved in 1994–95 under the private finance initiative; what are the estimates for the current financial year; how many schemes are currently being considered and at what value; for how long have they been considered and how many have been in the assessment process for over (a) six months and (b) 12 months; and what was the average length of time taken to assess schemes so far approved. [30836]

Mr. Taylor: For the Lord Chancellor's Department, including the Court Service and the Public Trust Office, no schemes were approved in 1994–95 under the private finance initiative. It is possible that one will be approved in the current financial year, though its value cannot be quantified accurately at the present time. Five schemes are being considered currently, but their value cannot yet be quantified accurately. Of those five schemes three have been under consideration and in the assessment process for over six months and two for less than six months.

Civil Service (Retirement Packages)

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, pursuant to his answer of 17 May, Official Report, column 232, if he will provide comparable details on civil service early retirement packages on grounds of efficiency. [29281]

Mr. John M. Taylor [holding answer 19 June 1995]: Inefficiency is a ground for dismissal. An immediate lump sum payment of up to two years' salary may be made where a Department judges payment of compensation to be appropriate. Where compensation is agreed and the person dismissed is over age 55, this may be forgone in favour of immediate payment of the accrued superannuation benefits which would otherwise be preserved for payment at retiring age. There have been 11 departures on inefficiency grounds in the past five financial years. Details are as follows:

	Immediate lump sum compensation	Annual pension from age 60 (rate per annum)	Superannuation lump sum payable at age 60
1990–91	14,088.18	2,437.65	7,344.57
1991–92	—	—	—
1992–93	9,207.96	1,969.84	5,926.71
1993–94	2,682.34	771.39	2,314.71
1994–95	104,846.97	19,629.52	59,060.55

Capital Spending

Mr. Betts: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what is the expected capital spending figure for his Department for 1994–95; and what is the latest budget figure. [30879]

Mr. John M. Taylor: Expenditure on capital in 1994–95 was £142,000,000. The latest budget figure—forecast of expenditure for 1995–96—is £108,000,000. The figures include expenditure by the Court Service Agency and the Public Trust Office Agency.

Local authority capital expenditure on magistrates' courts was £56,000,000 in 1994–95. The latest local authority budget figure for 1995–96 is £74,000,000. The Lord Chancellor's Department pays grants to local authorities at a rate of 80 per cent. of approved expenditure of magistrates' courts.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Bicycles

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Chairman of the Administration Committee what steps are being taken to improve access and facilities for storage for the bicycles of hon. Members, staff and visitors in the Palace of Westminster.

Mr. Michael J. Martin: Racks are provided under cover for 12 bicycles in Star Chamber Court, for 32 bicycles in the colonnade in New Palace Yard, and for 15 bicycles in the 1 Cannon Row courtyard, for the use of hon. Members and staff. There are racks for a further 12 bicycles in the store at the exit to the underground car park. In random checks, the Serjeant at Arms has always found spare capacity available among the existing racks.

There are no plans to increase the number, or to provide facilities for the storage of visitors' bicycles.

PRIME MINISTER

Information Technology Security

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to paragraph 5 of the report by the National Audit Office into IT security in Government services if he will describe the liaison arrangements between the security services and GCHQ which ensure consistency of advice to Government Departments; who is the Minister responsible for such arrangements; what liaison arrangements with the CCTA relate to the implementation of IT security policy; and if he will make a statement. [29773]

The Prime Minister: Responsibility for co-ordinating policy and advice on IT security in government rests with an inter-departmental committee chaired by the Cabinet Office. The Foreign Secretary the Home Secretary and the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster have responsibility for the work of GCHQ, the Security Service and CCTA respectively. Specialists in all three organisations work closely together.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to paragraph 5 of the report by the National Audit Office into IT security in Government Departments, if he will authorise detailed responses to parliamentary questions concerning the resources, and deployment of resources expended by the security services and GCHQ, which relate to the provision of IT security advice to Government Departments; if such responses do not jeopardise national security. [29772]

The Prime Minister: It has been the policy of successive Governments not to provide information in response to parliamentary questions on the operation of the security and intelligence agencies.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Prime Minster, pursuant to paragraph 5 of the report by the National Audit Office into IT security in Government Departments, if he has taken legal advice as to whether the functions of the security services in GCHQ which relate to the provisions of IT security advice to Government Departments are consistent with the functions outlined in the Security Service Act 1989 and Intelligence Services Act 1994; and if he will make a statement. [29771]

The Prime Minister: Preventing the unauthorised disclosure of information held on Government computer systems is an important element in the protection of national security, and as such falls within the terms of the Security Service Act 1989 and the Intelligence Services Act 1994.

ENVIRONMENT

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) how many schemes and to what value have been approved in 1994–95 under the private finance initiative; what are the estimates for the current financial year; how many schemes are currently being considered and at what value; for how long have they been considered and how many have been in the assessment process for over (a) six months and (b) 12 months; and what was the average length of time taken to assess schemes so far approved; [30844]

(2) by how much Government spending has changed in 1994–95 as a result of the private finance initiative; what is the estimated effect in 1995–96; how many jobs are to be created by schemes approved to date under the initiative and how many have been lost as a consequence in the public sector; and what is the forecast of transfer of employment from public to private sector over the last five years because of the initiative. [30845]

Sir Paul Beresford: The Department of the Environment and its sponsored bodies attracted around £4 million in private investment in support of its programmes in 1994–95 and expects to lever-in a similar amount in 1995–96. This will assist the delivery of a very large number of projects, most notably ones relating to housing, inner cities and regeneration. Moreover, regulations to encourage and facilitate private finance initiative schemes in the local authority sector were implemented by the Government with effect from 1 April 1995 and further PFI-related legislative changes for local authorities are imminent. It is not practicable for the Department to collect detailed information on each project being advanced under private financing arrangements. There have been no changes in the Department's spending directly attributable to the PFI.

Capital Spending

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the expected capital spending figure for his Department for 1994–95; and what is the latest budget figure. [30883]

Sir Paul Beresford: My Department's total capital expenditure for 1994–95 is expected to be £4,488,000,000. This includes central Government's own expenditure, and capital expenditure by local authorities and public corporations, on a national accounts basis. The latest estimate for 1995–96 is £1,767,000,000. This excludes local government spending, for which a departmental breakdown is not yet available. These figures are the latest published, and appear in the statistical supplement to the "Financial Statement and Budget Report 1995–96", Cm 2821.

Housing Corporation

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement about the finance management and policy review of the Housing Corporation. [31650]

Mr. Curry: On 14 December 1994 I informed the House that as part of the Government's programme of regular five-yearly finance management and policy reviews—FMPRs—of non-departmental public bodies, my Department would be carrying out a review of the Housing Corporation in 1995.

The prior options stage of the FMPR has been completed, and I have placed a copy of the report in the Library.

The purpose of the prior options stage was to assess whether the corporation's functions remained necessary for the achievement of the Government's policies, and whether there was scope for privatising, contracting out or transferring all or part of its functions to another body.

The Government's White Paper, "Our Future Homes", indicates the Government's commitment to a social rented sector, and sets out the Government's plans to enable a wider range of landlords to provide social rented housing, alongside housing associations. Systems for allocating Government subsidy, monitoring the provision of dwellings and overseeing the operation of social landlords therefore continue to be needed. Against this background, the Government accept the prior options review conclusions, that the Housing Corporation should continue to be responsible for the funding and regulation of housing associations in England; that the corporation should take on responsibility for payment of grant to and supervision of the proposed new social landlords, including landlords receiving transferred local authority stock; and that non-departmental public body status remains appropriate to the corporation's functions.

The review also recommends that the Housing Association tenants' ombudsman service should be put on a statutory footing. As announced in the Housing White Paper, the Government accept this, and my Department will be consulting shortly on detailed proposals for legislation.

The Housing Corporation accepts and will take forward a number of other operational recommendations in the report. In particular, it will review the work it does on promotion of housing associations and focus it further on promoting the efficient and effective use of housing resources; develop improved liaison with county councils on care in the community and other issues; and confine its future monitoring of housing associations' employment practices to matters in relation to which the corporation has a statutory duty, under the Race Relations Act 1976; and expose a number of activities to competition from the private sector, where this is found to be relevant.

The review identifies a number of particular issues to be examined in the second stage of the FMPR, including the corporation's approach to registration and regulation in the context of the prospective introduction of new social landlords; the procedures for the appointment of corporation board members and for dealing with potential conflict of interest arising from board members' involvement in other housing-related activities; arrangements for liaison between the corporation and Government regional offices; and the scope for contracting out or market testing support services within the corporation.

I am grateful for contributions received in the course of the review from the local authority associations, the Chartered Institute of Housing, the National Federation of Housing Associations, individual housing associations, and many other bodies and individuals. The report contains a list of the contributions. Copies of individual contributions are available through the DOE central library.

The review has underlined the importance of the corporation's work, and the effective way it is carried out. This is greatly to the credit of the staff of the corporation and to the chairman and members of the board, and I should like to place on record the Government's gratitude for this.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement about the board of the Housing Corporation. [31651]

Mr. Curry: Three members of the board of the Housing Corporation are due to retire in the next few months—the right Rev. Wilfred Wood, Mrs. Stella Clarke and Mr. David Cochrane, after nine, seven and 12 years of service respectively. I am extremely grateful to them for the energy and abilities which they have brought to the corporation.

In appointing new members to the board, I wish to be able to consider the widest possible range of candidates. I should, therefore, welcome nominations and expressions of interest in being appointed to these posts.

The Housing Corporation is responsible for the funding and regulation of over 2,000 registered housing associations, and has an annual budget of some £1,750 million. Membership of the corporation board calls for ability and judgment of the highest level. In making these appointments, I particularly wish to consider candidates with expertise also in the fields of urban regeneration, regulatory or other quasi-judicial processes, special needs housing, or academic study of housing issues. I will consider candidates with or without previous involvement in a housing association.

Bedfordshire County Council

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what action he has decided to take against Bedforshire county council following the notice served on them last year for anti-competitive behaviour in awarding a school and welfare catering contract in-house. [31857]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: On 8 November 1994, my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State, served a notice under section 13 of the Local Government Act 1988 on Bedfordshire county council, setting out his view that the authority had acted anti-competitively during a competition for school and welfare catering work.

My right hon. Friend has given careful consideration to the response to that notice and has today given the authority a direction under section 14 of the Act which requires it to retender its school and welfare catering work by 1 September 1996. Its direct service organisation will be limited to undertaking 70 per cent. of the total value of the work and it must seek the Secretary of State's consent before it assigns it any of the work in-house.

Bedfordshire awarded six contracts for school and welfare catering to its direct service organisation when it had received substantially lower bids for them from a private company. In the Secretary of State's view it did not have well-founded reasons for doing so.

European Pollution Directives

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made, or has been supplied to him by the local authority associations, of the effect on local authority services and local government finance of European directives dealing with bathing water and with clean air and emissions; and if he will make a statement. [30999]

Mr. Gummer [holding answer 26 June 1995]: The framework directive on ambient air quality assessment and management will have no direct effect on local authority services and local government finance. The effects of the subsequent daughter directives will be assessed when the proposals are adopted.

The directives on bathing waters and on integrated pollution prevention and control may entail a slight increase in existing co-ordination or provision of information functions for the local authorities. No assessment of these functions has been supplied by the local authority associations.

Ozone Air Pollution

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what research he has conducted into which people suffer discomfort when ozone levels exceed 90 parts per billion; and if he will make a statement. [31033]

Mr. Sackville: I have been asked to reply.

In 1991 the Department of Health advisory group on the medical aspects of air pollution episodes undertook a detailed review of the effects of ozone on health. Its report was published and is available in the Library.

WALES

Mrs. A. Griffin

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will establish a public inquiry to ascertain the factors underlying the refusal to treat the two children of Mrs. A. Griffin whose case is currently before his Department at the Breakspear hospital. [30164]

Mr. Richards: This remains a matter for Clwyd district health authority. The authority is undertaking an investigation under independent chairmanship into the conduct of the officers concerned with the referral requested by Mrs. Griffin. I understand that Clwyd district health authority has made an offer to Mrs. Griffin, for an independent paediatrician appointment through an NHS consultant of her choice. That offer remains open.

Prescription Charges

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the revenue raised through prescription charges in Wales during (i) 1992–93, (ii) 1993–94 and (iii) 1994–95; and if he will make a statement. [29585]

Mr. Richards: The information for 1994–95 is not available. Figures for 1991–92 to 1993–94 are as follows:

Financial year	Total income from charges (£000s)
1991–92	13.372
1992–93	14.706
1993–94	16.008

Capital Spending

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the expected capital spending figure for his Department for 1994–95; and what is the latest budget figure. [30871]

Mr. David Hunt: Consistent with the figures shown in table 1.7 of Cm 2821, the estimated outturn for 1994–95 for public sector capital expenditure within Welsh Office responsibilities is £1,433 million. This total includes an estimate of aggregate local authority capital spending; as explained in paragraph 1.9 of Cm 2821 no equivalent estimate is available for 1995–96. Excluding local authority spending, planned public sector capital expenditure for 1995–96 is £702 million.

Accident and Emergency Services

Mr. Rhodri Morgan: To as the Secretary of State for Wales (1) when he proposes to commence the statutory decision making procedure for determining the future of accident and emergency services in the Cardiff area; [31260]

(2) what notification he has been given by South Glamorgan health authority of its disagreement with Cardiff community health council regarding the proposed switch of accident and emergency services from the Cardiff royal infirmary to the University hospital of Wales; [31262]

(3) what public consultation he expects to carry out before reaching his decision concerning the future of accident and emergency services for Cardiff; and how long he estimates it will take him to announce his verdict; [31261]

(4) what consultation's he has had with the chairman of South Glamorgan health authority concerning its failure to agree with Cardiff community health council about proposals for future accident and emergency services for Cardiff. [31263]

Mr. Richards: The future of accident and emergency services at the Cardiff royal infirmary is a matter for South Glamorgan health authority at this stage. Although the health authority has kept this Department closely in touch with developments, including the position of Cardiff Community health council and the independent review of accident and emergency provision in Cardiff, the matter has not been discussed with the chairman of the health authority at ministerial level.

If the authority and the community health council are unable to agree on the way ahead, the proposals will be submitted to the Secretary of State for decision. If this happens, the Secretary of State's decision will be announced as quickly as possible, taking into account all the views presented.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Immigration Controls

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if people detained at immigration controls are now offered refreshments; [30769]

(2) what has been the percentage change in the number of complaints against the immigration service from young travellers over the last five years; [30770]

(3) what documentation is now required for a young traveller to be allowed entry into the United Kingdom; [30771]

(4) if the review of complaint statistics for immigration service complaints has been completed; and what categories now replace the category of complaints that gave other reasons; [30772]

(5) what progress has been made to improve the provision of interpreters for the immigration service: [30773]

(6) what representations he has received alleging that black British citizens are facing lengthy delays at immigration controls; [30774]

(7) what action he proposes to prevent black citizens being discriminated against at immigration control points; [30775]

(8) what discussions have taken place between the immigration service and ports and airports to improve holding and interview areas; and what were the results; [30776]

(9) what figures he has regarding the number and proportion of (a) black and (b) white citizens who experienced substantial delay at immigration control points. [30777]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of that letter in the Library.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department by how much Government spending has changed in 1994–95 as a result of the private finance initiative; what is the estimated effect in 1995–96; how many jobs are to be created by schemes approved to date under the initiative and how many have been lost as a consequence in the public sector; and what is the forecast of transfer of employment from public to private sector over the last five years because of the initiative. [30835]

Mr. Howard: Capital spending in the Home Office did not change in 1994–95, nor is it expected to do so in 1995–96, as a result of the private finance initiative. In these two years my Department will have incurred no contractual payments associated with service delivery. Staff resources allocated specifically to overseeing and developing the initiative cost approximately £100,000 per annum.

All Home Office capital expenditure proposals are examined to see if better value for money could be obtained through the private finance route. However, at present all Home Office schemes that have reached detailed consideration for private finance are additional to, not a substitute for, existing public capital provision.

It is not possible to assess how many jobs have been created so far in the private sector in response to the private finance initiative. However, in addition to those that will be created in construction of capital assets—for which public finance would not have been available–preliminary estimates suggest that around 1,000 operational long-term jobs could result from current private finance schemes. As these projects are new facilities, it is not envisaged that public sector jobs will be lost.

Probation Officers

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will place in the Library copies of responses to his consultation document on the recruitment and training of probation officers. [30818]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Newham, South (Mr. Spearing) on 6 June, Official Report, column 125.

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many schemes and to what value have been approved in 1994–95 under the private finance initiative; what are the estimates for the current financial year; how many schemes are currently being considered and at what value; for how long have they been considered and how many have been in the assessment process for over (a) six months and (b) 12 months; and what was the average length of time taken to assess schemes so far approved. [30834]

Mr. Howard: No private finance initiative contracts were approved in 1994–95. Planning took place on eight projects expected to be approved in 1995–96. These are projects estimated to have a capital value of approximately £150 million.

All capital schemes are now considered for private finance. Eight further schemes are currently receiving more detailed consideration. The value is likely to be of the order of £1 billion.

Capital Spending

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the expected capital spending figure for his Department for 1994–95; and what is the latest budget figure. [30880]

Mr. Howard: The Home Office, including Charity Commission capital expenditure is published in the statistical supplement to the "Financial Statement and Budget Report", Cm 2821. For 1994–95 the total figure recorded is £622 million. This includes local authority and Charity Commission expenditure. Planned central Government capital expenditure for 1995–96 is £369 million. There are no published figures for local authority capital expenditure.

Hackney Council

Mr. Sedgemore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what considerations underlie his decision to decline to allow Hackney council to interview

Ms Jill Arnfield as part of an enquiry to identify an individual or individuals who have broken the law; [31228]

(2) when his Department was informed by Hackney council that names and other information concerning council employees were unlawfully removed from council payroll records; and if he will publish the minutes of that meeting; [31229]

(3) how Ms Jill Arnfield of the immigration and nationality division of the Home Office came to be in possession of details of employees of Hackney council; [31230]

(4) for what reasons Ms Arnfield asked the Benefits Agency to carry out checks on employees of Hackney council; upon what evidence or allegations this request was made; what instructions she gave as to how widely this request was to be made known; and for what reasons; [31231]

(5) what is his Department's policy on co-operation with Hackney council's investigation of alleged unlawful acts in relation to information from the council's payroll records; and what is the reason for this policy; [31232]

(6) when information concerning employees of Hackney council was passed to his Department; who supplied the information; what steps the Home Office took to inform the council that it had received the information and for what reasons; and what lawful authority the Home Office had to act on the information. [31233]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: Ms Arnfield is one of a number of immigration officers employed in the enforcement directorate of the immigration service. One of her main tasks is to investigate allegations and information, from whatever source, about persons who may be working and/or residing in this country illegally. All information alleging breaches of the immigration laws is thoroughly researched both within the Department and with other agencies and is discounted wherever it is possible to identify the person(s) concerned as being lawfully resident here.

A number of allegations about persons from abroad working illegally at Hackney council have been received from various sources over a long period. It would not be appropriate to disclose these sources publicly, but the immigration service has never received a computer disk containing details of Hackney employees. Where it has been established that the subject(s) of the information was illegally in the United Kingdom, the council has been informed. So far, eight council employees—three finance officers, two teachers, an estate manager, a personnel officer and a cook—have been served with either notice of illegal entry or notice of intention to deport and three others were dismissed by the council after the immigration service asked to interview them.

Discussion have taken place between representatives from Hackney council and members of the immigration service and a further meeting scheduled for 28 June has been postponed at the council's request. At a meeting on 10 March, the assistant chief finance officer of Hackney council suggested that an inquiry into an alleged breach of the Data Protection Act 1984 concerning the unauthorised release of details of Hackney council employees was being considered. The draft minutes of this meeting were circulated to Hackney council on 17 March for approval, but the council has not responded.

Alleged breaches of council security are for the local authority to pursue with the police and/or the Data Protection Registrar.

The general question of disclosure of sources of information made available to the immigration service is a matter for the Home Office. In these circumstances, it has been made clear that the Home Office would be happy to respond to any written inquiries but not to allow individual immigration officers to be interviewed about matters which go beyond their responsibilities.

Burglaries

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the nature of the information retrieval system used by the Metropolitan police to record burglaries; if information on burglaries is retrievable for (a) individual addresses, (b) persons or organisations burgled and (c) date of burglary; and if the information on crimes reported to individual police stations is recorded on a central database. [30950]

Mr. Maclean: I understand from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis that the Metropolitan police currently use two systems for recording crime information. The first is a paper based, manual system, and the second, which is replacing the first, is the crime reporting and information system, which is computerised. Information about individual addresses, names of persons or organisations involved and date of incident is retrievable on both systems at local level. Certain details of reported crimes are forwarded to a central database for statistical purposes, but as this database does not contain personal information, retrieval is not possible centrally.

Metropolitan Police (Race Relations)

Mr. Bernie Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what force-wide strategy the Metropolitan police have for community and race relations training; what progress has been made in implementing this strategy especially at local level; to what extent and in what ways contributors from local minority ethnic communities are involved in such training; and what use is currently made by the Metropolitan police of the services of his Department's funded specialist support unit. [30723]

Mr. Maclean: I understand from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis that, to date, 73 police trainers and 13 training managers have attended the six-week course on these subjects at the Home Office specialist support unit and that a further nine officers have attended the condensed version of the course, enabling them to assist the trainers. Focused training sessions are held at the recruit school in Hendon, involving ethnic community representatives. In addition to this, local training is often organised at divisional or area level, involving members of local minority ethnic communities.

Police Training

Mr. Bernie Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) civilians and (b) lay contributors are currently employed or were used in the last four trainers' courses at the central planning and training unit; what subject areas they covered; and what was their ethnicity. [30722]

Mr. Maclean: The last four trainers' courses held at the central planning and training unit were led by eight directors of study, one of whom was a white civilian. These courses are designed to train police officers to act as trainers generally but also include elements of equal opportunities and community and race relations training. In exploring these issues, 15 ethnic minority police officers were used as members of discussion groups or panels.

Wheelclamping

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 6 June, Official Report, column 134, if he will introduce legislation to permit local authorities in areas affected by the activities of unscrupulous wheelclampers to introduce byelaws to ban or regulate their activities. [30440]

Mr. Maclean: Byelaws are generally used to regulate behaviour in public places and cannot apply to private land without the consent of the landowner. In the context of wheelclamping, therefore, byelaws are unlikely to provide an effective means of regulation.

Post-natal Prisoners

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what guidelines are given to magistrates concerning imprisoning women who have just given birth. [30384]

Mr. Maclean: The Government do not issue guidelines to the courts as to how they should use their discretion in dealing with individual cases. The Magistrates Association does issue guidelines to its members, but we are not aware that the association has provided any advice on the treatment of women who have just given birth.

Privatisation

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list those parts of his Department or departmental agencies which were privatised without an in-house bid; if he will indicate the expertise which was absent in his Department or departmental agencies which prevented an in-house bid taking place; which future parts of his Department or departmental agencies he intends to privatise; and which of them do not have the necessary in-house expertise to mount an in-house bid. [29417]

Mr. Howard: In the Prison Service, three new-built prisons and half the prisoner escort services have been contracted out to the private sector without an in-house bid since 1992 under the "Competing for Quality" initiative. This reflected a policy decision that such activities should in future be carried out by the private sector and consequently in-house bids were not invited. In-house bids were not prevented by any absence of expertise. The Prison Service intends to pursue this policy by contracting out further new-build prisons and the four remaining geographical areas of prisoner escort services; again in-house bids will not be invited.

Estate management in the Forensic Science Service has been contracted out to the private sector without an in-house bid. No such bid for this work was made, but, if one had been, it would have been considered on the same basis as bids from external contractors.

The United Kingdom Passport Agency has invited outline proposals from service providers, including travel agents, banks and the Post Office with a view to these outlets receiving and checking completed passport applications. The aim is to enhance customer choice and convenience.

As I announced in response to a question from my hon. Friend the Member for Uxbridge (Sir M. Shersby) on 8 February, Official Report, columns 254-55, a decision about the future management of the police national computer will be taken about the middle of 1996 when the likely nature, size and scope of the proposed new computer system is clearer.

Elsewhere in the Home Office, activities reviewed under the "Competing for Quality" initiative have been contracted out to the private sector only where an external bidder has won in competition with the in-house team. "Competing for Quality" reviews are in progress or are planned across a range of functions, but there are at present no plans to contract out any further functions of the non-prisons Home Office without the in-house team having had the opportunity to bid for the work against the private sector.

Organised Crime

Sir Ivan Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in what form the November 1993 recommendation of the European ad hoc working group on organised crime for an annual report on the scale and trends of organised crime was fulfilled in respect of 1994; and how the information relating to the United Kingdom was compiled. [30053]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 27 June 1995]: The Justice and Home Affairs Council adopted a situation report on organised crime in the European Union in 1993 at its meeting on 9 and 10 March 1995. This confidential report was prepared for Ministers by the German presidency of the European Union drugs and organised crime working group on the basis of member states' responses to a presidency questionnaire.

The United Kingdom contribution was compiled by the Home Office in consultation with the national criminal intelligence service. HM Customs and Excise and the Association of Chief Police Officers.

Victims Charter

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to update the victims charter; and when he will do so. [27275]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 8 June 1995]: We are hoping to publish a charter-style statement of service standards for victims of crime later this year.

Confiscation Orders

Sir Ivan Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will update the figures on sums ordered to be confiscated and sums realised, given in his answer to the hon. Member for Wallsend (Mr. Byers) of 1 February, Official Report, column 679, to include the figures for 1994–95. [30056]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 27 June 1995]: The information requested will not be available until the Autumn 1995.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

Arms Sales

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to the oral statement by the Minister of State, the hon. Member for Eddisbury (Mr. Goodlad), of 19 June, Official Report, column 93, if he will now meet representatives of the World Development Movement to discuss the basis of its allegations regarding alleged links between aid and arms sales. [30536]

Mr. Goodlad: I have no plans at present to meet World Development Movement representatives. Allegations regarding links between aid and arms sales are completely unfounded. Senior ODA officials met WDM representatives on 21 June to discuss recent WDM work on development issues. Discussions were useful and productive, and part of the process through which non-governmental organisations and the ODA regularly discuss help to the developing world.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Exports

Mr. Brandeth: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what have been the results of the consultations that his Department has undertaken with the private sector about barriers to United Kingdom exports.

Mr. Heseltine: I set out in this year's competitiveness White Paper a new strategy for tackling barriers erected by other countries to our exports. Dossiers on 20 of our major markets have now been completed, and I have placed copies in the Library of the House. Copies are also being sent to the trade associations that have contributed to the study, and will be available from my Department on request. Dossiers on our other top markets will also be drawn up.

Telecommunications Council

Mr. Merchant: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the outcome of the Telecommunications Council on 13 June.

Mr. Ian Taylor: The Commission made a presentation on progress within the Commission on drawing up a draft legislative framework for the single market in postal services, and undertook to produce proposals by July. The presidency adopted conclusions on the principles of terminal dues for the delivery of international mail, although there was no agreement at this stage within the Council.

The Council agreed a resolution on a future regulatory framework for telecommunications, necessary to implement the full liberalisation of network infrastructure and services by 1 January 1998, agreed in principle at the last Council on 17 November 1994. A resolution on policy in the mobile and personal communications sector was also agreed.

The Council also agreed a common position on the resubmitted directive applying open network provision to voice telephony. In addition, the Commission reported to the Council on the amendments made by the European Parliament at its second reading to the Council's 22 December 1994 common position on a directive on standards for digital television. The draft directive was referred back to the Committee of Permanent Representatives for further discussion.

Following a short debate, the Council agreed conclusions on a draft Commission directive on the use of cable television networks for the provision of telecoms services already liberalised by the Community.

The Commission made representations on the progress of multilateral negotiations on basic telecommunications, and on its communication on the status and implementation of Commission directive 90/338/EEC on competition in the markets for telecoms services. There was also a Commission presentation and a short debate on a Commission communication on a methodology for implementation of the information society application areas identified by the Bangemann group, and a draft proposals for a decision on guidelines for the development of telecoms Trans-European networks.

No formal vote was taken at this Council.

Mr. Allen: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will publish the minutes of the meeting of the Council of Telecoms Ministers in the week beginning 12 June. [30243]

Mr. Ian Taylor: The minutes of the Telecommunications Council have not yet been produced. The outcome of the Telecommunications Council is summarised in the reply I gave earlier today to my hon. Friend the Member for Beckenham (Mr. Merchant) and the Council secretariat press release giving an account of it has been deposited in the Library of the House. The procedures set down in Council decision 93/731/EC—printed in the Official Journal of 31 December 1993 also deposited in the Library of the House—provide for public access to Council documents. The hon. Member may request access to the minutes from the Council secretariat.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Betts: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many schemes and to what value have been approved in 1994–95 under the private finance initiative; what are the estimates for the current financial year; how many schemes are currently being considered and at what value; for how long they have been considered and how many have been in the assessment process for over (a) six months and (b) 12 months; and what was the average length of time taken to assess schemes so far approved. [30820]

Mr. Heseltine: My Department has a number of major exercises underway which will involve the use of private sector finance in the delivery of services. Private finance is being used in the refurbishment of 1 Victoria street and the Radiocommunications Agency's relocation to docklands initiated in 1993–94 and 1994–95 respectively. No specifically PFI projects were approved during 1994–95. Procedures have recently been introduced to consider PFI for all DTI's capital projects but it is too early to estimate the number or value which may be approved in 1995–96. My Department is also pursuing a major programme of privatisation and contracting out involving almost all the executive agencies, which themselves account for around half of my Department.

Offshore Installations

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will publish the findings of his Department's oil and gas abandonment review body on the issue of the disposal of redundant installations; and if he will make a statement. [31251]

Mr. Eggar: The work of the review body is reflected in a consultation document entitled, "Guidance Notes for Industry—Abandonment of Offshore Installations and Pipelines under the Petroleum Act 1987" which was published by my Department on 4 May 1995. Copies have been placed in the Library of the House.

Solar Technology

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what studies have been undertaken on the potential for deploying solar photovoltaic technology and/or solar water heating on (a) Government buildings and (b) other public sector-buildings. [30081]

Mr. Page: No studies have been carried out specifically into the potential for solar technologies on Government or public sector buildings, although general potential resource estimates have been made. The potential for photovoltaics has been investigated by the University of Northumbria and published in ETSU S/1365; the potential for solar water heating has been investigated by Halcrow Gilbert Associates and published in ETSU S/1337. Copies of both publications are being placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what estimates his Department has made of the maximum potential contribution to the United Kingdom's energy requirements from (a) solar photovoltaic technology and (b) solar water heating. [30080]

Mr. Page: Technical resource estimates, for photovoltaics and solar water heating were published in "New and Renewable Energy, future prospects for the UK", Energy Paper 62;"An Assessment of Renewable Energy for the UK (R.62)"; and "An Appraisal of UK Energy Research, Development Demonstration and Dissemination"—Energy Paper 61. Copies are available in the Library of the House.

Nuclear Holding Company

Mr. Salmond: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when the Untied Kingdom nuclear holding company will be properly constituted and established in Scotland; and if he will make a statement. [31257]

Mr. Eggar: The new nuclear holding company will be established to a timetable which will enable the Government to secure the privatisation of the United Kingdom's advanced gas-cooled reactor and pressurised water reactor stations during 1996.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the President of the Board of Trade who is to be appointed chief executive of the new United Kingdom nuclear holding company; and if he will make a statement. [31256]

Mr. Eggar: Further appointments to the new nuclear holding company will be announced in due course.

Magnox

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what is the reason underpinning the estimate of a 10 per cent. saving in total Magnox liability costs in the table setting out Magnox liabilities in his Departmental press notice P/95/310; [31119]

(2) what discount rate was adopted to calculate the present value of the net cash receipts for further operations in the table on Magnox liabilities issued in his Departmental press notice P/95/310 of 9 May; and what is the justification for its use. [31120]

Mr. Eggar: The decision to assume a 10 per cent. figure for potential savings in the costs of Magnox liabilities was taken in the light of the views of advisers—KPMG—who looked at the specific question of nuclear liabilities for the nuclear review.

A discount rate of 3.5 per cent. was used to calculate the present value of net cash receipts for further Magnox operations, and is based on the current yield from 25 year index-linked gilts.

Nigeria

Mr. Spellar: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how much money Nigeria owes to the Export Credits Guarantee Department; which steps are being taken to recover this money; and what action is being taken to prevent further losses. [30435]

Mr. Needham: Amounts due to ECGD have been rescheduled under bilateral agreements between Her Majesty's Government and the Government of Nigeria signed under the auspices of the Paris Club. This is the normal mechanism for the recovery of sovereign debt. Since 1986 three agreements have been signed with Nigeria. Nigeria is currently in substantial arrears under these agreements. The total amount outstanding, excluding delay interest, is £2.3 billion. The Paris Club collectively, and individual creditors including HM Government, continue to press Nigeria to adopt policies aimed at economic reform and to regularise its relations with the international financial institutions. Sustained economic reform is regarded as the best method of promoting economic growth which in turn will allow Nigeria to meet its obligations under these agreements.

The debts covered by these agreements relate to contracts signed before 1 October 1985. ECGD has been off cover for new medium term business since 1 February 1984.

BMARC

Mr. Byers: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his oral statement of 13 June, Official Report, column 595–97, on what date his Department made available to Customs and Excise all the information which emerged from its inquiry into possible breaches of export control offences by BMARC. [29260]

Mr. Ian Taylor [holding answer 19 June 1995]: Information which emerged from our researches into BMARC export licences was passed to Customs and Excise as and when it became available over a period between late April and early June.

Civil Service Retirement Packages

Mr. Milburn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer of 2 May, Official Report, column 132, if he will provide comparable details on civil service early retirement packages on the ground of inefficiency. [29295]

Mr. Heseltine [holding answer 19 June 1995]: Inefficiency is a ground for dismissal. An immediate lump sum payment of up to two years' salary may be made where a Department judges payment of compensation to be appropriate. Where compensation is agreed and the person dismissed is over age 55, this may be foregone in favour of immediate payment of the accrued superannuation benefits which would otherwise be preserved for payment at retiring age. There have been six departures from the Department of established staff on inefficiency grounds in the past five financial years. None received an early retirement package, although five officers were awarded immediate compensation, totalling £30,890. There is one award pending. Details are as follows:

	Number of cases	Total compensation £
1990–91	1	86
1991–92	1	21,212
1993–94	3	9,592
1994–95	1	[1]—

[1] Pending.

Domestic Housing Market

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what percentage of retail sales and manufacturing output is attributable to the domestic housing market. [30416]

Mr. Nelson: I have been asked to reply.

Information detailing annual retail sales is published in the CSO "Business Monitor SDA25—Retailing". In 1992 the percentage of retail turnover attributed to sales of furniture, domestic appliances and other household goods was 16.8 per cent.

The percentage of manufacturing output attributable to the domestic housing market is unavailable.

TRANSPORT

A1

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) when he expects to announce starting dates for the three dualling schemes on the A1 between Morpeth and Alnwick as set out in the roads programme; [30620]

(2) when he expects consultants to be appointed to prepare for work on the Morpeth-Lanehead section of the A1. [30619]

Mr. Watts: Dualling of the section between Hitchcroft and Cawledge is due to start this year.

A decision to proceed with dualling between Willowburn and Denwick was published on 5 June. Additional design work will be required to comply with the inspectors' report.

The dualling proposals for Morpeth to Lanehead are in the early stages of preparation and will be taken forward as quickly as resources permit.

Capital Spending

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the expected capital spending figure for his Department for 1994–95; and what is the latest budget figure. [30873]

Mr. Norris: The Department of Transport's capital spending figure for 1994–95 on a national accounts basis is expected to be £5,106 million. The latest capital budget figure available for 1995–96 is £3,592 million, excluding local authority capital which is a matter for determination by individual local authorities.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many schemes and to what value have been approved in 1994–95 under the private finance initiative; what are the estimates for the current financial year; how many schemes are currently being considered, and at what value; for how long have they been considered, and how many have been in the assessment process for over (a) 6 months and (b) 12 months; and what was the average length of time taken to assess schemes so far approved. [30822]

Mr. Norris: The information is as follows:

Schemes approved 1994–95

Schemes	Value £ million
Northern Line trains	400

Expected to be approved 1995–96

Schemes	Estimated value (£ million)
Channel Tunnel Rail Link	2,700 (Q4 1992 prices)
DBFOs	500
Croydon Tramlink	160
Midland Metro Line 1	150

Schemes under consideration

Schemes	Estimated value (£ million)
Crossrail	2,800
Thameslink 2000	Under assessment
East London Line extension	83
WCML signalling	50
Leeds Supertram	95
LT global revenue strategy	75
LUL power supplies	120
LUL track repair maintenance machine	0.5
Manchester Metrolink extension to Salford Quays	100
New Scottish ATC Centre	200
Oceanic Flight Data Processing System	25

The wide diversity of scheme types and their expected procurement routes mean that figures for the length of time they have been under consideration could not be provided on a consistent basis. However, the average length of time taken to progress schemes so far approved from invitation to tender to award of contract was 16 months.

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport by how much has Government spending changed in 1994–95 as a result of the private finance initiative; what is the estimated effect in 1994–95 as a result of the private finance initiative; what is the estimated effect in 1995–96; how many jobs are to be created by schemes approved to date under the initiative and how many have been lost as a consequence in the public sector; and what is the forecast of transfer of employment from public to private sector over the last five years because of the initiative. [30823]

Mr. Norris: There is no direct correlation between Government spending in a given year and the level of private capital levered in through the private finance initiative. Information on the employment consequences of private finance schemes is not available.

Buses

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many representations have been made to the traffic commissioners with regard to bus companies failing to fulfil their established timetables; which companies have been involved; and in which areas of the country. [30858]

Mr. Norris: The information is not available in the form requested.

A3

Mr. Peter Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what assessment he has made of (a) the justification and (b) the management of restrictions to traffic during the last five years by roadworks on the A3 as it bypasses Guildford; [30803]

(2) what assurances have been received by his Department from (a) the Highways Agency, (b) the county council and (c) other bodies of free passage for vehicles during the next three years when the current roadworks on the A3 where it bypasses Guildford are completed; [30806]

(3) what estimate his Department has made of the economic cost in the last five years to businesses in the Portsmouth travel-to-work area of delays caused by roadworks on the A3 as it bypasses Guildford; [30805]

(4) during how many days in the last five years has free passage for vehicles been restricted by roadworks on the A3 as it bypasses Guildford. [30807]

Mr. Watts: These are operational matters for the Highways Agency. I have asked the chief executive to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. Peter Griffiths, dated 18 June 1995:

The Minister for Railways and Roads, Mr John Watts, has asked me to write to you in reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions about roadworks on the A3 at Guildford.

The works that have been carried out on the A3 over the past 5 years have been necessary because much of this 20–30 year old and heavily used road has reached the end of its design life and therefore requires urgent attention. Left too long, structural damage would have occurred and would have been much more costly and difficult to rectify.

Restrictions to traffic during the works have been necessary in the interests of both the workforce and road users. I am satisfied that the restrictions have been managed as efficiently as possible bearing in mind the difficulty of operation on this busy road.

No assessment has been made of the economic cost of these works on businesses in Portsmouth.

Data showing daily lane restrictions on the A3 in the Guildford area for the past 5 years is not available. However, major maintenance was undertaken between Burpham and Wisley during the period November 1993—May 1994 and between Abbotswood and the A31, work started in January this year and is due for completion in July. In addition, some lane restrictions and local diversions were necessary for about six weeks last Summer whilst temporary supports for the A31 bridge over the A3 were put in place.

The Agency has given no assurance that there will be no further roadworks on the A3 in the vicinity of Guildford over the next 3 years. Major maintenance is planned next year between Burpham and Abbotswood. Strengthening work is also planned for around the end of this year on the bridge which carries the A3 southbound slip road to the A31 Hogs Back, although we do not expect this to cause undue disruption to A3 traffic.

When the A3 roadworks are complete we do not expect the road to require major maintenance for another 15–20 years from completion of each section. Some routine maintenance will of course be required from time to time, but this can be dealt with at off-peak periods with little disruption to traffic.

I hope this is helpful.

London Fort William Sleeper

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many representations have been received by (a) his Department, (b) the Rail Regulator and (c) the Office of the Passenger Rail Franchising Director in support of the retention of the London-Fort William sleeper. [31087]

Mr. Watts: The Department of Transport has received 178 representations in support of retention of the Fort William sleeper. A number of letters to the Department of Transport were also transferred to Opraf for reply. Opraf has received 875 representations, including letters transferred by the Department of Transport. The Rail Regulator has received 1,525.

Rail Fares

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what proposals he has to limit increases by private operators in the rail system in cases where he assesses increases to be unjustified; and if he will make it his policy to cap future increases to the rate of inflation. [30652]

Mr. Watts: The franchising director proposes to limit annual increases in key rail fares to retail prices index for three years from 1 January 1996 and to RPI -1 per cent. for the subsequent four years.

Unlicensed Trucks

Sir Donald Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what recent results have been obtained from checks for unlicensed trucks; and if he will now consider introducing measures to seize unlicensed operators' trucks. [30732]

Mr. Norris: We have no reliable estimate of the number of vehicles operated illegally. A special series of roadside checks by the vehicle inspectorate in 1993 indicated that up to 9 per cent. of vehicles checked were not on an operator's licence. In a similar exercise in 1994 in the south-east, 7 per cent. of vehicles checked were suspected of being operated illegally outside the operator licensing system. However, these exercises, as is normal for such checks, were targeted on areas where offenders were thought most likely to be and vehicles stopped were also those thought most likely to be offending. These figures cannot, therefore, be taken as representative of the commercial vehicle population as a whole.

In a recent cross-check of goods vehicles involved in accidents recorded by the police, no operator's licence could be traced for 24 per cent. of the vehicles. But this figure also cannot be taken as representative as the total included many vehicles below the limit for operator licensing, and also others exempt from operator licensing for another reason. It may also include vehicles "on the margin", that is, being used legally under the arrangements whereby operators have up to one month to notify licensing authorities of newly acquired vehicles.

We are currently looking at ways to obtain a better indication of the extent of the problem. We are also keeping under review a number of possible new measures against illegal operations, including impounding of vehicles.

Port and Harbour Police

Mr. George: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which local authorities are legally empowered to establish or operate ports or harbour police; and what is the statutory basis for each force. [30093]

Mr. Norris: The information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Rail Track Closures

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many miles of rail track were closed in each year since 1980; and what percentage this represented of the total track network in each year. [30451]

Mr. Watts: Information on miles of track closed since 1980 is not available.

Ferry Evacuations

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 15 June, Official Report, column 614, what is the difference in procedure for passengers embarking on to survival crafts from roll-on roll-off ferries and catamarans. [30302]

Mr. Norris [holding answer 26 June 1995]: This is an operational matter for the Marine Safety Agency. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from R. M. Bradley to Mr. Paul Flynn, dated 28 June 1995:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your Question about differences in evacuation procedure between roll-on-roll-off ferries and catamarans.

The evacuation procedures for passengers embarking into survival craft are governed by the systems in place. For roll-on-roll-off ferries, the main systems are davit launched liferafts or lifeboats, or marine evacuation systems. On some vessels, overside ladders may also be used to reach inflated liferafts if access cannot be gained directly from lower decks.

In the case of catamarans, the same options are available, but, due to lower deck levels, it is unlikely that davit launched liferafts or lifeboats would be used.

A40-M40 Link

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to announce the start date and the completion date of the work on the A40-M40 link between Shepherd's Bush and Ealing Acton. [31152]

Mr. Norris [holding answer 27 June 1995]: This is a operational matter for the Highways Agency. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. Clive Soley, dated 28 June 1995:

As you know, the Minister for Transport in London, Mr. Steven Norris, has asked me to reply to your Parliamentary Question asking the Secretary of State for Transport, when he expects to announce the start date and the completion date of the work on the A40/M40 link between Shepherd's Bush and Ealing Acton.

We have assumed you are referring to the improvements of the A40 trunk road at Gypsy Corner in the London Borough of Hounslow and at Western Circus in the London Borough of Ealing. These schemes are expected to start in 1996 and take 30 months to complete.

Until tenders are received and have been assessed, it will not be possible to announce a more exact start date.

Road Construction

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what studies his Department has made into the possibility of using channel tunnel construction methods to build roads in urban areas; and if he will make a statement. [30958]

Mr. Watts: This is an operational matter for the Highways Agency. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. David Marshall, dated 28 June 1995:

Mr. John Watts has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the possibility of using Channel Tunnel construction methods for building roads in urban areas.

The notable success of the civil engineering construction on the UK side of the Channel Tunnel project included the performance of the full-face boring machines that were used to excavate and line the main running tunnels and the service tunnel that link the UK with mainland Europe, the construction of a huge underground cross-over chamber by means of excavation and ground support techniques known as the New Austrian Tunnelling Method (NATM) and extensive cut and cover construction at the terminals. The full-face boring machine techniques and cut and cover construction are well established and already used to construct urban roads where appropriate.

NATM is a relatively new, very flexible and economic form of tunnelling that promises to be of particular benefit in the construction of the comparatively short lengths of tunnel required in most urban developments (i.e. less than 1 km long). The technique has been a topic of research and development commissioned by the Agency. NATM has already been adopted for two recently constructed twin trunk road tunnels (A20 Round Hill 390 m and A27 Southwick 490 m) both of which were constructed in chalk. Experience gained from studies carried out at both of these projects has shown that NATM could be well suited to the demands of underground construction in urban areas. Work is continuing to justify this assumption.

DEFENCE

Duke of York's Royal Military School

Mr. Sykes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what key targets have been set for the Duke of York's Royal Military School in 1995–96. [31905]

Mr. Soames: The key targets for the Duke of York's Royal Military School in 1995–96 are as follows:

Curriculum

To achieve at least 98 per cent. of GCSE passes at grades A to G in August 1995. To achieve at least five GCSE passes at grades A to C for 74 per cent. of pupils in August 1995. To achieve 85 per cent. of A-level passes at grades A to E in August 1995. To achieve 3 A-level passes at grades A to E for 80 per cent. of candidates in August 1995. To achieve 20 per cent. of A-level passes at grades A and B in August 1995. To achieve 100 per cent. award rate for BTEC national diploma courses in August 1995. To implement key stage 3 modifications to national curriculum programmes of study by September 1995. To achieve places in higher education for 70 per cent. of sixth form leavers by October 1995. To extend staff appraisal of all teaching staff in a two-year cycle by September 1995.

Pastoral

To ensure Marlborough house is prepared as a girls' senior house by September 1995. To ensure Kitchener house is prepared as a boys' senior house by September 1995. To expand involvement of girls in representative games by September 1995. To develop a school concert band—on-going.

Finance and Administration

To reduce pupil per capita costs to £11,081—at 1994 prices—by April 1996. To generate income of £400,000 by April 1996. To introduce phase 2 of new pupil billing system by September 1995.

Review

To assist MOD with agency review during 1995. To achieve 200 applicants for September 1996 intake by April 1996. To update school prospectus and poster by July 1995.

Territorial Army

Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Secretary for Defence if he will make a statement on senior appointments in the Territorial Army. [31904]

Mr. Soames: Territorial Army officers regularly command TA units at lieutenant colonel level and there are at present 39 TA officers at colonel level in staff appointments. At brigadier level, there is currently one dedicated TA post at Headquarters Land Command. Following consultation with senior military advisers, we intend that in future suitably qualified TA officers should have the opportunity to be considered for a range of staff and certain command appointments at brigadier level. Specifically, and subject to the availability of candidates of the appropriate calibre, we shall be establishing a post of brigadier (TA) development and doctrine within the Army's directorate of development and doctrine from 1996, to be filled by a TA officer. We also intend, probably from 1997, and subject again to the availability of suitable candidates, that the post of director reserve forces and cadets in the central staff of the Ministry of Defence, currently filled by a regular officer, should be filled by a one-star officer from the volunteer reserves of one of the three services.

I know that this will be welcomed by all reservists as further evidence of our commitment to the reserve forces.

Departmental Property

Ms Maddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library a list of the sites of his Ministry's residential properties in the counties of (a) Dorset, (b) Hampshire, (c) Isle of Wight, (d) Berkshire and (e) Wiltshire; and if he will give for each site both the total number of properties and the number which are currently unoccupied. [30220]

Mr. Soames: As at 31 March, my Department owned the following properties in the areas shown:

	Stock	Vacancies
Dorset	1,631	327
Hampshire	8,880	1,162
Isle of Wight	1	0
Berkshire	1,625	303
Wiltshire	6,819	1,103

Of the vacant properties, 86 in Dorset, 25 in Hampshire, 72 in Berkshire and 168 in Wiltshire were in the process of being sold. Many of the vacant properties were undergoing or awaiting major maintenance work, held for unit deployments, already allotted to families due to move in shortly or formed part of the management margin needed to ensure that accommodation is available for entitled service families.

Information on individual sites is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Royal Navy Trainees

Mr. Hicks: To ask the Secretary of State of Defence if he will outline the sequence of events that occurred on 15 June involving two Royal Navy sea helicopters which dropped and later collected a party of Royal Navy trainees at the China Fleet Club, Saltash; what was the training purpose of this exercise; what the total cost involved; how long the Royal Navy trainees stayed at the club; what they did there; and if he will make a statement. [30017]

Mr. Soames: RN Sea King aircraft of 848 squadron based at RNAS Yeovilton are used for the training of operational aircrew. Two of these aircraft were tasked to carry out operational training on 15 June involving low level navigation and formation flying.

To enhance the training value, the opportunity was taken to load the aircraft to operational all-up-weight with a group of off-duty maintenance ratings. These individuals were dropped at the China Fleet Club in Saltash from where they were retrieved five hours later by aircraft with different crews who were also carrying out operational training. No additional cost to public funds were incurred as a result of these individuals being transported.

Insurance

Ms Rachel Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the application of personal insurance schemes for military personnel who are killed or injured on or while travelling in military property. [30603]

Mr. Soames: It is a matter for individuals as to whether they take out insurance and what company, policy and level of cover they choose. My Department will refund a proportion of a life premium loading for hazardous duty. Application to travelling in military property would depend on the terms and conditions of the insurance policy chosen by the individual.

Isle of Lewis

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what military personnel were present on the Isle of Lewis on 20 June; whether any were members of the special forces; and if the presence of any military personnel was connected to the attempt to dump the Brent Spar at sea. [30696]

Mr. Soames: The following military personnel were present on the Isle of Lewis on 20 June:

Elements of the Territorial Army company based in Stornoway.

The permanent RAF detachment based at RAF Stornoway.

Personnel manning the permanent RAF transmitter station at Aird Uig.

Personnel from the sub-aqua clubs at RAF Lyneham an RAF Leuchars, carrying out adventurous training.

None of these personnel was connected in any way with the disposal operation for the Brent Spar oil platform.

French Nuclear Tests

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the implications of the French decision to resume nuclear testing for the successful negotiation of a comprehensive test ban treaty. [30518]

Mr. Soames: The decision by France to undertake a short programme of tests before signature of a comprehensive nuclear test ban treaty is not incompatible with the goal of an indefinite CTBT. The Government believe that it should be possible to conclude negotiations on such a treaty by the end of 1996 and will continue to work actively for that end. All the nuclear weapons states—including France—have expressed similar sentiments.

Research and Development

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his budget for the current financial year for industrial research and development. [30523]

Mr. Freeman: This year, we plan to spend some £630 million on research and £1.6 billion on development, the greater part of the latter being with industry. The annual publication "UK Defence Statistics" analyses expenditure by recipient sectors over recent years. The 1995 edition is planned for publication this July.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the figures at current prices for Government-funded defence research and development over each of the last 10 years. [31258]

Mr. Freeman: The figures at constant 1993–94 prices for Government-funded defence research and development based on table 3.2 of "Forward Look 95" are as follows:

Year	Total amount £ million
1985–86	2900.5
1986–87	2847.2
1987–88	2802.4
1988–89	2584.4
1989–90	2632.6
1990–91	2462.2
1991–92	2372.2
1992–93	2139.0
1993–94	2299.0
1994–95[1]	2431.4

[1] Estimate only.

These figures update those previously published in "UK Defence Statistics 1994" by retrospectively applying to the earlier years' statistical—including Frascati—adjustments made in 1992–93 and 1993–94.

Trident

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will give a breakdown of the estimated lifetime decommissioning costs of (a) Trident and (b) Polaris. [30624]

Mr. Freeman: As part of an exercise to determine the lifetime operating and support costs, the comprehensive costs of both decommissioning and eventual disposal of the Trident submarines were estimated—at 1992–93 prices—at £150 million. No revision of this estimate has been made pending greater experience of Trident operations. Although no similar estimates are available for the Polaris submarines, the approximate decommissioning cost—covering defuelling, decommissioning and lay-up preparations—of HMS Revenge, the one Polaris submarine fully to have undergone this process, was £18.7 million. The cost does not include the costs of final disposal.

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his latest estimate of the costs of the Trident works programme at Faslane and Coalport. [30645]

Mr. Freeman: The latest estimate of the cost of the Trident works programme, including projects at the Clyde submarine base, Faslane, and the royal naval armament depot, Coulport, is £1.956 billion.

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence to what extent (a) inflation and (b) the exchange rate have been taken into account in estimating the current costs of the Trident programme. [30622]

Mr. Freeman: The current estimate of the cost of the Trident programme, where past expenditure is included at the prices and exchange rates incurred, with future spend expressed at today's prices and exchange rates, is £9,770 million. With past expenditure revalued to current levels, the current Trident cost estimate is £11,682 million, which also takes into account inflation and exchange rate variations since the original 1981 estimate.

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what disciplinary action (a) has been taken and (b) is proposed to be taken against individuals as a result of cost overruns of the Trident works programme; and if he will make a statement. [30623]

Mr. Freeman: The original 1984 estimates for the Trident works programme were based on the best advice available at the time. The subsequent increase in costs is much regretted, but neither the Ministry of Defence's own internal review nor the Comptroller and Auditor-General's report suggested any culpability by individuals which would warrant disciplinary action.

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the estimated original cost of all the works at AWE Aldermaston for the Trident programme; and what are the present estimated costs of these works. [30643]

Mr. Freeman: The information is not readily available in the format requested. However, the current estimated total of the major programme of capital works at AWE Aldermaston which includes work in support of Trident is £1.2 billion compared to the original estimate of £974 million at 1987 economic conditions.

Devonport Nuclear Refit Facility

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the concerns that the nuclear installations inspectorate have expressed over the siting and construction of the new works at the Devonport nuclear refit yard. [30631]

Mr. Freeman: Her Majesty's nuclear installations inspectorate has expressed no concerns over the siting or construction of the new works at Devonport.

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence in what circumstances construction would take place in respect of the new Trident refit facility at Devonport, before a design has been agreed with all regulatory bodies, including the nuclear installations inspectorate. [30628]

Mr. Freeman: Construction will not commence until both Her Majesty's nuclear installations inspectorate and the MOD nuclear safety authority are satisfied that the proposed design is safe and meets all the current standards and regulations.

Mutual Defence Agreement

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many times employees of the Atomic Weapons Establishment have travelled to the United States under the auspices of (a) the 1958 mutual defence agreement and (b) the Trident sales agreement in each of the last five years. [30630]

Mr. Freeman: The following table gives the number of occasions on which one or more employees of the Atomic Weapons Establishment have travelled to the United States under the aegis of the 1958 mutual defence agreement in each of the last five financial years.

Financial years	Visits
1990–91	110
1991–92	129
1992–93	127
1993–94	129
1994–95	136

These figures include visits on duties relating to the Trident sales agreement as these are invariably arranged through 1958 agreement channels.

Explosives and Propellants

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement about the explosives, propellants and related products agreement with Royal Ordnance. [30507]

Mr. Freeman: The explosives, propellants and related end products agreement between the Ministry of Defence and Royal Ordnance plc—now the Royal Ordnance division of British Aerospace Defence Ltd.—was signed on 28 July 1988. Under EPREP, the Ministry of Defence had to purchase 80 per cent. of its requirements for certain natures of ammunition and explosives from Royal Ordnance during the five-year period from 1 April 1988 to 31 March 1993.

The agreement was part of the arrangements for the sale of the Royal Ordnance factories to British Aerospace. The guarantee of a core work load over the five-year period assisted in establishing the newly privatised company as an efficient competitor and provided a guaranteed source of supply to the Ministry of Defence during what would otherwise have been a period of instability.

The value of the orders placed with Royal Ordnance under the EPREP agreement was £560 million and covered over 40 types of ammunition.

BMARC

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on what date General Donald Isles passed a copy of the BMARC contract agreement for naval guns for Chartered Industries Singapore to his Department. [30089]

Mr. Freeman: In the absence of any specific information, my Department is unable to find any trace of such a contract being passed to it.

Capital Spending

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the expected capital spending figure for his Department for 1994–95; and what is the latest budget figure. [30888]

Mr. Freeman: The present estimated capital spending for defence for 1994–95 is £759 million for central Government's own expenditure and £46 million for public corporations' expenditure. The planned capital spending for defence in 1995–96 is £110 million for central Government's own expenditure and £42 million for public corporations' expenditure.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) by how much Government spending has changed in 1994–95 as a result of the private finance initiative; what is the estimated effect in 1995–96; how many jobs are to be created by schemes approved to date under the initiative and how many have been lost as a consequence in the public sector; and what is the forecast of transfer of employment from public to private sector over the last five years because of the initiative; [30853]

(2) how many schemes and to what value have been approved in 1994–95 under the private finance initiative; what are the estimates for the current financial year; how many schemes are currently being considered and at what value; for how long they have been considered and how many have been in the assessment process for over (a) six months and (b) 12 months; and what was the average length of time taken to assess schemes so far approved. [30852]

Mr. Freeman: The Ministry of Defence is fully committed to the private finance initiative and is actively pursuing potential opportunities. To this end, we have identified a range of prospects with potential for private finance including a number of PFI "Pathfinder" projects in areas such as information technology, works and logistics. It would be premature at this stage to attempt to predict spending or the impact on employment, which will be determined by the development of individual projects.

Attack Helicopters

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he had made of the financial cost of attack helicopter marinisation; and if he will make a statement. [31259]

Mr. Freeman: The ability to sustain continuous operations in a harsh maritime environment was not a requirement of the attack helicopter competition invitation to tender. However, bidders were asked a range of questions designed to establish their contender's ability to operate occasionally from ships in support of amphibious operations, together with costs for a number of specific modifications. Their responses have been considered together with many other factors as part of the overall assessment process. It would not be appropriate to comment on the details of individual bids.

HEALTH

School Nurses

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many school nurses there were in each of the last five years. [30420]

Mr. Sackville: The information is shown in the table.

GP Fundholding

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what has been the average expenditure per fundholding practice on purchasing care from the private sector in each year since 1990–91. [30436]

Mr. Malone: The first wave of fundholders took responsibility for their own budgets on 1 April 1991. The average expenditure per fundholding practice on purchasing care from non-national health service providers is shown in the table.

	Number of fundholding practices	Expenditure on health-care from non-NHS providers per GP fundholding practice £000s

Notes:
The figures for 1993–94 are provisional: the summarised accounts for 1993–94 are subject to audit by the National Audit Office.

Prescriptions

Mr. Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer of 20 June, Official Report, columns 209–10, in respect of discrepancies in answers on prescriptions if she will make a statement on the steps she has taken to eliminate such errors; what are the implications that the corrected information will have on her assessment of the level of fraud in the NHS; and what are the differences between the data she placed in the Library on 15 June and the information provided to the Chester and Ellesmere Port community health council which make the latter commercial-in-confidence. [31049]

Mr. Malone: The Department is reviewing internal procedures and use of the database package to minimise the risk of such errors reoccurring. The data supplied to the Chester and Ellesmere Port community health council have not been used within the Department and so have no implications for any other analyses.

The information provided to the community health council included details of the numbers of prescription items and net ingredient cost for each preparation, which are considered to be commercial-in-confidence. The data placed in the Library on 15 June included only the names of the preparations, in alphabetical order.

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is her estimate for the cost of administering the present prescription and exemption charges system in the United Kingdom; and if she will make a statement. [29584]

Mr. Malone: The available information for England is shown in the table.

Administration cost of the National Health Service prescription system[1] and the prescription charge exemption and remission arrangements in England in 1994–95

Item	Cost £ Million
Purchase of prescription forms for supply to doctors and dentists[2]	1.3
Pricing of prescriptions dispensed by community pharmacists, appliance contractors and doctors[3]	28.0
Operation of the NHS Low Income Scheme in England and Wales[3]	5.2
Total	34.5

Notes:
[1] Excludes fees paid to doctors, dentists and pharmacists for professional services and expenditure on the drugs bill.
[2] Expenditure by Family Health Services Authorities. Other FHSA administration costs associated with the NHS prescription system and the charge exemption and remission arrangements are not separately identified.
[3] Expenditure by the Prescription Pricing Authority. The costs of operating the NHS Low Income Scheme in England and Wales are not separately identified. The scheme provides remission of prescription charges and help with other NHS costs to eligible claimants and their dependents.

Information relating to Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland are matters for my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Wales and for Scotland and my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the revenue raised through prescription charges in the United Kingdom in (i) 1992–93, (ii) 1993–94 and (iii) 1994–95; and if she will make statement. [29586]

Mr. Malone: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the right hon. Member for Derby, South (Mrs. Beckett) on 9 December 1994 at column 397. Figures for 1994–95 are not yet available. Information relating to Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland are matters for my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Wales and for Scotland and my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland.

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the cost of prescription charges since 1965 indicating the figure as a percentage of (a) average earnings, (b) the cost of living, (c) basic state pensions and (d) taxable pensions. [30501]

Mr. Malone: Prescription charges since 1965 are shown in the table. Details of average gross weekly earnings are contained in the "New Earnings Survey", a copy of which is in the Library. Everyone of state retirement pension age is entitled to free prescriptions, as are people of working age on low incomes who qualify for full remission of charges under the national health service low income scheme. In 1994, about 83 per cent. of prescribed items were dispensed free of charge compared with some 42 per cent. in 1968 when prescription charges were reinstated.

Waiting Times Fund

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much has been spent on the waiting list initiative in total, by region, in the NHS sector and the private sector in each of the last five years; and how many patients have been treated in the NHS and private sectors under the waiting list initiative, by region and in total. [30767]

Mr. Malone: The central waiting times fund operated from 1987–88 to 1993–94 during which time the number of patients waiting more than one year for treatment fell from 209,440 to 64,508, and has since fallen further to 31,635. The table shows allocations from the fund to regional health authorities. Information is not available centrally on spending of these funds between the national health service and the private sector, or on the number of patients treated in the NHS and the private sector under the waiting times initiative.

North West Regional Health Authority

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations she has received from the British Medical Association relating to the impact of the waiting list initiative on clinical care in the North West regional health authority; and if she will make a statement. [30768]

Mr. Malone: None.

Press and Public Relations Officers

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much was spent on press and public relations by (a) the NHS Executive, (b) regional offices, (c) regional health authorities, (d) district health authorities, (e) family health service authorities and (f) trusts in each of the last five years; and how many press and public relations officers were employed by (a) to (f). [30783]

Mr. Sackville: I refer the right hon. Member to the reply I gave her on 3 May, Official Report, column 241. Information about the costs of press and public relations in the national health services is not available centrally.

NHS Communications

Mr. Trend: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action is being taken to improve the standard of communications in the NHS; and if she will make a statement. [31821]

Mr. Malone: The National Health Service Executive's business plan for 1995–96, copies of which are available in the Library, reflects the priority now given to improving communications in the NHS. Improved communications will assist the accountability of the NHS to those it serves. It will now also enhance responsiveness to patients and ensure that the NHS is better able to promote good health. The NHS Executive is taking action both to improve its own communications and to encourage best practice within the service.

The executive has taken steps to improve the quality of information it supplies to both the NHS and the public. The volume of publications issued is being reduced and printed communications are being targeted more precisely to ensure resources are used to best effect. Information is now supplied through:

regular briefings on service developments for NHS staff;

a guide to the NHS for the public; quarterly reviews of the most up to date performance data;

annual reports; and more clearly targeted newsletters including "NHS Magazine".

The NHS Executive has ceased production of six NHS newsletters and is seeking a more cost-effective approach. The new quarterly "NHS Magazine" replaced an old monthly publication and its production costs are met in part by advertising. The magazine is projected to cost £130,000 in its first year, against an estimated annual saving of £227,000 from discontinued publications.

The executive is working with the NHS to develop measurable standards for communication to improve the clarity and accessibility of information for the public. Such standards would ensure a consistent approach to communication throughout the NHS. It is also working on training and development packages opportunities covering NHS communications. These explain the benefits to be gained from promoting open communications with staff and include material on the importance of clear, jargon-free communication. The executive is working closely, where appropriate, with other health organisations, such as the National Association of Health Authorities and Trusts, on projects to develop higher standards in NHS communications.

Health Service Expenditure

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will express health service expenditure in the United Kingdom as a proportion of United Kingdom gross domestic product for (i) 1990–91, 1993–94 and (iii) 1994–95; and if she will make a statement. [29587]

Mr. Sackville: National health service expenditure in the United Kingdom as a whole has increased from the equivalent of 4.7 per cent. of gross domestic product in 1978–79 to 5.3 per cent. in 1990–91, 5.9 per cent. in 1993–94 and an estiamted 5.8 per cent. in 1994–95.

Medical Cost Inflation

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer of 20 June, Official Report, column 206, on medical cost inflation, what are her estimates of the inflation rate for the hospital and community health services for each year from 1979–80 to 1992–93; and what components of national health service spending are covered by this inflation measure. [31056]

Mr. Sackville: Estimates for hospital and community health services inflation are shown in the table. The inflation measure covers HCHS expenditure on staffing and the purchase of goods and services.

HCHS inflation 1979–80 to 1992–93

Year	HCHS inflation estimate

Capital Spending

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the expected capital spending figure for her Department for 1994–95; and what is the latest budget figure. [30881]

Mr. Sackville: The information is shown in the table.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Health by how much Government spending has changed in 1994–95 as a result of the private finance initiative; what is the estimated effect in 1995–96; how many jobs are to be created by schemes approved to date under the initiative and how many have lost as a consequence in the public sector; and what is the forecast of transfer of employment from public to private sector over the last five years because of the initiative. [30843]

Mr. Sackville: Capital made available as a result of the private finance initiative is additional to publicly-funded capital. I refer the hon. Member is to the reply I have the right hon. Member for Derby, South (Mrs. Beckett) on 2 May at cols 175–76 for information on spending in 1994–95 and 1995–96 on the National Health Service Executive private finance unit.

Information on numbers of public and private sector jobs affected by the private finance initiative in the NHS is not available centrally.

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many schemes and to what value have been approved in 1994–95 under the private finance initiative; what are the estimates for the current financial year; how many schemes are currently being considered and at what value; for how long they have been considered and how many have been in the assessment process for over (a) six months and (b) 12 months; and what was the average length of time taken to assess schemes so far approved. [30842]

Mr. Sackville: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Newcastle upon Tyne, East (Mr. Brown) on 24 May at column 594, for the available information.

Health Expenditure

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer of 20 June, Official Report, column 205, on health expenditure, if she will specify the monetary sum relating to local authorities' new community care responsibilities for 1996–97, which is at present held in the Department of the Environment's local government programme. [31057]

Mr. Bowis: A sum of £2,256 million is at present held in the Department of Environment's local government programme for local authorities' new community care responsibilities for 1996–97. Part of this sum will form the special transitional grant for 1996–97 and will be transferred to this Department's programme. The amount is not yet decided.

Health and Housing Policy

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on which dates in the last three years she has met her ministerial colleagues responsible for housing to discuss the co-ordination of the Government's health and housing policies; and if she will make a statement. [31027]

Mr. Sackville: Ministers in the Department of Health hold frequent meetings with Ministers in other Government Departments to discuss a variety of matters, which will sometimes include health and housing.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Phytoestrogens

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what are the approved levels of oestrogen and phytoestrogen in food and drinks given to babies and toddlers. [29990]

Mrs. Browning: There are no United Kingdom advisory limits or regulations controlling levels of phytoestrogens in foods specially prepared for infants and toddlers.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what research has been (a) started and (b) completed on phytoestrogen in soya milk following the 1992 recommendations of the Committee of Toxicity on Foodstuffs. [29993]

Mrs. Browning: Two MAFF-funded studies are currently in progress. These studies include an analysis of soya milk and infant formula. In addition, a surveillance project measuring levels of oestrogens in the diets of infants, toddlers and young children will start shortly. None of these projects has been completed.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what levels of oestrogen or phytoestrogen are normally found in soya-based cooking oil and spread. [29997]

Mrs. Browning: Information available to the Ministry indicates that phytoestrogens are not present in soya-based cooking oil and spread.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what monitoring his Department undertakes on the levels of oestrogenic chemicals in food; and what is the budget and total full-time staff for this study. [30541]

Mrs. Browning: Several chemicals claimed to have oestrogenic properties are included in MAFF's food chemical surveillance programme. It is not possible to separate out the costs and staff allocated to this group of chemicals.

Sheep Dips

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what representations were made to him or to farming organisations by the French authorities before benzene hectochlorine sheep dip was banned in the United Kingdom; and if such dip is currently used in France; [30273]

(2) if he will make a statement on the circumstances which led him to ban the sheep dip containing benzene hectochlorine. [30274]

Mrs. Browning: Following expressions of concern from the French authorities in the 1980s, about levels of lindane residues in sheep meat, United Kingdom manufacturers ceased to use benzene hexachloride in treatments for sheep scab. The decision to make this change was taken by the manufacturers; there has not been a ban. I am not aware if benzene hexachloride is still used in France.

Mr. Nicholson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what advice, in view of the report entitled "CULS 50/93, Diazinon: post-Dipping Exposure in Humans", he gives to those handling sheep which have been dipped with this compound; for how long after dipping this advice applies; and when this advice was issued. [30269]

Mrs. Browning: Advice on various aspects of using sheep dips, including the handling of sheep that have been dipped with diazinon, or with any other organophosphorus product, is contained in the free leaflet AS29, available from the Health and Safety Executive. This leaflet, which was sent to sheep farmers in 1994, includes advice to observe the label withdrawal periods for the product used. It also advises that it is good practice not to shear sheep for three months after dipping.

Mr. Nicholson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what measures he takes to ensure that sheep are effectively dipped against scab, with particular reference to a repeat treatment at a specific time after the first dipping. [30275]

Mrs. Browning: All treatments for sheep scab must be approved by the Veterinary Medicines Directorate under the provisions of the Marketing Authorisations for Veterinary Medicinal Products Regulations 1994, S.I. 1994/3142. As part of the authorisation process, consideration is given to the safety quality and efficacy of the product. The instructions, including any necessity for repeat applications, are clearly printed on the containers and should always be carefully followed. Most sheep scab treatments do not require repeat applications.

General advice on dealing with sheep scab is given in the Ministry's current publicity leaflet—PB 1927—which advises consulting a veterinary surgeon if farmers are in doubt about treatments. Advice on dipping procedures is given in the leaflet "Sheep Dipping"—AS29—available from the Health and Safety Executive.

Mr. Nicholson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what evidence he has that particular working conditions, weather conditions, and existing medical conditions among those handling sheep which are, or have been, dipped with organophosphorus compounds, exacerbate reactions to exposure to the compounds; and if he will make as statement on the particular advice he gives in these circumstances. [30268]

Mrs. Browning: Information on reported suspected adverse reactions is collected by the Veterinary Medicines Directorate but details provided on individual reports vary inequality and would be very unlikely to lead to any meaningful conclusions. Extracting the specific information requested could not in any case be done readily.

Leaflet AS 29 (rev), "Sheep dipping", issued by the Health and Safety Executive includes the joint advice of the HSE, the Veterinary Medicines Directorate and the Department of the Environment to those involved in sheep dipping on protecting their health.

Mr. Nicholson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what advice he has issued to those shearing sheep, regarding shearing within (a) one week (b) two weeks and (c) up to five weeks after dipping. [30276]

Mrs. Browning: The leaflet "Sheep Dipping"—(AS29)—which was sent to sheep farmers in 1994, includes the advice that "It is good practice not to shear sheep for three months after dipping."

The leaflet, which is available from the Health and Safety Executive, gives advice on various aspects of sheep dipping. It was prepared jointly by the Health and Safety Executive, the Veterinary Medicines Directorate and the Department of the Environment.

Mr. Nicholson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what research he has evaluated, and what (a) representations or (b) claims he has received suggesting that there is a link between the numbers of suicides among farmers and the mental and physical effects of reactions to exposure to organophosphate sheep dips. [30272]

Mrs. Browning: I am aware that a recent report by the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys on suicide deaths in England and Wales, 1982–92 indicates that farmers are among the occupational groups with the highest rate of suicide. The reasons for this are not clear, but factors such as access to the means of suicide, firearms for example, and physical and social isolation are likely to play a part.

Anti-androgens

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what research his Department is undertaking on anti-androgens in food. [30538]

Mrs. Browning: The Department is not carrying out any specific research on anti-androgens in food.

Nutritional Labelling

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what additional nutritional labelling regulations have been made since 1991. [30544]

Mrs. Browning: The Food Labelling (Amendment) Regulations 1994, S.I. 1994 No. 804, implemented EC directive 90/496 on nutritional labelling for foodstuffs. These regulations set out the format for nutrition labelling when given and require it to be given if a claim is made on the label about a particular nutrient.

DDT

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the approved level of DDT in food; and what checks are undertaken on the levels of DDT in imported foods. [30540]

Mrs. Browning: Maximum residue levels for DDT in a wide range of foodstuffs are included in schedule 2, part 2, to the Pesticides (Maximum Residues Levels in Crops, Food and Feeding Stuffs) Regulations 1994. Generally, the MRL is 0.05 mg/kg. As part of the Govenment's food surveillance programme for pesticide residues, imported foodstuffs are checked selectively for residues of DDT. The results of this programme are published annually in reports of the working party on pesticide residues, copies of which are available from HMSO.

Organic-based Fertilisers

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what research is being funded into organic based fertilisers. [30543]

Mrs. Browning: The Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food will be spending around £1 million in 1995–96 on research on organic-based fertilisers. The main emphasis of this work is to improve our understanding of the behaviour of the nitrogen and phosphorus in animal manures and to develop practical methods and improved recommendations to enable farmers better to utilise the fertiliser value of manures.

Effect of organic manures on medium-term N cycling and nitrate leaching

ADAS

£93,000

The Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food is also spending about £1 million every year, in England and Wales, on a programme of research and development into economic and practical questions concerned with organic agriculture and horticulture.

Genetically Modified Organisms

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer of 13 June, Official Report, column 511, if he will list foods cleared for sale in the United Kingdom produced using genetically modified organisms. [30535]

Mrs. Browning: Ministers have accepted the advice of the Advisory Committee on Novel Foods and Processes and cleared, on food safety grounds, a genetically modified baker's yeast; three chymosin enzymes; used in cheese production, derived from GM micro-organisms; a GM brewer's yeast; tomato paste from a GM tomato; processed food products derived from a GM soya bean; and two oils derived from GM oilseed rapes. To our knowledge, only the chymosins are currently in commercial use.

Capital Spending

Mr. Betts: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the expected capital spending figure for his Department for 1994–95; and what is the latest budget figure. [30889]

Mr. Jack: The Ministry's expected capital figures—as published in the statistical supplement to the "Financial Statement and Budget Report 1995–96 Cm 2821"—are £118 million for 1994–95 and £144 million for 1995–96. The 1994–95 figure includes net receipts of £22 million from local authorities, but there is no equivalent figure available for 1995–96 and the totals for the two years are not comparable.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Betts: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, by how much Government spending has changed in 1994–95 as a result of the private finance initiative; what is the estimated effect in 1995–96; how many jobs are to be created by schemes approved to date under the initiative and how many have been lost as a consequence in the public sector; and what is the forecast of transfer of employment from public to private sector over the last five years because of the initiative. [30857]

Mr. Jack: The Ministry's spending in 1994–95 was not affected by the private finance initiative. The position may be similar in 1995–96. No schemes have yet been approved and as a consequence no jobs have been created or lost as a result of the private finance initiative.

Mr. Betts: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, how many schemes and to what value have been approved in 1994–95 under the private finance initiative; what are the estimates for the current financial year; how many schemes are currently being considered and at what value; for how long they have been considered and how many have been in the assessment process for over (a) six months and (b) 12 months; and what was the average length of time taken to assess schemes so far approved. [30856]

Mr. Jack: No schemes have been approved to date under the private finance initiative and it is thought unlikely that any will reach the approval stage in 1995–96.

The whole of the Ministry's capital expenditure is currently being assessed for its possible application to the private finance initiative with eight schemes being considered. An estimate of the value of the schemes is difficult to make as there are often several private finance and other options for each scheme. Two of the schemes under consideration have been in the assessment process for between six and 12 months.

ADAS

Mr. Deva: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he has reached any conclusions as to the future of the ADAS agency; and if he will make a statement. [31861]

Mr. Waldegrave: The Secretary of State and I have now agreed that a number of ADAS's functions are suitable for privatisation. We have however concluded that certain of the non-research and development functions that ADAS carries out for MAFF and Welsh Office—about two thirds of this work in all, including most of that in connection with the agri-environment schemes—should remain in the public sector. We have accordingly agreed to prepare for eventual privatisation a body which comprises all the ADAS commercial consultancy services, its laboratory services and the remainder of the non-research and development work performed for Departments. As to the present ADAS research centres, ownership of the sites and their facilities and arrangements for future access to both by the privatised body will be further considered. We expect, however, that the privatised body would continue to manage a proportion of our Departments' existing programmes at those sites.

ADAS has met all its financial targets since it was launched as an agency. We have concluded that the precise timing for privatisation of such a body should be determined in the light of continuing improvements in its financial performance, particularly as regards its commercial consultancy services. We have accordingly decided that ADAS will be required to recover 100 per cent. of its costs for advisory services in 1996–97 through charges to its commercial customers. If this and other objectives are met in 1996–97, we shall proceed to privatisation in the course of 1997. We do not exclude an earlier disposal if the agency's performance warrants it.

A management team has indicated that it would be interested in preparing a management and employee buy-out of a business similar to that described above. We welcome this signal from the agency's staff of their confidence in its future but will, of course, consider all bids that may be forthcoming for that business or for parts of it.

Mr. Mark Robinson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what performance targets he has set for ADAS for 1995–96. [31860]

Mr. Waldegrave: The Secretary of State and I have decided that for 1995–96, ADAS will be asked to recover 73 per cent. of its costs for advisory services through charges to commercial customers; the balance will be met by my Department. The other financial, efficiency and service delivery targets for ADAS for 1995–96 will be:

to achieve full cost recovery from all other work;

to reduce the total cost per hour in contract delivery in real terms by 2 per cent.;

to maintain average debtor days at or better than 55 days;

to meet 90 per cent. of Research and Development project milestones; to continue to achieve customer satisfaction as measured by customer surveys.

Salmon

Sir Cranley Onslow: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action the Government are taking to implement the recommendations in the Salmon Advisory Committee's report "The Run Timing of Salmon". [31942]

Mr. Waldegrave: My right hon. Friends the Secretary of State for Scotland, the Secretary of State and I have carefully studied the Salmon Advisory Committee's report. In our view, it makes a valuable contribution to our understanding of the factors that determine the age at which salmon return to their native rivers to spawn and of the various possible reasons for the recent decline in the number of early running, spring salmon that spend more than one winter at sea. The report concludes that changes in environmental conditions in the sea are likely to be a major factor in the current low abundance of spring fish, but that it is also likely that heavy selective exploitation of older sea-age classes and early running fish is implicated.

The report makes a number of recommendations. The majority of these are for further research, and the fisheries departments will take particular account of the SAC's views when reviewing their existing research programmes on salmon and commissioning further research.

The report also recommends that consideration be given to protection, and perhaps enhancement, of early running fish, particularly in stocks where spring runs have suffered the most acute decline. Actions that it suggests might be appropriate include protection, rehabilitation and development of habitat; additional control of exploitation in both commercial and sport fisheries; and protection of stocks from illegal fishing. It further recommends that for such fisheries management action should be undertaken on a river-by-river basis.

My right hon. Friends and I are drawing these recommendations for management action to the attention of the National Rivers Authority and the district salmon fisheries boards in Scotland and, asking them, in particular, to consider urgently whether, and if so what, action is needed to conserve the runs of spring fish in the fisheries for which they are responsible. We will take full account of the SAC's views in considering any proposals for further action that they make.

In this context, I am asking the National Rivers Authority to reconsider the recommendation, in the report on salmon net fisheries presented to Parliament in 1991, that the opening date for the drift net fisheries of Northumbria and Yorkshire should be postponed until 1 May so as to reduce the level of exploitation of spring running salmon. The NRA decided not to implement this recommendation, on the grounds that any action on spring fish needed to be part of a wider programme embracing rod and net fisheries in both England and Scotland. In the light of the Salmon Advisory Committee's report, and in the expectation that appropriate action will be taken in other fisheries, there is now an opportunity for a postponement of the opening of the drift netting season until 1 May to form part of such a wider programme.

Barley

Mr. Gale: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what quantity of barley has been sold to Spain for pigfeed and other purposes from intervention stocks in each of the past three years for which figures are available. [30487]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 26 June 1995]: The information requested is not available. United Kingdom intervention barley sold onto the Community market can go to any member state; barley for export must go to third country.

Mr. Gale: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food at what figure below the intervention price available to United Kingdom pig farmers barley from intervention stocks is being sold to Spain. [30488]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 26 June 1995]: The sale of UK intervention barley to Spain will be by tender starting on 29 June. Tenderers will bid to buy grain out of intervention and ship it to a store in Spain. They will be required to cover transportation and shipping costs—excluding the cost of transferring grain from UK intervention stores to the nominated port of exit which will on this occasion be met by the ELT. It is not possible to predict the cost at which barley will be resold onto the Spanish market which is a commercial decision for the Spanish trade.

Sows

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will ask the Farm Animal Welfare Council to investigate claims of welfare advantages for sows confined to sow stalls for the first 35 days. [31015]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 26 June 1995]: Claims of welfare advantages for sows confined to sow stalls for the first 35 days of pregnancy have not been supported by scientific evidence. I see no basis therefore on which the Farm Animal Welfare Council could be asked to investigate them further.

Eastern European Fishing Fleets

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer to the honourable Member for Great Grimsby, (Mr. Mitchell) of 25 May, Official Report, column 684–85, (1) what changes he expects to make to the common fisheries policy when the entry of (a) Poland, (b) Hungary, (c) the Czech Republic, (d) Slovakia, (e) Romania, (f) Bulgaria, (g) Slovenia, (h) Lithuania, (i) Latvia and (j) Estonia begin negotiations for entry into the EU; [28919]

(2) what benefits he expects to come to the British fishing fleet when (a) Poland, (b) Hungary, (c) the Czech Republic, (d) Slovakia, (e) Romania, (f) Bulgaria, (g) Slovenia, (h) Lithuania, (i) Latvia and (j) Estonia are admitted to the common fisheries policy. [28918]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 19 June 1995]: All the countries listed, with the exception of Slovenia, have signed Europe agreements with the EU—Slovenia's has been negotiated and is now awaiting signature). These agreements contain the prospect of eventual EU accession. Only Poland and Hungary have formally applied to join the EU although a number of other central European states have indicated their wish to follow suit by the end of 1995.

It is too early to say when any of these countries will join the EU, nor is it yet possible to predict what changes may be made to the common fisheries policy or what benefits there would be to the British fishing fleet consequent upon their joining. In any negotiations on changes to the common fisheries policy consequent upon the accession of further countries to the EU, we will have uppermost in our minds the interest of the UK fishing industry.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Roger Levitt Case

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Attorney-General (1) if he consulted Mr. David Cocks QC on the wording of his answer to the hon. Member for Hendon, South (Mr. Marshall) on 9 December 1993, Official Report, columns 332–33; and if the specific wording of the answer was given prior approval by (a) Mr. George Staple and (b) the Solicitor-General; [30375]

(2) whom he consulted on the wording of the answer before giving answers to the hon. Member for Hendon, South (Mr. Marshall) on 9 December 1993, Official Report, columns 332–33 on the case of Roger Levitt. [30397]

The Attorney-General: The wording of my answer on 9 December 1993 to my hon. Friend the Member for Hendon, South was prepared on the basis of information provided by the Serious Fraud Office. The specific wording was checked for accuracy by the case controller at the Serious Fraud Office and by leading counsel for the prosecution, Mr. David Cocks QC, but not by the director of the Serious Fraud Office personally. The answer was shown to the Lord Chief Justice, who did not ask for any change, so that he could see how references to the trial judge and the question of sentence were being handled. It was cleared by the Solicitor-General.

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Attorney-General on how many occasions a person has been convicted of misleading FIMBRA; and on each occasion what was the sentence imposed for that charge. [30374]

The Attorney-General: In the case of R v. Levitt the misleading of FIMBRA was pleaded as a particular to the count of fraudulent trading, as set out more fully in my answer to question No. 30405. The misleading of FIMBRA can give rise to a variety of offences. No central record is kept of such convictions and a complete check would involve disproportionate cost.

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Attorney-General, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Swansea, East (Mr. Anderson) 19 June 1995, Official Report, columns 68–70, what other discussions took place between the director of the Serious Fraud Office and counsel for the prosecution of Roger Levitt before 22 November 1993; in what circumstances; what was their content and place; and if he will place the notes or records of those discussions in the Library. [30398]

The Attorney-General: The director of the Serious Fraud Office and counsel discussed aspects of the case other than possible pleas at conferences on 24 February 1993 at 5 King's Bench Walk and 8 June 1993 and 19 November 1993, both at the Serious Fraud Office. It is not my practice to disclose the content of such discussions which concerned the general conduct of the case. To do so would be prejudicial to the proper administration of justice.

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Attorney-General if he will place in the Library copies of the record or notes of meetings or conversations between the Serious Fraud Office and prosecution counsel in the case of Roger Levitt between September 1993 and 27 November 1993 which refer to (a) possible pleas to be entered by Levitt and (b) possible sentence which might arise from those pleas. [30399]

The Attorney-General: Neither the Serious Fraud Office nor prosecuting counsel has any record or notes as to the substance of meetings or conversations with counsel referring to these matters. There is a worksheet prepared by junior prosecuting counsel, Mr. Jonathan Fisher, for cost purposes which merely lists "conf with SFO re: pleas" on 5 November 1993 among other matters.

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Attorney-General (1) if he will list the dates on which he was informed that his answer to the hon. Member for Hendon, South (Mr. Marshall) of 9 December 1993, Official Report, columns 323-33, may not have been full or correct in all particulars; by whom he was so informed and in what form; what action he took as a result of being so informed; and when he took it; [30400]

(2) when he was informed that authorised plea discussions described in his answer to the hon. Member for Swansea, (Mr. Anderson) of 19 June, Official Report, columns 68-70, had taken place; when he initiated inquiries to ascertain what discussions had taken place on pleas in respect of Mr. Roger Levitt; what has been the outcome of those enquiries; and if he will make a statement; [30409]

(3) whom he consulted before giving his reply to the hon. Member for Swansea, East of 19 June 1995, columns 68-70, on the case of Roger Levitt; and when; [30410]

(4) what information he received from Mr. Jonathan Goldberg QC in respect of his answer to the hon. Member for Hendon, South on 17 December 1993, Official Report, columns 1054-46; what account he took of it in his answer to the hon. Member on 16 December, Official Report, column 1049; what action he took in response to the representations of Mr. Goldberg; and when he took it. [70411]

The Attorney-General: Mr. Jonathan Goldberg QC copied to me a letter from himself dated 13 December 1993 to Mr. David Cocks QC in which he suggested that my answers on 9 December 1993 to my hon. Friend the member for Hendon, South (Mr. Marshall) were misleading as the result of the information provided to me by prosecuting counsel and/or the Serious Fraud Office. The letter was considered with the Deputy Director of the SFO, the case controller and prosecuting counsel at a meeting chaired by my hon. and learned Friend the Solicitor General on 16 December 1993 to consider the terms of answers subsequently given to my hon. Friend the Member for Hendon, South on 17 December 1993. He was assured by prosecuting counsel and representatives of the Serious Fraud Office that the answers given on 9 December and the answers to be given were accurate and not misleading.

The fact that there were differences of view between the prosecution and defence about the case was referred to incidently but unspecifically at a meeting which I had with My hon. Friend the Member for Hendon, South, on the conduct and outcome of the case generally on 12 January 1994.

Mr. Goldberg wrote a further letter on 21 February 1994 again asserting that prosecuting counsel had offered a plea deal prior to the case being opened before the jury which was only marginally less favourable than the plea Mr. Levitt finally entered. He enclosed copies of letters to him written by other defence counsel in the case in the context of a complaint under consideration by the professional conduct committee of the Bar Council. I replied to Mr. Goldberg, saying that the correspondence confirmed the degree of difference between counsel in the case but that the Law Officers were not in a position to resolve those differences. Nor, although it was helpful to be kept informed, would it be right for them to try to do so, particularly since the matter was being considered by the professional conduct committee.

On 31 May 1995 my hon. Friend the Member for Hendon, South wrote to me and drew attention to the programmes on BBC Radio 5 on plea bargaining. In that letter and at a subsequent meeting with me and the Solicitor-General on 6 June 1995 he asked that I re-examine the replies given to him on 9 December 1993. In the light of that letter and meeting, and a question tabled by the hon. Member for Swansea, East and media reports, the Serious Fraud Office and prosecuting counsel were asked to re-examine the events that led up to Mr. Levitt's plea. My hon. and learned friend the Solicitor-General chaired further meetings on 12 June, 14 June and 15 June with the director and other members of the SPTO, prosecuting counsel and my own officials. Following the meeting on 12 June the Solicitor-General asked to see the SFO files and counsel's notebooks for the period 1 to 22 November 1993. The SFO files were sent to my office on the evening of 13 June under cover of a letter from the deputy director. The Solicitor-General was given the notebooks of Mr. Cocks and junior prosecuting counsel's—Mr. Fisher's—worksheet during 14 June and the notebooks of both prosecuting junior counsel on 23 June. The Solicitor-General examined the material supplied but, with the exception of the worksheet to which I refer in my answer to question No. 30399, and Mr. Cock's note of the mitigation advanced on behalf of Mr. Reed could find no reference to possible pleas.

Following his appearance before the Treasury and Civil Service Select Committee the director considered in detail with prosecuting counsel and the case controller the letter from the solicitor for Mr. Levitt—Mr. Goldkorn—to his client, which had been handed to him during his appearance He also recovered his diary from storage and from that it was apparent that a meeting had taken place at the SFO at 8.45am on 5 November 1993 between prosecuting counsel and the director and the case controller. The deputy director's letter referred to this meeting and the possibility that pleas had been discussed between prosecuting counsel and the director of the SFO. Mr. Cocks and the director spoke to my office about his on 14 June prior to the meeting later that day. At that meeting the director explained that it had become apparent that a meeting had taken place on 5 November 1993. As was set out in my written answer to the hon. Member for Swansea, East given on 15 June, Official Report, 19 June 1995, columns 68–70, the joint recollection of all present was that the director had been then informed of possible pleas which leading counsel for the Crown advised should, in the event that they were tendered, be accepted. I was informed of the 5 November 1993 meeting on 14 June 1995 and joined the 15 June meeting. Prosecuting counsel and the director of the SFO confirmed to me personally that the terms of the proposed answer to the hon. Member for Swansea, East were accurate.

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Attorney-General what were the fees paid to each prosecution counsel by the Crown in respect of the trial of Rover Levitt; and at what hourly rate. [30401]

The Attorney-General: Fees inclusive of VAT and excluding expenses, paid to prosecution counsel were as follows:

Leading counsel	128,639.88
Junior counsel	155,890.73
Second junior counsel	165,118.71
Total	449,649.32

Hourly and daily rates as shown in the following table agreed for each stage of the case and were increased in annual reviews on the dates shown in the left-hand column.

Date of engagement or annual review	Pre transfer (up to 15 April 1992)	Post transfer (from 16 April 1992)	Daily rate
Leading counsel
15 March 1991	150	165	600
15 March 1992	161	177	642
15 March 1993	—	183	662
Junior counsel
15 March 1991	90	100	300
15 March 1992	96	107	321
15 March 1993	—	110	331
Second junior counsel
15 March 1991	60	66	165
15 March 1992	64	71	177
15 March 1993	—	74	182

My answer of 23 May 1995 to the hon. Member for Wallsend (Mr. Byers), Official Report, column 520, stated that the fees paid to leading counsel in this case were earned from January 1991 and amounted to £137,405. Mr. Cocks was in fact formally instructed on 15 March 1991 and the amount given in my previous answer erroneously included a payment relating to another case. The total amount paid to Mr. Cocks is as set out in the table.

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Attorney-General what inquiries he made about the availability of Mr. David Cocks in relation to the trial of Mr. Roger Levitt; what account was taken of the probable length of the trial if contested; and what assessment he has made as to the availability of Mr. Cocks in respect of a contested trial. [30402]

The Attorney-General: The prosecution was brought by the Serious Fraud Office. I am informed by the Serious Fraud Office that it formally instructed Mr. David Cocks QC on 15 March 1991 on the basis that he would advise in relation to the Levitt case and subsequently conduct any proceedings which the director of the SFO decided to institute. The terms on which prosecuting counsel are instructed by the SFO require them to give a high degree of priority to the conduct of the case. The estimated length of any trial varied, but Mr. Cocks was at all stages expected to be available to conduct a contested trial. The SFO was at no stage given any reason to doubt his availability for as long as was necessary and Mr. Cocks has assured me that he was indeed available to conduct the trial for as long as necessary.

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Attorney-General (1) pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Swansea, East of 19 June, Official Report, columns 68–70, on discussions between counsel for the Crown and for Roger Levitt, precisely what pleas were in issue at each discussion and specifically when the Crown decided for the purposes of discussions or plea that it was appropriate for Levitt not to admit to actual theft by himself; [30403]

(2) what indications as to the acceptability of possible pleas had been made by the defence to the Crown before the judge discussed sentence on Mr. Roger Levitt on 22 November 1993. [30407]

The Attorney-General: In June 1992 counsel for Mr. Reed approached leading counsel for the Crown, Mr. David Cocks QC, with an offer of a plea of guilty by Mr. Reed to the offence of fraudulent trading involving the failure to invest funds in accordance with investors' instructions and the sending of false investor valuations. This approach was repeated on a number of occasions. On each occasion Mr. Cocks said the plea would not be acceptable.

Shortly before 2 November 1993, leading counsel for Mr. Price approached Mr. Cocks and asked whether the Crown would be prepared to accept a plea to fraudulent trading on the basis of the FIMBRA particular from Mr. Levitt, Mr. Reed and Mr. McNamara. Mr. Cocks said that, if such discussions were to be pursued, they must involve counsel for all the defendants. On 2 November 1993 Mr. Cocks told counsel for all the defendants that the proposed pleas were insufficient but that if Mr. Levitt and Mr. Reed would plead guilty to the FIMBRA particular of fraudulent trading and "something sensible" on the investor side such as counts 3 and 5 of the indictment—specimen counts of sending false valuations to investors, he thought that serious consideration would be given to such an approach. On 4 November there were further discussions between counsel, other than counsel for Mr. Levitt, about possible pleas. In a discussion believed to have taken place on 5 November Mr. Cocks repeated to leading counsel for Mr. Levitt—Mr. Goldberg—what he had said about possible pleas on 2 November but no such indication of a plea was forthcoming. There was further discussion arising from the suggestion made by leading counsel for Mr. Price when both junior prosecuting counsel spoke to Mr. Goldberg, and his junior, on 9 November 1993 and said that although they had no firm instructions, if Mr. Levitt offered to plead guilty to the false investor valuations not as separate counts but as particulars of fraudulent trading, as well as pleading guilty to the particular alleging the deception of FIMBRA, this might be acceptable to the Crown. Mr. Goldberg informed Mr. Cocks on 11 November 1993 that Mr. Levitt would not be offered a plea of guilty to any part of the indictment.

The trial thereafter proceeded and I refer the hon. Member to my answer to question No. 30405.

On Sunday 21 November 1993 junior counsel for Mr. Levitt telephoned first junior prosecuting counsel and said that Mr. Levitt was considering entering a plea of guilty on the FIMBRA part of the fraudulent trading count, on the strict understanding that all other counts would be left on the file. Mr. Fisher replied that prosecuting counsel would need to have a conference with the SFO. About half an hour later junior counsel for Mr. Levitt again telephoned Mr. Fisher and said that she had forgotten to mention that, if the plea was acceptable to the Crown, Mr. Goldberg would seek to seek to see the trial judge to ask for an indication as to sentence.

On Monday 22 November 1993 Mr. Goldberg made his offer in writing to Mr. Cocks of the plea that was finally entered. He wrote that if the offer was acceptable to the Crown he was instructed to seek an indication from the trial judge on sentence and that Mr. Levitt would then decide what to do.

There were no counts of theft against Mr. Levitt included in the indictment.

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Attorney-General what charges and how many were originally brought against Mr. Roger Levitt; what was the sequence of events by which (a) their number and (b) their gravity was reduced; if he will give the date on which each charge was dropped; and what assessment he has made as to the extent to which the sequence of events conformed to the highest standards of conducting cases. [30405]

The Attorney-General: The proceedings against Mr. Levitt were transferred to Southwark crown court on 15 April 1992 on the basis of 62 charges, consisting of five charges of conspiracy to defraud and 56 substantive offences of dishonesty, including certain charges of theft, relating to private investors or institutions, and a further charge of fraudulent trading which was intended to embrace all aspects of the alleged fraudulent conduct. Most of these charges were alternatives.

When the indictment was preferred it was necessary to reduce the number of charges to facilitate presentation of the case to the jury. The indictment, signed on 12 June 1992, contained 22 counts. Count 1 alleging fraudulent trading by TLG Ltd. was fully particularised and included a particular alleging:

"producing and causing to be produced to officers of FIMBRA documents, viz: a profit and loss schedule of income, schedules and a balance sheet, fee notes, invoices, letters, and minutes of a meeting of the Board of Directors of Levitt Group (Holdings) plc, which were false, misleading and deceptive in that they purported to show that fees of £20,738,321 had been received by Levitt Group Limited as a result of personal advisory work carried out by the said ROGER JOSEPH LEVITT during the 18 month period to 30 June 1990."

Counts 2 to 5 related to investor funds prior to the period of fraudulent trading and comprised two specimen counts, 2 and 4 of obtaining investors' funds by deception and two specimen counts, 3 and 5, of false accounting in relation to false valuations sent to investors. Count 6 alleged the dishonest obtaining of funds from an investor during the period of fraudulent trading. The remaining counts of 7 to 22 were alternatives to count 1 and involved the sale of shares and options, the obtaining of loans by Mr. Levitt and misleading FIMBRA.

After the indictment had been preferred the Court of Appeal on 28 July 1992 gave guidance in Blue Arrow about the drafting of indictments in serious fraud cases. This caused the prosecution during the preparatory hearing held between 23 and 25 February 1993 to seek to clarify further the issues for the jury by relying on the count of fraudulent trading alone and reducing the number of particulars specified in that count. Counts 2 to 5—the specimen investor counts relating to the period which preceded the alleged fraudulent trading—were severed so as to be the subject of a separate trial. The allegations particularised in counts 6 to 22 formed part of the allegations particularised in count 1. On 25 February 1993 the trial judge ruled that count 1 was "properly drawn and fairly represents the thrust of the criminality alleged by the Crown"

On 19 May 1993, following an application by Mr. Goldberg, the trial judge ruled inadmissible on count 1 the evidence of the dishonest way in which the moneys drip-fed into TLG Ltd. by Mr. Levitt had been obtained. I am informed by prosecuting counsel that Mr. Goldberg's application was presented on the clear understanding that Mr. Levitt would not place in issue the circumstances in which the money was obtained and that the trial of Mr. Levitt proceeded on this basis.

After Mr. Cocks had opened the case for the prosecution Mr. Goldberg made an opening speech on 15 November 1993 in the course of which he asserted that the funds drip-fed into TLG Ltd by Mr. Levitt were his own money. The Crown applied to discharge the jury on the basis that Mr. Goldberg had misled them and undermined the basis of the earlier rulings in the case. The trial Judge declined the application. He said that the Mr. Goldberg's opening speech had "largely subverted the necessary and acknowledged basis of my earlier rulings" and had

"gravely misrepresented the true position".

The Crown intended to renew its application to discharge the jury on 22 November 1993, and notice of this intention was communicated to the defence on 19 November 1993. This application was not made because on 22 November 1993 Mr. Levitt offered to plead guilty to count 1 of the indictment on the basis that he would admit the particular of the indictment alleging that he had misled FIMBRA. The acceptability of that plea was discussed by prosecuting counsel with the director of the Serious Fraud Office the same day. Counsel advised that the plea should be accepted having taken account of all the circumstances. The director instructed counsel to accept this plea.

It is the duty of the SFO as an independent prosecuting authority to act with the due diligence and complete propriety. It is the duty of prosecuting counsel to act as ministers of justice and to conduct the case in accordance with their proper professional judgment, having regard to all the circumstances. I am satisfied that they did so.

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Attorney-General on what date and in what circumstances it was communicated to Queen's Counsel for the Crown or his junior that Mr. Roger Levitt would agree to plead only to a charge which would result in a non-custodial sentence. [30406]

The Attorney-General: I refer the hon. Member to my answer to the hon. Member for Swansea, East given on 15 June 1995, Official Report, 19 June 1995, columns 68–70. I have been consistently assured by prosecuting counsel that there was no such communication.

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Attorney-General, what assessment he has made of whether the reported comments of Queen's counsel for the Crown after the Mr. Roger Levitt trial in respect of (a) the hearing of fraud cases by judges and (b) the sentence passed on the defendant were appropriate for a Crown prosecutor; and if he will make a statement. [30408]

The Attorney-General: Such issues are governed by the code of conduct for the Bar of England and Wales. Counsel appearing for the Crown are not subject to any special restrictions.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Betts: To ask the Attorney-General (1) by how much Government spending has changed in 1994–95 as a result of the private finance initiative; what is the estimated effect in 1995–96; how many jobs are to be created by schemes approved to date under the initiative and how many have been lost as a consequence in the public sector; and what is the forecast of transfer of employment from public to private sector over the last five years because of the initiative; [30855]

(2) how many schemes and to what value have been approved in 1994–95 under the private finance initiative; what are the estimates for the current financial year; how many schemes are currently being considered and at what value; for how long they have been considered and how many have been in the assessment process for over (a) six months and (b) 12 months; and what was the average length of time taken to assess schemes so far approved. [30854]

The Attorney-General: The private finance initiative is considered as one of the options for all major capital projects in the Departments for which I am responsible. Expenditure plans within those Departments for 1994–95 and 1995–96 have not been affected by the private finance initiative. No proposals to award contracts under the initiative have been submitted for approval. The question of effects on employment does not therefore arise.

Capital Spending

Mr. Betts: To ask the Attorney General what is the expected capital spending figure for his Department for 1994–95; and what is the latest budget figure. [30887]

The Attorney-General: The information is given in the table.

£ Thousand

	Capital expenditure 1994–95	Planned capital expenditure 1995–96
Crown prosecution service	5,000	4,000
Treasury solicitor's department	600	600
Serious Fraud Office	400	400

Crown Prosecution Service

Mr. Hutton: To ask the Attorney-General how many cases were dropped by the Crown Prosecution Service in the last year where successful private prosecutions have subsequently been brought forward. [28317]

The Attorney-General [holding answer 14 June 1995]: Since the information sought by the hon. Member is not separately recorded, senior staff in the Crown Prosecution Service who might reasonably be expected to recall cases coming within the terms of the hon. Member's question were asked to identify them. The answer cannot be regarded as definitive, but they have been unable to identify any successful private prosecution which arose from a case in which discontinuance had been effected during the past year.

Treasury Counsel

Mr. Byers: To ask the Attorney-General, pursuant to his answer of 22 May, Official Report, column 451, how much each Treasury counsel retained for civil work received in fees from public funds in 1994–95; of the Treasury counsel based at the central criminal court, how many received between (i) £250,000 to £300,000, (ii) £300,000 to £350,000, (iii) £350,000 to £400,000, (iv) £400,000, to £500,000, (v) in excess of £500,000 from the Crown Prosecution Service for financial year 1994–95.

The Attorney-General [pursuant to his reply, 21 June 1995, c. 260]: The figures given for fees paid to Treasury counsel based at the central criminal court by the Crown Prosecution Service are being checked and a revised table will be made available as soon as possible. However, contrary to the original information provided by the Crown Prosecution Service as set out in the table of 21 June, it is clear from information that has since been made available to me that no Treasury counsel based at the central criminal court received more than £400,000 in payments from the Crown Prosecution Service during the financial year 1994–95.

CHURCH COMMISSIONERS

Report and Accounts

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the right hon. Member for Selby, as representing the Church Commissioners, to which hon. Members the Church Commissioners' annual report and accounts have been distributed.

Mr. Alison: The Church Commissioners' 1994 report and accounts have been sent to the Secretary of State for the Home Department as directed by the Church Commissioners Measure 1947. Copies have also been sent to all hon. Members.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Dundonald Primary School

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many pupils were enrolled in Dundonald primary school in each of the past five years; how many applicants were refused places at the school in each of these years; what plans there are to increase the size of the school; and if he will make a statement about the future facilities for primary school education in the Dundonald area. [30534]

Mr. Ancram: The information is as follows:

Year	Number of pupils enrolled	Number of applicants refused places
1990–91	530 (January 1990)	n/a
1991–92	537 (January 1991)	n/a
1992–93	558 (October 1992)	None
1993–94	563 (October 1993)	14
1994–95	547 (October 1994)	5

Provision of controlled primary schools places in Dundonald is the responsibility of the South-Eastern education and library board. I understand that the board has no plans to increase the size of Dundonald primary school at present but it is reviewing demand for primary school places in the Dundonald area and is monitoring residential development and planning applications for residential development as part of its consideration of future primary school provision.

Health and Social Services Contracts

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, pursuant to his answer of 25 May 1995, Official Report, column 756, if he will outline the procedure for awarding tenders for contracts in health and personal social services. [30439]

Mr. Moss: In selecting tenderers for a particular service HPSS bodies first seek expressions of interest by advertising the intention to invite tenders in the local, national or trade press and where appropriate the Official Journal of the European Community. All companies responding to these advertisements are then subjected to vetting procedures which have regard not only to financial viability, technical competence and performance elsewhere but also list for future reference the size of a particular company and the volume of business it is capable of discharging. This is to ensure that contractors are not invited to tender for contracts they are unable to deliver.

Where a potential contractor is proposing to use his own plant and equipment the vetting procedure requires that these be checked to ensure that there is sufficient capacity and that such facilities are adequate to cope with the workload which will be placed on them or that any necessary upgrading will be undertaken

A list of potential contractors who satisfy the above criteria is then submitted to the HPSS Management Executive for approval. Tenders can be invited only from potential contractors who have been approved by the HPSS Management Executive.

In-house teams are not required to go through these vetting procedures.

Education Building Programme

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland further to his press notice of 8 February, how much of the £63 million building programme for education will be spent directly on construction. [30516]

Mr. Ancram: An estimated £45.3 million will be spent directly on construction work.

Deprivation

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the 55 electoral wards which were recently designated as deprived according to the study undertaken by the university of Manchester. [30602]

Sir Wheeler: The university of Manchester study ranked all Northern Ireland electoral wards on measures of multiple deprivation. However, the study did not classify individual wards as deprived or non-deprived.

Education and Library Boards

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what changes he has made in his policy on a reduction from five education and library boards to four such boards since the publication of the document, "Accountability through Partnerships." [30455]

Mr. Ancram: There is no record of a document called "Accountability through Partnerships" but the document "Educational Administration in Northern Ireland" published in 1993, to which we presume that the hon. Member refers, contained a number of options for change to the present arrangements for educational administration and analysed the advantages and disadvantages of a rationalisation of the present five-board system.

Following consultation on that document, all these options were reappraised and the Government have been consulting on a proposal that the number of education and library boards should be reduced from five to four. The consultation period has recently ended and the Government will wish to take account of all comments received before making any final decision.

Health Survey

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what recent research his Department has commissioned in respect of a health survey for Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement. [30476]

Mr. Moss: A departmentally commissioned report on a "Survey Strategy for the Health and Personal Social Services (1994–2004)" was published in January 1994 and recommended the commissioning of a regular regional survey of health and social well-being. The Department of Health and Social Services, Northern Ireland, has accepted that there should be a survey at approximately three-yearly intervals and planning is under way for an initial survey in early 1996.

Enler House, Ballybeen

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many residents there are in Enler house, Ballybeen; if new residents are being accepted; what proposals there are for the future use of the building; and if he will make a statement. [30600]

Mr. Moss: The last resident left Enler house on 15 June 1995 and no new residents are being accepted. Discussions have taken place between the Department of Health and Social Services and Dundonald Community Projects on the future use of the building and DCP has been offered a licence to use the premises as a community resource centre for a three-month period pending further negotiations. At this time the DCP is considering the terms of the licence and are expected to occupy the premises.

Capital Spending

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the expected capital spending figure for his Department for 1994–95; and what is the latest budget figure. [30877]

Sir John Wheeler: I refer the hon. Member to table 12.4 of the Government's "Expenditure Plans 1995–96 to 1997–98", Cm 2816, a copy of which is in the Library.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland by how much Government spending has changed in 1994–95 as a result of the private finance initiative; what is the estimated effect in 1995–96; how many jobs are to be created by schemes approved to date under the initiative and how many have been lost as a consequence in the public sector; and what is the forecast of transfer of employment from public to private sector over the last five years because of the initiative. [30829]

Sir John Wheeler: Planned Government spending has not changed as a result of the private finance initiative in either 1994–95 or 1995–96. Information on jobs created or lost in the public sector as a consequence of the PFI is not collected centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many schemes and to what value have been approved in 1994–95 under the private finance initiative; what are the estimates for the current financial year; how many schemes are currently being considered and at what value; for how long have they been considered, and how many have been in the assessment process for over (a) six months and (b) 12 months; and what was the average length of time taken to assess schemes so far approved. [30828]

Sir John Wheeler: No schemes were approved for 1994–95. A number of areas, including two pilot projects covering sewage treatment plants in the Water Executive with an estimated value of £20 million to £25 million are under consideration in Northern Ireland. It is too early, however, to put a total value on these projects. On average, these schemes have been under consideration for 12 months.

Community Attitudes Survey

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he expects to publish the second community attitudes survey report, "A Continuous Survey of Public Attitudes and Views on Crime, Law and Order, Policing and Security Issues", for the period November 1993 to October 1994 and if he will make a statement. [31858]

Sir John Wheeler: I have today arranged for a copy of the full report to be placed in the Library. The report details results from field work completed between November 1993 and October 1994 involving a representative sample of adults aged 16 and over living in Northern Ireland. As most of the survey was conducted before the declaration of the two paramilitary ceasefires in August and October 1994, many of the results reflect the security situation in Northern Ireland before the ceasefire. A third round of the survey, which omits a number of questions on security matters which have ceased to be relevant following the ceasefire, is currently underway.

Among the key findings of the survey are:

The majority of people believe that crime, particularly crime against the person, is relatively uncommon in their area and that they are unlikely to be a victim. In particular, 90 per cent. believed that it was unlikely, that they would be a victim of terrorist violence.

The majority of people consider that the police are polite (81 per cent.) helpful (78 per cent.) and fair (72 per cent.) In each of these aspects Protestants gave higher ratings than Catholics. (Protestants: polite 83 per cent; helpful 81 per cent.; fair 77 per cent.—Catholics: polite 78 per cent.; helpful 75 per cent;. fair 63 per cent.) Taking everything into account, most (77 per cent.) thought that the police in their area did a good job, while fewer than one in 10 (9 per cent.) thought that they did a poor job.

Almost one third (30 per cent.) of respondents had not heard of the Police Authority for Northern Ireland. More than half of those who had heard of PANI (56 per cent.) thought it to be part of the police. Protestants tended to be better informed than Catholics.

Over one third of respondents (35 per cent.) did not know who was responsible for looking into complaints made against the police. The preferred means (63 per cent.) of making a complaint about a police officer was by contacting the local police station. This was by far the most favoured means for both Protestants (68 per cent.) and Catholics (54 per cent.)

While most respondents (63 per cent.: Protestants, 68 per cent.; Catholics, 57 per cent.) believe the police try equally hard to recruit from both sections of the community, most (57 per cent. Protestants, 48 per cent.; Catholic, 72 per cent.) thought there were too few Catholic members of the police. The most common reason given for Catholics not joining the force was fear of intimidation or attack on them or their relatives.

The great majority (93 per cent.) disagreed with the use of force or violence by paramilitary groups, either for political ends or in retaliation for attacks by other paramilitaries. Only 3 to 4 per cent. agreed that it was justifiable.

Most people considered the police to be polite (80 per cent.) and fair (77 per cent.) in dealing with the security situation. As before, Protestants gave a higher rating than Catholics. The Army as also considered by most to be polite (70 per cent.) and fair (68 per cent.), again with higher ratings form Protestants.

Ninety-two per cent. of respondents felt is was important to understand the way in which the courts work, although only 33 per cent. felt they did understand.

Seventy-five per cent. expressed confidence in the criminal justice system, although nine out of ten agreed that miscarriages of justice could occur.

Almost 70 per cent. of respondents felt that penalties handed out by courts should be stiffer that at present although Protestants felt this more strongly (82 per cent.) than Catholics (48 per cent.). Almost four in ten thought that those sentenced to life imprisonment should spend the rest of their lives in prison (Protestants; 46 per cent., Catholics; 28 per cent.).

Foyle Bridge

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the average volume of traffic on the Craigavon and Foyle bridges in Londonderry has been per day since the Foyle bridge was built. [23659]

Mr. Moss: The estimated average daily traffic flow on the two bridges for each year since the Foyle bridge was opened to traffic are as follows:

Year	Craigavon Bridge vehicle per day	Foyle Bridge
1994	32,519	16,213
1993	30,920	17,570
1992	29,910	16,700
1991	28,810	15,240
1990	27,820	13,500
1989	26,450	13,670
1988	25,630	11,350
1987	25,740	11,160
1986	25,900	10,700
1985	26,300	10,200
1984	26,410	9,560

Socialist Workers Movement Posters

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the Government's policy with regard to the removal of fly posters put up by the Socialist Workers movement and others on main thoroughfares in Belfast. [23660]

Mr. Moss: The Department has no specific policy with regard to fly posting by the Socialist Workers movement or other individual groups. Where sufficient evidence is established current policy allows enforcement proceedings to be taken against any group or individual responsible.

I am concerned generally about the impact of fly posting, not only in Belfast but elsewhere in Northern Ireland, and propose to review current policy and practice. I will write further to the right hon. Gentleman in due course.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Information Leaks

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list all the inquiries into all forms of information leaks from Government Departments, agencies and public bodies which have taken place since 1989, giving (a) the nature of the leak, (b) the duration of the leak inquiry, (c) the cost of the leak inquiry, (d) the result of the leak inquiry and (e) the number of individuals against whom action was taken as a result of the leak inquiry. [30819]

Mr. David Hunt: No.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Betts: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster by how much Government spending has changed in 1994–95 as a result of the private finance initiative; what is the estimated effect in 1995–96; how many jobs are to be created by schemes approved to date under the initiative and how many have been lost as a consequence in the public sector; and what is the forecast of transfer of employment from public to private sector over the last five years because of the initiative. [30851]

Mr. Horam: The 1994–95 expenditure of the Cabinet Office, including the Office of Public Service and Science, HMSO and the Central Office of Information did not change as a result of the private finance initiative. The same is likely to be true in 1995–96. Although no schemes within the scope of my responsibilities have been approved under the initiative to date, the involvement of private finance is explored wherever possible.

Mr. Betts: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many schemes and to what value have been approved in 1994–95 under the private finance initiative; what are the estimates for the current financial year; how many schemes are currently being considered and at what value; for how long they have been considered and how many have been in the assessment process for over (a) six months and (b) 12 months; and what was the average length of time taken to assess schemes so far approved. [30850]

Mr. Horam: The Cabinet Office, including the Office of Public Service and Science, HMSO and COI did not approve any schemes under the private finance initiative in 1994–95; and it is unlikely that any will be approved in 1995–96. However, the involvement of private finance is explored wherever possible. Two schemes are currently being considered, with a total expected value of at least £10 million. Both have been in the assessment process for less than two months.

Capital Spending

Mr. Betts: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what is the expected capital spending figure for his Department for 1994–95; and what is the latest budget figure. [30886]

Mr. Horam: Figures for capital spending in 1994–95 and 1995–96 for the Cabinet Office, including the Office of Public Service and Science and executive agencies, are as follows:

	1994–95 Provisional outturn £'000	1995–96 Estimate £'000
Cabinet Office (including OPSS)	12,060	8,010
OPSS Executive Agencies	2,290	2,530
Science[1]	152,500	135,800
COI	630	600
	1994 Actual £'000	1995 Estimate £'000
HMSO[2]	8,340	18,560

Notes:
[1] Covers capital spending by the Research Councils.
[2] HMSO's figures are based on their accounting year 1 January—31 December.

SCOTLAND

Tree Diseases

19. Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what research is taking place into tree diseases and their cause. [29390]

Mr. Kynoch: The Forestry Commission carries out a wide range of research into all aspects of tree health, including the status and biology of disease organisms and insect pests, in order to assess risk and, where appropriate, to develop strategies for control.

New Town Development Corporation

20. Mr. Norman Hogg: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he has made of the effect on inward investment to Scotland of the closure of the new town development corporation. [29391]

Mr. Kynoch: In July 1993 my right hon. Friend set up a task force to consider the impact on inward investment of the wind-up of the new town development corporations. The issues examined by this task force included the continued availability within the new towns of suitable properties for inward investors, the marketing of the new towns to prospective inward investors and the aftercare of existing investors.

Appropriate steps have been taken in the light of the task force's work to ensure that the momentum of inward investment in the new towns is maintained.

Water and Sewerage

21. Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to improve the water and sewerage systems serving Scotland. [29392]

Mr. Kynoch: The Government have introduced a number of regulations relating to the quality of water to be supplied and the standards to be met by sewage discharges. These are The Water Supply (Water Quality) (Scotland) Regulations 1990 and The Urban Waste Water Treatment (Scotland) Regulations 1994. It is for the regional and islands councils, and from April 1996 the new water authorities, to bring forward programmes of works to comply with the prescribed standards in specified timescales. Progress is monitored by the Scottish Office.

Manufacturing Exports

22. Mr. McAvoy: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what measures he is planning to help increase the capacity of Scottish manufacturing industry to expand exports to the European market; and if he will make a statement. [29393]

Mr. Kynoch: Scottish manufactured exports are breaking all records. This clearly indicates that the opportunities presented by a competitive currency, low interest rates and stable low inflation have been grasped by Scottish industry.

Over the last two years Scottish manufactured exports have risen by almost 30 per cent. to reach their highest-ever level of £11.5 billion. Exports to Western Europe account for some 65 per cent. of that figure. Later in the year, I hope to launch a Scottish export strategy which will help focus efforts to further increase Scotland's manufactured exports.

Unemployment

23. Mr. Eric Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to meet the Scottish Trades Union Council to discuss employment and unemployment. [29394]

Mr. Kynoch: My right hon. Friend meets representatives of the Scottish TUC from time to time to discuss a range of matters concerning the Scottish economy. The next meeting is being planned for July.

Torry Food Science Laboratory

24. Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met trade union representatives from the Torry food science laboratory to discuss alternative proposals to closure. [29395]

Mr. Kynoch: As the staff of the Torry food science laboratory are employed by the Ministry of Agriculture Fisheries and Food it would not be appropriate for me to meet their trade union representatives. However, my officials are involved in current discussions with the Aberdeen Research Consortium which is preparing proposals for alternatives to the relocation of Torry's work to York.

Housing Expenditure

25. Mr. Chisholm: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what percentage of Scottish Office expenditure was spent on housing in (a) 1978–79 and (b) 1994–95. [29396]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Expenditure on all housing including subsidies as a percentage of the Secretary of State's total net programme was 15.8 per cent. in 1978–79 compared with 4.9 per cent. in 1994–95; but such comparisons are misleading, since transfers of responsibility to the Secretary of State have significantly increased the overall size of the Scotland programme sine 1978–97. Support through subsidies has reduced and is principally provided through housing benefit which is now £834 million. Receipts applied to the programme have increased substantially, enabling total capital investment in housing last year to be greater than in 1978–97 in real terms.

St. Andrew's College, Bearsden

26. Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what estimate he has made of the job losses at St. Andrew's college, Bearsden, by 1998–99; and what factors will contribute to their losses. [29397]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Scottish Higher Education Funding Council is responsible for the allocation of funds to higher education institutions in Scotland. It has asked St. Andrew's college of education to draw up plans relevant to its future funding. It is premature to speculate on what the outcome will be, whether in terms of jobs or otherwise, until the college has submitted its plans and SHEFC has had the opportunity to consider these.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will place in the Library those documents, produced by his Department, relating to staffing and quality standards for courses at St. Andrew's college, Bearsden. [30470]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My Department produces no documents directly related to staffing and quality standards in the teacher education sector. The Scottish Higher Education Funding Council published on 20 June its "Report of a Quality Assessment in Teacher Education" covering, among other institutions, St. Andrew's college. A copy of this has been placed in the Library.

Road Safety

27. Mr. Graham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to improve road safety in Scotland. [29398]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Scottish Office is taking forward a number of road safety initiatives covering engineering, education, publicity and enforcement which are designed to contribute towards achievement of the Government's target for reducing casualities by one-third by the year 2000. These include measures to reduce vehicle speeds, to encourage more responsible driving and to lessen the accident risk to vulnerable road users.

Social Issues

28. Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he next plans to meet representatives of the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities to discuss social issues in Scotland. [29399]

Mr. Kynoch: My right hon. Friend meets COSLA routinely as part of the normal consultation on local government finance matters. Other topics are on occasion raised at such meetings, but my right hon. Friend presently has no plans to discuss specifically social issues with the convention.

Further Education Colleges

29. Mr. Connarty: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what meetings he has had with representatives of Scottish further education colleges about their budgets; and if he will make a statement. [29400]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. Friend met representatives of the Employers' Association for Scottish Further Education Colleges, the Association of Principals of Colleges and the Association for Colleges on 5 June to discuss a number of issues of interest to Scottish colleges of further education. The wide ranging discussion covered funding. My right hon. Friend congratulated the sector on its efficiency gains and emphasised the need for close control of public expenditure. He suggested that FE colleges should continue to explore the opportunities offered by the private finance initiative. Officials in the Scottish Office education department have been asked to continue to liaise with representatives of the sector.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what financial guidance he gives to the boards of colleges of further education about financial information (a) is available to the public or (b) is confidential. [30209]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Further education colleges are required to publish an annual report, which may be either combined with or separate from their annual accounts. One of the obligations of colleges' charitable status registration is that annual accounts should be made available to anyone who requests them.

No guidance has been issued to colleges of further education regarding the publication of financial information which they should consider confidential.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland which colleges of further education in Scotland have financial deficits; and what action they are taking to remove these deficits. [30207]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The latest available audited annual accounts are for the financial year 1993–94. In that year the following five colleges showed a deficit balance on income and expenditure account reserve:

The Barony College
James Watt College of Further and Higher Education
Motherwell College
North Glasgow College
Stevenson College

The colleges are examining all areas of expenditure to identify possible savings.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will keep central statistics of the number of further education college staff who will be made redundant this year. [30204]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: No. Staffing numbers and levels are the responsibility of the board of management of each college.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much financial support he has given to each further education college in Scotland in this financial year; and what was each college's budget for the last year. [30208]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Table A indicates the grant support provided to Scottish colleges of further education in 1995–96 by my right hon. Friend. In addition, a further £2.7 million is available to colleges to assist in the restructuring of college staff in 1995–96. Table B provides college budgeted gross expenditure, including all income, for 1994–95.

Table A

	Grant support £
Aberdeen College	13,547,850
Angus College	3,317,583
Anniesland College	4,221,847
Ayr College	4,882,025

European Regional Fund

30. Sir David Knox: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the total value of grants that Scotland has received from the European regional fund since the fund's inception. [29401]

Mr. Kynoch: Since the inception of the European regional development fund in 1975, Scotland has benefited from awards totalling almost £1.5 billion.

Whisky

31. Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met representatives of Scottish Enterprise to discuss domestic sales of Scotch whisky. [29402]

Mr. Kynoch: My right hon. Friend and I maintain close and regular contact with Scottish Enterprise on a wide range of economic issues.

Owner-occupation

32. Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the latest estimate of the level of owner-occupation in Scotland. [29403]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: At the end of December 1994, the owner-occupation level in Scotland reached 57 per cent., compared with 35 per cent. in 1979. This shows that the Government's policies have significantly increased the level of home ownership in Scotland and extended choice to many people who would otherwise have had to continue renting.

Gibraltar Island Games

33. Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many islands of Scotland will be represented at the island games in Gibraltar this July; and what support competitors are receiving from Her Majesty's Government. [29404]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Scotland will be represented by competitors from the Orkney and Shetland islands. All competing teams pay to participate in the island games. There is no central Government funding.

Electricity Industry

34. Mr. Clapham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met the chairman of Scottish Nuclear to discuss the future of the electricity industry. [29405]

Mr. Kynoch: My right hon. Friend meets the chairman of Scottish Nuclear, Mr. James Hann, from time to time to discuss a range of matters concerning the company.

Flood Prevention

35. Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects to meet Convention of Scottish Local Authorities to discuss future plans for flood prevention in those areas previously affected by flooding. [29406]

Mr. Kynoch: My right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State meets COSLA regularly when a range of issues may be discussed. The next meeting will be on 24 July.

Manufacturing Industry

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he intends to meet the Scottish Trades Union Congress to discuss the Scottish manufacturing industry. [29370]

Mr. Kynoch: My right hon. Friend meets representatives of the Scottish TUC from time to time to discuss a range of matters, including the Scottish manufacturing industry. The next meeting is scheduled for July.

A-Level Science

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the total uptake of A-level science subjects at schools and colleges for each year since 1987. [30216]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: In Scotland students are generally presented for the Scottish certificate of education at higher level rather than for A-levels. Data on students at further education colleges is not held in a form that would identify those students studying A-level science subjects. The uptake of A-level science subjects in Scottish education authority secondary schools is collected biennially in the September school census. Similar data are not collected for independent schools. The uptake shown in the census is as follows:

Year	Pupils
1987	309
1989	198
1991	158
1993	118

Clydebank College

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how large is the financial deficit of Clydebank college; and how it was incurred. [30206]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The latest available audited annual accounts are for financial year 1993–94 and show a surplus retained in the income and expenditure reserve of £54,000.

Clydebank college's expenditure exceeded income for the year by £132,000 after charging depreciation on the value of the land and buildings transferred from its local authority. This depreciation amounted to £186,000 and was met from a revaluation reserve leaving the surplus of £54,000 retained.

Catholic Schools

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what projections he has made of the demographic trends in attendance at Catholic schools over the next 10 years. [30468]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. Friend makes no separate projections of pupil numbers at Roman Catholic schools.

Green Tourism

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what initiatives his Department has undertaken to encourage green tourism in the highlands and islands. [30447]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Scottish tourism co-ordinating group which I chair and on which the Scottish Office industry department is represented has produced the strategic plan for Scottish tourism, which identifies green tourism as a source of opportunity for the Scottish tourism industry. The co-ordinating group has also set up the tourism and environment task force, which has provided detailed guidance for tourism operators. The task force is overseeing a number of local pilot projects looking at various aspects of environmentally sustainable tourism. Around half of these projects are in the highlands and islands.

Highlands and Islands Airports Ltd.

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what weight he will give to public opinion as expressed during the consultation process on the future of Highlands and Islands Airport Ltd; [30449]

(2) what plans he has to publish the views of all those consulted on the future arrangements for Highlands and Islands Airports Ltd. [30450]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Consultants are being appointed to carry out the study of options for the involvement of the private sector in Highlands and Islands Airports. As part of their work the consultants will need to consult interested parties; but the primary purpose of their work is not to conduct a consultation process. I am sure that views expressed by them will take into account in preparing their report; but there is no presumption that the report will include a full statement of all views expressed to them. No decision has yet been taken on whether or not to publish material arising out of the study.

Firearms Incident

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland on what occasions Her Majesty's Government made representations to the police in relation to a firearms incident involving Mr. Stefan Kock in Scotland in January 1990. [30506]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Strathclyde police have received no representations from any Government Department in relation to this incident.

Teachers

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many teachers he estimated were necessary for Catholic (a) secondary and (b) primary schools in Scotland; and how many (i) BEd and (ii) PGCE students were estimated to be necessary in each of the last 10 years. [30498]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The annual estimates of future teacher requirements, including the requirements of Catholic schools, are based upon information relating to the schools sector as a whole. It is for the Scottish Higher Education Funding Council to determine the allocation of funded places to individual teacher education institutions.

Roads

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what economic and social improvements he foresees by the de-trunking of roads in Argyll and Bute. [30448]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The de-trunking of the A816 Lochgilphead-Oban and the A828 Connel-Ballachulish are part of a wider review of the Scottish trunk road network. Benefits of this review will be to ensure the high-quality access required by commerce and industry, tourism and agriculture in each of the new unitary authorities and to provide an efficient and effective trunk road network serving Scotland well into the next century.

Where responsibility for management and maintenance of routes is transferred to local roads authorities future priorities will be set in the context of local needs, which should help ensure that local economic and social benefits are maximised.

Catholic Schools

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many children are in each year group in catholic schools in Scotland. [30469]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The latest available information is given in the table:

Number of pupils in education authority Roman Catholic primary and secondary schools by year stage, September 1994[1]

Primary stage	Primary schools	Secondary stage	Secondary schools

Emergency Telephones

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to improve emergency telephone facilities for motorists whose vehicles break down on Scotland's trunk road system; and if he will make a statement. [30957]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Scottish Office industry department has no plans to provide emergency telephone facilities on all purpose trunk roads. The emergency telephones on motorways in the Glasgow area are being upgraded as part of a larger contract to enhance and extend driver information and control.

Legal Aid

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he has made of the implementation of the legal aid system in Scotland; and if he will make a statement. [29374]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. Friend is considering what proposals might be brought forward to improve the arrangements for legal aid in Scotland, in the light of the policy and financial management review of the Legal Aid Board which has recently been completed. I am also taking account of the proposals of my noble and learned Friend the Lord Chancellor to improve the system in England and Wales.

Non-domestic Rates

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what information he has regarding the number of unoccupied properties in each islands and district council area which are now liable for non-domestic rates as a result of the implementation of the Non-Domestic Rates (Unoccupied Property) (Scotland) Regulations 1995. [31054]

Mr. Lang: This information is not held centrally.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what estimate his Department has made of the revenue from non-domestic rates accruing in each district and islands council area in Scotland as a result of the implementation of the Non-Domestic Rates (Unoccupied Property) (Scotland) Regulations 1995 in the financial year 1995–96. [31055]

Mr. Lang: It is estimated that the additional rates income due to changes in unoccupied property relief will be £23.5 million in 1995–96. This was taken fully into account in determining the level of unified business rate for 1995–96, so there is no additional burden on business ratepayers in aggregate as a result of this measure. A further breakdown by local authority is not available.

Capital Spending

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the expected capital spending figure for his Department for 1994–95; and what is the latest budget figure. [30876]

Mr. Lang: Consistent with table 1.7 of the statistical supplement to the "Financial Statement and Budget Report 1995–96" (Cm 2821), the total expected capital spending figure for 1994–95 for the Scottish Office and associated departments is £2,291 million.

The latest budget figure for planned capital expenditure excluding local authorities for 1995–96 is £1,301 million. As explained in paragraph 1.9 of the statistical supplement there are no figures available for later years for total planned local authority capital expenditure, therefore the figures for 1994–95 and 1995–96 are not comparable.

Housing, East Kilbride

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the transfer of East Kilbride's housing stock to alternative landlords. [29371]

Mr. Kynoch: We are pleased that nearly nine out of 10 tenants took the opportunity to vote for their successor landlord in the ballot held by East Kilbride development corporation. Subject to satisfactory conclusion of negotiations on the final purchase price, the homes will transfer to East Kilbride district council towards the end of this year.

Lord Advocate

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions the Lord Advocate has held with his Swiss counterpart about the investigation of potentially criminal matters affecting both countries. [29380]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My noble and learned Friend the Lord Advocate has not had any recent discussions with his Swiss counterpart.

Students

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the percentage of university-polytechnic students entitled to (a) full maintenance grant and (b) no maintenance grant in each year since 1979. [30360]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 27 June 1995]: The information requested is set out in the table. It covers all Scottish domiciled award holders attending full-time courses of higher education.

(2) what has been the value of full university student grant for each year since 1974–75 prices. [30357]

[1] The figures relate to academic years September-August.[2] The rate used is the maximum rate payable to a student who lives outwith the parental home other than in London during term-time with no allowance for parental or other contributions.

[3] 1994–95 prices have been calculated using the Retail Prices Index for the appropriate financial year.

[4] With effect from academic year 1990–91 student maintenance support was provided by a combination of grant and loan.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the university-polytechnic total student population for each year from 1974–75; and what it will be in each year to 1998–99. [30361]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 27 June 1995]: The full-time equivalent number of students studying higher education courses in higher education institutions in Scotland, for the years 1980–81 to 1994–95 is given in the table:

Full-time equivalent number of students studying Higher Education courses at Higher Education Institutions in Scotland

[1] Provisional.

Information about the student population in the years before 1980–81 is not readily available.

My right hon. Friend set out the number of places he expects to be eligible for funding by SHEFC in the years 1995–96 to 1997–98 in "Serving Scotland's Needs" (Cm 2814). These are set out in the table. These figures are not comparable with those in the table above as they exclude overseas students and include students following courses of further education at the HEIs funded by SHEFC, and do not include students and the Scottish agriculture college.

Year	Number
1995–96	118,200

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the drop-out rate for university and polytechnic courses in each year since 1979. [30311]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 27 June 1995]: Comprehensive information on rates of non-completion by students studying at Scottish higher education institutions has not been collected centrally in previous years. The Higher Education Statistics agency will be collecting the information in future, commencing with the current academic year.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what is his estimate of the annual cost of providing the full maintenance grant to all university students; [30315]

(2) what would be the annual cost of paying (a) all fees for and (b) the full maintenance grant to, all part time university students. [30314]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 27 June 1995]: The cost in either case would depend upon the decisions taken about eligible courses, their duration, the fee payable, the level of maintenance grant, and the account to be taken of the personal circumstances of potentially eligible students.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his estimates of the staff-student ratio at universities and their forerunners in each year from 1974–75 to 1997–98. [30355]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 27 June 1995]: The student-staff ratio at universities previously funded by the Universities Funding Council, for the years 1985–86 to 1993–94, is shown in the table:

[1] The student/staff ratio was calculated by comparing full-time equivalent students against full-time equivalent staff.

Information for the years prior to 1985–86 and after 1993–94 is not readily available.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the average cost to the Exchequer of each student in university education for each year since 1984–85, broken down by (a) maintenance grant, (b) fees and (c) other. [30363]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 27 June 1995]: Not all the information is available in the form requested. The table sets out the average cost of student maintenance and tuition fee payments for Scottish domiciled students up to academic year 1993–94, the latest period for which complete figures are available.

Academic year	Average maintenance cost (including loan) £	Average tuition fee £

[2] Includes student loan payments at the appropriate average rate.
[3] The changes in average fee payments over the later years reflect shifts in the balance of funding tuition costs as between institutional grant-in-aid and individual tuition fees.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what would be the cost of reducing the level of university fees paid by non-European Community country students to the fee levels paid by students from European Community countries. [30317]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 27 June 1995]: Fee levels for students from non European Union countries are set by higher education institutions themselves at their discretion. Information on these levels is not held centrally.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what has been the total Government expenditure on university and polytechnic maintenance grants for each year since 1974–75 in 1994 prices. [30358]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 27 June 1995]: The information requested in respect of Scottish domiciled award-holders for academic year 1980–81 onwards is set out in the table. Information for early years is not readily available in this form.

1993–94	150.55	153.6
1994–95 (provisional)	148.56	148.6

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his estimate of the cost in the current year of restoring the value of the student maintenance grant to its real 1979 level. [30362]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 27 June 1995]: In view of the major changes made to the student support system in the intervening period, including the introduction of student loans in 1990, the cost would very much depend on whether or not these changes were to be reserved.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his estimate of the number of students in higher education in the year 2000. [30312]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 27 June 1995]: There is no such estimate at present. My right hon. Friend's latest expenditure plans, for the financial years up to 1997–98, are set out in the Department's report, "Serving Scotland's Needs" (Cm 2814).

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the average level of student loan for university students in 1994–95. [30316]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 27 June 1995]: The average level of loan for all borrowers throughout the United Kingdom in academic year 1993–94, the latest year for which data are available, was £736. Separate figures for university students are not available.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, what is his estimate of the (a) average cost and (b) marginal cost of university students in 1995–96. [30404]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 27 June 1995]: The Scottish Higher Education Funding Council estimates that the average recurrent cost per student place at the Scottish higher education institutions it funds will be £4,019 in the academic year 1995–96. This calculation takes account of SHEFC recurrent grant for teaching and estimated tuition fees, but takes no account of SHEFC funding for research or capital purposes.

It is estimated that the average costs of maintenance paid by the Student Awards Agency for Scotland for Scottish domiciled students in higher education in 1995–96 will be £1,500 per student.

Estimates of marginal costs per student for 1995–96 are not available.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his estimate of the total number of university students with a student loan, in each year from 1987–88 to 1997–98. [30318]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 27 June 1995]: The information is not readily available in the format requested. The Students Loans Company Ltd. first issued loans in the academic year 1990–91. The total numbers of loans issued in each academic year to students in higher education throughout the United Kingdom are:

1990–91: 180,000

1991–92: 261,000

1992–93: 345,000

1993–94: 430,000

The latest forecast figure for 1994–95 is 525,000

The forecast figures for future years which underlie the Supply Estimates are:

1995–96: 672,000

1996–97: 731,000

1997–98: 768,000

Universities

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his estimate of the backlog of building repair and maintenance work at universities. [30356]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 27 June 1995]: Condition surveys of accommodation of the higher education institutions in Scotland conducted in 1992–93 identified some £280 million of expenditure, including building repair and maintenance, which would be required to bring the buildings up to a standard compatible with their original use and value. Decisions on the urgency and priority of work are a matter for individual institutions to determine in the light of their changing needs and resources.

The Scottish Higher Education Funding Council has contributed an additional £16 million over the past two years towards the cost of essential health and safety work in institutions. The amount of building repair and maintenance work funded from other capital and recurrent grants allocated by formula, or from institutions' other sources of income are determined by the institutions themselves. The institutions are expected to contribute to the costs of major building projects which are supported with capital grant to SHEFC.

Council Houses

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what percentage of land in Scotland is covered by council housing or houses purchased from the council; what percentage of this land has a feudal superior other than the local authority; and how many houses are on land that has a feudal superior other than the local authority. [30663]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 27 June 1995]: This information is not held centrally.

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the total value, in current prices, of council houses bought in Scotland since the right-to-buy legislation was introduced; and how many council houses have been purchased from local authorities since the right-to-buy legislation was introduced. [30665]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 27 June 1995]: The estimated total value before discount of local authority dwellings in Scotland sold under right-to-buy legislation up to the end of 1994 at 1994 prices, calculated using the dwelling prices index, is £7,580.8 million. A total of 228,791 local authority dwellings were sold under right-to-buy legislation up to the end of 1994. These figures include a small number of voluntary sales.

Tourism

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the total financial earnings to the Scottish economy by (a) domestic, (b) EU and (c) international tourism in each of the past five years. [30493]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 26 June 1995]: The information is as follows:

	£ million
	Domestic	EU	Other International
1990	1,035	176	375
1991	1,190	203	298
1992	1,220	246	372
1993	1,420	238	427
1994	1,310	245	450

Note:
Figures are compiled from the International Passenger Survey (for overseas visitors) and from the United Kingdom Tourism Survey (for domestic visitors).

Mrs Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what current funding is made by his Department to the promotion of tourism in Scotland; and if he will list the Scottish office contribution for each of the past five years. [30494]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 26 June 1995]: Funding provided by the Scottish Office Industry Department to the Scottish tourist board for the promotion of tourism in Scotland is as follows:

Financial year	Expenditure £ million (cash)
1990–91	12.3
1991–92	12.8
1992–93	13.6
1993–94	13.7
1994–95	17.5

Note:
Total expenditure shown, which incudes salary and administration costs, is provided by the Scottish Office industry department to the Scottish tourist board, for the discharge of its statutory function of promoting Scotland as a tourist destination, both within the UK and overseas, and encouraging investment in tourism infrastructure.

Higher Education Funding Council

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the request made by the Scottish Higher Education Funding Council to universities and colleges that their governing bodies should make contingency plans for action in the event of unforeseen and highly adverse financial circumstances; and what plans he has to ensure that the universities continue to enjoy adequate secure funding. [30532]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 26 June 1995]: The Scottish Higher Education Funding Council advises my right hon. Friend on the needs of the higher education institutions in Scotland. The council's advice is taken into account in the annual public expenditure survey.

Contingency plans to deal with adverse circumstances are a standard element of good management practice. It is up to the council to decide what information it requires from institutions.

Plans for funding of the higher education institutions in Scotland up to the 1997–98 financial year were set out in the Departmental Report, "Serving Scotland's Needs" (Cm 2814).

EMPLOYMENT

Health and Safety Executive

Mr. McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what money was spent by the Health and Safety Executive in the period 1 April 1994 to 1 April 1995 on refurbishing or re-equipping its offices; and what consideration was given to employing more staff instead. [29223]

Mr. Oppenheim: The Health and Safety Executive spent £5.2 million in the last financial year 1994–95 on refurbishing or re-equipping its offices, £3.1 million of which was spent on relocating to the new HSE headquarters in London. A significant part of the £3.1 million was spent on project management, switchboard and ancillary equipment, mail handling and distribution systems, fire and security protection, and furniture and storage units. This type of expenditure is periodically necessary to meet business needs for existing and anticipated staffing levels.

HSE's resources are allocated against agreed aims and priorities to achieve efficiency and value of money.

Health and Safety Executive

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how often the Health and Safety Executive has met to oversee the safety of nuclear weapons and military production or propulsion matters since 1992; if he will list the specific areas covered; and if he will place in the Library copies of unclassified versions of any reports, guidance or recommendations produced by the executive arising from these meetings. [31062]

Mr. Oppenheim: Since 1992 the Health and Safety Executive has discussed health and safety matters relating to activities at the Atomic Weapons Establishment premises during seven of its regular programmed meetings. Information on the specific areas covered in the course of those meetings is exempt from the code of practice on access to Government information (Exemption 2—Internal discussion and advice).

Two unclassified documents relating to health and safety at Atomic Weapons Establishment premises, "The Management of Health and Safety at Atomic Weapons Establishment premises—A Review by the Health and Safety Executive Part 1—An overview" and "Part 2 Detailed Findings", are already available in the Library.

Training and Enterprise Councils

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what steps he has taken to obtain a list of the companies used by Barnsley-Doncaster TEC who are members of the CBI; and if he will make a statement. [31091]

Mr. Paice: The information requested is not recorded by the Barnsley and Doncaster training and enterprise council. TECs are private companies limited guarantee, funded by the Government to provide training which best meets the needs of the local community. TECs are free to decide with whom they contract, taking into account the needs of the local labour market.

Training for Work Report

Mr. Barron: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment when he intends to publish the Coopers and Lybrand report on the training for work funding pilots. [31114]

Mr. Paice: The report was published last week. A copy has been placed in the Library.

Bottle Factory Workers

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what research and findings his Department carried out into bronchial reactivity in bottle factory workers versus control subjects measured by methacholine challenge testing; and if he will make a statement. [31211]

Mr. Oppenheim: The Health and Safety laboratory, an agency of the Health and Safety Executive, in collaboration with the division of respiratory medicine, University of Sheffield, is investigating a small group of bottle factory workers for respiratory illness. These workers are being compared with a group of locally-recruited control subjects. The results from this study are presently being evaluated.

Training

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list the figures for those taking part in the training for work programme for the last three available years for (a) each of the standard regions of the United Kingdom and (b) the United Kingdom as a whole. [29347]

Mr. Paice: The information requested is given in the following tables. As training for work began only in April 1993, the March 1993 figures are for employment training and employment action. Information is not available by standard regions, so a combination of different regional definitions has been used.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make it his policy to introduce more flexibility into training for work programmes where trainees find it impossible to obtain sponsoring employers in sparsely populated rural areas. [29348]

Mr. Paice: Training for work is a very flexible programme and training and enterprise councils have a considerable discretion over its design and implementation. Where employer placements are harder to find, training may be delivered by other means, including training providers, project work and open or distance learning.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many schemes and to what value have been approved in 1994–95 under the private finance initiative; what are the estimates for the current financial year; how many schemes are currently being considered and at what value; for how long they have been considered and how many have been in the assessment process for over (a) six months and (b) 12 months; and what was the average length of time taken to assess schemes so far approved. [30846]

Miss Widdecombe: No schemes were approved under the private finance initiative in 1994–95. In the current financial year one scheme has been approved at a value of £2 million and a further five schemes are under consideration at a value of £5.3 million. Full approval of the completed project took over 12 months from the feasibility study to agreement of the contract. All projects currently under consideration have been in the assessment process for over six months.

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment by how much Government spending has changed in 1994–95 as a result of the private finance initiative; what is the estimated effect in 1995–96; how many jobs are to be created by schemes approved to date under the initiative and how many have been lost as a consequence in the public sector; and what is the forecast transfer of employment from public to private sector over the last five years because of the initiative. [30847]

Miss Widdecombe: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him today in respect of the private finance initiative. One private finance initiative project has been approved within the Department to date. This project will avoid the need for capital expenditure of £10 million in 1995–96. No jobs will be lost as a consequence in the public sector. I have no information about the implications of the project for the size of the supplier's workforce.

Access to Work Programme

Mr. Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment, what is the annual cost of the access to work programme; and for how many people it secures employment. [31224]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service Agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from M. E. G. Fodgen to Mr. Roger Berry, dated 28 June 1995:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about the annual cost of the Access to Work programme and for how many people it secures employment.

The Access to Work programme was introduced in June 1994 to provide support to help disabled people overcome work-related obstacles caused by their disability so that they are able to compete for and in employment on an equal basis with non-disabled colleagues.

In the first year of operation, Access to Work programme expenditure, including transitional and in-year expenditure from the previous schemes, was £15.7 million. Final statistical information on the number of people who received support will not be available until August, but interim figures show that over 7,500 disabled people were helped through Access to Work in the period, together with over 1,300 on transitional arrangements from previous schemes.

Monitoring information is not kept centrally on the number of unemployed people who received help and secured employment as a result. However, we are undertaking a review of Access to Work, and research to support the review will examine in detail the operation of the programme. A report of the research will be published in the normal way.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) what are the target timescales for placing, assessment and counselling teams, dealing with a request for specific support under the access to work scheme; what percentage of cases were dealt with within this target-time; how this policy operates in respect of identification of particular need; and what percentage of people requesting specific types of support actually have their needs met. [30659]

(2) how many deaf and hard of hearing people have been provided with personal notetakers since the new employment support measures were introduced to cover this kind of support; what was the average time taken to provide assistance; and how many cases are outstanding. [30660]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 27 June 1995]: Responsibility for the subject of the questions has been delegated to the Employment Service Agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from M. E. G. Fogden to Mr. Ken Livingstone, dated 28 June 1995:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about how effectively Placing, Assessment and Counselling Teams (PACTs) identify and provide support through the Access to Work programme and how many deaf and hearing people were helped by PACTs through this programme.

The Access to Work programme was introduced in June 1994 to provide support to help disabled people overcome work-related obstacles caused by their disability so that they are able to compete for and in employment on an equal basis with non-disabled colleagues.

PACTs work with disabled people to identify the specific help they need, taking specialist and technical advice when necessary. PACTs complete an action plan, which is agreed with the client, recording the details of the support the PACT will provide and specifying what the PACT is doing to provide it. I have set PACTs a target of completing action plans for 80% of Access to Work clients within 3 weeks of their applying. If the actual provision of the support is likely to take some time, PACTs seek alternative ways of helping the client.

Provisional figures for the period 6 June 1994 to March 1995 show that PACTs helped 2476 deaf and hard of hearing people through Access to Work. Some of these people will have had more than one disability. Help included the provision of aids and equipment, adaption of premises, assistance with fares to work and help at job interviews. Of these, 221 people specifically had the help at work of a support worker provided through the programme.

Local managers are responsible for monitoring the operation of Access to Work and for achieving the set targets. This level of detail of monitoring information is not kept centrally, and I cannot therefore say what percentage of applications are dealt with within the target time, or what percentage of applicants get what they ask for. However, we are undertaking a comprehensive review of Access to Work that will examine in detail the operation of the programme. The review will be completed by December and will be published in the normal way. Research to support the review is currently in the field with a first report due in September.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what additional resources are likely to be given to placing assessment and counselling teams in order to meet increased demand arising from the introduction of the current anti-discrimination legislation; what training is given to team members in respect of quality standards within their service; and how quality is monitored. [30661]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 27 June 1995]: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service Agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from M. E. G. Fogden to Mr. Ken Livingstone, dated 28 June 1995:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your recent question about what additional resources are likely to be given to Placing Assessment and Counselling Teams (PACTs) in order to meet increased demand arising from the introduction of the current anti-discrimination legislation; the training given to team members in respect of quality standards within their service; and how quality is monitored.

On the future resourcing of PACTs, it might be helpful if I explain that the resource for PACTs, or any other part of ES, is subject to discussions within the current Public Expenditure Survey. Any changes in resources will not be known until the budget statement in November.

Turning to PACT training, Disability Employment Advisers (DEAs) undertake a programme of key skills training covering induction and basic disability service skills. The programme includes three weeks of centrally provided training in addition to individually structured induction and learning plans.

The Key Skills programme is supported by a Training and Development Record and Learning Support Officers to ensure that learning is validated and embedded into work practices. DEAs receive one to one coaching and mentoring from experienced staff in a range of disciplines: for example, from occupational psychologists and managers. Managers work closely with DEAs to enable them to perform to locally agreed standards. The programme is available for use by other PACT staff. All PACT staff are encouraged to acquire additional knowledge and skills and enhance existing skills in line with the ES commitment to Investors in People.

The quality of our specialist services for people with disabilities is monitored by line managers, by the annual customer satisfaction survey and by a more detailed satisfaction survey available locally specifically to support Access to Work, and by the ultimate success of PACTs in helping people to get or keep jobs.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the cost to the Exchequer if those employed as a result of the access to work programme were in receipt of benefit instead of in work. [31223]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information requested is not available. Any estimate of the benefit costs would require details of the personal circumstances of the individual concerned.

Employment Service

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment when he last met the chief executive of the Employment Service to discuss the provision of employment services and programmes in rural areas; and if he will make a statement. [31053]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 27 June 1995]: My right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State and I meet the chief executive of the Employment Service most weeks and we discuss a range of issues concerning Employment Service business. We regard the provision of Employment Service programmes and services in rural areas as a matter of great importance.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Personal Pension Schemes

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to ensure that personal pension schemes allocate minimum contributions to investors' accounts without delay. [31859]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The Personal Pensions Schemes (Appropriate Schemes) Regulations 1988 require providers to ensure that national insurance minimum contributions received from the Department of Social Security are used to provide money purchase benefits for the individual investor. However, there is no requirement on them to do so within a set period of time. I have today laid before Parliament amendment regulations which require the rules of all appropriate personal pensions schemes to provide for the allocation of minimum contributions to individual investors' accounts within three months of receipt from this Department. The Occupational Pensions Board has decided to reinforce this requirement by a change in its own rules.

War Widows

Sir George Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what would be the predicted cost to public funds of the decision to award a war widow's pension to those who have since remarried and whose second husband is still alive. [31029]

Mr. Burt: The war widow's pension is withdrawn on re-marriage. Our intention is to restore the pension where the marriage has terminated as a result of the death of the husband, dissolution or annulment or when the parties have been judicially separated. The net cost is estimated at about £45 million in a full year.

To award a war widow's pension to all those former war widows whose second, or subsequent, husband is still alive would cost an additional estimated £60 million in a full year.

Sir George Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the predicted cost to public funds of the decision to award a war widow's pension to those who have since remarried but have been widowed again or are divorced. [31028]

Mr. Hague: The net full-year estimated cost is about £45 million.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security by how much Government spending has changed in 1994–95 as a result of the private finance initiative; what is the estimated effect in 1995–96; how many jobs are to be created by schemes approved to date under the initiative and how many have been lost as a consequence in the public sector; and what is the forecast of transfer of employment from public to private sector over the last five years because of the initiative. [30833]

Mr. Hague: The administrative cost of taking forward the private finance initiative in this Department in 1994–95 is estimated at around £2 million. The estimated cost for 1995–96 is around £8 million. One contract has so far been awarded by the Department under the PFI at a cost estimated to be more than 30 per cent. cheaper than the public sector alternative. The award of this contract will result in 151 staff being transferred from public to private sector under the transfer of undertaking of pensions entitlement—TUPE—arrangements from 1 November this year.

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many schemes and to what value have been approved in 1994–95 under the private finance initiative; what are the estimates for the current financial year; how many schemes are currently being considered and at what value; for how long have they been considered, and how many have been in the assessment process for over (a) six months and (b) 12 months; and what was the average length of time taken to assess schemes so far approved. [30832]

Mr. Hague: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced the first award by this Department of a private finance initiative contract for the development and replacement of the national insurance recording system on 27 April this year. The total value of the project was estimated to be £150 million. Two further major schemes are being considered with an estimated combined value of £160 million. Both of these schemes have been in the process of assessment for more than six months but less than 12. PFI is an option that is considered for the whole of the Department's capital programme. A number of small schemes are in the initial stages of consideration and it is too early to provide a reliable estimate of their value. The time taken to assess the one scheme so far approved was 10 months.

Capital Spending

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the expected capital spending figure for his Department for 1994–95; and what is the latest budget figure. [30875]

Mr. Hague: The expected capital spending figures for this Department for 1994–95 is £317 million; planned capital expenditure for 1995–96 is £227 million.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Courts Charter

Mr. Boateng: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department when he expects to publish the new courts charter. [31322]

Mr. John M. Taylor: The question concerns a specific operational matter on which the chief executive of the Court Service is best placed to provide an answer and I have accordingly asked the chief executive to reply direct.

Letter from M. D. Huebner to Mr. Paul Boateng, dated 29 June 1995:

Costs of the New Courts Charter

The Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, has asked me to reply to your question about when the new Courts Charter is expected to be published.

The new Charter, called the Charter for Court Users, will be published on 25 July 1995.

Mr. Boateng: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what is the cost of compiling and publishing the new courts charters including consultancy fees. [31323]

Mr. Taylor: The question concerns a specific operational matter on which the chief executive of the Court Service is best placed to provide an answer and I have accordingly asked the chief executive to reply direct.

Letter from M. D. Huebner to Mr. Paul Boateng, dated 29 June 1995:

Cost of the New Courts Charter

The Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, has asked me to reply to your question about the cost of compiling and publishing the new Courts Charter, including consultation fees.

The total cost for designing, printing, packaging and distributing the new Charter, called the Charter for Court Users, will be approximately £162,000 (exc. VAT). This sum includes £500 for artwork consultancy fees. Approximately £17,000 of the cost relates to the Welsh, Braille and audio versions of the Charter.

Civil Enforcement Agencies

Mr. Merchant: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make a statement on the progress of the review of the organisation and management of civil enforcement agents. [32086]

Mr. John M. Taylor: The Lord Chancellor has considered carefully the responses to his public consultation paper on this subject and is now considering how the regulation, licensing and control of those who enforce judgments of the courts in England and Wales might best be effected so as to ensure that both debtors and creditors receive a proper, efficient and professional service. He is anxious that those parts of the established system which work well should be preserved, and will now undertake detailed consultation with the under sheriffs' and sheriffs' officers' associations and other relevant bodies in order to determine how best this might be achieved within a new statutory framework. He will announce the outcome of these deliberations by the end of the year.

Defamation

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what plans he has to amend the law on defamation. [30597]

Mr. John M. Taylor: The Government have announced a number of reforms to defamation law and procedure. On 16 December 1992, the Lord Chancellor announced that the Government would introduce a package of mainly procedural reforms, following recommendations made by a working party under the chairmanship of Lord Justice Neill. On 28 November 1994, he announced that there would be a new summary procedure to provide an inexpensive fast track for the disposal of straightforward claims, and on 14 May 1991 he announced that the defence of innocent dissemination would be extended to printers and others. The reforms will be introduced as soon as there is a suitable legislative opportunity.

Small Claims

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what plans he has to extend the small claims courts' powers to cover consumers whose health has been prejudiced by food retailers. [30542]

Mr. John M. Taylor: Claims made by consumers who believe that their health has been prejudiced by food can already be dealt with in the small claims court, if the damages claimed do not exceed £1,000. No change in this limit is recommended by Lord Woolf.

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what is his policy following Lord Woolf's recommendation that the small claims limit should be increased to £3,000, on whether a full consultation should take place before a final decision on a new limit is made; and if he will make a statement. [30699]

Mr. Taylor: Lord Woolf consulted widely in the preparation of his interim report. In view of this, the Lord Chancellor does not intend to undertake further public consultation on the question whether he should implement Lord Woolf's recommendation that the limit for small claims, other than those for personal injury, should be raised to £3,000. The power to make the necessary amendments rests with the County Court Rule Committee which, as part of its consideration of the matter, consults interested parties.

Shared Residency Orders

Mr. Luff: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many shared residency orders under the Children Act 1989 have been granted to fathers when the order has been contested, for each year since 1989. [30514]

Mr. John M. Taylor: The question concerns a specific operational matter on which the chief executive of the Court Service is best placed to provide an answer and I have accordingly asked the chief executive to reply direct.

Letter form M. D. Huebner to Mr. Peter Luff, dated 29 June 1995:

RESIDENCE ORDERS UNDER THE CHILDREN ACT 1989

The Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, has asked me to reply to your Question about the number of shared residence orders granted under the Children Act 1989 where the father has contested the application.

I am sorry to have to tell you that this information is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Contact Orders (Breaches)

Mr. Luff: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many mothers have received custodial sentences for breaches of court contact orders in each year since 1989. [30513]

Mr. John M. Taylor: The question concerns a specific operational matter on which the chief executive of the Court Service is best placed to provide an answer and I have accordingly asked the chief executive to reply direct.

Letter from M. D. Huebner to Mr. Peter Luff, dated 29 June 1995:

BREACH OF CONTRACT ORDERS

The Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, has asked me to reply to your Question about the number of mothers who have received a custodial sentence for breach of a contact order.

I am sorry to have to tell you that this information is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

State Papers

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if the definition of a state paper includes the manuscript notes by a Prime Minister of a speech delivered in the House of Commons. [30607]

Mr. John M. Taylor: As I said in reply to the hon. Member on 11 May 1995, Official Report, column 566, state papers are those which are created or acquired by Ministers, officials or other Crown servants by virtue of the office they hold under, or their service to, the Crown. Whether notes such as those referred to by the hon. Member fall into this category would depend on the circumstances in which they were made.

Actuarial Evidence

Mr. Boateng: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what plans he has to amend the Civil Evidence Bill to give effect to the Law Commission's recommendation on the admissibility of actuarial evidence, following the Lord Chancellor's announcement on 22 March. [30452]

Mr. John M. Taylor: A new clause giving effect to the Law Commission's recommendation on the admissibility of actuarial evidence was added to the Civil Evidence Bill at Committee stage in the House of Lords on 20 June.

Judicial Pension Arrangements

Mr. Boateng: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what comparisons he has made between the pension arrangements for full-time immigration adjudicators and judicial office holders of a similar status; and what plans he has to amend these arrangements. [30463]

Mr. John M. Taylor: The Judicial Pensions and Retirement Act 1993, which came into force on 31 March 1995, established uniform pension arrangements for all full-time judicial office holders, including immigration adjudicators, appointed on or after that date. Immigration adjudicators in office before that date continue to be pensionable under their previous terms, which differ in some respects from those of most other judicial office holders, subject to an option to elect to join the new pension scheme. The accrual rate for pension benefits for immigration adjudicators who exercise their option to join the new scheme is twice that of their previous arrangements and therefore this option constitutes a significant potential enhancement to the pension terms they accepted on appointment. The Lord Chancellor has no plans to amend further the pension arrangements for immigration adjudicators.

TRANSPORT

Road Rage

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 13 June, Official Report, column 474, what recent representations he has received on the subject of road rage; and if he will make a statement. [31522]

Mr. Norris: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Newport, West (Mr. Flynn) on 23 June, Official Report, column 442.

Marine Safety Agency

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport on what date he expects to introduce the proposed 20 per cent. efficiency saving into the Marine Safety Agency. [31096]

Mr. Norris: As the Marine Safety Agency's published 1995–96 business plan makes clear, the agency is already contributing towards the Department's efficiency gains target.

Transport Supplementary Grant

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what has been the transport supplementary grant settlement for (a) south Yorkshire, (b) Humberside, (c) north Yorkshire and (d) west Yorkshire in each of the last 10 years. [31097]

Mr. Norris: Details of the total capital provision allocated to local authorities in these areas for roads and public transport in each of the last 10 years are given in the table.

Concrete Motorway Barriers

Mr. Mills: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the adequacy of the safety of the proposed concrete motorway barriers on collision of cars and heavy goods vehicles; and if he will make a statement. [30641]

Mr. Watts: This is an operational matter for the Highways Agency. I have asked the chief executive to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. Iain Mills, dated 29 June 1995:

As you know, the Minister for Railways and Roads, Mr. John Watts, has asked me to reply to your Parliamentary Question, asking the Secretary of State for Transport about the adequacy of the safety of concrete safety motorway barriers on collision of cars and heavy goods vehicles.

All safety barriers, including concrete safety barriers, that are deployed on our network fully meet the performance requirements for vehicle restraints that are set down in the Manual for Contract Documents for Highway Works (MCHW).

With the help of the Transport Research Laboratory, the Highways Agency has carried out an extensive programme of research into the performance of vehicle restraints systems. In all tests carried out on Vertical Concrete Barriers the test vehicles have been safely contained and redirected along the line of the barrier.

The performance requirements set out in the MCHW have been shown to be reasonable in service but the Highways Agency has a continuing commitment to keep the overall performance of all vehicles restraint systems under review and will amend its requirements in the light of operational experience.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Small Businesses

Mr. Carttiss: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the most recent estimate of the number of small businesses in the United Kingdom. [32192]

Mr. Page: In order more clearly to evaluate the needs of small and medium-sized businesses, detailed research has been undertaken fully to understand the number and size of businesses in the UK. The research was the first to draw on the new official business register, the interdepartmental business register, as well as on estimates of self-employment.

Figures released today show that there were 3.6 million businesses in the UK in 1993—800,000 more than estimated by previous research. The vast majority of them are small—99 per cent. have under 100 employees. The new figures confirm the huge increase in the number of small businesses—an extra 1.2 million—since 1979.

Television Transmission Standards

Mr. Allen: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what action was taken or requested at the Council of Telecommunication Ministers meeting in the week beginning 12 June to adopt a declaration limiting the application of the directive on standards of television transmission. [30242]

Mr. Ian Taylor: No action was taken at the Telecommunications Council on 13 June in respect of a declaration on the draft directive on television standards.

In the course of that meeting of the Telecommunications Council, Commissioner Bangemann made a brief oral presentation on a number of amendments to the draft directive adopted only that day by the European Parliament. Following a brief discussion in which a number of concerns were voiced by the United Kingdom and Germany, the question of the Council's response to the Parliament's amendments was deferred for further consideration in the Committee of Permanent Representatives.

In the course of a subsequent preliminary meeting at official level, the presidency raised the question of whether UK and German concerns might, separately, be met by way of declaration by the Council, to which the Commission might be associated. These proposals are now being considered by member states, and by the Council legal service.

Capital Spending

Mr. Betts: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the expected capital spending figure for his Department for 1994–95; and what is the latest budget figure. [30874]

Mr. Heseltine [holding answer 28 June 1995]: The estimated outturn for 1994–95 for trade and industry public sector capital expenditure is £1,297 million. This includes central Government's own capital expenditure, and the capital expenditure of local authorities and public corporations. As explained in paragraph 1.9 of Cm 2821, no departmental breakdown of capital spending by local authorities is available for 1995–96. Excluding local authority spending, planned public sector capital expenditure for 1995–96 is £1,120 million. These figures are consistent with those shown in table 1.7 of Cm 2821.

Pseudo Oil-based Drill Muds

Mr. Dafis: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, what steps he has taken to assess the environmental effects of the use of pseudo oil-based drill muds by oil companies. [29935]

Mr. Eggar: Before any pseudo oil-based drill mud can be used it must be tested for its environmental effects in line with agreed Paris Commission protocols. On satisfactory completion of these laboratory tests, the POBM will be given provisional approval for use offshore. Samples will be requested from cuttings piles and the area around the piles to assess the POBM's actual behaviour in the sea. If performance in these offshore tests is not acceptable, the provisional approval may be withdrawn.

Dounreay Explosion

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will publish the report of the internal investigation carried out at Dounreay into the causes and effects of the explosion on 10 May 1977; and if he will publish the conclusion of the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority study into a final solution for the disposal of the intermediate-level waste disposal shaft. [29795]

Mr. Page: Details of the internal investigation carried out at Dounreay into the explosion in the intermediate-level waste disposal shaft in 1977 have been supplied to the relevant regulatory and advisory bodies. These include Her Majesty's industrial pollution inspectorate, the Health and Safety Executive's nuclear installations inspectorate, the Committee on Medical Aspects of Radiation in the Environment and the Radioactive Waste Management Advisory Committee. UKAEA is required by HMIPI and the NII to investigate the options for the future management of the shaft and its contents, and the time scales for their implementation. The results of this investigation, together with details relating to the 1977 incident, will be presented to COMARE and RWMAC and information will be made public.

Monetary and Exchange Rate Policies

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment he has made of the effect of the Government's monetary and exchange rate policies since (a) 1979 and (b) 1988 on the import share of the United Kingdom market for manufactures. [29439]

Mr. Ian Taylor: My Department has made no assessment of the specific factors listed.

The import share of UK manufactures was increased from 27 per cent. in 1979 to 36 per cent. in 1988 and to around 40 per cent. in 1993; although it should be noted that the definition of manufacturing is not consistent between 1993 and earlier years. The rising share of imports in the UK market for manufactures reflect a number of influences, including the increasing specialisation of world production.

The 1979, 1988 and 1993 figures are not directly comparable because of changes in the definition of manufacturing.

The figure for 1993 excludes division 23—coke, refined petroleum products and nuclear fuel. These industries are included in the SIC(92) definition of manufacturing but are excluded from the SIC(80) definition and so have been excluded from these tables to improve comparability.

The extraction and preparation of metalliferous ores were included in the SIC(80) definition of manufacturing, but excluded from the SIC(92) definition. Import penetration for the extraction and preparation of metalliferous ores fell sharply between 1979 and 1985—the latest year for which figures agree available. This means that the 1979 figure for manufactures is possibly overstated when compared to the 1988 and 1993 figures.

The extraction of minerals was also included in the SIC(80) definition of manufacturing, but excluded from the SIC92) definition. Import penetration figures fell slightly between 1979 and 1988.

Exports

Sir Irvine Patnick: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the total value of United Kingdom exports for each quarter of each of the last three years; and if he will make a statement. [31146]

Mr. Needham: Detailed information is regularly published by the Central Statistical Office in the "Monthly Review of External Trade Statistics" which is available in the Library of the House. The value of United Kingdom exports in the first quarter of 1995 was 42 per cent. higher than three years earlier, and 17 per cent. higher than in the first quarter of 1994.

Exports and Imports (European Community)

Mr. Shore: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what proportion of the United Kingdom's total (a) exports and (b) imports was conducted with other member states of the European Community in the period 1990 to 1993; and what were the equivalent figures for each of the other 11 members of the European Community during the 1990 to 1993 period. [31115]

Mr. Needham: The data requested are in the table.

Percentage of EU members visible trade with other EU members 1990–1993

	Imports per cent.	Exports per cent.
UK	50	55
France	65	62
Belgian-Luxembourg	71	75

Offshore Installations (Disposal)

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment he made of the number of jobs which could be created by the disposal of North sea oil platforms and rigs (a) in the Atlantic ocean and (b) on dry land, when deciding to give permission to Shell UK to dispose of the Brent Spar. [30720]

Mr. Page: The proposal to dispose of the Brent Spar in deep water is the best practicable environmental option.

In weighing their decision, Ministers considered a whole range of factors and concluded that none of these additional consideration outweighed the advantages of the best practicable environmental option.

DEFENCE

Third Country Trading Relations

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what information his Department holds on the trading relationship in M739 A1 and M131 fuses by Licentec AG of Zug, Switzerland and Iran since 1987; [30605]

(2) what information his Department holds on the trading relationship in military goods with Iran since 1984 of the companies Forex, Expal and Maarsu. [30537]

Mr. Freeman: It is not for my Department to comment on overseas companies' trading relations with third countries.

Brize Norton Flights (Costs)

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate has been made of the cost of each flight to the United States by the RAF from Brize Norton; and how many of these flights, on average, take place each year. [30629]

Mr. Soames: There are on average 102 return VC10 trooping flights to the United States from Brize Norton each year. The estimated average cost of each flight is £30,600 each way.

In addition, there are in excess of 150 exercise flights to various parts of the United States which are undertaken by both VC10 and Tristar aircraft. Figures for the average cost of these flights are not available.

Mr. Freeman: The revenue received from the sale of Royal Navy surplus equipment in each of the last three years is as follows:

	£ million
1992–93	24.6
1993–94	33.4
1994–95	36.2

Nuclear Warheads (Transport)

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his policy concerning the transportation of nuclear warheads through the Irish sea. [29940]

Mr. Soames: Nuclear weapons can be transported by sea, but as a matter of long-standing policy we do not comment on the routes used.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions he has held with representatives of local authorities along the Welsh coast concerning the use of the Irish sea for the transportation of nuclear warheads. [29938]

Mr. Soames: My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Defence has had no such discussions.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what contingency plans exist for dealing with an accident involving nuclear warheads transported through the Irish sea. [29939]

Mr. Soames: The Ministry of Defence has contingency plans to deal with a wide range of possible accidents involving the transportation of nuclear warheads, including an accident at sea.

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Trident nuclear warheads were transported by sea from Portsmouth to Coulport between 4 and 7 June. [31108]

Mr. Soames: As a matter of long-standing policy, we do not comment on the presence of nuclear warheads at any particular place or time.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his policy for the transportation of Trident nuclear warheads carried by sea from Portsmouth to Coulport; and if he will make a statement. [31109]

Mr. Soames: Nuclear weapons can be transported by sea, but as a matter of long-standing policy we do not comment on the routes used.

Royal Naval Air Station, Portland

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the future of Royal Naval air station, Portland. [31111]

Mr. Soames: A consultative document on the proposal to close the Royal Naval air station, Portland, was issued on 17 October 1994 and the consultation period ended on 16 December 1994. A number of representations were received during this period, and these are being carefully evaluated before we reach any final decision. I hope to be able to make an announcement shortly.

Gallantry Awards

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence for which Royal Navy gallantry awards Merchant Navy personnel are eligible. [31535]

Mr. Soames: Merchant Navy personnel are eligible for the Victoria Cross, the Distinguished Service Cross and mentions in dispatches.

Dr. Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if Merchant Navy personnel were eligible for Royal Navy gallantry awards other than the Conspicuous Gallantry Medal and the Distinguished Service Order before the practices of awarding the CGM and DSO for gallantry were abandoned. [31537]

Mr. Soames: Merchant Navy personnel were eligible for the Victoria Cross, the Distinguished Service Cross, the Distinguished Service Medal and mentions in dispatches before the new regulations governing operational gallantry awards came into force.

Dr. Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if Merchant Navy personnel are eligible for the Conspicuous Gallantry Cross. [31534]

Mr. Soames: No.

Dr. Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the practices of awarding the Distinguished Service Medal, the Conspicuous Gallantry Medal and the Distinguished Service Order for gallantry were abandoned; and who was consulted during the development of these changes. [31536]

Mr. Soames: A joint service review of operational gallantry awards was undertaken during 1993.

A number of people were consulted during the course of this review including the Tri-Service Review Body, consisting of a number of senior service personnel of general rank and equivalent and a civilian, the principal personnel officers and the chiefs of staff and the Secretary of State for Defence.

The recommendations were then seen and approved by the Prime Minister before being passed to the Committee on the Grant of Honours Decorations and Medals, who, in turn, submitted the recommendations to the Queen for her approval.

The Queen's formal approval was obtained on 6 September 1993 and the new regulations came into force from that date.

Royal Ordnance

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he has anything to add to his answer of 19 January 1994, Official Report, column 627, in regard to departmental knowledge of the trading relationship between Royal Ordnance and Chartered Chemical Industries Pte Ltd. of Singapore. [30519]

Mr. Freeman: DTI computerised records from 1992 do not show any export licences for which Royal Ordnance was the consignor and Chartered Chemical Industries Pte Ltd. the consignee but, in the course of recent researches, it has come to light that Singapore Technologies—the parent company of Chartered Chemical Industries Pte Ltd.—was, on occasion, a consignee of exports from Royal Ordnance.

I would also take the opportunity to refer to a written answer given on the same day, Official Report, 19 January 1994, column 626, in relation to Allivane International Ltd. In the course of recent researches, it has come to light that Chartered Industries of Singapore—which belongs to the same group of companies as Chartered Chemical Industries Pte Ltd.—was, on occasion, a consignee of exports from Allivane.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Visas-free Travel Arrangements

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the visa-free travel arrangements which exist between the United Kingdom and other nations; and which of these arrangements are being repealed. [31531]

Mr. Baldry: I will arrange for my hon. Friend to receive a substantive reply from the migration and visa department as soon as possible.

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs for what reason the provisions in the 1978 treaty between the United Kingdom and the United Arab Emirates which provide for movement without visa between the two nations is being annulled; and when the change will come into effect. Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the decision on the abolition of visa-free travel between the United Kingdom and United Arab Emirates was taken; and what consultations have taken place with the British business group of Dubai and the northern emirates. [31622]

Mr. Baldry: No decision has been taken to abolish visa-free travel between the UK and the United Arab Emirates.

The British business group of Dubai and the northern emirates has not been consulted about the existing mutual waiver of the visa requirement.

United Nations Conference on Trade and Development

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth if he will make it his policy to support the continued existence of UNCTAD. [31084]

Mr. Needham: I have been asked to reply.

The UK has consistently supported and will continue to support those of UNCTAD's activities which make a positive contribution to trade and development. But the world, and its international institutions, has changed since UNCTAD was established in 1964 and UNCTAD must change too. This has been recognised by its members who, at the last Trade and Development Board, agreed that the ninth conference, which is scheduled to be held in 1996, will consider the future role of UNCTAD. At its recent meeting in Halifax, the countries of the G7 also reaffirmed their commitment to change. The UK welcomes this opportunity for constructive reform and looks forward to achieving a satisfactory outcome.

The Prime Minister: The Ministerial and other Salaries Act 1975 limits the number of salaries that may be paid to Government office holders to 110. I have no plans to change this.

Former Prime Ministers

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Prime Minister in what circumstances visits overseas by former Prime Ministers are paid for from the public purse; if he will publish a table showing such visits since 1970; and if he will make a statement. [31392]

The Prime Minister: Some 122 Conservative hon. Members have received knighthoods since 1979. The names of the recipients have been published in the London Gazette. It is not the practice to reveal details of the criteria on which such awards are based.

Engagements

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Thursday 29 June. [30057]

The Prime Minister: This morning, I presided at a meeting of the Cabinet and had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House, I shall be having further meetings later today.

Technology Foresight Initiative

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how the research councils will be responding to the recommendations from the technology foresight initiative; and if he will make a statement. [31495]

Mr. David Hunt: The research councils have been working very hard to develop a response to the technology foresight recommendations and I have today placed copies of their response in the Libraries of both Houses. This is an excellent document which shows how well the councils are getting on with implementing foresight already. I recommend that others should follow their good example.

Pupil-teacher Ratios

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what was the pupil to teacher ratio in January for each local education authority and for England as a whole in (a) the primary sector, (b) the secondary sector and (c) overall. [31426]

Mr. Robin Squire: The provisional pupil-teacher ratios within maintained primary and secondary schools in England in January 1995 were 22.9 and 16.5 respectively. The provisional overall pupil-teacher ratio was 18.3. Information at local education authority level will be available in the autumn.

Capital Spending

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the expected capital spending figure for his Department for 1994–95; and what is the latest budget figure. [30884]

Member with more detailed information.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

Condoms

Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs to which countries condoms have been sent as part of the aid programme since 1990. [31006]

In addition, our contributions to the United Nations Population Fund—UNFPA—and the International Planned Parenthood Federation support the provision of condoms within the country programmes of these organisations.

Global Environment Facility

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make arrangements for the United Kingdom representatives on the council of the Global Environment Facility to publish an annual report setting out (a) the main activities and plans of the GEF each year, (b) the users to which United Kingdom Government money has been put by the GEF and (c) the voting record of the United Kingdom in decision making about GEF plans. [29933]

Mr. Baldry: The Global Environment Facility is required to produce an annual report, which the GEF council has to approve. We expect such reports to include information on GEF activities, including the use of financial resources and the results of any votes. However, we expect votes to be rare as the GEF aims to take decisions by consensus. Copies of the reports will be placed in both Libraries of the House. The first annual report is expected to be available towards the end of 1995.

ENVIRONMENT

Non-domestic Rating Appeals

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) how many appeals have been lodged by businesses in the north-west region in the last 12 months; how long it has taken to resolve each appeal; and what estimate he has made as to whether appeals will be resolved more quickly in future; [30509]

(2) how many appeals are currently lodged with the district valuers office in Rochdale; and what is the waiting time for appeals to that office to be heard. [30508]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: Some 42,838 proposals to alter the non-domestic rating lists have been received in the last 12 months in the north-west region of the Valuation Office agency. As at 31 May 1995, a total of 35,263 non-domestic rating appeals, including some made more than 12 months ago, were outstanding in the north-west region, and 2,277 at the Rochdale office.

We expect that the vast majority of proposals received by the end of March this year will have been cleared by the end of 1995–96. Later appeals against the 1990 list will be settled as soon as possible thereafter. It is still too early to tell how many appeals against the 1995 list are likely to be received, and at what rate; and therefore, how quickly they are likely to be resolved.

Council Tax Appeals

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many council tax appeals lodged (a) before and (b) since 30 November 1993 have still to be determined by Aylesbury valuation office; and what target he has set for determinations to be completed. [30799]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: As at the end of May, 423 of the appeals lodged before 30 November 1993 at the Valuation Office agency at Aylesbury, and 1,838 of those lodged after that date remain to be determined. All but a handful of the first category are expected to be settled by the summer. As regards the second, the VOA would expect appeals made prior to 1 April 1995 to be resolved no later than 31 March 1996. Its target is to clear subsequent appeals, in co-operation with the valuation tribunals, within 12 months of receipt. Priority will be given to clearing cases in order of receipt.

Standing Spending Assessment, Northumberland

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many letters his Department has received on the subject of the standard spending assessment for Northumberland as it affects education funding; and how many replies have been sent. [31198]

Mr. Curry: My Department has received and replied to over 3,500 letters in the past year on this issue.

Councillors' Expenses, Kent

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what measures he will take to cap councillors' expenses in excess of inflation in the county of Kent. [31206]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: We no longer specify financial limits on the overall amounts that local authorities can spend on councillors' remuneration allowances. We continue to specify ceilings on councillors' travel and subsistence allowances, and where any payments exceed those ceilings that is a matter for the district auditor.

Detergents

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will take action to require manufacturers to supply the public with more information about the ingredients of detergents. [29930]

Mr. Atkins: The proposed eco-labelling scheme for detergents will amplify and reinforce the information provided on labels on detergent packaging. As the Government's response to the 16th report of the Royal Commission on environmental pollution made clear, the Government will keep under review the need for any further guidance. My Department is encouraging consumer groups to discuss with the Soap and Detergent Industry Association their concerns about labelling.

Compulsory Competitive Spending

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment what plans he has to amend the rules for treatment of direct service organisation redundancy costs for tender evaluation and accounting purposes under compulsory competitive tendering of local authority services. [31863]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: In August 1994, my Department issued a consultation paper inviting comments on possible changes to the way in which DSO redundancy costs should be handled for evaluation and accounting purposes under compulsory competitive tendering.

The consultation paper proposed a number of ground rules: first, that the redundancy costs of any proposed reduction in DSO staff should be chargeable to the DSO revenue account—the date and point for this would be the time of notification to contractors of those eligible for transfer in the event of the Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) Regulations 1981 applying to the contract; secondly, that any further DSO redundancies made in the course of carrying out the work would be treated in accordance with the Chartered Institute of Public Finance and Accountancy code of practice for compulsory competition; and, thirdly, the consultation paper also proposed that where there was no revenue account in existence—which is currently the case, for example, with the white collar CCT—all prospective redundancy costs should be added to the DSO tender price for evaluation purposes.

A number of responses were received. Broadly speaking, private contractors supported the proposed rules, while local authorities supported the rules to an extent but resisted the proposal that redundancy costs incurred in advance of the establishment of a revenue account should invariably be added to the DSO bid. The Audit Commission supported the local authority view.

I have today written to the trade and local authority associations informing them of my conclusions. I have decided, first, that all costs relating to DSO redundancies should appear on the face of DSO accounts with an accompanying explanation, in accordance with current accounting practice. Redundancies during the course of the agreement between an authority and a DSO should be charged to the DSO revenue account, irrespective of whether those redundancies are triggered by the client side or the DSO management.

Secondly, redundancy costs incurred prior to an invitation to tender should be recorded in the appropriate local authority accounts but should not feature in the DSO bid. This is because these costs would need to be met whether or not the DSO was awarded the work; in addition, to charge these costs to the DSO would be a disincentive to local authorities to take action to restructure in advance of competition, since authorities would not only pick up the costs of redundancy when they were incurred but have these costs counted against the DSO bid.

Where there is no existing DSO revenue account as with the first tenders for white collar CCT, redundancy costs incurred prior to the invitation to tender should be recorded in the local authority account to which the pay of the redundant staff has been traditionally charged but should not feature in the DSO bid.

Thirdly, where a DSO submits a bid based on fewer staff than notified to external contractors for the purpose of TUPE, the cost of any consequential redundancies, which will fall after the date for the commencement of the work, should fall on the new trading account and the DSO should therefore have made adequate provision for these costs in its bid. The submission by a DSO of a bid based on fewer staff than notified to external contractors may call into the question the validity of the work force information provided by the authority. It may be appropriate to arrange the execution of redundancies for the costs to fall on the new account.

Fourthly, although it was not an issue raised in consultation, I have also considered how far the Secretary of State should take action against DSOs subsequently failing to meet the financial objective solely because of redundancy costs. Historically, Ministers have been sympathetic to DSOs in these circumstances and statutory action has been initiated. However, where financial failure is incurred as a result of redundancy costs instigated by the DSO to enable it to live within its bid price, then there is no case for treating these costs as unusual in any way, and for withholding statutory action. However, if redundancies are, in effect, imposed on the DSO by client changes to the volume and specification for the work, then providing that these are allowable under the contract conditions, they should not be held against the DSO in assessing the case for statutory action. In future, therefore, the Secretary of State may take action in appropriate cases in which financial failure is attributable to redundancy costs.

The Welsh Office conducted a parallel consultation exercise on these proposals. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales agrees with my conclusions and his Department will write to local authority associations in Wales in the near future.

Planning Regulations

Mr. Dykes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will consider new planning regulation guidelines to assist existing shopping centres to compete with new supermarket developments. [31329]

Sir Paul Beresford: I will be issuing a draft revised version of planning policy guidance note 6 "Town Centres and Retail Developments" for consultation before the summer recess.

Environment Agency

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the selection of a chief executive for the proposed Environment Agency. [32195]

Mr. Gummer: The Environment Agency advisory committee, chaired by Lord De Ramsey, has chosen Mr. Ed Gallagher, currently chief executive of the National Rivers Authority, to be the Environment Agency's first chief executive. Mr. Gallagher was selected following an open competition. Subject to enactment of the Environment Bill, he is expected to be appointed chief executive by the agency when it is established later this year.

House Renovation Grants

Ms Coffey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much was spent by local authorities in England and Wales on renovation grants; and what percentage was spent by each authority on providing facilities for people with disabilities in privately owned houses, for the last five years for which figures are available. [29904]

Mr. Robert B. Jones [holding answer 22 June 1995]: Information about house renovation grants for England and for Wales is shown in the quarterly publication "Housing and Construction Statistics". Figures for the last five years appear in table 2.17 of the issues listed in the table. Copies of these publications are in the Library.

Year	Issue
1990–1991	December 1993, Part 2
1991–1994[1]	December 1994, Part 2

[1] Data for the third and fourth quarters of 1994 are provisional.

A table has been placed in the Library giving figures of the percentage of grant spent on providing facilities for people with disabilities in privately owned houses, for each local authority area in England for the last five years.

Local Government Reorganisation

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will direct the Local Government Commission for England to carry out its new district reviews. [32275]

Mr. Gummer: I have today directed the Local Government Commission to carry out reviews of the 21 districts which I listed in my answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Exeter (Sir J. Hannam) on 22 June 1995, Official Report, column 353. I have also directed the commission to have regard to revised policy and procedure guidance. I am placing copies of the guidance in the Library.

WALES

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales by how much Government spending has changed in 1994–95 as a result of the private finance initiative; what is the estimated effect in 1995–96; how many jobs are to be created by schemes approved to date under the initiative and how many have been lost as a consequence in the public sector; and what is the forecast of transfer of employment from public to private sector over the last five years because of the initiative. [30827]

Mr. David Hunt [holding answer 28 June 1995]: The Department's spending was not changed in 1994–95 as a result of approvals of private finance initiative—PFI—schemes costing over £1 million. Information on schemes costing less than £1 million is not collected centrally. For 1995–96, spending on the PFI is expected to be £250,000. Information on the number of public and private sector jobs affected by the PFI is not available.

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many schemes and to what value have been approved in 1994–95 under the private finance initiative; what are the estimates for the current financial year; how many schemes are currently being considered and at what value; for how long have they been considered and how many have been in the assessment process for over (a) six months and (b) 12 months; and what was the average length of time taken to assess schemes so far approved. [30826]

Mr. Hunt [holding answer 28 June 1995]: No schemes costing over £1 million were approved in 1994–95. Information on schemes costing less than £1 million is not collected. Under the latest plans in 1995–96, up to five schemes with a total capital cost of around £80 million are likely to be approved. Twenty-six potential schemes with a total capital cost of more than £700 million are being considered. Of these, nine have been in the assessment process for more than six months and 17 have been in the assessment process for more than 12 months.

Legislative Powers and Duties

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the Acts with reference to the pertinent clauses, which grant him responsibilities, powers of duties in relation to (a) local government, (b) industrial development, (c) employment and training, (d) Welsh language, arts and recreation, (e) transport, (f) environmental services, (g) relations with the EU, (h) agriculture and (i) health and personal social services. [29941]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The Welsh Office was established in 1964. Since that date, the main Acts under which the Secretary of State has been granted responsibilities, powers or duties and for which in Wales the Secretary of State for Wales is responsible in relation to (a) local government, (b) industrial development, (c) employment and training, (d) Welsh language, arts and recreation, (e) transport, (f) environmental services, (g) relations with Europe, (h) agriculture and (i) health and personal social services are given in the following list.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Theatres Act 1968 (Amendment)

Mr. Purchase: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will consider extending the Theatres Act 1968 so that minors could be prevented from witnessing material considered to be of an adult nature; and if he will make a statement. [30859]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: We do not believe it would be appropriate to amend the Theatres Act 1968 in the way described.

Age classifications awarded to films and videos remain appropriate for each subsequent showing because of the unchanging recorded image. Each theatre performance is, however, unique because it is "live". As a result, different productions and performances of the same play may vary according to artistic interpretation, making a classification system unworkable.

Electro-shock Equipment

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action his Department has taken to follow up allegations made in January in relation to the illegal and unauthorised production, export and arrangement of sale of electro-shock weapons and equipment; what legal action has been and is being undertaken in consequence of such investigations; and if he will make a statement. [31030]

Mr. Maclean: Electric shock weapons are covered by section 5(1)(b) of the Firearms Act 1968, as amended, which prohibits the unauthorised possession, manufacture, purchase, acquisition, transfer and sale of any weapon of whatever description designed or adapted for the discharge of any noxious liquid, gas or other thing.

Following the allegations made in January, my Department has reviewed the terms of all authorities which are currently on issue to companies in England and Wales under section 5(1)(b) of the 1968 Act. There is no company which has authority to possess electric shock weapons.

Police investigations and the prosecution of alleged offences are matters for chief officers of police and for my right hon. and learned Friend the Attorney-General. The control of exports is a matter for my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade.

Prisoners (Statistics)

Ms Short: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) women and (b) men are currently imprisoned as a result of conviction for (i) murder and (ii) manslaughter; and how many of these offences in each case related to the killing of a partner of the opposite sex. [31270]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Pearson to Ms Short, dated 29 June 1995:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question asking how many (a) women and (b) men are currently imprisoned as a result of conviction for (1) murder and (2) manslaughter; and how many of these offences in each case related to the killing of a partner of the opposite sex.

Ms Short: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish a breakdown of the length of custodial sentences imposed on (a) men and (b) women currently in prison who were convicted for manslaughter of a partner of the opposite sex. [31272]

Mr. Forsyth: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Mrs. Quereshi Bibi

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 26 June, Official Report, column 488, when the report arising from the interview on 5 February with the sponsor of Mrs. Quereshi Bibi—Ref. BV 100/25109—was sent to his office; when it was sent to the post in Islamabad; what recommendation was made; when a decision is to be made on Mrs. Quereshi Bibi's application; and if he will make a statement. [31608]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: Papers were sent from the immigration office at Leeds-Bradford airport to the entry clearance officer in Islamabad on 23 February and 7 April No recommendation was made. The decision on the application is a matter for the entry clearance officer.

Correspondence

Mr. Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to reply to the letter dated 6 April from the hon. member for Worsley regarding his constituent Mrs. Ava Fielden. [30617]

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 26 June 1995]: I replied to the hon. Member yesterday.

Mentally Ill Prisoners

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 18 April, Official Report, columns 92–94, if he will give a regional breakdown of the numbers of prisoners transferred to hospitals under sections 47 and 48 of the Mental Health Act 1983 in each of the last 10 years. [31217]

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 27 June 1995]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. Paul Flynn, dated 29 June 1995:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question asking for a regional breakdown of the numbers of prisoners transferred to hospitals under sections 47 and 48 of the Mental Health Act 1983 in each of the last 10 years.

The information requested is not recorded centrally and could be obtained only by disproportionate cost.

Foundation for Business Responsibilities

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 18 May, Official Report, columns 369–70, (1) what confirmatory evidence was sought by the Charity Commissioner's investigators that documents relative to their inquiry into whether the Foundation for Business Responsibilities had been used as a vehicle for political donations were stolen during burglaries at the offices of the foundation; [30952]

(2) what were the addresses and dates of the series of thefts which limited the Charity Commissioner's ability to determine conclusively whether the Foundation for Business Responsibilities was used as a vehicle for political donations; [30951]

(3) what confirmatory evidence was sought by the Charity Commissioner's investigators that thefts from the offices of the Foundation for Business Responsibilities had (a) occurred and (b) been reported to the police. [30953]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: The Charity Commission investigators sought and received confirmation from the police that a break-in at 40 Doughty street, London WC1, which resulted in the theft of records belonging to the Foundation for Business Responsibilities, was reported to them as having taken place between 29 and 30 April 1993. The Charity Commission did not seek other evidence to confirm that the break-in had occurred.

There was no means of obtaining independent confirmation as to the actual records taken.

CERN Project Employees

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what provisions exist for British citizens employed on the CERN project and whose children were born in Switzerland between 1 January 1983 and 20 December 1994 to ensure that their grandchildren acquire British nationality if they too are born abroad; how many children were born with a reduced right of United Kingdom citizenship for their children; how many families have children with differing citizenship as a result of the exemption given to CERN under the 1984 designation order; what consideration was given to allowing all children born to British employees of CERN the opportunity of claiming full United Kingdom citizenship rights; and if he will make a statement. [30798]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: No special provision applies to employees of CERN unless they are on secondment from the Particle Physics and Astronomy Research Council—PPARC, formerly the Science and Engineering Research Council, SERC. Service under SERC was designated under section 2(3) of the British Nationality Act 1981 on 21 December 1984. The effect of this designation is that any children born abroad after that date to British employees of SERC or PPARC become British citizens "otherwise than by descent" and may transmit their British citizenship to a second generation born abroad. The Home Office does not keep records of the numbers of children born in Switzerland who are affected by this designation since the transmission of citizenship to and from them is a matter of law requiring no official intervention. There is no provision in the 1981 Act for designations to have retrospective effect, nor is there any discretionary power in the Act to vary a person's status from "by descent" to "otherwise than by descent".

Overseas Domestic Workers

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what checks are made, and by whom, on the condition and status of overseas domestic workers while they are in the United Kingdom. [31102]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: Detailed checks that the conditions of the overseas domestic worker scheme are met are carried out by the entry clearance officer before arrival. On arrival, the immigration officer must be satisfied that the domestic worker intends to leave the United Kingdom within the period of leave granted. Where the employer is here on a longer-term basis and the domestic worker applies for an extension of stay, the Department needs to be satisfied that the conditions of the scheme, including adequate maintenance and accommodation, continue to be met.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions he has had in the last year to improve the status and rights of overseas domestic workers in the United Kingdom. [31104]

Mr. Baker: A review of the arrangements for overseas domestic workers was undertaken last year, resulting in the changes announced on 9 December 1994, Official Report, columns 379–80. Officials also recently met two organisations who speak on behalf of overseas domestic workers.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) visas and (b) work permits have been granted to overseas domestic workers for entry and work in the United Kingdom in each of the last three years. [31103]

Mr. Baker: Comprehensive figures for the number of overseas domestic workers granted entry clearance visas are not kept centrally. However, arrangements are being made to obtain some figures for the period 1 January to 30 June 1995 which I will let the hon. Member have when they become available. Work permits are not issued to overseas domestic workers.

Pools (Deregulation)

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make it his policy to allow all retail outlets to pay out small winnings to pools customers and give promoters the opportunity to establish a pool based on sporting events on any day of the week. [30533]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I am currently reviewing the scope for further deregulation of the pools as part of the deregulation initiative. My officials are consulting with the Pools Promoters Association and have just received a further letter from it elaborating its proposals, including the proposals referred to by the hon. Member.

Government Escort Service (Cellular Vehicles)

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many new cellular vehicles are required for the court escort contracts still to be let; and at what cost to the Prison Service; [29962]

(2) how many and on what dates new vehicles are still to be delivered to Group 4 and Securicor for the court escort service; [29961]

(3) how was the cost of providing new cellular vehicles taken into account when calculating and publishing the Prison Service's savings through contracting out the court escort service; [29963]

(4) what was the value of each of the unsuccessful bids to provide new cellular vehicles for the court escort service; [29982]

(5) on what date the decision was taken to provide new cellular vehicles for the court escort services; which companies tendered for the supply of cellular vehicles; and which companies won contracts to supply cellular vehicles; [29959]

(6) what is the cost to the Prison Service of the successful bid to provide new cellular vehicles for the court escort service. [29960]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for these matters has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. George Howarth, dated 29 June 1995:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Questions about cellular vehicles used by court escort contractors.

The vehicles used by private contractors for transporting prisoners to and from court are built to a specification required by the Prison Service. The procurement of the vehicles, whether purchased or leased, is undertaken by the court escort contractor.

For those contracts still to be let, the tenderers' proposals will identify how many vehicles will be required and the type/size of vehicle best suited to the expected volume of prisoner movements, the geography of the contract area, the locations to be served and the detailed operational specification. These proposals will be compared and evaluated as part of the process leading up to contract award.

Once the court escort service contract has been awarded, it is the responsibility of the contractor to acquire the vehicles required and have them ready for use by the required date. Although we check that the vehicle programme is proceeding to plan we do not monitor the detail of delivery schedules and consequently we do not hold information on the precise numbers and dates regarding new vehicles still to be delivered.

The cost of vehicles, which the contractor may purchase or lease, forms part of the overall contract price. Information about the cost of the vehicles, or about any other individual element within the total contract price, is a matter for the contractor. This applies to successful and unsuccessful tenders alike.

To calculate the savings from contracting out court escort services, the contract price for the first year of full operation was compared with the estimated cost in the same year of continuing the previous arrangements. In estimating the latter, account was taken of vehicle costs, inclusive of depreciation.

Mr. Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what system the Prison Service has in place to monitor the standards of maintenance and general safety of the cellular vehicles used by Group 4 and Securicor; [29964]

(2) what is the annual cost to the Prison Service of monitoring the standards of maintenance and general safety of the cellular vehicles used by Group 4 and Securicor; [29966]

(3) on whom will fall the cost of new safety measures for existing cellular vehicles; [29968]

(4) what estimate he has made of the cost of providing safety measures, other than seat belts, for staff and prisoners in all existing cellular vehicles; [29981]

(5) on what date and on what basis the decision was taken not to fit seat belts for staff and prisoners in new cellular vehicles in court escort; [29965]

(6) what is the estimated cost of fitting seat belts to all existing cellular vehicles in the court escort service. [29967]

Mr. Forsyth: Responsibility for these matters has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. George Howarth, dated 29 June 1995:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Questions about safety in cellular vehicles used in court escort contracts.

Contractors may only use cellular vehicles if they comply with the demanding vehicle performance specification set out both in the invitation to tender for court escort and custody services and in the contract. The specification is the same as the one used by the Prison Service for its own new cellular vehicles and takes account of all the relevant legislation, including that on safety.

Once a contract has been awarded, it is the responsibility of the contractor to ensure the vehicles are always properly maintained and roadworthy. The contractor's responsibilities are the same as any other operator of a passenger carrying, or public services vehicle. This means that the vehicles must be awarded a certificate of initial fitness under the Public Service Vehicle (Conditions of Fitness, Equipment, Use and Certification) Regulations 1981 and they must be inspected annually by the Department of Transport Vehicle Inspectorate Agency. In addition, the contractor's operational procedures, which have to be agreed with the Prison Service before operation, require vehicle crews to undertake daily checks before the vehicles can be used.

The contractor's vehicles must comply with the performance specification laid down. The cost of those vehicles and their maintenance forms part of the overall cost of the contract to the Authority. Modifications are occasionally made to the specification, for example to take account of any new relevant legislation or in the light of developments in vehicle design. However, it would be unusual to apply such modifications retrospectively to existing vehicles. The cost of any modification to an existing vehicle would fall to the Authority if it represented a new requirement but to the contractor if the change was covered by the existing performance specification.

Existing safety measures form part of the overall cost of a vehicle and the cost of providing any additional measures would depend upon their nature.

Seat belts for passengers are not required by law to be fitted in cellular vehicles. Their installation has been considered but the view has been taken, since the first specification was drawn up in 1989, that seat belts might be used by prisoners to attempt suicide or inflict self harm or as a weapon.

The cost of providing seat belts would depend on the type of belt used, the number of mounting points required and the type of construction employed on the vehicle. It is estimated that the cost could be between £75 and £300 per seat.

Suicides (Prison)

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans will be put into operation during the next business year to reduce suicides in prisons in England and Wales. [29953]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. George Howarth, dated 29 June 1995:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about what plans will be put into operation during the next business year to reduce suicides in prisons in England and Wales.

The Prison Service regards every self-inflicted death in custody as a tragedy. A new strategy, Caring for the Suicidal in Custody, was introduced throughout the Prison Service in April 1994, based on research commissioned by the Prison Service and carried out by the Cambridge Institute of Criminology.

We will be maintaining this strategy and continuing with a major programme of staff training and the expansion of Listener Schemes, as well as working with the Samaritans and other groups and disseminating good practice.

The new strategy is currently being evaluated. When this is completed, we will introduce any improvements that are indicated by the evaluation.

Category C Prisons (Razor Wire)

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what will be the cost of providing additional razor wire security to the perimeters of category C prisons. [29954]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. George Howarth, dated 29 June 1995:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the cost of providing additional razor wire security to the perimeters of Category C prisons.

The Prison Service is looking at a number of new measures designed to improve physical security. One possible development involves the use of razor wire coils as a barrier to make it extremely difficult for a prisoner even to reach the perimeter fence.

The use of razor wire on a significant scale would depend upon the results of current trials and further assessment in a pilot prison setting. The cost-effectiveness of alternative measures would also need to be assessed before any final decision was made.

Although some preliminary work has been done on the cost of additional razor wire, specific estimates cannot be prepared until completion of the trials and our own evaluation of the precise needs of each individual establishment.

Prisoners (Foreign Nationals)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the prisons in London which hold foreign nationals on (a) drugs offences and (b) immigration offences. [29544]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Pearson to Mr. Tom Cox, dated 29 June 1995:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question asking for a list of the prisons in London which hold foreign nationals on (a) drugs offences and (b) immigration offences.

Prison Service establishments in London currently holding foreign nationals for drug offences are: Belmarsh, Brixton, Wandsworth, Pentonville, Holloway and Wormwood Scrubs. The only London establishment which now holds newly detained foreign nationals as immigration detainees is Holloway prison.

However, Belmarsh, Wandsworth, Wormwood Scrubs as well as Holloway have some foreign nationals in their custody who have recently completed prison sentences and are now held awaiting deportation or the results of appeals against deportation.

Prison Farms

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the number of prison farms in England and Wales. [59540]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Pearson to Mr. Tom Cox, dated 29 June 1995:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about the number of prison farms in England and Wales.

There are 38 Prison Service establishments with major agricultural and horticultural enterprises. A further 24 establishments have smaller scale horticultural production units. All establishments have a ground maintenance enterprise.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if prisons must purchase food and produce from prison farms from within their prison food budget expenditure; and if he will make a statement. [29559]

Mr. Forsyth: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. Tom Cox, dated 29 June 1995:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about prison farms.

Prisons are required to spend 26 per cent of their daily food allowance on items supplied by prison farms.

TREASURY

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Byers: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many civil servants in his department or its agencies are presently working on matters related to the Scott inquiry; if dedicated units have been established; and what is the estimated cost to date of civil servants dealing with matters relating to the Scott inquiry. [30293]

Mr. Kenneth Clarke [holding answer 22 June 1995]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply which my right hon. Friend the Paymaster General gave him on 18 May 1994, Official Report, columns 481–82. Costs incurred by the Treasury since then have been very small.

There are presently six staff of HM Customs and Excise dedicated to working on matters related to the Scott inquiry. The total staffing cost of the Department's Scott liaison unit is now estimated to be around £612,000 to date. This figure does not include the personal costs of current and former Customs and Excise officials who have been asked to give written and/or oral evidence to the Scott inquiry.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 21 March, Official Report, column 108, if he will list those occasions since the start of the current parliamentary year when (a) he and (b) the Chief Secretary did not give prior warning to hon. Members of visits to their constituencies. [30751]

Mr. Kenneth Clarke [holding answer 26 June 1995]: My right hon. Friend the Chief Secretary and I are not aware of any occasions during the current Session when we have visited hon. Members' constituencies on departmental business without giving them prior warning.

ECOFIN

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the recent Council meeting of the Economic and Finance Ministers of the European Union. [30935]

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I represented the UK at the Economic and Finance Council—ECOFIN—of the European Union in Luxembourg on 19 June.

The Council agreed to a draft recommendation on the broad guidelines for the conduct of economic policy in the Community and in the member states; to the broad thrust of a report on member states' progress with employment policies by the Economic Policy Committee; to conclusions on trans-European networks; and discussed a draft presidency report on preparations for the third stage of economic and monetary union. These were submitted to the Cannes European Council.

The Council reached political agreement on a draft regulation on the protection of the Community's financial interests. The Council also adopted substantive conclusions on the Commission's annual report on fraud for 1994 and work programme on fraud for 1995–96, and procedural conclusions on member states' reports on national measures to combat fraud, waste and mismanagement of Community funds.

The Council agreed that all three new member states have an excessive deficit and that Germany's existing excessive deficit decisions should be abrogated. There was also broad agreement on a proposed regulation concerning harmonised indices of consumer prices across the Community.

The Council adopted conclusions emphasising the need to respect financial perspective ceilings and calling for regular Commission updates on the situation.

The Council discussed Commission proposals for a reduced VAT rate on cut flowers and for mandatory tax relief for biofuels. There was little consensus on the latter proposal and I questioned the utility of further work on the issue.

No formal votes were taken.

EU Statistics

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list for each European Union member state the title and source of each state's equivalent documents to the United Kingdom (a) Budget Red Book, (b) public expenditure statistical supplement, (c) departmental expenditure reports and (d) documents showing the composition of the public sector borrowing requirement and national debt figures. [30954]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The information is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Housing Benefit

Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he will announce the proposed changes to the housing benefit regulations; and if he will make a statement. [31822]

Mr. Roger Evans: The Housing Benefit (General) Amendment Regulations 1995 are today being laid before the House. The changes will come into force on 2 January 1996, allowing local authorities time to make the necessary arrangements for implementation.

Mortgage Interest

Mr. Ottaway: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he intends to respond to the Social Security Advisory Committee report on his proposals for income support mortgage interest; and if he will make a statement. [31750]

Mr. Roger Evans: I am today laying regulations before the House which set out the new rules relating to the payment of income support mortgage interest and other related housing costs from 2 October 1995. I have also responded to the report by the Social Security Advisory Committee. I am grateful to the committee for its report.

Although I have not been able to accept all the committee's recommendations, I have carefully considered its comments and those of the lending and insurance industries and others. I believe the package of measures I have presented today will ensure that private insurance and income support mesh together to provide more comprehensive cover for borrowers who lose their income. High-quality comprehensive insurance available to all borrowers will provide better protection than the current limited income support scheme, which stands to help only 30 per cent. of home owners who may find themselves out of work.

These measures will stimulate insurers and lenders to continue to develop and improve on the mortgage protection cover they offer, while ensuring that benefit provision is retained for those borrowers and circumstances which the insurance industry cannot realistically cover, at this time.

We have already seen some in the lending industry responding positively to these measures. Now the final details have been settled, I look forward to seeing more lenders take similar steps. Indeed, it is their own interest as well as that of their borrowers to do so.

Frozen Pensions

Mr. Churchill: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his best estimate of the cost in 1996–97 of granting Britain's expatriate pensioners whose pensions are frozen (a) the same increment as they would receive were they to be resident in Great Britain and (b) of closing the gap between the frozen pension and the full amount to which they would be entitled were they to be resident in Great Britain by 20 per cent. [31538]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The estimated cost of paying a single year's uprating is about £16 million, based on 1994 rates.

The estimated cost of paying 20 per cent. of the difference between the amount currently payable and the amount which would be payable were the pensioners resident in Great Britain is £47 million in the first year.

Motability

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will instruct independent accountants to advise him as to whether the current level of contingency reserves for car leasing held by Motability Finance Ltd. are set at too high a level; and if he will make a statement. [31488]

Mr. Hague: The level of contingency reserves held by Motability Finance Ltd. are a matter of discussion between MFL and Motability. The level required is reviewed annually by Motability and MFL. The Secretary of State has asked them to report to him when they are next reviewed.

Social Fund

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many social fund loan applications were refused on the grounds that claimants were unable to repay (a) in total and (b) as a percentage of applications in each year since 1990–91 by (i) district and (ii) area directorate. [29330]

Mr. Roger Evans: The administration of the social fund is a matter for Mr. Ian Magee, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member with such information as is available.

Letter from Ian Magee to Mr. Alan Milburn, dated 28 June 1995:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about Social Fund (SF) loan applications, for each year since 1990–91, which were refused on the grounds that customers were unable to repay.

With the creation of the Benefits Agency in April 1991, offices were grouped into Districts. I have, therefore, provided at Annex A the information requested for the year 1990/91 by former Local Office and Region. Annexes B and C provide the information by BA District and Area Directorate for the years 1991/92 and 1992/93 respectively.

The new Social Fund Computer System (SFCS) introduced from February 1993 and during the course of 1993/94, collects statistics in a different way to the old system. The information provided for 1993/94 at Annex D is a combination of the old system's data, which provided the main reason for refusal against each application, and the new system which provides a reason for refusal against each individual item refused. A customer's application will usually include a number of individual items. The figures collected for 1994/95, and provided at Annex E, are for items only and it is therefore not possible for me to provide the percentage of applications refused on the grounds of a person's inability to repay. Copies of the tables have been placed in the Library.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Church Repairs

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what steps he has taken to discuss with Church authorities the need for repair grants arising from damage caused by atmospheric polluters; and if he will make a statement. [31105]

Mr. Dorrell: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment has not discussed with Church authorities the specific need for repair grants arising from damage caused by atmospheric pollution. However, the position with regard to historic churches is that, provided other eligibility criteria are fulfilled, grant aid may be available from English Heritage towards repairs necessitated by atmospheric pollution.

Amsterdam Wreck

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what action his Department is taking to preserve the wreck of the East Indiaman Amsterdam buried in shingle off Hastings sea front; and if he will make a statement. [31499]

Mr. Dorrell: The Amsterdam is afforded statutory protection from unauthorised interference as a designated wreck under the Protection of Wrecks Act 1973. I am aware of a report indicating that the timbers which are sometimes exposed are deteriorating through natural processes, but I have been advised that the wreck is under no immediate threat. My officials are currently in touch with the Dutch Government, who are the owners, about the future of the Amsterdam.

Churchill Papers

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage (1) on what occasions his views were sought by the national heritage memorial fund on the valuation of the Churchill papers provided by Bernard Quaritch; [30599]

(2) when he was first consulted by the national heritage memorial fund about the decision to acquire the Churchill papers. [30598]

Mr. Dorrell: The national heritage memorial fund, like all distributors of lottery funding, reaches its decisions independently of Government, as is provided for in the National Lottery etc. Act 1993.

Heritage Green Paper

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage (1) whether the heritage Green Paper will include proposals to reform the membership of, and guidance given by the Government to, the Millennium Commission; [29931]

(2) whether the heritage Green Paper will include proposals to reform the national lottery. [29932]

Mr. Dorrell: No.

Arts Expenditure

Mr. Jim Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what is the current level of expenditure per capita on the arts. [30980]

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 26 June 1995]: Figures for total per capita spending on the arts are not currently available; my Department is supporting a research programme designed to produce an accurate overall measure of the level of creative artistic activity.

My Department's tax-funded budget for the performing and contemporary visual arts in 1995–96 is £200.6 million. With only small exceptions, this money is spent within England, giving a per capita expenditure in the current year from central Government of £4.13. My Department is also responsible for the national lottery, which expects to make available up to £200 million to the arts in England in the current year. If the Department's expenditure on museums and galleries is also included, the per capita figure is £12.75.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Violent Crime

11. Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what change has taken place in the number and type of violent crimes committed in Northern Ireland since August 1994. [29811]

Sir John Wheeler: Statistics indicate that there has been an overall decrease of more than 16 per cent. in violent crime for the period September 1994 to May 1995 when compared to the previous nine months, with all types of crime showing a decrease to some extent.

Arms Decommissioning

14. Lady Olga Maitland: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress he has made regarding decommissioning of weapons. [29814]

28. Mr. Maginnis: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on decommissioning terrorist arms and explosives. [29829]

Sir John Wheeler: I refer the hon. Members to the reply I gave earlier today to the hon. Member for Castle Point (Dr. Spink).

Political Settlement

15. Mr. Jim Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the progress towards a political settlement in Northern Ireland. [29815]

Sir Patrick Mayhew: Our aim remains the achievement of a comprehensive and widely acceptable political settlement. Democratically mandated parties committed to peaceful methods will be its principal architects. Therefore, the Government continue to encourage in the first instance, bilateral meetings between such parties and themselves.

Education

16. Mr. Cyril D. Townsend: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the integration of schools in Northern Ireland. [29817]

Mr. Ancram: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Derbyshire, North-East (Mr. Barnes) earlier today.

Educational Exchanges

17. Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to promote educational visits and exchanges with schools and colleges in the rest of the United Kingdom. [29818]

Mr. Ancram: School and colleges are responsible for organising their own educational visits and exchanges within the United Kingdom. The introduction of local management of schools and colleges allows for greater freedom to develop links appropriate to their needs.

Union

18. Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps he is taking to further the union with Northern Ireland. [29819]

Sir Patrick Mayhew: Northern Ireland is, in fact and in law, already a fully integral part of the Union. The Government gladly uphold this constitutional position, and have no intention of changing it while it continues to accord with the democratic wish of most of the people who live there.

Framework Document

19. Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a further statement on the framework document. [29820]

Sir Patrick Mayhew: "Frameworks for the Future" were published on 22 February. The Government believe that the two framework documents cover the issues which need to be addressed as part of a comprehensive political settlement. They are not intended as a blueprint, and both Governments have made it clear that they are happy to listen to other ideas.

Royal Ulster Constabulary

20. Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to restructure the Royal Ulster Constabulary. [29821]

Sir John Wheeler: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 25 May, Official Report, column 749. We intend to publish more detailed proposals on the reform of the tripartite structure of policing later this year.

Blue Circle Dump

21. Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many objections were received by the Department of the Environment (Northern Ireland) regarding the proposal from Blue Circle for a super-dump in the limestone-based quarry at Magheramorne, County Antrim. [29822]

Mr. Moss: The Department has received approximately 1,500 letters making representations about the planning application for a landfill site and associated works at the former Magheramorne quarry.

Political Talks

22. Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress is being made in the political talks concerning the future of Northern Ireland. [29823]

Sir Patrick Mayhew: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Falkirk, West (Mr. Canavan) earlier today.

Drug Abuse

23. Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps he is taking to combat drug abuse in Northern Ireland. [29824]

Sir John Wheeler: A wide range of activities to combat drug misuse in Northern Ireland is carried out by a variety of agencies, including those working in areas of health education, treatment and law enforcement.

In addition, the Northern Ireland Committee on Drug Misuse, which advises the Department of Health and Social Services on issues relating to drug and solvent misuse, is current preparing a draft policy statement on drug misuse in Northern Ireland.

The draft statement includes five main priority areas for action—education and prevention, treatment and rehabilitation, law enforcement, information and research and monitoring and evaluation—and has been the subject of a widespread consultation exercise, the responses to which are currently being evaluated. At the end of this process, the committee intends to submit a final draft to the Government for consideration as the basis of a policy framework for tackling drug misuse in Northern Ireland.

This will be addressed by a new top-level committee which I have established and which I will chair to ensure that individual Government Departments contribute fully towards a properly co-ordinated approach to tackling the drugs problem.

Housing Executive

24. Mr. O'Hara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the operation of the Northern Ireland Housing Executive. [29825]

Mr. Moss: The Northern Ireland Housing Executive is the single regional housing authority in Northern Ireland and is responsible for the assessment of housing need and the development of programmes to meet that need.

The Department of the Environment is currently undertaking a review of housing policy in Northern Ireland and will shortly publish a consultative paper. The review is of policies and programmes and is predicated on the continued existence of the Northern Ireland Housing Executive together with an expanding voluntary sector and a growing private sector.

Water and Sewerage Privatisation

25. Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the progress of his proposals to privatise the water and sewerage industry in Northern Ireland. [29826]

Mr. Moss: As announced in the House on 29 June 1994, Official Report, columns 546–47, the Department of Environment's Water Executive will be established as a next steps agency by April 1996 as an interim stage to eventual privatisation. While the Government remain committed to the privatisation of water and sewerage services in Northern Ireland at the earliest practicable date, it is recognised that, for a number of technical reasons, this will not be possible in the lifetime of the present Parliament.

Sewage Treatment Plants

26. Mr. Clifford Forsythe: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many sewage treatment plants in the Antrim, South constituency have not yet been upgraded under the Department's five-year programme. [29827]

Mr. Moss: Work still to be undertaken in the Department's programme of sewage treatment plants in the Antrim, South constituency consists of the diversion of sewage from existing works at Killead, Crumlin and Ballyduggenan Villas to neighbouring larger works.

Inward Investment

27. Mr. Elletson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement about inward investment to the Province. [29828]

Mr. Ancram: In 1994–95, 10 new inward investment projects offering almost 2,000 jobs were negotiated by the Industrial Development Board for Northern Ireland and a target of 20 projects offering 4,500 jobs has been set for 1995–96.

The peace process and growing business confidence are providing new opportunities to reposition Northern Ireland as a prime investment location. The new and more positive image of Northern Ireland is enhancing the credibility of the IDB in discussions with potential investors. Resources are being increased to capitalise upon this new business opportunity, particularly in the United States.

Education Policy

29. Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he last met the Secretary of State for Education and the Secretary of State for Scotland to discuss education policy in the United Kingdom. [29830]

Mr. Ancram: There is regular contact at ministerial level on education policy as part of the normal processes of government.

Standing Advisory Commission on Human Rights

Mr. Brandreth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he has received the 20th report of the Standing Advisory Commission on Human Rights, and if he will make a statement. [32244]

Sir Patrick Mayhew: The report for the period 1 April 1994 to 31 March 1995 has been published today and copies have been laid before Parliament.

The Commission has considered a range of important matters during the period under review. These include questions relating to the changing political circumstances following the ceasefire, notably the future of policing and possible changes in emergency legislation. The Commission also commented on the application of international standards for the protection of human rights.

I would also like to thank the commission for its extensive report on disability in Northern Ireland, which was brought to the attention of Parliament in the form of Command Paper 2740 in December 1994.

Copies of the commission's 20th report have been placed in the Library. Copies of my response to the report will be placed in the Library in due course.

Licensed Firearms Dealers

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on licensed firearms dealers in Northern Ireland. [31286]

Sir John Wheeler: The registration and control of firearms dealers is governed by articles 34 to 41 of the Firearms (Northern Ireland) Order 1981. There are presently 154 registered firearms dealers in Northern Ireland.

The 1981 order requires the Chief Constable to maintain a register of firearms dealers, and only those persons granted a certificate of registration by the Chief Constable are permitted to trade as firearms dealers. Before issuing such a certificate, the Chief Constable must be satisfied that the person is not already prohibited from trading by order of a court in Northern Ireland or Great Britain, following the person's conviction on firearms offences or for an offence relating to the import and export of firearms or ammunition; that the person can safely trade in firearms without endangering the public or the peace; that the proposed place of business is suitable; and that there is a need at that place for such a business. The order empowers the Chief Constable to impose conditions on the certificate of registration. Failure to comply with those conditions may lead to the certificate being revoked. The Secretary of State can give directions to the Chief Constable as to the conditions to be imposed. The Chief Constable may also revoke the certificate of registration if he is satisfied that the person has ceased to trade as a firearms dealer; or has ceased to have a place of business in Northern Ireland; or cannot be permitted to continue trading as a firearms dealer without danger to the public safety or to the peace. Any firearms dealer or prospective firearms dealer aggrieved by the Chief Constable's decision in such matters, may appeal to the Secretary of State under article 55 of the order.

The Secretary of State is satisfied that the law governing the firearms trade is sufficient and is rigorously enforced by the Chief Constable in the interests of public safety.

Sunday Observance

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if articles I, II, and III, of the Act for the Better Observation of the Lord's Day, commonly called Sunday, AD 1695, are currently in force. [31285]

Sir John Wheeler: Articles I, II, and III of the Sunday Observance Act (Ireland) 1695 are still in force as set out in the latest version of the "Statutes Revised, Northern Ireland", Vol. A, pages 47 and 48.

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) how many convictions there have been under the Act for the Better Observation of the Lord's Day, commonly called Sunday, AD 1695, for the use or exercise on the Lord's day of (a) hurling, (b) commoning, (c) football playing, (d) cudgels, (e) wrestling and (f) any other games, pastimes or sports in each of the past 15 years; [31289]

(2) how many individuals have been (a) prosecuted, (b) convicted, (c) fined, (d) subjected to the confiscation of goods or property or (e) set publicly in the stocks under any of the provisions of the Act for the Better Observation of the Lord's Day, commonly called Sunday, AD 1695, in each of the past 15 years. [31287]

Sir John Wheeler: As far as the police are concerned, there have been no criminal prosecutions recorded in the past 15 years for offences under the Act for the Better Observation of the Lord's Day. There may have been private prosecutions, but no central records of these are available.

Driver and Vehicle Testing Agency

Mr. Brandreth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what targets have been set for the Driver and Vehicle Testing Agency during 1995–96. [32245]

Mr. Moss: For 1995–96 the following performance targets have been set:

	Performance targets

Level of customer satisfaction with booking arrangements	At least 85 per cent. plus or minus 2 per cent. within the range of sampling error
Level of customer satisfaction with test procedures	At least 90 per cent. plus or minus 2 per cent. within the range of sampling error
Number of compensation payments for cancelled tests	Less than 0.5 per cent. of applications received
Composite unit cost of testing operations	£16.95

Educational Administration

Mr. Trimble: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what representations he has received on the paper "Educational Administration in Northern Ireland: Proposals for change". [29812]

Mr. Ancram: I have received some 1,300 written representations and have met a number of deputations. I will consider all these responses carefully before reaching any final decisions.

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he will respond to representations from the constituency of Strangford to the consultative document "Educational Administration in Northern Ireland: Proposals for Change"; and if he will make a statement. [29813]

Mr. Ancram: Representations for the constituencies of Strangford are among many received by my Department. I will consider them all carefully before reaching and announcing any final decisions.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Lord Farnham

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Attorney-General how many hours of (a) his time and (b) his staff's time was involved in dealing with the application of Lord Farnham to be allowed to sit in the House of Lords; what was the total cost of the case to his Department; and what proportion of those costs was subsequently met by the applicant. [31112]

The Attorney-General: Officials in the Treasury Solicitor's Department have spent 156.3 hours to date dealing with Lord Farnham's petition for a writ of summons to the House of Lords. The cost to the Department of such time is £13,757.40, in addition to which the Department has disbursed £18,000.32 by way of expenses attributable to the case. The petitioner has met his own costs and has paid an agreed contribution of £2,643.75 in respect of the costs of a private hearing before me. My officials and I worked on the case as part of normal duties and the time is not recorded.

Thurrock Borough Council

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Attorney-General what action has been taken in respect of the video sent to him by the hon. Member for Billericay (Mrs. Gorman) relating to Thurrock council; and if he will make a statement. [30472]

The Attorney-General: I have written to the solicitors acting on behalf of the hon. Member for Billericay and to the chief executive of Thurrock borough council.

Treasury Counsel Fees

Mr. Byers: To ask the Attorney-General (1) how many barristers on the panel of Treasury counsel received more than £200,000 in fees from public funds for the latest year for which information is available; [25055]

(2) pursuant to his answer of 22 May, Official Report, column 451, how much each Treasury counsel retained for civil work received in fees from public funds in 1994–95; of the Treasury counsel based at the central criminal court, how many received between (i) £250,000 to £300,000, (ii) £300,000 to £350,000, (iii) £350,000 to £400,000, (iv) £400,000 to £500,000, (v) in excess of £500,000 from the Crown Prosecution Service for financial year 1994–95. [29928]

The Attorney-General: Pursuant to my answer of 22 May 1995, Official Report, column 451, and to my answer of 21 June 1995, Official Report, column 260, and further to my answer pursuant to that given on 21 June, the information given for fees paid to Treasury counsel based at the central criminal court requires correction. During the financial year 1 April 1994 to 31 March 1995, the number of counsel in respect of whom payments were issued by the Crown Prosecution Service are set out in the table by reference to the bands referred to in the hon. Member's question:

	Column 1 (inc. vat)	Column 2 (ex. vat)
(I) £250,000 to £300,000	3	0
(ii) £300,000 to £350,000	0	3
(iii) £350,000 to £400,000	3	0
(iv) £400,000 to £500,000	0	0
(v) in excess of £500,000	0	0

The figures given are shown in two columns. Column 1 relates to payments including value added tax. Column 2 shows the fees paid to counsel excluding value added tax.

On the basis of the information now available to me, the number of Treasury counsel based at the central criminal court in respect of whom payments in excess of £200,000, inclusive of value added tax, were issued by the Crown Prosecution Service over the same financial year is 10. The number in respect of whom payments in excess of £200,000, exclusive of value added tax, were issued by the Crown Prosecution Service over the same period is six.

The figures given, provided by the Crown Prosecution Service and taken from its computerised database, are calculated strictly by the date on which a particular payment is issued by the Crown Prosecution Service rather than the date on which the payment was received or processed by the individual counsel concerned.

HEALTH

Management Costs

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what factors led her to discontinue the management cost control strategy and the publishing of management cost accounts in the annual accounts. [28269]

Mr. Malone: Targets on management costs related to costs in regional health authorities, district health authorities and family practitioner committees. Introduction of the national health service reforms with increasing devolution of responsibilities to local level rendered those targets inappropriate.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many national health service trusts or authorities currently operate within the 1987–88 Trent management cost of 4.9 per cent. of turnover. [28252]

Mr. Malone: The measures used by Trent regional health authority in 1987–88 preceded the creation of national health service trusts through the National Health Service and Community Care Act 1990. On 7 June my right hon. Friend announced that she was asking all trusts to publish in their annual reports information about their management costs based on definitions used by the Audit Commission. Information will be published centrally and the first set of information will be available in September 1995. As a result of the devolution of functions through our reforms of the NHS, we are now able to simplify and streamline the headquarters organisations. Savings are expected to approach £200 million by 1997–98 including some £150 million from reducing and slimming down health authorities and some £50 million in the running costs of the Department of Health. These savings will be ploughed back into patient care.

Hepatitis C

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of blood products is now tested for hepatitis C; and what type of products are not. [30418]

Mr. Sackville: All blood collected from United Kingdom donors is tested for antibodies to hepatitis C virus on each individual donation.

NHS Trusts

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what number of senior management are currently employed by NHS trusts. [30433]

Mr. Malone: I refer the right hon. Member to the reply I gave her on 17 February, Official Report, columns 838–40, for the latest available information.

Ambulance Response Times

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer of 18 January, Official Report, column 480, how many times an ambulance has not arrived within the national charter standard time in total and by ambulance service in 1994–95 or part year thereof. [30432]

Mr. Sackville: This information is not yet available. Information on ambulance service performance will be published shortly as part of the national health service performance tables.

Tenovus

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the contribution of the Tenovus charity to cancer research; and if she will make a statement. [31073]

Mr. Malone: The Government welcome the valuable contribution made by medical research charities such as Tenovus. We work closely with cancer charities to identify gaps in funding and opportunities for collaborating in funding cancer research. The Government are committed to ensuring the best use of resources for health and medical research and seek, in collaboration with the cancer charities, to avoid unnecessary duplication in this field.

No specific assessment of this charity's contribution to cancer research has been made.

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proposals she has made to ensure that cancer research which would have been funded by the Tenovus charity will receive funding from alternative sources. [31075]

Mr. Malone: None. The Government place a high priority on health and medical research and will spend about £385 million in 1994–95 on research and research-related expenditure. The Government also support biomedical and clinical research through the Medical Research Council, which receives its funding from the office of my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster. Charities provide an independent source of research funding.

The Department of Health has established a national forum to advise Government and the NHS on research issues. The forum brings together the major funders of health and medical research, including the Association of Medical Research Charities, and provides an important means of establishing closer working links between research interests in the NHS and elsewhere. Within this framework, the Department is working with the Association of Medical Research Charities—of which Tenovus is a member—to promote better understanding of the charities' respective strategies and priorities.

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions she has had with the Secretary of State for National Heritage regarding the impact of the national lottery on the Tenovus charity. [31076]

Mr. Malone: None.

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what monitoring she has carried out of the income of medical research charities following the introduction of the national lottery, with particular reference to the Tenovus cancer research charity; and what has been the result to date. [31074]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: I have been asked to reply.

It is too early to assess the effect of the lottery in a number of areas, including charitable income. The Government are, however, committed to monitoring any changes in this respect. A programme of research is being drawn up which will include surveys of individual charitable giving and analysis of the income of charities covering the periods before, during and after the introduction of the national lottery.

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the number of finished consultant episodes for neurosurgery by region and district health authority for each of the last five years. [30815]

Mr. Sackville: This information will be placed in the Library.

Press Releases

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many press releases have been issued and in which Minister's name in each of the last two years. [30784]

Mr. Sackville: There were 609 press releases issued in 1994. At 22 June 1995, 329 had been issued. These can be broken down as follows:

Complementary Medicine

Mr. Cash: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is Her Majesty's Government's policy regarding European directives or regulations affecting provisions under United Kingdom common and statute law concerning complementary medicine. [30797]

Mr. Sackville: It is United Kingdom Government policy to implement all European directives and regulations in accordance with our treaty obligations. Any proposals for European legislation on complementary medicine will be examined as and when they emerge.

Chemotherapy Treatment

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer of 8 June, Official Report, column 308, (1) when she was first written to by hon. Members regarding local charges for chemotherapy treatment; what action she took; and for what reasons the inappropriate application of guidelines continued; [30801]

(2) what assessment she has made of the reasons for the failure of Wigan hospital to implement properly guidelines on charging patients for chemotherapy treatment. [30800]

Mr. Sackville: The oversight within an individual trust was addressed by the trust itself, and refunds made. We have no record of correspondence from hon. Members on this issue.

Springfield Clinic, Blakelaw

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the NHS executive was first notified of an appeal about the general practice vacancy in Springfield clinic, Blakelaw, formerly run by Dr. Ahmed; when a decision is expected; and who is providing general practitioner services in the interim. [30810]

Mr. Malone: The national health service executive was first notified of an appeal against the decision of Newcastle family health services authority concerning the former practice of Dr. Ahmed by letter dated 10 February 1995. It is not possible to provide an expected date of decision and, in the meantime, it is a matter for the family health services authority to make temporary arrangements for the provision of general medical services to the patients of the practice.

Publicity

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was her Department's publicity budget in each of the last 10 years; and what proportion has been spent on specific health promotion campaigns. [30814]

Mr. Sackville: Expenditure on publicity in each of the last 10 years is as follows:

	£ million
1985–86	4.513
1986–87	12.627
1987–88	12.381
1988–89	10.799
1989–90	17.248
1990–91	21.008
1991–92	24.471
1992–93	20.710
1993–94	19.147
[1]1994–95	18.177

[1] Estimated.

Estimated expenditure in 1994–95 included major campaigns on drug and solvent misuse, £4.4 million; organ donation, £1.6 million; blood donor recruitment, £1.1 million; AIDS helpline, £2 million; and "The Health of the Nation", £1.7 million.

Specific information on the proportion spent on health promotion campaigns could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Pulmonary Embolisms

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research and findings her Department carried out into pulmonary embolism prevention; and if she will make a statement. [31209]

Mr. Sackville: We supported a major conference on the management of venous thrombosis and pulmonary embolism at the Royal College of Surgeons in June 1994. Following that conference, a joint working group of the Royal College of Surgeons and the Royal College of Obstetricians and Gynaecologists was set up to produce guidelines for the profession. The working party is commissioning further analyses of existing data in order to produce evidence-based guidelines and to identify gaps in research.

Steroids

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research and findings her Department has carried out into a double-blind, randomised comparison of (a) high dose inhaled steroids, (b) low dose inhaled steroids and low dose theophylline and (c) low dose inhaled steroids alone as treatment regimes for asthma; and if she will make a statement. [31208]

Mr. Malone: None.

Aspirin

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research and findings her Department carried out into a randomised placebo-controlled trial of the effects of low dose aspirin on mortality and major morbidity in patients with hip fracture; and if she will make a statement. [31210]

Mr. Sackville: I understand that the clinical trial service unit at the Radcliffe infirmary, Oxford is organising the pulmonary embolism prevention trial, funded by the British Heart Foundation. The PEP trial aims to determine whether any beneficial effects of aspirin given to patients with hip fracture outweigh any risks. The trial is still in progress and the findings have not yet been published.

Cardiac Surgery

Ms Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will place in the Library a copy of the conclusions and recommendations of the working party of the Specialist Accreditation Committee of the Royal College of Surgeons considering supra-regional funding for paediatric cardiac surgery. [31523]

Mr. Sackville: The Department has received no such report.

Health Survey for England

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research her Department has carried out into a health survey for England; what were the findings of that research; and if she will make a statement. [31501]

Mr. Sackville: The health survey for England has been carried out since 1991. The findings of the 1991 to 1993 health surveys are contained in annual reports, copies of which are available in the Library. The 1994 report will be published in early 1996.

GP Lists

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will review the right of patients to challenge the reasons for which their names have been removed from a general practitioner's list. [31374]

Mr. Malone: No. Under their terms of service, general practitioners are not required to give reasons when removing a patient from their list. Equally, patients are not required to give reasons when they wish to change doctors.

St. Charles Youth Treatment Centre

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has for the future of the St. Charles youth treatment centre; and if she will make a statement. [32196]

Mr. Bowis: The St. Charles youth treatment centre at Brentwood, Essex has made an important and valued contribution to the treatment and care of some of the most disturbed and difficult young people with which the child care system has had to deal and has been influential in the lives of many young people.

I am, however, no longer satisfied that the centre can continue in the future to provide properly for the best interests of the young people accommodated there or for those of the staff or for the security of the local community. The centre was designed and built in the 1960s and the buildings no longer meet accepted standards. There have also been problems of management and control which have proved difficult to resolve. In consequence, the centre has been operating far below its nominal capacity and currently accommodates only six young people. I therefore intend to close the centre, subject to consultation with the staff and their representatives on the implications of the closure for them. No decision has yet been taken on the future use of the site.

When the centre was set up in 1971, there were no similar facilities to deal with the most difficult and disturbed young people. Since then, however, local authorities have developed their own secure accommodation and have become skilled and experienced in dealing with many young people needing secure care. The Department of Health already has in place a major building and refurbishment programme to strengthen still further the range and geographical spread of local authority secure accommodation. Working with local authorities, the Department of Health is funding a strategy in excess of £40 million to put in place high-quality facilities which are safe for the young people and for the public.

The other youth treatment centre at Glenthorne in Birmingham will continue. It is being expanded to an overall capacity of 40 secure places within its present building stock and planning permissions.

National Blood Service

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the Plymouth blood transfusion centre will retain blood processing activities after the reorganisation of the national blood service. [30502]

Mr. Sackville: This is a matter for the National Blood Authority which will announce its revised proposals in due course.

Art Therapy

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will introduce a strategy to co-ordinate work on art therapy and similar activities involving arts and health in primary care; and if she will make a statement. [31488]

Mr. Malone: I have no plans to introduce such a strategy.

GPs' Deprivation Payments

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list those areas in which general practitioner's practices have qualified for additional payments for deprivation as defined under the Jarman index in each of the last five years and the current year. [28085]

Mr. Malone [holding answer 12 June 1995]: General practitioners' deprivation payments were introduced in April 1990 based on 1981 census data. A list will be placed in the Library of electoral wards where general practitioners became eligible for these payments in respect of patients living in those electoral wards.

SCOTLAND

Scottish Natural Heritage

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many times since its inception the chairman of Scottish Natural Heritage has addressed (a) conservation bodies, (b) farmers, (c) landowners, other than farmers, (d) countryside sports bodies and (e) any other bodies. [30701]

Sir Hector Monro: The information is set out in the table. In addition, he has also delivered six addresses to joint landowners and countryside sports gatherings and one address when all five groups—a to e below—were represented.

Type of body	Number of addresses
(a) Conservation bodies	46
(b) Farmers (including foresters)	11
(c) Landowners, other than farmers	2
(d) Countryside sports bodies	1
(e) Any other bodies	48

In Vitro Fertilisation

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what plans he has to increase the number of IVF treatments in Scotland; and if he will make a statement; [31079]

(2) how many people in each health board area have received IVF treatment from (a) their own health board area and (b) other health board areas in each of the last five years; and what has been the cost to each health board. [31081]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: It is for individual health boards to decide on the level of infertility service to purchase. Information on the number of patients who have received infertility treatment and its cost to health boards is not available centrally.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland by how much Government spending has changed in 1994–95 as a result of the private finance initiative; what is the estimated effect in 1995–96; how many jobs are to be created by schemes approved to date under the initiative and how many have been lost as a consequence in the public sector; and what is the forecast of transfer of employment from public to private sector over the last five years because of the initiative. [30831]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 28 June 1995]: It is not possible for 1994–95 or 1995–96 to attribute to the private finance initiative changes in either actual or planned Government spending. Progress in using the PFI is only one of many factors to be taken into account in assessing the level of public sector capital spending in Scotland. Also, it is not possible on the information currently available to forecast the effect on employment of the PFI. There is, however, no evidence that any public sector jobs have been lost to date through the PFI. Many of the jobs involved in capital projects funded by the public sector at present are, of course, in the private sector. Where, however, the PFI funds projects which would not go ahead otherwise, additional jobs will be created.

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many schemes and to what value have been approved in 1994–95 under the private finance initiative; what are the estimates for the current financial year; how many schemes are currently being considered and at what value; for how long have they been considered and how many have been in the assessment process for over (a) six months and (b) 12 months; and what was the average length of time taken to assess schemes so far approved. [30830]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 28 June 1995]: Schemes to the value of £37.9 million were approved in 1994–95. Precise details for the current financial year are not yet available, but estimates suggest that projects with a value of more than £60 million will be approved. The Scottish Office document "Private Finance Partnership in Scotland" published in March 1995 identified potential projects with a total value of £2.68 billion. The Scottish Office does not have available centrally information on the length of the assessment process for individual projects which are the responsibility of a range of different public authorities.

Scottish Nuclear

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will ensure that a golden share to protect the identity of Scottish Nuclear is included in the articles of association of the United Kingdom nuclear holding company; and if he will make a statement. [31254]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 28 June 1995]: My right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade, in his statement of 9 May, Official Report, columns 563–78, made it clear that Scottish Nuclear's continued existence will be protected by special shares in the holding company and in Scottish Nuclear itself.

Nuclear Holding Company

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will take steps to ensure that the chief executive of the United Kingdom nuclear holding company will be based in Scotland; and if he will make a statement. [31255]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 28 June 1995]: My right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade announced on 9 May that the nuclear holding company would be registered, and its headquarters would be located, in Scotland. I would expect the chief executive of the company to be based at its headquarters.

Assisted Places Scheme

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much expenditure was granted in fee remission and incidental expenses on the assisted places scheme to pupils whose families had a residual income greater than £17,000 per annum in each of the past five years. [29794]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland which schools accepted pupils under the assisted places scheme from families with a residual income of over £17,000. [29800]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Schools with assisted place pupils in school session 1994–95 where the residual family income was greater than £17,000 are given.

Schools (Placing Requests)

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what guidance exists for local authorities on the acceptable reasons for refusing placing requests for schools. [29797]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Under section 28A(1) of the Education (Scotland) Act 1981, where the parent of a child makes a placing request it is the duty of an education authority to place the child in the school specified in the request, being a school under its management. The only exceptions are as set out in section 28A(3). Guidance on section 28A was included in circular number 1074, issued by the Scottish Education Department in November 1981.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list cases of which he is aware where the history of placing requests for a school formerly accommodated within the one regional council will now involve cross-boundary placement from one unitary authority to another. [29798]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information is not collected centrally.

Schools (Catchment Areas)

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has had on the catchment areas for schools. [29799]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: As with other aspects of the education service, representations are received from time to time on issues in relation to school catchment—or delineated—areas. However, while in certain cases the approval of the Secretary of State is required before a catchment area may be changed, catchment areas are primarily a matter for education authorities.

Higher Education

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the purpose of the Scottish Higher Education Funding Council's request to higher education institutions that their strategic overview should include contingency plans, approved by governing bodies, for action in the event of unforeseen and highly adverse financial circumstances. [30709]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for East Lothian (Mr. Home Robertson) on 28 June 1995, Official Report, column 732.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the total amount of funding for higher education in 1992–93; and what is the intended amount for 1997–98. [30710]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Information on expenditure for the years in question is given in the departmental report of March 1995 "Serving Scotland's Needs", Cm 2814, and is as follows:

	£ million
1992–93 Outturn

The figures for 1997–98 are provisional and subject to review in the annual public expenditure surveys.

Figures for 1992–93 and later years are not directly comparable because funding for teaching and research at the eight universities in Scotland previously funded by the Universities Funding Council was the responsibility until 31 March 1993 of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education, and because of changes in the balance between fees and grants for tuition.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many full-time equivalent teachers/lectures were employed in further education colleges, universities, primary and secondary schools, in permanent posts, in each year since 1990. [30711]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The available information is given in the table.

Number of teachers/lecturers (FTE) in Education Authority primary and secondary schools, further education colleges and higher education institutions

School Boards

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what training is provided for members of school boards in interviewing of candidates for senior teaching posts. [30712]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: It is for each education authority to determine what training should be provided for members of school boards in its area to assist them in carrying out their functions, including their duties in relation to interviewing candidates for senior teaching posts.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he will publish the results of his consultation paper on school boards circulated in April. [30713]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The consultation paper put forward changes which the Government would be disposed to make to the School Boards (Scotland) Act 1988 should a suitable legislative opportunity arise. Accordingly, if such an opportunity arises, the outcome of the consultation exercise will be reflected in the Bill presented to Parliament.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what guidance is given to school boards on the publishing of brochures aimed at attracting parents. [30714]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: None. There is no requirement on school boards to publish brochures although the legislation does require a school board to make a report to parents of pupils in attendance at the school at least once in every year in order to inform parents of the board's activities. More generally, education authorities are required to produce a school handbook for each school under their management. School handbooks must contain information about the school as set out in regulations and may contain additional information at local discretion.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many school boards have asked for wider powers. [30715]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Under section 15 of and schedule 3 to the School Boards (Scotland) Act 1988, a school board may request the delegation to it of its education authority's functions in relation to a school, except those functions listed in section 15(2) of the Act. However, such requests are made to the education authority and information on the number of schools which have requested wider powers in this way is not held centrally.

The Scottish Office Education Department recently consulted school boards and others on possible changes to the school boards legislation. The closing date for comments was 19 June. Over 350 responses were received, and are currently being analysed. A number of boards have made suggestions on wider powers.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, what advice is given to schools boards on promoting academic freedom. [30753]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: None.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make it his policy to change the name of chairman of a school board to convener. [30754]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: No. While the legislation requires every school board formally to appoint a chairman and vice-chairman, a number of boards already informally adopt different terminology, as they see fit.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many members of school boards in 1994 were returned in uncontested elections; and how many schools which formerly had a board no longer have one. [30755]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: In the 1993–94 biennial school board elections 3,291 parent members of school boards were returned in uncontested elections. Some 310 school boards in existence at the start of school session 1993–94 were disestablished as a result of insufficient parents coming forward for election. Of these, 21 had been re-established by 31 May 1994 as a result of parental request.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the cost of conducting school board elections in 1994. [30756]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Expenditure on conducting school board elections is a matter for the education authorities. Under the legislation, the last biennial round of elections was held in school session 1993–94. Information on the expenditure incurred by authorities in that round of elections or in subsequent by-elections is not held centrally.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has had on the composition of school boards. [30757]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Many of the 350 or so responses received on the recent consultation paper on school boards commented on composition.

Offshore Installations (Disposal)

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what sanctions are at his disposal to ensure compliance with environmental directives by any company wishing to decommission North sea oil platforms and rigs; [30716]

(2) if he will place in the Library a copy of the environmental audit that was conducted concerning the disposal of the Brent Spar installation and other redundant North sea oil platforms and rigs in the Atlantic ocean. [30717]

Sir Hector Monro: Abandonment of offshore installations from the United Kingdom continental shelf is regulated by my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade in accordance with the provisions of the Petroleum Act 1987. Each case requires a best practicable environmental option assessment to be drawn up, and the approved abandonment plan includes appropriate conditions to ensure that the impact on the environment is minimised.

The Brent Spar is the only installation to date for which disposal at sea has been authorised. This required the Scottish Office to issue a licence under the Food and Environment Protection Act 1985 and an authorisation under the Radioactive Substances Act 1993. These were granted only after I was satisfied that disposal in this way would not present a hazard to fisheries, the marine environment or health.

My right hon. Friend is arranging for a copy of the BPEO and the impact hypothesis, which form part of the approved abandonment plan for the Brent Spar, to be placed in the Library within the next week.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the unemployment rate for the travel-to-work areas for each area in Scotland that is capable of providing a facility for the decommissioning of North sea oil platforms and rigs. [30718]

Mr. Kynoch: Proposals to decommission North Sea oil platforms and rigs offshore would raise a number of environmental issues. Subject to resolution of these, such decommissioning would, inter alia, require access to deep water, flat land and an opportunity to dispose of various kinds of material. Scotland is likely to have a number of such sites, which might include existing fabrication yards, Unemployment rates in travel-to-work areas covering the main fabrication yards in Scotland range from 7 per cent. to approximately 11 per cent.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he intends to cap any Scottish local authorities this year. [32276]

Mr. Lang: No. All Scottish local authorities, with the exception of Strathclyde regional council, have set budgets for 1995–96 at or below the expenditure limits implied by the provisional capping principles which I announced on 29 November 1994, Official Report, columns 687–88.

In the case of Strathclyde, I have considered the representations which the regional council has made to me and also the strategy the council adopted in budgeting and setting its council tax for 1995–96. I have noted, in particular, that the council has taken action to reduce capital funded from current revenue expenditure in both 1994–95 and 1995–96 which has had a direct impact on the level of its 1995–96 council tax. Having considered very carefully all the circumstances, I have decided not to cap the council.

Overall, this is a very satisfactory outcome and again confirms the effectiveness of my capping powers in protecting local taxpayers from excessive spending by their councils.

Later this year, I shall be laying before the House a report in terms of section 24 of the Local Government Etc. (Scotland) Act 1994 specifying the amount for each of the new local authorities which will be used as the baseline for considering capping action in 1996–97. These amounts, which will effectively be notional 1995–96 budgets for the new councils, will be prepared in full consultation with COSLA and will reflect the actual level of planned expenditure by the existing local authorities in 1995–96.

It is also my intention to announce in the autumn provisional capping principles for 1996–97.

Work Experience Schemes

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what monitoring is undertaken of schoolchildren involved in work experience schemes at workplaces; and how the benefit or otherwise of each scheme is evaluated. [30719]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Preparation takes place before a placement so that pupils know what issues to explore and record. Guidance is available from the Scottish Office Education Department for employers, parents and pupils. During placements, school staff pay visits to help ensure that maximum benefit is derived. Placements are also monitored for health and safety and there must be suitable insurance cover.

Pupils are monitored during the placement to provide a record of what they have done. After each placement, there is full debriefing with teachers. Most placements, including the preparation and debriefing, satisfy the criteria for a pupil to gain the Scottish Vocational Education Council work experience module which provides a measure of the usefulness of the placement.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Pseud Oil-based Drill Muds

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what advice his Department gave to the Department of Trade and Industry concerning the use of pseudo oil-based drill muds by oil companies. [29937]

Mr. Jack: The Ministry has advised the Department of Trade and Industry that the use of drilling muds of all sorts can be permitted only if the hazards and risks to the marine environment have been properly assessed on a case-by-case basis.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the studies into the environmental effects of the use of pseudo oil-based drill muds which (a) have been carried out by his Department and (b) his Department has evaluated. [29936]

Mr. Jack: The Ministry has a continuing programme of laboratory tests and field surveys into the environmental effects of pseudo oil-based muds—POBMs—for use by the offshore industries. MAFF also evaluates laboratory test data on toxicity to marine life, potential for biodegradation and potential of bioaccumulation of POBM systems as part of the approval process for POBMs developed by the Paris Commission and operated on a non-statutory basis by the Department of Trade and Industry.

Financial Instrument for Fisheries Guidance

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list by each objective and by each other Community initiative, including Rechar and Interreg, the value of assistance received under the financial instrument for fisheries guidance both nationally and for each standard region of the United Kingdom for each year since 1989. [31358]

Mr. Jack: EC regulation No. 3699/93, which sets out the detailed rules for assistance under the financial instrument for fisheries guidance—FIFG—came into effect on 1 January 1994. No payments could therefore be made under FIFG before that date. Assistance granted under FIFG since then is as follows:

FIFG assistance by region[1]

	Objective 1	Non-objective 1	Total
Northern Ireland	1,375,955.00	0.00	1,375,955.00
Scotland[2]	444,308.00	1,361,247.00	1,805,555.00
England	0.00	2,216,324.00	2,216,324.00
Wales	0.00	0.00	0.00
Total UK	1,820,263.00	3,577,571.00	5,397,834.00

Note:

[1] Expenditure relates to 1993 decommissioning scheme.

[2] Excludes provisional awards for other FIFG grants.

No FIFG payments have been made in the UK to date under EC Community initiatives.

Charter Week

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what are the main events he is proposing for Charter Week; what is the total cost to public funds; and how many (a) civil servants and (b) other public officials will be playing a part. [29882]

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 20 June 1995]: My Department seeks to meet charter objectives throughout the year in a range of ways. In July, as part of Charter Week, staff from regional service centres will attend a number of county shows across England. The Department's helpline, which has already handled well over 50,000 telephone inquiries from the general public, recently celebrated its second anniversary. MAFF staff will also participate in "Have Your Say Day" sessions, which aim to give our customers and the general public an opportunity to hear and talk about the services we provide. Senior managers will be available to discuss any issues of concern that may be raised.

No additional costs or staff resources will be required.

I also hope to announce shortly details of the regional service centres' performance against the targets set out in the customer service standard "Commitment to Service".

Agriculture Council

Mr. Steen: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what measures were adopted by the Agriculture Council at its meeting on 19 to 22 June and what was the pattern of voting. [32193]

Mr. Waldegrave: The Council adopted the following measures:

1. Protection of farm animals during transport.
2. Support prices for agricultural products for 1995–96 and related measures.
3. Changes to the agri-monetary system.
4. Adjustment to set-aside arrangements so as to allow arable land taken out of production under forestry or environmental measures to count against the set-aside obligation of the farmer concerned.
5. Changes to the support for cotton.
6. Definitive allocation to Italy and Greece of the increases in milk quotas previously allocated on a temporary basis.
7. Rules for the operation of the knacker industry.
8. Approval of a national aid to French wine producers.

The legal basis of items 1 to 7 was article 43 of the treaty, which provides for adoption by qualified majority vote. Item 8 required unanimity under article 93.2 of the Treaty.

The member states voting against the various measures were:

1. Italy, Austria and Denmark.
3. The United Kingdom.
6. Netherlands, Denmark and Luxembourg.

Sweden subsequently registered a vote against the package covering items 1 to 7.

ENVIRONMENT

Construction Industry

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to issue his next consultation document on the Latham report. [31297]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: Two consultation documents have recently been issued on legislative proposals arising from recommendations in the Latham report. I have no present plans for any further consultation documents.

Pollution and Breast Cancer

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what research projects have been commissioned by his Department to investigate the connection between environmental pollutants and the incidence of breast cancer. [31058]

Mr. Atkins: No research projects to specifically investigate the possible connection between environmental pollutants and the incidence of breast cancer have been commissioned by the Department. However, on behalf of the Department, the Medical Research Council's institute for environment and health is carrying out a review of existing literature and scientific opinion on the evidence for changes in human reproductive health, including breast cancer, and effects on wildlife, and to examine the possible links between the production and release into the environment of manmade chemicals, and the observed effects. The institute's report will be published in due course.

Whatley Quarry

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will call in Amey Roadstones Corporation's application to expand Whatley quarry. [31059]

Sir Paul Beresford: This application is currently being considered by Somerset county council. The Whatley quarry article 14 direction is still in place and the Secretary of State will, as he has been requested by a number of representations, consider whether he should call in the revised application for his own determination in due course.

Office of Water Services

Mr. Hain: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment which consultants, individuals and companies, have been employed by Ofwat since 1993 or are currently employed; on what tasks; how much retainer has been or is paid on a regular basis; and how much they have been paid otherwise for tasks completed or tasks under way. [31364]

Sir Paul Beresford: This is a matter for the Director General of Water Services.

Mr. Hain: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the external directorships held and remuneration received by the water regulator. [31540]

Mr. Atkins: The Director General of Water Services holds no external directorships.

Buying Agency

Mr. Sykes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what change has been made to the financial target for the Buying Agency. [31652]

Sir Paul Beresford: The Treasury has today laid a minute setting the Buying Agency a target, from 1 July 1995, of 8 per cent. return on capital employed. This replaces the Buying Agency's previous target of a profit after interest in current cost terms of 1.5 per cent. of the total value of goods procured.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

Indonesia

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what consultations took place before his Department agreed to fund the police management training project in Indonesia; if he consulted (a) the Overseas Development Administration geographical department, (b) the overseas post, (c) the development division and (d) the overseas police adviser; when the project was submitted to his Department for approval; if the submission to his Department was considered by the aid policy department; if the aid policy department considered the question of human rights; what view the aid policy department took of the record of the Indonesian national police in relation to human rights abuses; and on what date ministerial approval was given to the project. [30760]

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 26 June 1995]: Appropriate advice, including that on the issue of human rights, was sought from all relevant quarters prior to the project's approval on 22 March 1990.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 13 June, Official Report columns 504-505, under which sub-division of the tropical forest management programme the local application of remote sensing techniques system was supplied to the Indonesian Ministry of Forestry; what was the value of the equipment supplied; how it was funded; and on what date his Department agreed to fund the project to supply the equipment. [30764]

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 26 June 1995]: The equipment was provided under sub-project 2, provincial forest management. It cost £30,000 and was financed from technical co-operation funds. Sub-project 2 was approved on 20 July 1993.

Mrs Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 13 June, Official Report, columns 504-505, under which sub-division of the tropical forest management programme the NASA satellite imagery equipment was supplied to the Indonesian Ministry of Forestry; what was the value of the equipment supplied; how it was funded; and on what date his Department agreed to fund the project to supply the equipment. [30765]

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 26 June 1995]: The NASA satellite imagery, which is digital data used for map making, was provided under sub-project 5. No equipment was bought. The cost of the data was $8,000, and was financed from technical co-operation funds. Sub-project 5 was approved on 1 February 1991.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 15 June, Official Report, column 631, and the ministerial letter of 31 May, in the case of steel bridging, phase 1 project in Indonesia, what was (a) the appraisal date for the Overseas Development Administration and (b) the submission date by the Department of Trade and Industry to the sub-committee on aid and trade; when the project was completed in July 1988; and if he will make a statement on (i) the relationship and (ii) the interval between these dates. [31157]

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 27 June 1995]: This project was appraised by the Overseas Development Administration in February 1983 and presented to the sub-committee on aid and trade in January 1983. There is nothing of significance in the relationship between these dates and the completion date of the project in July 1988.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to the letter from his Minister of 31 May, what considerations made it necessary to refer to the radio studio's rehabilitation project in Indonesia to the sub-committee on aid and trade on four occasions; and what assessment of the project has been made. [31153]

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 27 June 1995]: When this project was presented to the sub-committee on aid and trade in June 1986, it was combined with that for the Bandung television studios project. Detailed negotiations between the supply company and the Government of Indonesia representatives led to delays as well as changes in the equipment specification. SCAT was apprised of these developments in November 1987 and was also advised that consideration was being given to separating the two projects. Formal notification of separation was conveyed to SACT in July 1989 and approval was sought for the radio studios project only. Between then and October 1989 negotiations between the contracting parties were completed and SACT was notified of the final contract costs.

A project completion report was prepared in April 1992. It concluded that the outputs of the implementation phases of the project had largely been met.

EMPLOYMENT

Voluntary Organisations

Miss Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many voluntary sector organisations his Department has (a) paid grants to or (b) entered into contracts with in (i) 1993–94 and (ii) 1994–95; and what was the total value of these grants and contracts. [31312]

Miss Widdecombe: Information held centrally indicates that in 1993–94 the Department of Employment entered into contracts with 187 voluntary sector organisations. The total value of these contracts was £50,057,200. Figures for 1994–95 will not be available until later this year when I will write to the hon. Member with details.

Social Fund

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list by each objective and by each other Community initiative, including Rechar and Interreg, the value of assistance received under the European social fund both nationally and for each standard region of the United Kingdom for each year since 1989. [31360]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 29 June 1995]: European social fund allocations to the United Kingdom for the period 1989 to 1994 are given in the following table. Figures on individual Community initiatives by standard region are not readily available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. Included in the figures for 1994 are those community initiatives which have so far been approved by the Commission, with the exception of EMPLOYMENT and ADAPT for which no expenditure will be recorded for 1994.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Income Support

Mr. David Martin: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate the cost to public funds of increasing the £8,000 capital limit for income support and family credit purposes to (a) £15,000, (b) £20,000, (c) £25,000 and (d) £50,000. [27936]

Mr. Roger Evans: Information concerning people with capital above the upper capital limit is not sufficiently reliable to enable accurate estimates of the cost of increasing the limit to be provided.

It is not possible, even if an estimate were made in these premises, to give an answer with meaning because the question does not contain any alternative premise for the tariff income rule.

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 27 June, Official Report, column 586, on claims by way of arrears of supplementary benefit, what are the reasons the information is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. [31995]

Mr. Evans: The district of Wrexham and North Wales Coast constitutes the offices of Wrexham, Rhyll, Deeside and Colwyn bay. In June 1994, the office at Wrexham was part of the Mid-Wales and Maelor district. The offices at Rhyll, Deeside and Colwyn bay formed the totally separate district of North Wales Coast.

To obtain the information requested would involve the offices in recovering their giro records for June 1994; identifying the claimants and locating their clerical records; identifying those cases where the payment issued was supplementary benefit; and, as appropriate, identifying the sums involved.

Officials estimate that a minimum of 15 minutes would be required to carry out these tasks in respect of each of the 2,720 clerical giro payments issued by these offices in June 1994, at an overall cost of over £8,000.

Pensioners' Incomes

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate the average pensioner income on retirement in (a) 2010 and (b) 2020, relative to average earnings, broken down into the contributions from (i) the state retirement benefit, (ii) state earnings-related schemes, (iii) appropriate personal pension schemes and (iv) occupational pensions; and if he will indicate the assumptions made in these calculations. [30788]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The information is not available in the form requested.

Child Support Agency

Ms Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the expenditure of the Child Support Agency in each year since its inception on legal fees incurred in defending actions by non-resident parents. [31205]

Mr. Burt: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Islington, North (Mr. Corbyn) on 25 November 1994, Official Report, columns 889-90.

Benefit Offices (Play Areas)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what are the current plans and facilities in Doncaster and Mexborough district benefit offices in respect of providing play areas. [31094]

Mr. Roger Evans: At present, there are no play areas in any of these offices, although baby changing facilities are provided at each location.

A new benefit office for Doncaster is currently under construction. There is insufficient space within the planned Benefits Agency caller facility for inclusion of a separate play area at this stage. However, the Child Support Agency will be providing toys in its interview rooms at the new office.

At Mexborough, all caller inquiries are dealt with by BA staff and there are no dedicated CSA interviewing facilities. There are no plans to provide a play area in the BA facility due to insufficient space.

TRANSPORT

Channel Tunnel Rail Link

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what arrangements he is making for revised submissions in the event of changes to the alignment, tunnelling or stations currently proposed for the channel tunnel rail link. [31726]

Mr. Watts: The Government have no plans to change the route or stations of the channel tunnel rail link. If the House required any change, the procedures set down in Standing Orders would apply.

Rail Privatisation

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will set out the current timetable for privatising (a) Railtrack, (b) British Rail's infrastructure maintenance units, (c) British Rail's track renewal units, (d) Signalling Control UK, (e) Interlogic Control Engineering and (f) British Rail Telecoms. [31593]

Mr. Watts: Railtrack is to be privatised within the lifetime of this Parliament. BR's infrastructure maintenance units and track renewal units are expected to be sold by the end of the year. Signalling Control UK, Interlogic Engineering and British Rail Telecoms have recently been offered for sale to the private sector; BR aims to complete the sales as soon as possible.

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will set out the timetable for privatising each of the British Rail train operating units. [31594]

Mr. Watts: In December 1994, the franchising director invited interested parties to prequalify in respect of eight franchises; Great Western LTS Rail, South West Trains, Gatwick Express, Network South Central, Intercity East Coast, Midland Main Line and ScotRail. Invitations to tender in respect of Great Western, LTS Rail and South West Trains were issued in May. The franchising director aims to let the first franchises by the end of 1995. He aims to issue further invitations to tender later this year. The remaining franchises are being prepared in accordance with the franchising director's view of their readiness of sale.

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer on 21 April, Official Report, column 299, if he will set out the current timetable for privatising the British Rail civil engineering design offices in (a) Birmingham, (b) Croydon, (c) Glasgow, (d) Swindon and (e) York; and if the BR vendor unit expects to sell all the offices to the same bidder. [31641]

Mr. Watts: The BR board's negotiations with bidders for these offices are well advanced. The board hopes to complete most of them shortly; it does not envisage selling all the offices to the same bidder.

Motorways

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment his Department has made on the effectiveness of concrete crash barriers on motorways. [30491]

Mr. Watts: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend for Meriden (Mr. Mills) on 29 June, Official Report, column 745.

Design, Build, Finance and Operate Schemes

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the DBFO schemes in operation. [31836]

Mr. Watts: No DDFO schemes are in operation.

Europe-United Arab Emirates Flights

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many air flights per day take place between the United Arab Emirates and the United Kingdom, France and Germany respectively. [31532]

Mr. Norris [holding answer 29 June 1995]: On average, the total number of non-stop flights per day between the United Arab Emirates and the United Kingdom, France and Germany respectively is as follows:

United Kingdom/United Arab Emirates—15

France/United Arab Emirates—3

Germany/United Arab Emirates—5

HEALTH

Hepatitis C

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research has been conducted by her Department on Hepatitis C in the last 10 years; and at what cost. [30466]

Mr. Sackville: The Department of Health is funding two pieces of work at the public health laboratory service. One is a feasibility study to develop a programme of surveys to determine and monitor the prevalence of hepatitis C infection in England and Wales and the approximate cost is £78,000. The other is a project to investigate the economic detection of antibody to hepatitis C virus in pooled serum samples and the approximate cost is £48,000.

The main agency through which the Government support bio-medical and clinical research is the Medical Research Council which receives a grant in aid from the office of my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster.

The MRC has the following programme of research on hepatitis C:

Hepatitis C; protein crystallography; HSV and bunyavirus suppressor mutations.

Virological and immunological determinants of liver disease in haemophiliacs infected with hepatitis C virus.

Hepatitis C infection and blood exposure incidents: preliminary seroprevalence studies.

Molecular epidemiology of hepatitis C virus in intravenous drug users in West Suffolk.

Detection and quantitation of hepatitis C virus in vivo.

Cloning, sequence analysis and expression of divergent genotypes of hepatitis C virus.

Hepatitis C virus 5 untranslated region as a novel antiviral target.

Cell and molecular virology of hepatitis C virus/Dengue type 4 chimaeric particles.

Hepatitis C virus infection: the molecular basis of virus/host interaction.

Hepatitis C virus in saliva and salivary glands.

In consultation with the MRC, my Department will be considering the need for further research on hepatitis C.

Alcohol

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the safe limit recommended by her Department for men and women for alcohol use daily and weekly in units; and what plans she has to change these recommended limits. [31351]

Mr. Bowis: The current sensible drinking message is that drinking less than 21 units per week by men and 14 units per week by women is unlikely to damage health. The message is currently being reviewed, in the light of the latest scientific evidence, by the interdepartmental group on sensible drinking.

Glaucoma

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many glaucoma sufferers there are in Britain. [31402]

Mr. Sackville: The information is not available centrally.

Mr. Malone: Each of the 12 payments listed was to an individual health authority manager: 11 general managers and one senior manager.

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of the NHS budget was spent on (a) wages, (b) drugs, (c) equipment, (d) vehicles and (e) other items in each of the last 15 years. [28640]

Mr. Malone [holding answer 15 June 1995]: The available information on revenue expenditure is shown in the table.

Child and Adolescent Mental Health Services Handbook

Mr. Faber: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what has been the response to the recent publication of the handbook on child and adolescent mental health; and if she will make a statement. [32469]

Mr. Bowis: The handbook, copies of which are available in the Library, has been warmly welcomed by all those working in the field as providing a clear statement of the importance of child and adolescent mental health and the need for a variety of agencies to work together to provide a comprehensive and complementary range of services. It was issued in March as part of our programme to help in the development of mental health services for the young, under "The Health of the Nation" initiative, and it has proved to be such a success that we are already having to reprint it within weeks of its launch.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Arms Embargo

Mr. Byers: To ask the Attorney-General on what dates in 1990 meetings were held with representatives of Customs and Excise to discuss the prosecution of Chris Cowley and Peter Mitchell for allegedly breaking the arms embargo with Iraq and Iran; and on what date senior Treasury counsel provided advice on the question of bringing a prosecution against Mr. Cowley and Mr. Mitchell. [29261]

The Attorney-General [holding answer 19 June 1995]: I reply in relation to meetings and advice involving the Law Officers or their officials. Detailed information relating to the conduct of an individual criminal case is ordinarily confidential but has in this particular case already been substantially disclosed.

I understand that between April and November 1990 there were a number of conferences between representatives of Customs and Excise and senior Treasury counsel. One member of the legal secretariat to the Law Officers was present at such a meeting held on 25 April 1990. Another member attended two meetings in October 1990.

My predecessor and I met with the Solicitor to Customs and Excise and counsel on 8 November 1990. I was at that time Solicitor-General. My predecessor also met the chairman of the commissioners of HM Customs and Excise together with their solicitor on 9 November 1990.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Nitrate Sensitive Areas

Mr. Steen: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he plans to announce the arrangements for the continuation of the pilot nitrate sensitive areas. [32577]

Mr. Waldegrave: I am pleased to announce that, following our consultations with farmers, details of the scheme for the continuation of the 10 pilot NSAs, originally designated in 1990, will be available from Monday 3 July. The necessary statutory instrument setting out the measures and associated payment rates will shortly be laid before Parliament.

The pilot areas are being incorporated within the scheme for the 22 new NSAs launched under the Ministry's agri-environment programme last year, to form a unified scheme of 32 NSAs. Farmers in the areas will be invited to give five-year undertakings to change their farming practices to reduce nitrate leaching, based on the terms and conditions of that scheme.

The pilot NSA scheme clearly demonstrated that NSA measures are effective in reducing nitrate losses from agricultural land and I look forward to renewing our partnership with farmers in these 10 areas. The level of uptake in the first year of the 22 new NSAs was very encouraging and I am confident that the Ministry's NSA programme will make a major contribution towards ensuring the future viability of the key sources of public drinking water covered by these areas.

All farmers with land in the NSAs will automatically be sent an information pack about the scheme by their local Ministry regional service centre. Applications to join the scheme this year must be returned to regional service centres by 8 September 1995.

SCOTLAND

St. Andrew's College, Bearsden

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what powers he has to intervene if reductions in funding threaten the quality of standards he has imposed on courses at St. Andrew's college, Bearsden. [30492]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Secretary of State does not have any powers under the Further and Higher Education (Scotland) Act 1992 to require conditions to be attached to grants paid by the Scottish Higher Education Funding Council to individual institutions. It is for the council to decide how to allocate the resources available to it taking into account its assessment of quality of teaching, and other relevant evidence as to the needs of an individual institution and the higher education institution sector as a whole. Courses of initial teacher training are subject to the approval of my right hon. Friend and must comply with the guidelines issued by the Scottish Office Education Department.

Staff

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list for each Department in the Scottish Office, expressed as a number and a percentage, (a) civil servants who have left the service and their grade, (b) voluntary redundancies and their grade, (c) compulsory redundancies and their grade and (d) those given early retirement and their grade for (i) 1991, (ii) 1992, (iii) 1993, (iv) 1994 and (v) 1995. [31290]

Mr. Lang: This information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Forestry Commission

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland on what dates and by whom, sample valuations have been carried out on the Forestry Commission estate, in the last five years. [30817]

Sir Hector Monro [holding answer 28 June 1995]: The Forestry Commission carried out a full open market valuation of its forest estate in 1993. Full details are given in the commission's annual report of the year ended 31 March 1993, a copy of which is in the Library.

Training

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many 16 and 17-year-olds were seeking training places in each division of every regional council in Scotland on 1 June; and what was the number of vacancies. [27576]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 21 June 1995]: The number of young people under 18 years of age seeking training places and the number of training vacancies on 31 May are shown in the following table. Information is not available to split these figures into smaller areas.

The number of vacant places on a given day is only a snapshot and does not reflect the total supply of places which would be available over the specified time scale for making offers to young people.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Prisoners (Testing)

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners have undergone penile plesythmograph tests; how many of these prisoners have not been convicted of sex offences; and in how many cases home leave or release dates have been altered as a result of the findings of these tests. [30063]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange a reply to be given.

Letter from Brian Landers to Mr. A. J. Beith, dated 30 June 1995:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about how many prisoners have undergone Penile Plesythmograph (PPG) testing; how many of these prisoners have not been convicted of sexual offences; and in how many cases home leave or release dates have been altered or changed as a result of the findings of these tests.

During the year ending 31 March 1995, 103 prisoners took the PPG test, of whom 10 prisoners had not been convicted of a sexual offence, although sexual offending had been identified as an area of concern.

In no cases have any prisoners had their home leave entitlements or release dates altered as a result of the findings of the PPG test.

Young Offenders

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many young offenders convicted in the last year were (a) illiterate, (b) released from care, (c) suffering from drug or any other addiction or (d) suffering from mental illness. [30988]

Mr. Maclean: The information is not collected centrally on the number of offenders who are illiterate, suffering from drug or any other addiction or who have been released from care.

Court information collected centrally on mentally disordered offenders is limited to those who have committed a more serious offence and as such have been convicted under sections 37 and 41 of the Mental Health Act 1983.

In 1993, one male aged between 14 and 18 was convicted of the offence of arson and sent to hospital under section 37(1) of the Mental Health Act 1983. A further male offender within the same age group was found guilty of robbery and sentenced to a hospital order with restriction under sections 37 and 41 of the Mental Health Act 1983.

Prisoners (Home Leave)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prison inmates serving a sentence of over 10 years' imprisonment have been granted home leave during the last 12 months. [31100]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Brian Landers to Mr. Tom Cox, dated 30 June 1995:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about how many prison inmates serving a sentence of over ten years imprisonment have been granted home leave during the last twelve months.

Home leave, as such, has not occurred since 24 April 1995 when the systems of temporary absence were revised. In the 12 months to 24 April 1995 some 680 prisoners serving sentences of over ten years (including life) were granted home leave.

Doncaster Prison

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many times the contractor at Doncaster prison has failed to deliver the contracted service; how many times a financial remedy has been imposed against the contract; and if he will make a statement. [31092]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Brian Landers to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 30 June 1995:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about Doncaster prison.

Six default notices have been issued by the Prison Service Controller since the prison opened on 20 June 1994. Premier Prison Services have rectified the faults immediately and at their own expense. In the circumstances, financial penalties have not been considered appropriate.

Prison Officers (Shopping Visits)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many private shopping visits were made by prison officers on behalf of prison inmates in England and Wales during the week of 12 June. [31101]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Brian Landers to Mr. Tom Cox, dated 30 June 1995:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General, to reply to your recent Question about shopping trips by prison officers for prison inmates.

No private shopping trips by prison officers were made during the week of 12 June. This is in line with the Home Secretary's announcement last December that the practice of prison officers going shopping at the behest of individual prisoners had stopped.

Immigration (Overstayers)

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the number and percentage of visitors in 1992 and 1993 who overstayed without authorisation having had their appeals upheld. [31979]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: The information requested is not available.

Domestic Violence

Mr. Boateng: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to collate information centrally about the number of police stations that have or are planning special domestic violence units. [31324]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 29 June 1995]: We recognise the important work carried out by specialist domestic violence units. The extent of provision in this area will be considered by the official and ministerial groups on domestic violence.

Mr. Boateng: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to collate information centrally about the number of crimes of domestic violence (a) alleged, (b) investigated by the police, (c) prosecuted, (d) resulting in conviction and (e) resulting in a custodial sentence each year, and about the relationships between offender and victim in each of these categories. [31325]

Mr. Boateng: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the ministerial group on domestic violence will next meet; and if it has already decided when to publish the inter-agency circular on domestic violence. [31326]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 29 June 1995]: Plans are in hand to hold the next meeting of the ministerial group on domestic violence at the earliest possible opportunity. The launch date of the inter-agency circular on domestic violence has not been finalised.

Mr. Boateng: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he intends to publish the inter-agency circular on domestic violence; and if he will list the individuals and organisations to which it will be sent. [31327]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 29 June 1995]: The proposed inter-agency circular is in the final stages of preparation and will be issued as soon as possible. Although a definitive list of the individuals and organisations to which it will be sent remains to be finalised, it will include the groups referred to in a reply to a question I gave to the hon. Member on 20 January, Official Report, column 696.

Mr. Boateng: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many officials, and of what grade, his Department has employed to deal with the problem of domestic violence in each of the last 10 years. [31328]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 29 June 1995]: Responsibility for work on domestic violence cuts across a number of areas and grades within the Home Office. Since 1993 the work has been co-ordinated by a unit led by a grade 7 in the criminal policy division of the Home Office.

EDUCATION

Child Labour

Mrs. Clywd: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if she will detail the powers of entry available to local education authority child employment officers; and what plans she has to strengthen and extend such powers. [31707]

Mr. Robin Squire: Section 28(1) of the Children and Young Persons Act 1933 provides for a local authority to apply to a justice of the peace for an order to give child employment officers powers of entry. This legislation is the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health. I understand that she has no plans to strengthen or extend this power.

Mrs. Clywd: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if she intends to make funds available to local education authorities in England and Wales specifically to carry out their statutory duty to protect school age children at work. [31708]

Mr. Squire: Central Government set the overall framework for the funding of local authority services nationally. It is for each local education authority to determine its own priorities for expenditure. Funding for Wales is a matter for the Welsh Office.

Mrs. Clywd: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what assessment she has made of the work of the child employment departments in Birmingham and North Tyneside in enforcing legislation designed to protect school age children. [31712]

Mr. Forth: None.

Mrs. Clywd: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if she will instruct all local education authorities to adopt the system of enforcing legislation designed to protect school age children at work in use in Birmingham and North Tyneside. [31709]

Mr. Squire: It is for individual local education authorities to consider how best to fulfil their statutory duties in this area in the light of local circumstances.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Northern Ireland Assembly

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will produce costings for the Northern Ireland Assembly and associated constitutional structures as proposed in the framework document. [31000]

Mr. Ancram: It is not possible at this stage to provide costings for a future Northern Ireland Assembly and associated constitutional structures as envisaged in the framework document. Estimates of such costs will only be possible only after the details of the arrangements have been negotiated and agreed with the relevant Northern Ireland parties and the British and Irish Governments.

Further Education

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what proposals he has for the safeguarding of adult education and the education of those with special needs after education colleges are incorporated; [31428]

(2) with whom incorporated further education colleges will be required to discuss their plans for educational activities. [31429]

Mr. Ancram: I am aware of the concerns expressed on these issues and I can assure the hon. Member that, if we proceed with the proposals on incorporation, we will consider very carefully with the further education sector the impact on such areas and the need for adequate consultative arrangements.

EU Funding

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps he is taking to ensure that the allocation of further European Union funds in Northern Ireland reflects the level of deprivation and grass roots needs and involvement. [31431]

Sir John Wheeler: Regarding the special support programme for peace and reconciliation, the guidelines for the initiative state that all communities should benefit while focusing on the areas and sections of the population suffering most acute deprivation. This is reflected in the programme recently submitted to the European Commission. To ensure that grass roots needs are reflected, the Government have carried out an extensive round of consultation with interested bodies and individuals, which has been invaluable in drafting the programme. Grass roots interests will continue to be involved both through continued consultation during implementation and the mechanisms used to deliver the programme. In implementing the single programme document and Community initiatives programmes agreed for Northern Ireland over the period 1994 to 1999, due consideration is given to addressing deprivation and social need on the basis of specific criteria laid down and approved by the European Commission within the SPD and other programme documents.

Sunday Observance Act (Ireland) 1695

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps he will take to repeal all of the provisions of the Act for the Better Observation of the Lord's Day, commonly called Sunday, AD 1695. [31288]

Mr. Moss [holding answer 29 June 1995]: The Government have no plans at present to repeal all the provisions of the Sunday Observance Act (Ireland) 1695. Ministers are at present considering the responses received to consultation papers published earlier this year on Sunday racing, betting and sport and Sunday trading. If it is decided to relax the current legislative restrictions on these matters, some action to amend, repeal in part or disapply the 1695 Act may be necessary.

Development Expenditure

Dr. Hendron: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what is the total expenditure of (a) the Local Enterprise Development Unit and (b) Industrial Development Board in each of the parliamentary constituencies of Northern Ireland for each of the last 10 years; [29972]

(2) what is the total number of full-time jobs, both from inward investment and expansion of existing companies, created in each constituency for each of the last 10 years as a result of this expenditure. [29974]

Mr. Ancram: Information on expenditure and job creations is not recorded in a manner which readily lends itself to analysis by parliamentary constituency. However, an exercise is being undertaken to produce as much as possible of the information in the form requested. My noble Friend hopes to write to the hon. Member about the matter soon. Information on job promotions by district council area is available from IDB and the results of the last 10 years are set out in the table.

Driving Offences

Ms Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many of the road traffic offences recorded in Northern Ireland since 1990 were committed by drivers who had been qualified to drive for less than one year. [31046]

Sir John Wheeler: The information requested is not available.

Confidential Telephone Line

Ms Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many calls have been received by the RUC on the confidential telephone number every year since 1985. [31047]

Sir John Wheeler: The information is as follows:

Year	Number of calls
1985	1,406
1986	2,300
1987	1,953
1988	2,948
1989	2,321
1990	2,841
1991	3,819
1992	22,062
1993	24,442
1994	19,189
1995[1]	3,783

[1] To 31 May.

Sexual Offences

Ms Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) sexual offences and (b) offences against the person have been reported in Northern Ireland since 1985. [31044]

Sir John Wheeler: The information requested is as follows:

	Sexual offences	Offences against the person
1985	653	3,458
1986	834	4,205
1987	817	4,198
1988	779	3,469

1991	877	3,995

Nursery Education

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement about his proposals for nursery education in Northern Ireland. [31430]

Mr. Ancram: In 1994, the Government published a comprehensive policy statement on early years provision in Northern Ireland, including their objectives for nursery education.

As the Prime Minister reiterated recently, the Government are committed to a major expansion of pre-school provision throughout the United Kingdom. Proposals to achieve this in Northern Ireland will be announced shortly.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

International Court of Justice

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs who is the latest British nominee to the International Court of Justice. [31649]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Professor Rosalyn Higgins has been formally nominated as a candidate for election to the International Court of Justice by the national groups at the Permanent Court of Arbitration of 15 countries, including the British. There are no other candidates. The Government fully support Professor Higgins. The vote will take place on 12 July.

Hong Kong

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions took place during the recent meeting between the British Government and representatives of the Government of China on the future of the death penalty in Hong Kong, after July 1997; and if he will make a statement. [31369]

Mr. Goodlad: The death penalty was abolished in Hong Kong by the Crimes (Amendment) Ordinance in April 1993. Under the Sino-British Joint Declaration, the laws previously in force in Hong Kong shall be maintained, save for any that contravene the Basic Law and subject to any amendment by the Hong Kong special administrative region legislature. Reintroduction of the death penalty after 1997 would, therefore, be a matter for the HKSAR rather than the Chinese Central People's Government.

Nigeria

Mr. Keith Hill: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 21 June, Official Report, column 302, if he will exceptionally disclose if lethal military equipment of any type has been supplied to Nigeria for peacekeeping since December 1993. [31343]

Mr. David Davis: I have nothing further to add to the answer I gave to the hon. Member on 21 June, Official Report, column 302.

WALES

European Regional Development Fund

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish the final outturn in Wales of (a) objective 1 areas, (b) objective 3 areas, (c) objective 4 areas and (d) objective 5b areas; and if he will also indicate the underspend on each programme. [29989]

Mr. David Hunt: There are no objective 1 areas in Wales. For objectives 3 and 4, separate information for Wales is not available before 1993. In 1993, the final amount claimed from the Commission for Wales was £21.56 million. Underspend information is not disaggregated regionally, and is not yet available for 1993. For objective 5b, the total amount available under the 1992–93 Dyfed Gwynedd Powys programme—some £26 million—was allocated to projects by the end of 1993; since projects are not required to be physically and financially complete until 31 December 1995, it is not yet possible to indicate any underspend under the programme.

Sheep Scab

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the recorded levels of sheep scab in each of the last five years. [31243]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Glanford and Scunthorpe (Mr. Morley) on 25 January 1995, Official Report, column 269.

Objective 5b Monitoring Committee

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales for what reasons the Countryside Council for Wales is not represented on the objective 5b programme monitoring committee for Wales; and what the EU guideline is on this subject. [30266]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Detailed provisions for the administration of the rural Wales objective 5b programme are for the implementing authority, in this case the Welsh Office. Although the Countryside Council for Wales is not directly represented on the monitoring committee, a member of the council—Mr. Tom Jones—sits on the committee, and the council is represented on the technical group, which has responsibility for considering individual applications for grant assistance. In addition, the council was closely involved with the preparation of the single programming document for rural Wales. These arrangements comply with the terms of the European legislation, which require that the competent environmental authorities are associated with the preparation and implementation of the single programming document.

NHS Staff

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales pursuant to note 4 of his answer to the hon. Member for Caerphilly (Mr. Davies) of 7 June, Official Report, column 254, whether the figure of 193 given as the reduction in the number of administrative and managerial staff below the peak level included clerical staff. [31984]

Mr. David Hunt: The reduction of 193 between September 1993 and March 1995 included all staff on administrative and clerical pay scales.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales pursuant to note 4 of his answer to the hon. Member for Caerphilly (Mr. Davies) of 7 June, Official Report, column 254, (1) what was the peak level of administrative and managerial staff in the health service in Wales; and whether the figures referred to in note 4 for 1994–95 will be comparable to those figures given in column 1 of his answer to the hon. Member for Caerphilly of 13 December 1994, Official Report, columns 605-606; [31983]

(2) on what date he expects the publication of the figures for the numbers of administrative and managerial staff in the health service in Wales in 1994–95. [31982]

Mr. Hunt: The latest available information on the whole-time equivalent number of administrative and clerical staff in the NHS in Wales was published in a Welsh Office statistical release, "NHS Wales: quarterly Statistics", issued on 14 June 1995. Figures for March 1994—when the number of these staff reached their peak—are also shown in the release. Copies were sent to all Members representing constituencies in Wales and were placed in the Library of the House. The figures quoted in the release are comparable with the numbers given to the hon. Member for Caerphilly on 13 December.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Caerphilly of 7 June, Official Report, column 254, what were the total costs of (a) managers, (b) administrators and (c) medical staff in the health service in Wales in 1994–95; and what were the corresponding numbers of staff in each category. [31981]

Mr. Hunt: Information on the costs of staff in 1994–95 is not yet available. Data on medical and dental staff are collected on an annual basis—at 30 September. The latest complete information is given in the following table.

	Staff in post at 30 September 1994
Administrative and clerical[1]	9,905
Medical and front line support:
Directly employed NHS staff[2]	34,571
FHSA contractual staff[3]	3,087

Notes:

[1] Whole-time equivalents. Includes all administrative, clerical and managerial staff employed by health authorities, NHS trusts, family health services authorities and the Welsh Health Common Services Authority.

[2] Whole-time equivalents. Includes:
—medical and dental staff, working in the hospital and community health service, excluding hospital practitioners and clinical assistants —nurses and midwives, excluding pre-registration learners
—professional and technical staff
Since 1991, student and pupil nurses have been classified as students and are no longer included in NHS staff figures.

[3] Numbers. Includes GPs, principal and assistant dentists, ophthalmic medical practitioners and ophthalmic opticians. Staff directly employed by contractual staff—for example, practice nurses—are not included since complete information is not collected centrally.

South Glamorgan Health Services

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultations he has with the chairman of the South Glamorgan health authority concerning the appointment of a panel of independent experts to examine the difference of opinion between the authority and the Cardiff community health council in relation to accident and emergency department and trauma unit relocation from Cardiff royal infirmary to the University hospital of Wales; and if he will make a statement. [31988]

Mr. David Hunt: None. Officials were informed of the health authority's proposals to commission an independent review and it is clearly understood that the authority will decide on the review panel's membership and remit.

Early Retirement

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 18 May, Official Report, column 372, how many members of staff have now accepted voluntary redundancy terms; how many have actually left; and how many expected to leave under such terms in the rest of the present financial year. [31991]

Mr. David Hunt: Sixty-one staff have accepted voluntary redundancy terms, 52 have left. No firm estimate has been made for the remainder of the present financial year.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what were the total figures for the numbers of staff employed in his Department for the latest convenient month; and if he will list the figure for the same month in each of (a) 1992, (b) 1993 and (c) 1994 excluding any effects of changes in departmental responsibility. [31985]

Mr. David Hunt: The full-time equivalent number of staff employed by the Welsh Office in June 1995 was 2,450. The nearest equivalent figures for previous years, adjusted to relate to current departmental responsibilities were:

1992: 2,535

1993: 2,612

1994: 2,609

Note:

Figures prior to 1995 have been adjusted to reflect the current method of counting part-time workers hours as a fraction of the working week.

Political Advisers

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to appoint a political adviser. [31989]

Mr. David Hunt: Michael McManus is still my special adviser.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales on what date he estimates the final outturn figures for his departmental expenditure for the year 1994–95 to be published; and what is his current estimate of management running cost line final outturn figures for 1994–95 for (a) training and enterprise councils, (b) the office of Her Majesty's inspectorate of schools in Wales, (c) Cadw and (d) the Welsh Office in total. [31986]

Mr. David Hunt: The Welsh Office appropriation accounts for 1994–95, including details of administration costs, are due to be published by the National Audit Office in October. Provisional running cost outturn figures for 1994–95 are as follows:

	£ million
TEC management fees	9.7
Cadw	4.9
Rest of Welsh Office	63.1
Total Welsh Office running costs	77.7

The provisional running cost outturn for the office of Her Majesty's chief inspector of schools in Wales, which does not form part of the Welsh Office, is £3.2 million.

Government Policies

Mr Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what proposals he has to amend current policy on (a) hospital closures, (b) bureaucracy in the health service, (c) public expenditure controls and (d) departments' staffing levels; and what other plans he has to review his predecessor's policies. [31990]

Mr. David Hunt: The Government's policies are clear and will continue.

Countryside Council for Wales

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many representations he has received from (a) environmental organisations and (b) local authorities supporting his predecessor's announcement of 5 May concerning the future role, responsibilities and staffing of the Countryside Council for Wales. [31767]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The Council of Welsh Districts which was consulted on the implications for its members broadly welcomed it, but with reservations on the question of resources.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Utilities (Disconnections)

Mr. Bayley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many households had their (a) electricity, (b) gas or (c) telephone disconnected as a result of non-payment of bills in (i) York, (ii) North Yorkshire, (iii) Yorkshire and Humberside and (iv) England in each since 1979. [31587]

Mr. Eggar: This is a matter for the independent regulators and the companies concerned.

International Atomic Energy Agency

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what considerations underpin the proposed reduction in staff in man years dedicated to United Kingdom representation at, and work with, the International Atomic Energy Agency on the implementation of nuclear safeguards, as indicated at paragraph 43 of part 2 of his departmental MINIS 95 report on trade policy and export promotion, subsection on export control and non-proliferation—XNP. [31121]

Mr. Ian Taylor: There are no plans to reduce staff effort in this area. The man years of staff effort shown for 1994–95 were incorrectly quoted as 3.7 plan and 3.5 outturn. The correct figure for both plan and outturn should have been 3.

Utilities (Consultants)

Mr. Hain: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the consultants both individuals and companies, employed by the Office of Electricity Regulation, the Office of Gas Supply and the Office of Telecommunications, since 1993 or currently employed; on what tasks they are or were employed; how much of a retainer has been or is being paid on a regular basis; and how much these consultants have been paid otherwise for tasks completed or tasks under way. [31363]

Mr. Eggar: This is a matter for the regulators concerned.

Small Businesses

Mr. Steen: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many criminal offences in relation to small businesses have been created in the last three years by statutory instrument in the United Kingdom pursuant to EEC directives. [30991]

Mr. Jonathan Evans [holding answer 28 June 1995]: I regret that I am unable to answer this particular question, since the resources required to do so would incur a disproportionate cost. However, I will write to my hon. Friend on this issue shortly.

European Regional Development Fund

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list by each objective and by each other community initiative, including Rechar and Interreg, the value of assistance received under the European regional development fund both nationally and for each standard region of the United Kingdom for each year since 1989. [31359]

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 29 June 1995]: European regional development fund allocations to the United Kingdom for the period 1989 to 1994 are given in the table. Figures on individual community initiatives by standard region are not readily available and could be produced only at disproportionate cost. Only those community initiatives that have been adopted by the European Commission so far have been included in the figures for 1994.

Konver II Programme

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the progress towards establishing Konver II. [31110]

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 29 June 1995]: Further to the answer I gave the hon. Member on 20 March 1995, Official Report, columns 796–97, I understand that most member states' discussions of their programmes with the European Commission are still continuing. I hope that the British programme will be settled in September. It will then be possible to consider applications.

DEFENCE

Nuclear Weapons Transportation

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library (a) the scenario used, (b) the emergency plan evaluated and (c) a copy of the unclassified version of the departmental report on the effectiveness of the medium-level nuclear weapon road convoy vehicle accident exercise held in Northampton in June 1994. [31070]

Mr. Soames: The exercise held in Northamptonshire on 29 June 1994 postulated an accident during the refuelling of a truck cargo heavy duty Mk2. It evaluated the generic contingency arrangements which would apply to any accident in the United Kingdom involving the transportation of nuclear weapons; these arrangements are described in the document "Local Authority and Emergency Service Information on Nuclear Weapon Transportation Contingency Plans", a copy of which is in the Library of the House. The departmental report on the exercise is a classified document.

Exercise Short Sermon

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library a copy of the unclassified version of his departmental report evaluating the effectiveness of the Short Sermon nuclear reactor exercise held in Portsmouth in 1994. [31064]

Mr. Soames: The departmental report on Exercise Short Sermon 1994 is a classified document.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library a copy of the scenarios used for the Short Sermon nuclear reactor emergency exercise held in Portsmouth in 1994; and if he will make a statement on the outcome of the exercise. [31065]

Mr. Soames: The full scenario for Exercise Short Sermon 1994 is contained in a classified document, but it postulated a highly unlikely series of events precipitated by a significant external impact on the casing of a nuclear submarine and resulting in serious damage to the submarine reactor. It was part of a routine programme of exercises held each year to test the effectiveness of the MOD's nuclear accident response organisation, and it confirmed that our arrangements are satisfactory.

WE177 Nuclear Warheads

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence at what date the number of WE177 nuclear warheads reached the level deemed necessary for full operational deployment; and if this figure remained constant until the announced reductions in 1990. [31071]

Mr. Soames: Our deployment plans for WE177 were complete by the mid-1970s. I am not prepared to add anything to our previous statements, including those in the "Statement on the Defence Estimates 1995", about subsequent changes.

Sellafield

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what details of the Operation Overture committee established to look into the 1957 Windscale fire have been placed in the Public Record Office; and if he will make a statement on the relevance of the findings of Operation Overture for the current safety of facilities used by his Department at Sellafield. [31067]

Mr. Soames: We have been unable to find any record of a committee of that name. The safety of facilities at Sellafield is a matter for the Department of Trade and Industry and the operators of the Sellafield site.

Nuclear Safety

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how often (a) the Nuclear Powered Warships Safety Committee and (b) the Nuclear Weapon Safety Committee met in each year since 1992; if he will list for each committee (i) the specific subject areas covered and (ii) any reports, guidelines or recommendations provided by these committees; and if he will place unclassified versions of such documents in the Library. [31063]

Mr. Soames: The Nuclear Powered Warships Safety Committee and Nuclear Weapon Safety Committee each met three times in the years 1992, 1993 and 1994, and have so far met once in 1995. Sub-groups of both committees are also convened occasionally to discuss technical issues which do not require the attention of the full membership. The subjects addressed by these committees are invariably sensitive and it is not possible to release summaries of committee business or to prepare unclassified versions of paper.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish a list of all reports, guidelines and recommendations provided by his Department's nuclear weapons safety adviser since 1979. [31061]

Mr. Soames: The work of the nuclear weapons safety adviser is invariably highly classified and it would be both impractical and inappropriate to publish such a list.

Former Service Men (Recall)

Ms Rachel Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the continuing liability of former service men for recall in respect of (a) early retirement and (b) redundancy. [30970]

Mr. Soames: The normal rules for reserve and recall liability apply equally to those service personnel who leave at the end of their commission or engagement, and those who take premature voluntary release. These rules were also applied to those made redundant, with the following exceptions: male and female soldiers with between 12 and 22 years' service received immediate pensions and therefore became Army pensioners with a recall liability until age 60; male soldiers with less than 12 years' service were discharged into the long-term reserve with a recall liability until aged 45; female soldiers who enlisted after 1 January 1987 were discharged without reserve liability; and other ranks of the Royal Marines on nine-year engagements will serve the balance of their engagements in the Royal Fleet Reserve in addition to their normal three-year liability.

Bosnia

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what information he has on the shelling by Bosnian Government forces of a United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees convoy at Rajlovac; what protection is being provided for such convoys in the area; what representations have been made to President Izetbegovic; and if he will make a statement. [31683]

Mr. Soames: On 21 June 1995, a UNHCR convoy came under shell fire while unloading supplies at Rajlovac, a Bosnian Serb suburb of Sarajevo. Bosnian Government forces are believed to have been responsible for the attack, although this has not been confirmed. The protection of convoys is a matter for the United Nations protection force and UNHCR commanders on the ground, and in this instance we understand that an assurance of safe passage had been secured from the Bosnian Serbs and the Bosnian Government. UN officials are believed to have made representations to the Bosnian Government following the incident.

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what information he has on the situation in respect of UNPROFOR's Canadian troops stationed at Visoko in Bosnia; and if he will make a statement. [31684]

Mr. Soames: We understand that Canadian troops at Visoko have experienced restrictions on their freedom of movement since 15 June when Bosnian Government forces launched a number of attacks on Bosnian Serb positions around Sarajevo.

Merchant Ships

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will specify the procedures used by his Department to charter merchant ships for operational duties. [31766]

Mr. Soames: My Department's operational movements staff provide a statement of requirement to the defence freight market representative on the Baltic exchange. From there the bid is disseminated to brokers both on and off the exchange. In parallel, the statement of requirement is passed to Crown agents contracted to MOD to provide ship suitability assessments. Once the offers have been received and assessed, my Department's movements staff select the most cost-effective and suitable vessel for the task. Ships' ownership, flag officers and crew are taken into consideration when sensitive equipments are to be carried.

Dr. Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what difficulties his Department has experienced in chartering merchant vessels to transport troops to Bosnia; [31774]

(2) how many merchant ships his Department has chartered to date to transport the additional British troops deployed to Bosnia; if he will list the name of each vessel together with the country of registration; and if he will make a statement; [31764]

(3) if his Department has chartered merchant ships to transport British forces to Bosnia through the Baltic exchange; [31765]

(4) what assessment he has made of the total number of merchant ships required to transport the additional British troops and equipment to Bosnia. [31769]

Mr. Soames: No difficulties have been experienced in chartering merchant vessels to transport British equipment to Bosnia—no ships have been chartered solely to carry troops. The one vessel chartered, which was through the Baltic exchange, is the Danish roll-on roll-off Mercandian Senator registered in Copenhagen with Danish officers and crew. The number of ships required for the additional British troops and equipment for Bosnia depends upon the carrying capacity of the vessels offered.

Dartmouth Naval College

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 22 June, Official Report, column 379, what is the total annual cost of the Dartmouth naval college. [31776]

Mr. Soames: This is a matter for the Naval Recruiting and Training Agency under its framework document. I have asked the chief executive, NRTA, to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from A. D. Ferguson to Dr. David Clark, dated 30 June 1995:

The Secretary of State for Defence has asked the Chief Executive of the Naval Recruiting and Training Agency to reply to your Parliamentary Question, about the total annual cost of the Britannia Royal Naval College, Dartmouth. I am replying on behalf of the Chief Executive who is away on duty.

The annual running costs for Britannia Royal Naval College, Dartmouth for the last four financial years are as follows:

FY 1991–92: £15.8M

FY 1992–93: £18.5M

FY 1993–94: £19.0M

FY 1994–95: £17.9M (estimate)

All figures shown exclude Sea Training costs and VAT.

TREASURY

Works of Arts

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 20 June, Official Report, column 149, what would be the total liability for inheritance tax or capital transfer tax for the owners of chattels as listed for each year since 1987 if they were to lose their conditional exemption. [30654]

Sir George Young: On loss of conditional exemption, tax is charged on the chattels valued at the time the exemption comes to an end. It is not possible to establish the current value of all conditionally exempt chattels and therefore the information requested is not available.

Mr. Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 20 June, Official Report, column 149, what estimate he has made of the number of members of the public who have made appointments to view works of art owned by persons who have been granted conditional exemption from inheritance tax or capital transfer tax in each year since 1987. [30653]

Sir George Young: No such estimate has been made.

Mr. Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 20 June, Official Report, column 149, if he will make it his policy to collect information on the number of members of the public who have exercised their right to require owners of chattels conditionally exempt from inheritance tax or capital transfer tax to allow viewing of these works of art; and if he will make a statement. [30646]

Sir George Young: No. The current arrangements are designed to ensure that qualifying objects are preserved and public access is available, and, for items not on general public display, that information can be obtained by the public on what has been conditionally exempted and how to arrange viewing. There is no statutory power to require owners to keep statistics of the number of people exercising their right to view conditionally exempt chattels.

Mr. Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what are the total number of owners of chattels that are conditionally exempt from inheritance tax or capital transfer tax and can be viewed by appointment. [31037]

Sir George Young: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 9 June, Official Report, column 940.

Value Added Tax

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the Government's long-term strategy in respect of levels of VAT charged; and what assessment he has made of the need for an intermediate VAT band. [31296]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The Government's taxation policies are announced in successive Budgets.

The Chancellor has said that he has no plans to apply the 8 per cent. reduced rate of VAT to anything other than domestic fuel and power.

Sir David Steel: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make it his policy to propose a reduction in the levels of VAT on tourist businesses. [31589]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: No. As I have already made clear, the Government have no plans to apply the reduced rate of VAT to anything other than domestic fuel and power.

Taxation

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make it his policy not to impose new taxes or increase existing ones without first conducting a study to (a) assess the effects of such a tax on consumer behaviour and (b) assess the revenue effects of such a tax. [31344]

Sir George Young: Changes in taxation are made only after an assessment of their effects has been made. Estimates of the direct revenue effects of tax measures are set out in the "Financial Statement and Budget Report", table 5.1 in the 1995–96 FSBR. The wider economic effects are taken into account in the economic forecast, which is also published in the FSBR.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the percentage change of income paid in tax and national insurance between 1974–75 and the latest available date by (a) a single person, (b) a married couple, (c) a married couple with two children and (d) a married couple with four children earning (i) one third of average earnings and (ii) average earnings. [31269]

Sir George Young [holding answer 28 June 1995]: Available information is in the tax benefit reference manual, 1995–96 edition, a copy of which is in the Library.

Mr. Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the change in the tax-free income in real terms between 1974–75 and the latest available date for (a) a single person, (b) a married couple, (c) a married couple with one child, (d) a married couple with two children and (e) a married couple with four children earning (i) one third of an average income and (ii) average earnings. [31268]

Sir George Young [holding answer 28 June 1995]: Available information about tax thresholds and break-even points is in appendix C of "Inland Revenue Statistics 1992" for earlier years and table 2.5 of "Inland Revenue Statistics 1994" for recent years.

Credit and Store Cards

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what taxes are imposed on the use of credit and store cards in (a) any other EU countries, (b) the United States of America and (c) Japan. [31321]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Within the EU, only Ireland imposes such a tax—a stamp duty on credit cards at the rate of £15 per annum per card. Neither the United States of America nor Japan imposes such taxes.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to undertake behavioural work to estimate the effects on the use of credit and store cards of a £10 tax on each. [31345]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: None.

Inland Revenue Information Technology

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when it was originally envisaged that EDS would be given management of the Inland Revenue computer; what changes have been made to the policy; and for what reasons. [31648]

Sir George Young: EDS was identified as the preferred supplier for delivering the Inland Revenue's IT services in November 1993. Under the terms of the contract signed by EDS and the Department in May 1994, transfer of staff, equipment and work would be in two phases or tranches. The first tranche, on 1 July 1994, covered operational support services. Development work will, subject to a formal decision by the Inland Revenue on whether to proceed, transfer in the second tranche in January 1996.

EDS took over management of the project to develop IT support for self-assessment on 19 June 1995. This does not in any way affect the transfer of the second tranche of work.

Vehicle Excise Duty

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the effect on annual Exchequer revenues of restructuring the rates of vehicle excise duty paid on cars, light vehicles and taxis so that rates are scaled for different engine sizes to (a) £100 per annum for engine sizes of 1500 cc and less, (b) £130 per annum for engine sizes of 1501 cc to 2400 cc, (c) £150 per annum for engine sizes between 2401 cc and 3000 cc and (d) £200 per annum for engine sizes of 3001 cc and above. [30097]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answer 22 June 1995.]: The estimated effect would be to reduce revenue by some £350 million.

Public Expenditure

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will disaggregate each figure which comes under Wales, in table 7.7, Cm 2821 into (a) central Government expenditure, (b) local government expenditure financed by local government or unhypothecated central Government support and (c) local government expenditure financed by specific central Government support naming the relevant Department; and if he will make a statement. [29942]

Mr. Aitken [holding answer 29 June 1995]: A disaggregation of each figure under Wales in table 7.7, Cm 2821, into the categories requested is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. Figures for local authority specific grants in Wales are given in tables 4.6 and 4.7 of Cm 2821, and figures for total local authority expenditure in Wales are given in table 4.3 of Cm 2821.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Betts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many schemes and to what value have been approved in 1994–95 under the private finance initiative; what are the estimates for the current financial year; how many schemes are currently being considered and at what value; for how long have they been considered, and how many have been in the assessment process for over (a) six months and (b) 12 months; and what was the average length of time taken to assess schemes so far approved. [30824]

Sir George Young [holding answer 28 June 1995]: During 1994–95 one major contract of £400 million was approved under the private finance initiative, in addition to smaller contracts with total value of £50 million to 100 million. Since the beginning of the financial year, the award of three major contracts with a total contract value of £650 million has been approved. Over the course of 1995–96 we expect approximately 50 contracts with a total value of over £5 billion to be approved. It is not possible to assess the numbers of projects under consideration and records are not kept centrally of time taken to assess schemes.

Single Currency

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will set out the procedures required in the event of the United Kingdom seeking to accede to a European single currency with particular reference to the requirements with regard to exchange rate mechanism membership, the duration of such membership prior to an application to join the single currency and the time lapse between single currency application and joining. [30808]

Mr. Kenneth Clarke [holding answer 26 June 1995]: The convergence criteria, including the exchange rate criterion, are set out in article 109j(l) of the treaty on European Union. The interpretation of the criteria will be considered by the European Commission and the European Monetary Institute, when preparing their reports to the European Council under article 109j(1), and thereafter by the Council, when it assesses those reports under article 109j(2).

The timing of the UK notification is set out in article 1 of the United Kingdom protocol to the treaty.

INDEX TO THE

PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES

OFFICIAL REPORT

SIXTH SERIES VOLUME 262

SESSION 1994–95

19th June—30th June 1995

SCOPE OF THE INDEX, ARRANGEMENT AND ABBREVIATIONS

This index is derived from the House of Commons Library's Parliamentary On-Line Information System (POLIS), and the subject terms used are based on those used in POLIS. There are often changes in column numbering, etc., between the daily part or weekly Hansard (which simply collects together the daily parts without revision) and the bound volume. The index for the bound volume is revised to take account of these changes and cannot therefore, be used in connection with the daily part or weekly Hansard. For these versions use the Fortnightly Index.

Scope and arrangement of the Index

Oral and Written Parliamentary Questions are indexed under subject headings and the names of Members asking and Ministers replying to them. Questions are not listed under the names of Departments replying. Departmental listings can be arrived at indirectly by looking under the names of the Minister(s) of that Department. There are, however, the headings 'Northern Ireland', 'Scotland', and 'Wales' under which one can find not only most Questions answered by the Northern Ireland Office, Scottish Office, Welsh Office but also Questions about these areas of the United Kingdom which are answered by other Departments. Ministerial statements are indexed under subject headings, under 'Ministerial statements' and the names of Ministers making them and Members speaking on them. General debates are indexed under broad subject headings and under the names of all Members and Ministers taking part. Debates on legislation (Bills, Orders, Regulations etc.) are indexed under the name of the Bill, Statutory Instruments etc, under subject headings and under the names of those taking part.

Rulings and Statements by Speaker and deputies are brought together under the heading 'Speaker's rulings and statements'.

Other contributions by Speaker and deputies appear under the heading Speaker.

Opposition Day Debates and Estimates Day Debates and Standing Order No. 10 applications are listed under those respective headings and under subject headings too.

The date of each item except Parliamentary Questions is inserted immediately before the reference.

Members' names are given in the form by which they prefer to be known and are printed in bold italics. Under their names, entries are arranged under one of the two headings Debates, etc. (to include interventions on statements, points of order and so on) or Questions.

Abbreviations

Bills 1R = first reading, 2R = second reading, Money res = money resolution, Comm = Committee stage, Rep = Report stage, 3R = third reading, amendt/amendts = amendment/amendments, * = matter taken formally, without debate.

Column numbers followed by the letter W refer to Written Questions. These appear at the end of each daily part or volume with their own sequence of column numbers printed in italics.
